HELPED PRETENDER

Death of Peer Who Dressed as Spanish Don

After a long illness the Earl of Ashburnham died in Paris, in his seventy-third year. The late Earl of Ashburnham was a member of a Sussex family which, according to Fuller of the "Worthies," is of "stupendous antiquity," and another writer adds that it was "of good account in England before the Conquest." Sir John Ashburnham attended Charles I. on the scaffold at Whitehall, and at the family seat, Ashburnham Place, near Battle, are some curious relics of the execution—the watch and white silk pants of the King and the sheet thrown over his body.

Lord Ashburnham inherited thirty-four years ago perhaps the finest private collection of manuscripts and early printed books in the kingdom, but they have nearly all been dispersed. Many extremely valuable volumes crossed the Atlantic. While in London he often affected the long cloak and wide-brimmed sombrero of a Spanish don, and during the Carlist activities in Spain he contributed generously to the funds of Don Carlos, the Pretender to the Spanish throne, with whom he was on terms of intimate friendship.

The Ashburnham title, from its creation in 1689 to the late holder, always descended from father to son—in fact, it is believed, without parallel in the British peerage—but the fifth earl had no son. The heir to the title is the Hon. Thomas Ashburnham, brother of the fifth earl, who was formerly a captain in the 7th Hussars, and served in Egypt in 1882. He was born in 1855.

RESPECTED IN DEATH

Frederick Hitch Who Participated in the Famous "Rorke's Drift"

Not for many years has a military funeral attracted so much public attention, and homage for the dead man, as the burial of Frederick Hitch, one of the recipients of the Victoria Cross, and one of the noble band of heroes who thrilled the world by their bravery in the great fight at Rorke's Drift. The old hero suddenly and peacefully collapsed, passing away in the arms of a friend.

At the funeral, full military honors were accorded to the dead man. The remains were placed on a gun carriage, drawn by four horses. The coffin was borne from the house where the hero died on the shoulders of six of his comrades from the old regiment and was received with a salute by the firing party, which had been drawn up opposite to and facing the gun carriage. Then the Union Jack was draped over the casket, and the procession moved off at slow march, the drums softly rolling out the introduction to the sweetly solemn strains of the band, playing the Dead March.

Few Bald Musicians.

According to a German statistician only two per cent. of musicians are bald to 16 per cent. of men in other intellectual pursuits.

THE COUNTRY BOY BEST FOR BASEBALL

Fresh Air and Varied Work Make for Stamina and Resourcefulness

Other things being equal—and by "other things" I mean natural ability, baseball brains and nerve—I would pick the country boy in place of the city chap for my ball team, says the famous Cy Young. In making this statement I am dividing the country into two classes—cities and country—including in the latter division the villages and small towns, which in reality are nothing more than the country, for in them boys have the advantage of country life, which is plenty of work and fresh air.

I am not saying this because I am from the country and return there on the slightest provocation. Still, I believe the fact that I was born and raised on a farm is largely responsible for my success as a pitcher. I was naturally rugged, and my farm work as a boy tended to make me more so. I have seen other pitchers who seemed to have a lot more stuff than I had, fail, for the reason that they were lacking in reserve power.

They would go along splendidly for a few innings, but when the real test came they were lost sight of, and now are all but forgotten, whereas had they had the same early training I received, they might have remained in the game as long as I have. The argument that city boys think faster and are more independent is not a good one. In fact, I believe it is entirely wrong. The country boy must think as fast and as often as the boy in the city, and he is thrown upon his own resources much oftener.

All in all, give me the boy from the country—the boy who has survived the hard knocks—for a diamond star.

COACHING BY FILMS

Secrets of Harvard Eights' Style Revealed by Moving Pictures

The successful stroke taught by Coach Jim Wray, of the Harvard Varsity crew may be taught to college and university crews all over by means of motion picture demonstrations. Coach Wray, however, will draw no royalties.

A coterie of operators representing one of the largest motion picture syndicates in the world photographed the Harvard Varsity eight as it sped over the Charles River course in trial spins.

The motion picture company may go into the correspondence school business of teaching college and school crews how to row successfully, for the Wray stroke used by Harvard, together with the famous Courtney stroke of Cornell and the English stroke of Cambridge and Oxford Universities, recently adopted by Yale, are acknowledged to be the three best in the world.

When the film reel is run off slowly the intricacies of the whole stroke are shown even better than Coach Wray himself can show them. The peculiar wrist movement, which is an important factor in the Wray method, is perfectly illustrated on the picture screen.

STUMP BURNER

Bell Shaped Cover With Smoke Outlet Surrounds Stump

For the swift and cleanly extermination of tree stumps the apparatus devised by a man in the State of Washington seems to fill the bill. A bell-shaped metal cover surrounds the stump and around the top of this cover are openings, through which is thrust the burner tube. One opening has a pipe, or smokestack, rising from it, and this carries off the smoke that accumulates under the bell. At the point of the burner tube is a lighting coil that has a tip close to the mouth of the tube. As the gas is forced through the tube it can be automatically lighted from the outside by turning the key that operates the coil. This gives a powerful, roaring flame of intense heat that consumes the stump in short order, the noxious fumes escaping through the smoke stack, which carries them over the workman's head.

COULD NOT BE KICKED

Magistrate Apologizes to Prisoner for His Limited Power

A remarkable story of an old convict's adventures was told at Manchester where George Roland Williams was committed for a month for impersonating a policeman.

Williams called at two houses in Ardwick, representing that he was an officer looking for a man who, he stated, had been "drawing a dead man's pension for two years." He was arrested, and an officer told the Stipendiary that Williams, after being put in the cells, had to be taken to Ancoats Hospital, and, he said, he was only shamming. Williams represented that he was suffering from hemorrhage and bled at the mouth, but a doctor at the hospital found the blood had been caused by Williams pricking his nostril with a piece of wire. Williams pleaded that he had no evil design. It was a piece of foolishness for which he ought to be kicked.

The Stipendiary: "I am afraid we are not allowed to sentence you to be kicked."

It was stated that on two occasions Williams, by representing himself to be a doctor, had induced a young woman to marry him.

CANOEING RULES

All canoeists are not canoe fools. The man who knows how to canoe and also knows how to swim, is by no means a fool. He can enjoy one of the most delightful of sports, and grow brown and healthy and add years to his life.

The fool is the fellow who takes out a canoe because it looks like an easy way to show off. He is doubly a fool if he does not know how to swim. And he is worse than a fool if he inflicted on others his inexperience and egotism. He is a dangerous fellow, who deserves abatement.

There are two good canoeing don'ts. Don't try to paddle a canoe unless you have been thoroughly instructed and unless you are a good swimmer. Disregard of this don't leads to involuntary suicide. And don't coax a friend to place trust in your inexperience. This means homicide, and places you beyond human sympathy after you are yourself well drowned.

In brief, have a little commonsense.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

WHAT BOYS REMARKED IN WRITING OF GIRLS

Some of the Lads Were Merciless in Their Comments—Others Were Very Observant

An illuminating idea struck the head master of the London County Council School in Stepney, who arranged that the boys attending the school should write essays on the subject of "Girls." No coaching was given to the boys who where told to sit down and write what they thought about girls. Some of the results follow:

A distinguishing feature among girls and young women especially is their love of finery in dress, and it is sometimes whispered about that some young ladies powder their countenance just—in using some slang—to swank.—Morris Green.

A girl is never satisfied with her clothes or her home, especially when her father is not well off. . .

A girl has many advantages, as well as disadvantages. She is more tidy than a boy, and her clothes are seldom torn. Girls do not like fighting, but their only way of having revenge is by tale-telling, which is a very unsportsmanlike method.

When their faults are corrected by soberer people than themselves they think they are insulted.—A. Bendersky.

There is the proper spirit of chivalry about Charles Edgell, who writes:

"Boys should always take care of girls and see that no harm befalls them, and if another boy is hitting a girl it is his duty to help her."

"Girls are supposed," says A. Markofski, "to be more tender than boys; therefore they are treated gentler by males. They are also more trusting and they can also be trusted in most cases."

An observant lad with an incipient sense of humor is B. Smith, who writes:

"Girls are not all alike. Some are very clever and some very silly. Most girls are very funny. They like to fancy themselves very much. They get their own way too much, yet boys are useful. . .

"Not many girls are satisfactory. They worry the life out of their mothers and fathers for clothes and such things. . .

"A girl, if she wants a thing just to the minute and cannot get it, will kick up ructions until she gets it, and sometimes she gets it in a way that she does not like."

J. Herman is just as merciless in his comments on the sex. He writes:

"A girl who has an ugly face is always more conceited than a girl who is nice-looking. . .

"Nearly all girls wear belts. They pull them as tight as possible, because they want to make a figure, and some of them do cut up some hideous-looking figures."

C. Fox has no illusions about matrimony. His terseness is sadly eloquent: "When girls are of age they marry. Sometimes they are very sorry they have married."

"When a girl goes into a hat shop," writes D. Eckott with a cynicism beyond his years, "to buy a hat, which may cost a good deal of money, by the time she steps out of the shop she does not want it because it is out of fashion."

The difference between the two eternal types of womanhood is expressed in a sentence by E. Lander:

"Some girls, whenever they see a tear in their dresses or skirts, throw them into a corner and want new things, while others try to sew it up together."

"Girls' features are more polite than boys'," writes I. Arghebant. "Their voices are not so nice-sounding as boys', because the sound is tiany and squeaky."

HUGE SLAV EMPIRE

Ambitious Plan of Franz Ferdinand of Austria

According to the Vienna correspondent of The Paris Journal a friend of Archduke Franz Ferdinand is authority for the disclosure of an ambitious plan of the Archduke's.

In a word, the Archduke aims at the creation of a vast Slav Empire of the south under the Crown of the Hapsburgs.

The new confederation, according to the same authority, is to include the autonomous kingdoms of Hungary, Bohemia and Poland, each with its own personal ruler; Servia, with its frontiers extended, and increased by the inclusion of Slavonia; Montenegro, enlarged by a part of Dalmatia and part of Herzegovina, and the other Balkan states.

Poland is said to have been quick to grasp the plan and has signified unanimous adhesion, and Bulgaria and Servia are said to be favorably disposed toward the scheme.

INTERESTING RELICS HAVE BEEN UNEARTHED

A Perfect Network of Tunnels and Many Rare Old Coins Found in a Montreal Excavation

Workmen engaged in tearing down an old convent found a perfect network of tunnels, secret passages and hidden chambers. All sorts of coins, medals, statues of the days of the Bourbons were recovered.

One of the relics found was a five franc piece, which left the Mint of France bright and shiny in the year 1722, when Louis XV. ruled in glory over France and Navarre. This coin finally came to Canada, and must have lain undisturbed for years, till a workman saw something shining among a mass of fallen stones, and picked it up. "Lud. XV., D.G. Fr. et Nav., Rex." is the inscription on one side. On the reverse are the words: "Sit nomen Domini benedictum, 1722." Another coin is of more recent date and bears the inscription, "Charles X., Roi de France, 1828," and still another contributes an interesting souvenir of the early days of the nineteenth century. It is a British-Canadian coin, commemorating the peace which followed the war of 1812. It is dated 1816, and bears the inscription, "Isaac Brock the hero of Upper Canada."

Hand-wrought nails and dried pieces of timber were also uncovered. However, it is the tunnels that aroused the greatest interest. Owing to the extraordinary number and the complete network of these subterranean passages it is estimated that to duplicate this work to-day would cost a figure running well into the hundreds of thousands of dollars. There was discovered a method of construction to render the top of the tunnels impervious to water which if applied to modern day construction of this nature would be of immeasurable value. In the old days, before cement existed the craftsmen and masons accomplished the desired end by placing over the stones forming the arch of the tunnels a layer of blue clay, with the result that the tunnels were rendered dry.

Another interesting feature of these structures is the clever use made of flat stones, which were evidently gathered along the long reaches of the St. Lawrence. Undoubtedly the structures were a part of the early defences of the settlement as it was customary then to supplement the efficiency of the fortifications by complicated subterranean passages and tunnels, into which a garrison could retreat in case it was rendered necessary. The removal of the old building reveals something of the early life of the little colony.

VICTORIA, B.C.

Low Schell, writing in Lloyd's Weekly on a tour through Canada, describes Victoria, B.C.:

"Victoria, the capital of British Columbia, has been dubbed 'The City Beautiful.' Adorned with handsome buildings and lovely parks and garlanded in flower gardens, it has well earned this sobriquet, and it may be recalled that the present King and Queen declared it the most beautiful city they had seen in their trip round the world. Yet Victoria is not merely, as its title might suggest, a place of many charms and endearments in which to loll away an idle life. Once, no doubt, it had a reputation of being slow-going. That reputation is vanishing before the irresistible onward sweep of a new era. As a matter of fact, Victoria is the largest shipping port of Vancouver Island, and a place of great importance in commerce. Shortly five great transcontinental railway systems will be making it their farthest west terminals. As a seaport, Victoria has the best of all guarantees of future greatness—proximity to the ocean, absence of fog, and security of vessels in port, to say nothing of safe and easy sailing to Pacific waters. The harbor improvements now being carried out by the Dominion Government are an indication that the Government enterprise is joining with natural advantages in assuring the future of this important city. So far as attractiveness to settlers, and particularly British settlers, goes, Victoria has nothing to fear by comparison with any other Canadian city. For one thing, the environment has the note of familiarity that comes of the presence of many men from the Old Country. Victoria is a very English city, and for all its far western setting, the Englishman in it feels at home. Add to that the elements of natural beauty, delightful suburbs, admirable educational facilities, and splendid climate, and one begins to realize the advantages that Victoria has to offer."

BRAVE CHARLES V.

Gave up His Tent to a Swallow and Her Brood Who Trusted Him

Great bravery and tenderness are so close together. The good man is brave and kind and considerate, the hypocrite craven and cruel. Charles V. of Germany was an able and virtuous King. He could face any danger, but had the heart of a little child. One day in camp he was told that a swallow was building her nest upon his tent. He gave orders that it should not be disturbed. So the pretty nest, with its dainty, soft lining, was finished, and soon the mother bird was sitting on her pearly white eggs. But before the young birds were hatched, the army had to break camp. The tents were all struck except the Emperor's. He said: "Let it stand. I can get another shelter, but she cannot for her brood. She trusted me for a home, I will not fail her."

A Swimming Pool

In building a swimming pool for students a Californian university so located it that the water could be turned into the regular supply mains for use in case of fire.

Any Headache Cured Tired Systems Re-Toned

When You're Dull, Tired, Restless Day and Night Something is Wrong With the Stomach.

A Prominent Publishing Man Says The Quickest Cure is Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

Headaches never come to those who use Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and this fact is vouched for by the Assistant Manager of the Poultry Success Magazine, of Springfield, O., Mr. J. H. Callander, who writes: "No better medicine than Dr. Hamilton's Pills. We use them regularly and know of marvelous cures that resist of everything else. They cleanse the whole system, act as a tonic to the blood, enliven digestion, help the stomach, and make you feel strong and well. For headache, indigestion and stomach disorders I am confident that the one prescription is Dr. Hamilton's Pills."

Being composed of natural vegetable remedies, Dr. Hamilton's Pills possess great power, yet they are harmless. They aid all organs connected with the stomach, liver, and bowels. In consequence, food is properly digested, the blood is pure and nourishing, the body is kept strong and resists disease. All druggists and storekeepers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box, 5 for $1.00, or by mail from the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Mike says, who is not a beauty, "Pat, I haven't seen you for over a year. I've got great news to tell you. Since I saw you last I got married and have now a fine healthy baby that looks just like me." Pat replied, "Sure Mike, the likeness don't matter so long as the kid is healthy."

Local Contractor Busy.

Mr. W. Gillet, of Millbrook was in the city yesterday, consulting with Contractor Tom Rutherford. Mr. Gillet, who formerly conducted an undertaking business in that village, is going to change the front of his furniture store. He is going to put in a cut stone front on the store. This work will be rushed through and completed before the Millbrook Fair opens. Mr. Rutherford leaves for Millbrook to-day.

The McIlmoyle Case.

A new phrase of the somewhat celebrated local case of McIlmoyle, who recently had his wife arrested for theft of furniture, was developed at yesterday's police court. McIlmoyle had the police remove the goods from where the wife had them, and store them at the police station.

Yesterday morning the magistrate made an offer to have these goods restored to Mrs. McIlmoyle. During the time His Worship was making out an order, a hot dispute arose between G. N. Gordon, counsel for the husband and R. Peddy, K.C., counsel for the wife.

Seriously Hurt by Bicyclist.

Thursday night as the hands of the Post Office clock stood at 10.45, a local young man running across George street, at the corner of Hunter street. He had some business he was anxious to transact in a Hunter street hotel before the clock struck 11. He did not hear a bicycle approaching. It is thought the rider of the wheel was bent on doing business before 11 and did not see the runner. A rear end collision resulted. The young runner was thrown violently on the cement crossing. His forehead was badly skinned, one eye put in mourning and his lip split. He was rendered momentarily unconscious. The bicyclist, who was thrown, remounted his bike and sped for the tall timbers unidentified.

Local Man Makes Good.

Mr. P. H. F. Spies, of 134 Park street, leaves next week for Detroit, Mich., to begin operations on the new Detroit Turbine Mfg. Co., organized by him. The charter for this company, capitalized at $50,000, fully paid up, has been issued. While in Detroit, Mr. Spies stopped with an old Peterborough boy, Mr. W. Lindsay of Gladstone avenue, in the former city. Mr. Spies is President of the new company and retains 50 per cent. of the stock. The turbines to be made are to generate power from streams without requiring such a head of water as otherwise necessitated by the construction of dams. The turbine has already been given a practical test by mechanical experts and proved successful. Mr. Spies, who is a British subject, of German origin, will not remove his family from Peterborough. He expects soon to organize a Canadian branch of the business on a large scale, and may consider locating in this city.

RIVALS HER DAUGHTER IN YOUTHFUL BEAUTY

(From Social Register.)

A well-known society matron whose youthful beauty is so well preserved that she is regarded as her daughter's rival in this respect — though she does not pose as such—attributes her girlish complexion chiefly to two things. She says:

"I am convinced that creams, by overloading the skin and pores, tend to age the complexion. Mercolized wax has just the opposite effect. It keeps the pores clean, permitting them to breathe, and removes dead particles of cuticle which are constantly appearing and which give the complexion that faded look. Whenever my skin begins to get the least bit off-color, I go to my druggist's for an ounce of mercolized wax; I apply this nightly, like cold cream, for a week or so, washing it off mornings. This is what keeps my complexion so fresh, white and velvety.

"The absence of wrinkles and flabbiness I owe to the use of a simple face bath prepared by dissolving one ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel. This keeps the skin 'tight' and firm."

Dustless Dusters.

A lady entered the store of a local merchant yesterday and asked the clerk if they had any dustless dusters. He replied that they had, ranging in price from 50c to $1 according to size and quality of material used. The lady said sooner than pay such a price, she'd send a dime to the Dominion Supply Co. of Markham, and get instructions how to make her own. She acted wisely. The dustless dustery made by this firm are no new thing to many of the citizens of Peterborough, and those who know them best were among the first to mail their coupon as directed in the little circular of these people, which was scattered about the city a few days ago. The Times is in receipt of the printed instructions, being among the early remitters, and wishes to say, the ingredients are simple and cheap, the dusters easily made [illegible] We believe those who fail to accept this company's liberal offer, will make a big mistake.

DEATHS AND FUNERALS

Stanley Gorman.

Stanley Gorman, aged 23, son of Mr. Thos. Gorman, 341 Rubidge street, passed away yesterday afternoon.

The funeral will be held to-morrow afternoon to St. Peter's Cathedral and St. Peter's cemetery.

Baby Murphy.

Mamie Murphy, the 11-months-old daughter of Mr. Michael Murphy, of 444 Lewis street, died on Thursday afternoon.

The funeral took place yesterday afternoon to St. Peter's cemetery.

IF MEALS HIT BACK AND STOMACH SOURS

"Pape's Diapepsin" ends Indigestion, Gas, Dyspepsia and Stomach Misery in five minutes.

If what you just ate is souring on your stomach or lies like a lump of lead refusing to digest, or you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food, or have a feeling of dizziness, heartburn, fullness, nausea, bad taste in mouth and stomach headache, you can get blessed relief in five minutes.

Ask your pharmacist to show you the formula, plainly printed on these fifty-cent cases of Pape's Diapepsin, then you will understand why dyspeptic troubles of all kinds must go, and why they relieve sour, out-of-order stomachs or indigestion in five minutes. "Pape's Diapepsin" is harmless; tastes like candy, though each dose will digest and prepare for assimilation into the blood all the food you eat; besides, it makes you go to the table with a healthy appetite; but, what will please you most, is that you will feel that your stomach and intestines are clean and fresh, and you will not need to resort to laxatives or liver pills for biliousness or constipation.

This city will have many "Pape's Diapepsin" cranks, as some people will call them, but you will be enthusiastic about this splendid stomach preparation, too, if you ever take it for indigestion, gases, heartburn, sourness, dyspepsia, or any stomach misery.

Get some now, this minute, and rid yourself of stomach trouble and indigestion in five minutes.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. Hammond Lee, manager of the Mackins Telephone Co., Lindsay, was in the city yesterday.

Miss Eva Roe left yesterday morning for Ottawa to spend a few days with friends.

Dr. Victor McWilliams was in the city yesterday and paid the Times a visit.

CITY IN PARAGRAPH

SUNLIGHT AND SHADOW OF THE DIAL OF A CITY LIFE.

More farmers were in the city yesterday than in any one day for years excepting possibly circus day.

The members of the Peterborough Club are invited to be the guests of Mr. Burnham, M.P., on Wednesday evening next at the Club Rooms.

Yesterday hundreds of visiting farmers, in town to attend the exhibition, stood in front of the Turnbull store wreck, viewing the scene of this awful disaster.

No pickpockets or "sharks" were to be found on the exhibition grounds yesterday. Possibly the good work done by Chief Thompson and Detective Newhall last fall is accountable for this.

It was learned yesterday that the cottage on Stewart street, bought as noted exclusively in the Times a few days ago, by Mr. John Craig, from Mrs. H. Deane, is again on the market.

There has been a lot of complaint about the recent dry season killing the root crop of Peterborough. A glance at the roots, potatoes, mangles, turnips, etc., at the Peterborough exhibition will prove that this county rises superior even to weather conditions. It was the best ever.

MUSIC and DRAMA

Farcical Comedy—"The Lady of [illegible]

Pretty Miss Olga Rame, who comes to Canada as leading lady for the well known English comedian, Mr. Lawrence Brough, is a ward of Sir James Sivewright, formerly Prime Minister of Cape Colony, and as a child was a personal favorite with the late Cecil Rhodes. Miss Rame is fortunate in her knowledge of languages, having among her repertoire Russian, German, Dutch, and French, in addition to English. Miss Rame's stage career includes leading roles with Sir John Hare, Seymour Hicks, Beerbohm Tree, and other celebrated English artists. Incidentally Miss Rame knew the late President Kruger intimately and chats most interestingly on the troublous times in South Africa during his regime. Mr. Brough commenced his Canadian tour at His Majesty's Theatre, Montreal, on Labor Day. Grand Opera House, Saturday, Sept. 20th, matinee and night.

A Coming Treat.

The dual opportunity of hearing a great artist and of assisting an organization in whose work the city is keenly interested, is offered in the appearance of Mme. Harriet Labadie, a dramatic interpreter of note, who will present "To-morrow" on Sept. 15th, at the Grand Opera House, under the auspices of Ladies' Aid Peterborough Health Association.

"To-morrow," big with its promise of results achieved through the experience of the past and present, offers no greater problem than that embraced in the production of a better race of men and women, a race bred on scientific lines. For ages the keenest interest has centered in the careful breeding of stock and no alien strain is permitted to mar the purpose of these precious animals, yet it is but of comparatively recent date that attention has been directed toward the human species, and its possible needs for conservation, scientifically termed "Eugenics."

Into his drama "Tomorrow" Percy MacKaye has woven a message of deepest import, through which he has sought to show the fallacy of the old theory of the survival of the fittest, by the introduction of a finer one founded on a common sense basis. And in this latest theory woman becomes the dominant factor. She it is who by her selection of her mate, is to determine who shall be the father of her children, thus laying the foundations for a race of stronger, healthier and happier men and women.

Miss Maude Adams in "Peter Pan."

Considerable interest is being manifested in the coming of Maude Adams in Barrie's play, "Peter Pan," at the Grand Opera House, Thursday, Sept. 18th. This has been shown by the number of inquiries at the theatre and the vast number of mail orders for seats which have been received by the management. The mail order list from out of town promises to be the heaviest that the theatre has ever known. The regular sale of seats for the engagement is to open this morning and preparations have been made to handle a large number of people. It seems certain that the house will be sold out in short order. That there should be so much interest displayed in the coming of Miss Adams is not without reason for the young woman is recognized as the most popular actress on the American stage. She has probably through her personality and the things that she has accomplished done more for the betterment of the stage in this country than any other player now before the public. In presenting "Peter Pan," the actress brings back to life one of the best plays that the stage has had in years. It is one which has had tremendous vogue and which has been eulogized in England and in this country as a classic that will live forever. While "Peter Pan" is a fairy play and concerns children, it was written by Barrie for grownups and it has never failed in making the men and women who witness it to live again in the days of their childhood, when everything was real, when the boy dreamt of killing Indians or of some day being an engineer and the little girl of being rescued by some gallant from an impending danger. The play is elaborately staged and capitally acted by a strong company.

CANADIAN BORN

By Pauline Johnson

We first saw light in Canada, the land beloved of God;
We are the pulse of Canada, its mar
row and its blood;
And we the men of Canada, can face
the world and brag
That we were born in Canada beneath
the British flag.

Few of us have the blood of kings,
few are of courtly birth,
But few are vagabonds or rogues of doubtful name and worth;
And all have one credential that entitles us to brag—
That we were born in Canada beneath
the British flag.

We've yet to make our money, we've yet to make our fame,
But we have gold and glory in our clean colonial name;
And every man's a millionaire if only he can brag
That he was born in Canada beneath
the British flag.

No title and no coronet is half as proudly worn
As that which we inherited as men
Canadian born;
We count no man so noble as the one who makes the brag
That he was born in Canada beneath
the British flag.

The Dutch may have their Holland
the Spaniard may have his Spain
The Yankee to the south of us must south of us remain;
For not a man dare lift a hand against the men who brag
That they were born in Canada beneath the British flag.

Drink and Lunacy

Some idea of the appalling ravages made by the drink scourge in present-day France may be formed by the terrible series of statistics showing the relation between alcohol and madness which specialists attached to the principal Paris lunatic asylums made public.

These figures reveal that since 1908 when exact records were started, the proportion of male lunatics whose loss of reason is caused by drink has increased 14 per cent. to 47 per cent.; while on the female side the percentage has risen from less than 2 to 20

KEIR HARDIE ON STRIKER'S DEATH

Leader of British Labor Party Uses Strong Language Relative to Dublin Riot

Dublin, Sept. 13.—James Keir Hardie, the Socialist-Labor member of parliament, was the most striking figure here during the recent riots which culminated in the death of James Larkin, a street car conductor.

"I regard what has happened here," said Mr. Hardie, "as the most serious event the trade union movement has had to face for at least a century. The action of the authorities against the strike leader, James Larkin, and others, sweeps aside the whole of the trade union legislation.

"It is a form of action against trade unionism common in America, but I did not expect to find in any law abiding country like our own that the anarchist precedent of the United States courts would have been followed."

BOBCAYGEON IS VISITED BY BIG FIRE

Disastrous Conflagration Destroys Large Section of Business Area.

(Special to The Times.)

Bobcaygeon, Sept. 15.—At five o'clock yesterday morning, this town was visited by one of the most disastrous conflagrations in its history. The business locality suffered to the extent of several thousands of dollars. The buildings completely destroyed are the Bank of British North America, a large drug store, grocery store and a confectionary store, and partly consuming the Bottom Hardware store. The burnt area extended from the Canal to as far as the Bottom hardware store, on the west side of the main thoroughfare. Thompson's Hotel, on the opposite side of the street, for a considerable time stood in imminent danger of destruction, catching fire on several occasions from sparks, but was fortunately saved by the untiring efforts of the citizens and local fire brigade.

The fire was under control at about 11.30 o'clock. It is impossible at present to even make an estimate at the total loss, but it will be very heavy.

MINISTER OF INTERIOR WILL SPRING A SURPRISE RE THAW

Hon C. J. Doherty Has Something Up His Sleeve With Regard to Thaw Deportation

Toronto, Sept. 14.—The acting minister of the interior has something up his sleeve and will spring it when the proper time comes—that is, when the writ of habeas corpus in the Thaw case is returned before the court of appeals on Monday. Such may be described as the prevailing impression amongst local lawyers—not to say judges—who are personally on the one hand, or indifferently on the other, interested in the embroglio incident to the unceremonious hustling of Stanford White's slayer out of the country. Hence the caution displayed by all concerned, in the matter of passing an opinion on the merits of the minister's action, until such time as the minister, represented either personally or through subordinates before the court, takes all into his confidence and explains the why and the wherefore of his eleventh-hour move. There are quite a few little sidelights which have served as basis of this impression. In the first place to all who know him, Hon. C. J. Doherty is caution and legal sense personified.

Extreme Caution.

Throughout his 20 years or so of service on the bench, he was noted for the extreme caution, he would use before reaching an opinion even on the smallest point or least important phase of any case coming up before him for disposal. Then, Hon. Robert Rogers, an ex-minister of the interior, and one presumably in the "know" as regards the circumstances leading up to the hurried order of deportation issued by the acting minister, on being interviewed concerning the case, remarked no less significantly than cautiously, that those lawyers who were railing against the action of Hon. Mr. Doherty, "had better study up their law." This has had the effect of making certain local attorneys lean to the opinion that, perhaps, after all, the acting minister of the interior picked a flaw in the proceedings. And, of course, naturally, these same lawyers would also like to pick out the same flaw—forewarned, as it were, forearmed.

Out on Flaw Hunt.

As to the flaw, if anyone here knows of it, he disguises such knowledge. However, amongst court house officials the question formed the subject of discussion yesterday, and it was ventured that the weak link in the chain forged by the Thaw counsel might probably lie in the fact that the minister of the interior himself had not been personally made a respondent to the writ of habeas corpus taken out before the court of king's bench. It was pointed out by those favoring such view that, had this been the case and it might have been such as the minister was, after all, through his subordinate in actual charge of the person of Thaw at the detention house at Coaticook, he could not have taken it upon himself to order that Thaw be hustled across the border.

Then again, it would appear that there was something out of the way in connection with the actual service of the writ on the immigration officials who had charge of Thaw. As there were five of these latter made respondents to the order, and as the Thaw counsel did not desire to leave a loop-hole out of which any one of the five might escape in the matter of complying with the order issued by Mr. Justice Cross, all were served with copies of the writ. It is contended that in matters of this kind all should have been served with originals, or duly certified duplicates. However this may be, the point is one which was being referred to yesterday as probably constituting a little flaw in the case.

WHEAT MOVING CONDITIONS NEVER BETTER THAN NOW

Dominion Government's Preparations Remove Danger of Western Grain Blockade

(Special to The Times).

Ottawa, Sept. 14.—According to present indications the wheat crop of 1913 will be one of the greatest ever harvested in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta and the government is performing its duty in seeing that this crop will be properly handled at the head of the lakes. What the government has done towards that work has been told by Professor Magill, chairman of the Dominion Grain Commission, while in Ottawa. He said:

Never So Good

"As far as the Government is concerned, conditions were never so good for handling the grain crop at the head of the lakes as this year. By the close of navigation there will be no less than 40,000,000 bushels storage capacity at Fort William and Port Arthur, which is no less than 12,000,000 bushels more than last year.

"The new Government-owned elevator is now completed and the machinery is being installed at the present time, so that it will likely be opened by October 1, and will be ready to handle its share of this year's crop. It has a capacity of three-quarters of a million in the work house and two and a half millions in the storage bins. This capacity can easily be doubled or trebled by adding more bins, and, in fact, we have room for elevator space of some 30,000,000 bushels. We have splendid concrete docks for loading, which are also ready, so that the Government will this year be able to handle its fair share of the West's yield.

Strengthened Inspection

"We have strengthened our inspection department and have generally increased what might be called our technical force so that as far as the Government facilities for handling the crop are concerned they have never been in better shape."

Prof. Magill pointed out that the elevator companies were for a number of years unprepared up to the [illegible] of the business and there was little increase in the storage capacity. There has been a restoration of confidence and, in addition to the Government elevator, the C.P.R., G. T. P., C. N. R., Fort William Elevator Company, and other concerns were erecting this year new buildings so that the total increase in storage facilities will be around 12,000,000 bushels.

Interior Elevators.

The tenders for the new interior elevators at Saskatoon and Moosejaw will be in on September 8. The grain commission will be in Ottawa at that time to pass on the tenders before the contract is let. It is expected that there will be probably ten tenders. Work will be started on them this fall and it is expected to have them ready to help assist in handling the crop of 1914.

WESTERN CANADA WANTS MORE ENGLISH WOMEN IMMIGRANTS

Winnipeg, Man., Sept. 14.—Canada has not enough of the right kind of women and the old country's supplies are not coming fast enough. That is the conclusion arrived at by J. Bruce Walker, commissioner of Immigration.

Walker says that this is a most extraordinary fact when one takes into consideration that women get better wages here, have better homes, and owing to their scarcity for domestic service, receive more consideration than in the old country. Scotland at least does her best to remedy the defect.

By far the greater number of women immigrants are Scottish. "However," added Mr. Walker, "nationality has nothing whatever to do with the question. It is character that counts." The second largest supply of single women for Canada comes from England. Ireland is third, but she sends very few through to the west. Most of the Irish women go to the United States, where so many of their blood are settled."

Mr. Walker makes the emphatic statement that 90 per cent of immigrant women to Canada make good here, and others fail simply because they will not adapt themselves to circumstances here, also to some extent because they do not get a decent start on their arrival.

TWO MAY HAVE DIED IN 200 MILE CONOE RACE

The Two Clark Brothers of Longueuil, Missing—Perhaps Marooned on Island.

Montreal, Sept. 14.—The 700 mile canoe race from Carillon to Ottawa and back to Dixie, may have cost two lives. This afternoon a searching party left Dixie to scour the lakes for Clark brothers of Longueuil, who have not been heard of since Thursday night, then they saw the Alpha Zeta team and told them they would not paddle that night as they would not take any risks. They have not been heard of since. It is feared that they have smashed their canoe on an island or rock, and are marooned. The race was awarded today to Smith and Field of Longueuil, the third team to finish. They were 15 hours behind Riverside, and 2 behind the Ramblers, but these crews were disqualified, the former for not having been a member of the club for the required time and the latter for failing to report at St. Anne de Bellevue.

FOUR MEN REMANDED ON MURDER CHARGE

Two Men and Two Women In the Toils

Ottawa, Sept. 14.—Four of the five prisoners who were arrested in Montreal yesterday on a charge of murder in connection with the mysterious death of Abe Rubenstein here on Aug. 30 were arraigned in police court this morning, and, without being asked to plead, were remanded until next Saturday.

The four prisoners are: Nathan Shapiro, who employed Rubenstein; Chas. Duplan, who was in the dead man's company on the night he disappeared; Rosie Gibson and Lottie Bringmont, colored women, who were also seen in company with Rubenstein on the night he was murdered.

The fifth prisoner, R. H. Durso, of Toronto, held as a material witness, was arraigned on a nominal charge of vagrancy. He, too, was remanded. [illegible] Detectives found [illegible] of the [illegible] where [illegible] body was found, in [illegible] He is an employe [illegible] former tenant of the place and [illegible] that when they were at the place [illegible] cleaned the bar he mistake.

A. E. Fripp, K.C., M.P., [illegible] for Shapiro and Duplan, asked [illegible] bail and was refused.

ANOTHER CHARGE AGAINST SULZER

New York, Sept. 14.—The assembly board of managers for the impeachment of Gov. Sulzer announced today that Charles Dorsch, a salesman allied with the brewery interests, has testified privately that he collected nearly $50,000 for Sulzer's campaign, which was not accounted for by the governor in his statement of campaign contributions.

FIRST FULL CARGO LEAVES PORT ARTHUR

Port Arthur, Ont., Sept. 14.—The first full cargo of 1913 wheat to go down the lakes was taken out by the steamer Yorktown this morning. She carried 18,000 bushels, having loaded at Thunder Bay and Port Arthur elevators for Montreals.

Other shipments were by the Hamiltontonian for Montreal, 16,919 bushels of wheat, and 19,980 bushels of barley. Vessels now loading are the Doamstona, King Mount and Gordon.

THE WEATHER:

Fine and Cool.

CARE OBSERVED WITH KING'S TRAIN

Railway Officials Have Anxious Time When Their Majesties Are on a Journey

When the King and Queen and their suite travel by train, not only are the most elaborate precautions taken to guard their safety, but every effort is made to protect their Majesties from the slightest annoyance or inconvenience. It is a time of dreadful anxiety for the railway officials, and few of them breathe freely until the royal special has passed.

Most minute and detailed instructions are issued to station masters, engine drivers, guards, platelayers, signalmen and all who have anything to do with the route over which the royal train must pass. These are printed in red ink, must be kept strictly private and must be communicated only to those in the service of the company, who, in the discharge of their duty, require to know and act upon them. And these persons must not give any information whatever respecting the knowledge of which they have become possessed. Immediately these "sealed orders" are received they have to be acknowledged by wire to the superintendent of the line.

Precautions Along Line

The line over which the royal train is scheduled to run has to be [illegible] and all facing points clamped and padlocked a quarter of an hour before the special is due. Nothing must be allowed to [illegible] it until the royal train has gone by.

[illegible]

and there is another [illegible] equipped, whose mission it is to afford protection forward, in case of [illegible]. Artisans, provided with all the needful materials and appliances, accompany the train, and the whole of the carriages are subjected to a most thorough examination before the train starts and at each place where it stops.

The engine, in charge of a [illegible] driver, carries four lamps by day—one at the foot of the smokestack, one at each end of the buffer beam and one in the centre of the beam. After dark, and during foggy weather or falling snow, four powerful white lights are carried in the same positions.

The Railway Patrol

Even shunting operations on or adjoining the line on which the royal special will run have to be suspended half an hour before its approach, and all trains and engines other than passenger trains must be brought to a standstill before the train bearing its royal burden is due. Passenger trains are allowed to proceed, but their drivers are expressly forbidden to whistle, and, if possible, they must reduce their speed to ten miles an hour.

At the various stations passed en route, work which might in any way affect the line on which the royal train will run must cease, and all engineering work near or on the line, whether in the hands of a contractor or the company's staff, is suspended half an hour before the train is due. Every driver must prevent his engine emitting smoke.

Guarding the Tunnels

Naturally, tunnels are a source of great anxiety to the officials. But so stringent are the precautions that the possibility of an assassin concealing himself is reduced to a minimum. At each end of the tunnel a competent man, with the necessary hand lamp, is placed an hour before the train is due, and his duty is to prevent any unauthorized person being upon the railway in or near the tunnel. Men are also stationed at the top of each ventilating shaft, and remain there until recalled by the man stationed at the end of the tunnel when the royal train has emerged.

So far as is possible, the people are excluded from the company's premises unless they are on business, and the servants of the company have strict instructions to perform the necessary work on the platform without noise. Cheering or any other demonstration is strictly forbidden.

FREE TRADE WAGES

Hours Are Cruelly Long and the Pay Is Miserable

J. F. W. the regular English correspondent of the Toronto Globe, has recently had a little to say about the life of working people in free trade Britain. We quote:

"The London bakers, have scored in a dispute with the employers over the conditions—hours and wages—of work. The conditions are admittedly disgraceful; the work is done in many cases in dirty, underground bakeries, the hours are cruelly long, sometimes a hundred a week, and the pay is miserable 24s or 26s a week. The men have now got 30s a week and a fifty-four-hour week in shops, with sixty hours in factories, where the work is lighter. They are satisfied for the time being, but their next agitation will be for the abolition of night-work and for the inclusion of the baking industry in the Trade Boards act. This is an act that was passed by the present Government in 1909 as an experiment in the prevention of sweating in a few trades, where sweating was notorious."

ORIGIN OF WEDDING GIFTS

Idea in the First Place Was to Give the Married Couple a Good Start in Life.

This custom one writer traces back to England to the time of the Norman conquest, if not before. At first the articles bestowed were understood to be mere loans, to be returned when the couple were well established in their new home. But when the feudal lord increased in power he grew to expect presents for his newly wedded children from those dependent upon him. Later laws were passed compelling a present in value up to one-twentieth of the yearly rent of the tenant.

To such an extent did this custom grow that among the nobility and others of wealth, it became an open commercial transaction. When Elizabeth, the daughter of King James I, was married her father received the sum of £21,000. With this greed for money and other "presents," the poorer people originated the "bidding," or "penny" wedding. At this [illegible] refreshments were served and a plate was passed around for cash "offerings." The sums collected often aggregated a hundred pounds (fully equivalent to $500 in modern money). It was from this custom that the modern one of the "pound" party, often given for the newly married in America, was derived.

In order to increase the gifts there was prepared an entertainment called an "ale." A green bush was stuck up in front of the house and everybody was made welcome. [illegible] but so [illegible] did they become that [illegible] of the shires of England passed [illegible] of any [illegible] "ale."

"A Progressive Peterborough."

OUR POINT OF VIEW

This is the harvest season. Remember how the Laurier western tour was called off last year because the harvest happened round so unexpectedly?

The Liberals are travelling a hard road, thus being in a position to sympathize with the farmers of Canada, who were deprived of good highways by Laurier.

The British taxpayer is still bearing the burden of naval defence, and thanks to Laurier and his Senate majority this country is placed in the position of an ungrateful and unnatural child.

A MAN'S FIRST DUTY IS TO HIS COUNTRY

A case of unusual interest has arisen in Victoria. When the local militia was called out recently in connection with the strike disturbances at Nanaimo the principal of one of the Victoria schools was among the volunteers called into service. When the schools opened for the fall term the militia were still on duty and the principal had not returned. Accordingly, acting under instructions from the school board, the secretary wrote demanding the principal's return forthwith, on pain of dismissal. Now he finds himself defendant in an action in which he is charged with seeking to intimidate a member of the militia while on duty. The case, fortunately, is one that does not frequently arise, and it is a bit unfortunate that in this instance the servant, and not those whose instructions he was following, should be made the subject of prosecution. The purposes of the law will have been served, however, if it is made clear to the employers that they must not seek to interfere with an employee in the discharge of his duties as a member of the Canadian militia. In such circumstances the law rightly acknowledges that a man's first duty is to his country, and places military rule above civil enactments, guaranteeing those who enlist against molestation in their positions while absent on service under the militia.

PROSPERITY REIGNS

Prosperity has come to Canada since the defeat of the Laurier Government, and the coming into power of a sane and sound Conservative administration. Despite the report of financial stringency throughout the country, Canadian trade reached high water mark for the month of July. A statement issued by the Hon. J. D. Reid, Minister of Customs shows that for July the total Canadian trade was $100,357,000, compared with $91,423,000 for July 1912. For the first four months of the present fiscal year ending July 31st, last, the total Canadian trad? amounted to $058,488,000, compared with $318,635,000 for the corresponding period last year. At the present rate of progress the trade of Canada for the present fiscal year will considerably exceed the record of $1,000,000,000 for the last fiscal year.

Imports into the Dominion of dutiable goods and of free goods, for July last, amount to $68,928,000, an increase of over $2,000,000 over July, 1912. For the four months ending July 31st, the imports were $225,887,000, compared with $209,234,000, for the corresponding four months of 1912. The duty collected for the four months of this fiscal was $38,531,000, compared with $35,990,000 for the previous period of 1912.

The exports of Canada show a healthy increase. Agricultural products exported for July last were $11,497,000, as against $10,261,000 for July, 1912. For the four months of the present fiscal year the exports of Agricultural products were $51,622,000, compared with $47,221,000 for the first four months of the fiscal year 1912. The grand total of exports for July last were $33,660,000 as against $31,042,000 for 1912, and for the four months of the present fiscal year the exports were $117,180,000 compared with $107,306,000 for the corresponding period last year.

Sergeant-Major Under General French

Veteran of Boer War Who Lost Health on the Veldt Tells Experience.

Good Advice for All who Have Indigestion or Stomach Disorders

In his home at Waldegrove, N. S., no one is better known than Sergt.-Major Cross, late of the 6th Queen's Own Hussars. Speaking of the ill-effects of a campaign upon a man's constitution, the Sergt.-Major writes "I served under General French during the late Boer war, in the capacity of Sergt.-Major. It was perhaps owing to a continued diet of bully beef, hard tack, and bad water, but at any rate my stomach entirely gave out. I was in such a state that I could eat nothing without the greatest suffering. The army doctors did not help me much, and since leaving the service I have been very miserable. Some few months ago a friend told me he had been a great sufferer from indigestion until he tried Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they cured him. I confess it was without much faith I bought a box, but the first dose made me feel better than I had been for a long time. Dr. Hamilton's Pills completely cured, and now I can eat everything and anything. I have recommended them to others and in every case the result has been similar to mine."

Quick, sure results attend the use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. They cure disorders of the stomach, correct indigestion, make you feel uplifted and strengthened. To renew or maintain health, Dr. Hamilton's Pills always prove a good prescription. 25c. per box, five boxes for $1.00, all dealers, or the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y. and Kingston, Canada.

Saved by His Muscles.

Alfred Loosley, a well-known football player, accidentally shot himself in the leg with his 22-calibre rifle while hunting near Cobalt. The bullet entered the thigh, but was deflected by the remarkable development of the muscles, brought about by his football playing, and the wound did not prove a serious one.

New Use for Thorns

Very sharp thorns can be used successfully as phonograph needles. These substitutes will reproduce sound very clearly and with beautiful tone. The harsh scratching of the ordinary needle is reduced to a minimum, and the thorn is not injurious to the record.

SIT UP WHEN YOU SEW

Upright Position May Seem Tiresome at First But Health Counts

The professional dressmaker, like the stenographer, must sit most of the time during her daily duties, and consequently it is very important that she maintains a correct posture of the body. This is also true in many kinds of work and study, such as the office, many of the professions, the shop and factory, and life in school and college. The reason that sitting is the position more indulged in is due to the fact that it is less tiresome than standing. The sitting position, as in sewing, although easier than standing, will after a few hours become very tiresome. When the chest is in a stooped condition the lungs, heart and other internal organs are crowded and restricted in their movements, causing one's work to become all the more tiresome. The legs should not be crossed, as this impedes the proper circulation of the blood in these parts of the body.

Keep the body erect with the chair the proper height, in order that the feet may be placed solidly upon the floor; the chest should be held high and the trunk tilted slightly forward so that its weight may be properly distributed over the pelvic bones.

The strength or power of endurance may be estimated of a man or woman with mathematical certainty, other things being equal, by the straightness of the back.

If the correct posture is maintained while doing these various kinds of fancy work it will be found an excellent form of exercise, because those who keep the chest high and well expanded are not only less liable to pneumonia, tuberculosis and other affections of the throat and lungs than the careless, faulty-positioned persons, but are more tenacious of life.

FOR BUSY HOUSEWIVES

To prevent wooden pails or tubs from shrinking when not in use, paint them over with glycerine.

Fine oatmeal is the best cosmetic known. Put a teaspoonful into the water when washing your face.

Coarse salt sprinkled on the floor occasionally before sweeping is said to be a good preventive of moths.

When beating chairs or sofas, cover first with a damp cloth, and the dust will adhere to the cloth and not rise in the room.

Ginger poultices are as efficacious as mustard, and will not blister. They are made in the same way as mustard poultices.

To stop the bleeding of a cut apply finely-powdered rice or flour to the wound. If soft soap is to be had it will ease the pain of a burn at once.

Those who suffer from unduly moist hands in warm weather should bathe them frequently in warm water to which a little alum or vinegar has been added.

For tired and aching feet, bathe the feet daily in warm water, and after drying, rub well with methylated spirit and dust with starch and zinc powder.

Peppermint has a great power of staying hunger. If one has to go without a meal, the eating of a peppermint is like taking a tonic. It quite removes the hunger sensation.

To sweeten rancid butter, melt the butter, skim it, then place a piece of light brown toast in it, and in a few minutes the toast will have absorbed the unpleasant taste and smell.

When making pies in warm weather fill a bottle with ice water and use it for a rolling pin. The pastry will be delicate and flaky. A smooth, round bottle should, of course, be chosen.

Gilt on china will not last long if soda be used in the washing of it; therefore use soapy water for washing teacups, etc., patterned with gilt, and keep soda carefully away from them.

The best way to warm up a joint is to wrap it in thickly-greased paper and keep it covered while in the oven. By having it covered thus the steam will prevent the meat from becoming hard and dry, and the joint will get hot through in less time.

In warming a steamed pudding, or in steaming a stale cake, never put the article on a plate or a flat dish. Place the pudding in a colander in the steamer, and you will be surprised to find how much lighter and more delicate the pudding will be than if a plate had been used for the moisture to settle on and make the pudding soggy.

To cleanse and purify your coffee pot from the persistent mustiness, put into it a good quantity of common wood ashes and nearly fill it up with cold water. Let it boil a short time, then set aside to cool, after which the inside should be thoroughly washed and scrubbed in hot soapsuds. Then scald twice and dry thoroughly, set out in the sun and air.

PUBLIC OPINION.

The Times does not hold itself responsible for the opinions of its correspondents.

AN EXPLANATION BY MRS. KENDRY.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Permit me, through your columns, to correct a mistaken impression prevailing in regard to the connection of the Peterborough Health Association with the appearance of Madame Labadie, in the Grand Opera House on Monday evening next. Madame Labadie comes under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid of the Peterborough Health Association. The Health Association, although it has at present two district nurses actively engaged in the City, is not making any demand on the public for money at the present time, except in trying to increase its membership. The Ladies' Aid of this Association can neither solicit nor distribute funds for the Association—these being in charge of a Finance Committee, of which Mr. W. H. Dunsford is Chairman. During the summer holidays, however, Mr. Finch Miller and executive of the Ladies' Aid decided that it was in the best interests of all concerned to send a deserted and destitute wife with four small children back to her friends in England. The City had been supplying weekly aid to this family and two of the little children were under the care of the Health Association, which supplied the family, weekly, with fresh milk and eggs. Mr. Miller asked the Ladies' Aid to provide half the price of passage money, the City paying the other half. The whole family had to be provided with suitable clothing and the Executive of the Ladies' Aid borrowed a sum sufficient to carry out its part of the contract. The family was sent comfortably and decently clothed away from our City to England, where we hope relatives will help the deserted wife and mother to care for her children. Madame Labadie, in her extensive tours throughout Canada and the United States, has given many of her interpretations under the auspices of some benevolent society and her advance agent met the Executive of the Ladies' Aid and made a most generous offer, which we accepted, believing the citizens of Peterborough would help us in making this interpretation a success. We selected Percy MacKaye's play "To-morrow," as the subject is directly in harmony with all that makes for physical and moral fitness. The young men and young women of Peterborough should not miss this opportunity of hearing Madame Labadie interpret this great theme of the building of a better race of men and women. So powerfully yet so chastely does she portray the characters in this play that in two instances at least she was asked to repeat her interpretation from the pulpit of the Church the following Sunday evening.

Yours,
ELIZABETH KENRY,
President of Ladies' Aid.

Fashion in China.

The Chinese have always had a "philosophy of clothes;" their garments are symbols. Consequently, if a Chinaman is a revolutionist, and wishes to express his frankest criticism of the old regime and to indicate that he is open as day to all the influences of the west, he cuts off his queue, steps into a little tailor's shop and orders a straw hat, a celluloid collar and a pair of cuffs, colored socks, a safety razor and a pair of American boots. These modes of Europe are China's "dernier cri." So much so that the "tailors' shops producing crude semi-foreign apparel," which have (according to the British consular reports) "sprung up in almost every important street," are inundated with orders to supply "outward manifestations of a progressive spirit," and the local agents of British sewing machines are not able to supply fast enough the machines required to keep pace with the demand.

LIFETIME IN WORKHOUSE

Woman and Family Who Have Cost London Ratepayers $6,770.

In a City of London Guardians' report appeared a striking instance of how the ratepayers' money is spent in supporting other people's families.

A woman who was born in 1860 became a charge on the city two years later. She spent fifteen years at the Hanwell Schools, and then a situation was found for her as a servant in Kensington. She stayed there for a fortnight, and then returned to Hanwell.

Another situation was secured for her at Herne Hill, and she spent fourteen months there, afterwards going into the City Workhouse. Since that time she has been in and out four hundred times.

She has had five children, three of whom have been educated at the expense of the ratepayers. The other two died. The woman and her children cost the ratepayers $6,770 in all to date.

STEERED WITH HIS FEET

Terrible Voyage Across Atlantic in Little Cockle-Shell of a Boat.

Thrilling details of a voyage from Falmouth to Rio de Janeiro in a small steam tug were told when Captain J. W. Carver, the master of the boat, returned to England by the steamer Orita.

The tug, of only four tons register, was built at Falmouth for towing canal barges out to steamers calling at Rio. When within nineteen miles of Cape Finisterre the full force of a gale was encountered.

"It was one of the worst gales I have ever been through," said the captain. "Nine days after leaving Falmouth we shipped one gigantic wave which carried away the wheel shelter, wrecked the ship's compass we possessed, and smashed the wheel. The second engineer had four fingers torn away, the man at the wheel had his ribs badly injured, and one of the crew sustained a fractured thigh.

"At last we got to Brest. During the voyage I was kept at the partly repaired wheel steering with my feet for three days and nights. The only food I could get consisted of a few biscuits which were handed up to me. Within a week I began the second voyage without my chief officer and with a foreign crew. The old crew had gone below, so I locked them in, and told them it was a case of 'no work no food.' I did allow them one biscuit each day. Within thirty miles of Teneriffe the fuel again gave out, but we were sighted by the Spanish boat Luis Viviana, and this vessel spared us a ton of coal, which carried us into the port.

"I got twenty-two tons of coal, but lost my second crew by desertion, and as the man who [illegible] forced to work also got ashore, the cook and I navigated the tug to St. Vincent, where we obtained another set of men, all foreigners, some of whom had [illegible] before. We got to Pernambuco, and arrived safely at Rio de Janeiro [illegible] Falmouth."

Doctor's Opinion of Diabetes Cure

Believes No Remedy So Effective As SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES.

In the treatment of Diabetes Mellitus we distinguish between remedies for the disease itself, and those for complications which may arise. Within the last few years numerous preparations, promising complete cures, have made their appearance, but none of them have been able to reduce, or even eliminate sugar secretions as effectually as SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES. This preparations is successfully applied in cases where sugar remains in spite of a diet free of carbo-hydrates. Experience has proven that this remedy has caused no bad effects, whatever.

The above paragraph is made up of extracts from a written statement of one of the most eminent physicians on the Continent of America. We strongly request anyone suffering from this dreaded disease to write to us for a copy of his letter. We can also send testimonials from some of the most prominent people in almost any town in Canada who think it a privilege to be able to recommend a medicine which brings such relief to any person who has suffered like themselves.

This remedy is manufactured by the Sanol Manufacturing Company, of Winnipeg.

WHERE THE CATS GO

Skins Are Sold in London Market Extensively.

The fur of the domestic cat is much thought of the London market; into what it turns after manipulation probably is a trade secret. According to a report furnished by J. M. Museen, trade commissioner at Leeds, to the weekly report of the department of trade and commerce, no fewer than 129,452 cat skins were purchased in one year. Many of these skins came from North America. In point of number musquash skins led, over five million of them being bought. Only 1,233 silver fox skins were sold, the supply being stationary. The number of beaver skins sold was nearly 61,000. Prices were high this year, and Mr. Museen notes that there was a strong demand for skunk, the price of which advanced 30 per cent.; wolverine skins doubled in value.

DO NOT WASTE GOOD MUTTON FAT

There Are Many Ways of Using It and Rendering It Entirely Free of Odor

Mutton fat is wholesome, and when served properly it is palatable. But if you're going to eat it don't let it get cold.

You see, the mutton fat doesn't melt until it reaches a temperature of from 105 to 120 degrees, and the temperature of your body is only about 98. So the heat of your mouth won't melt the mutton tallow and it leaves an unpleasant "furry" taste.

But when the fat is once melted it won't turn hard again till it reaches a much lower temperature—say 77 to 83 degrees. And before it solidifies in the dish or on the plate you beat the game by eating it, and in your 98-degree mouth and stomach it hasn't a chance to turn hard. So it tastes better and digests better.

The fat you don't eat directly with the meat it grew on can be used as a by-product, for frying and all sorts of culinary purposes. There's real economy in that. And it's easy enough to "take the curse off it."

By mixing the hard mutton fat with a softer fat, such as beef suet or lard, you get a softer and more palatable combination for deep fat frying and for "shortening" foods. You can even get fair results with baking powder biscuit that way.

You can get rid of the odor of the mutton fat by mixing it with leaf lard and rendering it in milk. Divide the suet and lard finely by passing them through a meat grinder, then heat them in a double boiler with one-half pint of milk to two pounds of mutton fat and lard. When the fat has cooked out let the mixture cool. The fat cakes on the top and comes off easily. It is softer than mutton fat, has a good color, a good odor and flavor and keeps well for weeks.

Savory fat is easily made. For each pound of rendered mutton fat allow an onion, a sour apple and a teaspoonful of ground thyme or mixed herbs, tied up in a small piece of cloth. Cook them in the fat at a low temperature until the onion and apple are browned. Then strain off the fat. It will be well seasoned and may be used instead of butter or other savory fat for warming potatoes, cooking vegetables, etc.

The fat removed from mutton broth or soup is also useful in similar ways, as it has taken up the agreeable vegetable flavors. When the soup has cooled remove the fat, melt it and strain through a cloth.

HOME DRESS-MAKING

Care and Accuracy Necessary in Fitting a Waist

There are a few things which should be remembered in fitting oneself, especially if it be the difficult matter of waist-fitting. Do not put the waist on the wrong side to fit it. Always try a garment on and do the fitting of it the way you propose to wear it. This suggestion is important for the reason that few women are exactly the same in shape of shoulder and waist on both sides. When the waist is fitted to the figure on one side and is turned over on the other, you may find a defect which is due to this very thing.

When putting on a waist to be fitted slip the hands underneath it and turn the shoulder and underarm seams toward the front. If there are other seams turn these toward the back. This is necessary in order to make the waist lie flat. In pinning the front or back together, which is one of the first things to do, have at least two guide lines. The waist line at the bottom may be one. The other might be a line which dressmakers call the "chest line," a line parallel with the waist line, but only three inches down from the neck and running about six inches across the middle front.

In making alterations by pinning be sure to pin securely. Otherwise the alterations will be of little use, as by the time the waist has been removed some of the alteration marks may have been lost through falling pins.

Battle Song of Failure

We strain toward Heaven and lay hold on Hell,
With starblind eyes we stumble in hard ways,
And in the moments when we see life well
Bemoan the blindness of bewildered days.
But what of that? Into the sullen flesh
The soul-driven home the spur with splendid sting.
Bleeding and soiled we gird ourselves afresh—
Forth, and make firm a highway for the King.

KITCHEN WRINKLES

Equal parts of linseed oil and lime water make a soothing mixture for burns.

Black stockings will always keep a good color if, after washing, they are rinsed through blue-water.

Coffee is a fairly good air-purifier, and a little burnt on hot coals will purify a sick room and abolish bad smells.

When driving a nail through a plaster wall, dip it in hot water first. This will prevent it from breaking away the wall.

Before laying oilcloth, put a layer of sawdust on the floor, and it will give a soft tread to the feet, as well as preserving the oilcloth.

To give potatoes a flavor add half a teaspoonful of sugar, as well as salt, when boiling. This does not make them too sweet, but gives a delicious flavor.

To keep bread boards a beautiful color, rub them well with half a lemon; then wash them in cold water, and stand them in the wind or in the sun to dry.

Before using table oilcloth, paste at each corner on the wrong side a square of cotton. This prevents the corners from wearing out as soon as they otherwise would.

When cooking liver and bacon put a sour apple, slice it very finely, and add it to the gravy. This will impart a delicious flavor, which is a great improvement.

To remove smoke marks from ceilings, mix a thick paste of starch and water, and with a clean flannel spread it over the mark. Allow it to get thoroughly dry, then brush off with a soft brush, and the marks will have disappeared.

Flatirons become rusty if left in a damp place or if put away flat when warm. Rub them first with beeswax, then with dry, coarse salt, using a short hard brush. When heating irons it is wise to remove them from a lighted gas-ring after a few minutes have elapsed, and to wipe away the tiny specks of moisture which will be found to have formed.

Leather chairs often become greasy-looking where the arms and head rest on the leather. To remove these marks try linseed oil. Boil half a pint of oil and let it stand until nearly cold; then pour in half a pint of vinegar. Stir till it is well mixed, and bottle, when it is ready for use. Put a few drops on a flannel and polish with soft dusters. This will thoroughly renovate all leather.

In cases of emergency a kettle or saucepan can be heated over a candle by the following means: Stand two chairs (with rungs) fairly near together. Place a lighted candle on the floor between the two. Then lay a pair of fire-tongs across the rungs of the two chairs, and on the tongs place a small kettle or saucepan immediately over the candle. The water does not take long to boil.

MISS RAY IN TEARS

Musical Comedy Actress Granted Decree of Restitution

For ten brief minutes the strangely-assorted crowd that thronges the London Divorce Court gazed on the spectacle of a musical comedy actress sobbing as if her heart would break.

The central figure of the pathetic scene was Miss Gabrielle Ray, the dainty dancer, who was granted a decree of restitution of conjugal rights against her husband, Mr. Eric Raymond Loder, who did not defend the suit.

Opening the case for Miss Ray, Mr. Barnard, K.C., said the parties were married at St. Edward's Roman Catholic Church, Windsor, and afterwards lived together in London.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Loder had a mutual friend, a lady, and at times Mrs. Loder objected to this lady. Mr. Loder finally left his wife. As he had not returned at the end of two months, she wrote him this letter:

"Dearest Eric—I am writing to you once more, because I want you to know I have given up —— for good. I am feeling desperately miserable, and want you, my husband, so badly. Jock misses his old master, and wonders if he will ever see him again. Thank you for the flowers you sent upon the anniversary of our wedding day. You cannot think how it all hurts.—Your wife, Gab."

Mrs. Loder received no reply to that letter, continued counsel, and she wrote again. There was again no reply, and the wife then commenced proceedings.

Miss Ray then went into the box. After taking the oath she broke into tears.

She bore out the statement of her counsel relating to the marriage. It was, she said, a marriage of affection on her part, and she believed at the time it was so on her husband's part.

RED HAIR FEUDS

Do Women of Titian Locks Wed Only Dark-complexioned Men?

When one red-haired girl meets another red-haired girl, does love fly out of the window?

Women with gleaming Titian tresses are said by a scientist to have a natural antipathy not only to all other women with red hair, but also to red-haired men.

Indeed, so intense is this dislike of red hair by red-haired people that they are, he says, seldom known to marry. This dislike, it is contended, is far more deep-seated than the hesitancy of men and women in marrying persons of their own coloring.

It is seldom in England that two red-headed people marry. But if red-haired women object to red-haired men, the latter, it appears, do not have the same dislike of red-haired women.

One city man with red hair confessed that he certainly likes red-haired women—almost prefers them, in fact, to dark-haired women.

But a young woman with gleaming red-gold locks was emphatic on the subject.

"I would never marry a red-haired man under any consideration," she said. Two other girls with beautiful red hair also expressed strong disapproval of the red-haired man.

"We cannot agree with the statement," said Mrs. Gotto, of the Society of Eugenics. "In fact, we cannot yet give an opinion on the matter because the research into the question of red hair is almost in its infancy.

"There is a very strong interest felt in the question by eugenists, and close investigations are being made. Red hair has decided character about it."

Red-haired men and women frequently choose as life partners those who have hair of a flaxen type.

Dainty Negligee

The model shown in the illustration is wearing a beautiful negligee, made with a white brocaded petticoat with a Greek key in silver about the bottom. Over this is a white crepe de chine tunic with a wide sash with the silver Greek key about the edges. This kind of negligee would be very easy to make by any woman who has the knack of dressmaking. Made of white cotton voile and worn over printed voile, it would be especially pretty and very inexpensive.

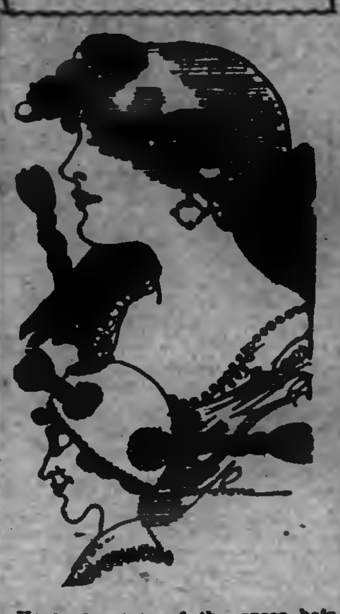
Cleaning Hair Brushes

When you clean the ebony brushes on your toilet table rub a little vaseline over the backs before you wash the bristles, as this prevents the soda or ammonia in the water from injuring the ebony. The vaseline should afterwards be removed by polishing the backs with a dry cloth.

Bread Omelet

Soak one cupful of bread-crumbs in one cupful of cream, add salt, pepper and nutmeg to taste and three well-beaten eggs. Beat lightly, and fry like plain omelet.

CAP-LIKE HAIR FRAMES



Here are some of the queer hair frames that women are wearing in England to help shape their heads to the contour of the fashionable hats.

Some of these caps have been worn, more or less, by the English women ever since Queen Alexandra introduced that pompadour and "bath bun" hair-dressing which all the court ladies and fashionable English women followed so many years. Queen Alexandra still wears her hair dressed in this way.

FOOT COMFORT

A Change in the Kind of Shoes and Stockings Works Wonders

Many women experience much discomfort from swelling of the feet, particularly in warm weather. In most instances this ceases as soon as cooler footwear has been donned, or the foot accustomed itself to the change of temperature; but there are people who suffer agonies, the year round, from footsoreness even though their avocations do not require half a mile's walk a day.

If the feet feel dry and hot at night and burn uncomfortably all the time the shoes are on, try a radical change of stockings and shoes. If you have been wearing cotton stockings, try silk ones, or lisle, or wool. Many people cannot wear lisle against the skin without extreme discomfort. As a general rule, silk stockings are a wise investment to the woman who has continual trouble from burning or swelling feet. Welt soled boots may also be exchanged profitably for turned soled footwear. Of course the latter is much lighter and will not endure as long as the welted sole model—especially if worn on the pavements a great deal; but the difference in comfort will usually offset the extra expense involved. Buttoned boots are better than the laced sort, for the laces, drawing across a more or less wrinkled leather tongue, often cause welts on instep and leg and are a source of much discomfort.

When the feet are very tired and sore after a day's shopping bathe them—not in warm water, which is the usual recourse of the footsore, but in snapping cold water in which a little sea-salt has been dropped. Keep them paddling about in the cold water five minutes; then rub briskly, first with a rough towel and then with a little alcohol. You will be surprised to find how light and frisky they feel and how they slip about in shoes that an hour before would have pinched cruelly.

WHIPS THE FOOD IN A JAR

Great Speed of the Wire Whips Secured With Very Little Effort

A good food whip is an essential to the modern kitchen and the one shown in the accompanying cut is a new one which has been recently invented and the chief claim for it is its extreme simplicity of construction which makes it very easy to clean. In fact all the parts being nickel plated it is merely necessary to hold in the stream of water from the kitchen tap and all particles will be washed off.

In operation it is only necessary to move the handle up and down the spiral spindle at a moderate rate and this is sufficient to revolve the wire whips in the jar with a rapid motion which acts very quickly on the contents of the jar.

It is suitable for a great many purposes, and the operation taking place inside a covered jar, there is no possibility of splashing the material around and wasting it as is the case in an open vessel.

WILD ANIMALS ARE CURIOUS

In Order to Get Acquainted With Them One Only Has to Keep Still.

There are three things to know, and another to do, if you are ever to get more than a fleeting glimpse of wild animals, William J. Long writes in the New York Independent. The first is that all wild animals are not governed by fear. The second is that a wild animal hates to be watched and becomes alarmed the moment he finds eyes fixed intently upon him. The third is that all wild animals are intensely curious, and that in moments when they are not feeding or playing or sleeping they get most of their fun out of life by indulging their curiosity.

Their first attitude toward every new object, unless it be moving toward them with evident hostility, is invariably one of curiosity rather than of fear.

The one thing to do in view of this knowledge is to keep still, physically and mentally still, and so take advantage of the animal's curiosity. Better than roaming the woods is to sit quiet in a good place and let the animal come to you. Then observe him casually, veiling your keen interest and never looking at him intently. You are to keep physically quiet lest the animal take alarm, and mentally quiet, because excitement of any kind is as contagious as fear or any other disease of mind or body.

When I am alone in the woods the wild animals rarely show alarm. A thousand times I have had them near me, large and small, and watched them indulge their curiosity and then move slowly off, turning their heads for a last look; but let me take another man with me, who grows mentally excited at the sight of game, and almost invariably the same animals are nervous and fidgety and end by running away.

Once a crow lit just over my head, so near that I hardly dared wink. He hopped first to another branch, and from there to the crotch of a great pine tree, where he began to uncover objects that were hidden under a mat of pine needles. Presently he took out something bright. It was a piece of glass that flashed and showed rainbow colors in a stray glint of sunshine. Then came a bit of quartz, a shell, a silver buckle and several other objects, all bright, that I could not make out. He turned his treasures over and over, mumbling in his throat in a pleased way over each one. Then he put them all back, covered them again with pine needles, and slipped away like a shadow.

Restricted View.

"You occasionally meet people who take a very serious view of life."

"Oh, yes. I saw one only this morning."

"A man or a woman?"

"A man. He was looking out of a window in our county jail."

COMING TO CANADA

Loose Methods of Racing Across Border Sending Horses Northward

The American thoroughbred industry seems to have gone to pieces. There are statistics that in the states of Kentucky, Tennessee and Virginia where the thoroughbred formerly flourished, there are not enough thoroughbred race horses left to make it worth talking about. And this state of affairs has been brought about entirely by the loose methods of conducting race track meetings and the consequent strenuous reform measures. There is no immediate indication that the thoroughbred will amount to anything very much in the near future in the United States. What horses of the breeding classes there are left are gradually finding their way to Canada. They find their way into the hands of Canadian owners and their progeny will be raced as Canadian breds. And chances are that by the time the racing laws of the United States have been remodelled the Americans will have to look to Canada for their horses, and much good money for the Canadian owner should be the result.

Farmer Was Wise.

Charles J. O'Connor, Chicago lawyer, told the following:

"A farmer took out a policy of fire insurance on his barn. After a loss had due proofs the company came to settle or adjust the loss, but took advantage of its option under the contract to build a new barn.

"Subsequently a life insurance company sought to have him insure his life in favor of his wife. 'O, no,' he says, 'you don't catch me a second time. If I'd die you would come around here and offer to get a new husband for her.'"

Modern Need.

It has recently been said that men of today have a tendency to express no emotion frankly, to admit only half of what they feel, and only a fourth of what they think. If this be true, then are they in sad need of the moral added help that verse and great poetry can give them. They need just that relaxing of the mind and heart which sublime expression inevitably brings.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at the office of any Local Agent of Dominion Lands (not sub-agent), on certain conditions.

Duties.—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required in every case, except when residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside of his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Six months residence in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and 50 acres extra cultivation. The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land after report by Homestead Inspector on application for patent.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price, $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

A GOLF CHAMPION

Ray an All-round Athlete But He Does Love His Pipe

Mr. Edward Ray, the new English golf champion, is known as "the big man with the pipe." He is never seen playing without a big briar pipe between his teeth, and it is said that the deprivation of his pipe would be sufficient to put him clean off his game.

Like last year's champion, Mr. Harry Vardon, the new champion hails from Jersey. He is one of the tallest men playing the game, being six feet in height, and he combines breadth with length. Mr. Ray is now thirty-four years of age, and has been playing golf half his life. He is noted for his powerful driving and easy style. Ray is quite an all-round sportsman, and in addition to his facility at golf, is capable of giving a good account of himself at boxing, football and cricket.

A few days later one of the men learned that the other had just settled with the street railway company for $1,500 for injuries to his wife. He went around to see him.

"'When was your wife hurt?' he asked.

Optimism Versus Pessimism

When I am tired I look on life and wearisdly I sigh.
Through cloudy glass I view the game with pessimistic eye;
On the scales 'gainst Life I weigh the exacting Price and smile,
For the count proclaims the effort not really worth the while.
With a retrospective eye, the hard,
traveled road I see,
The road untraveled, mirror-like, outstretching endlessly.
With clanking chains, from out the Past come ghosts of yesterday,
In sorry robes of deepest black, with features grave and grey.
The future, dim and shadowy, has sky that holds no sun;
Fate grapples with Hope's vision bright, and strangles one by one.

When I, refreshed, take up the glass
I view the world anew
With optimistic eye, I see through glass of rosy hue
The world's all right, the game's all right, when played in the right way.
No horrid ghosts take hold of me, no haunt of yesterday.
The future's full of Faith and Hope,
and in the sky a sun
Keeps on forever shining until the day is done.
Should shadows lurk and lie concealed with which I have to strive,
God gave To-day, a bright To-day;
I'm glad to be alive.
Optimist or Pessimist, this my philosophy:
It all depends on circumstance just which way you see.

FISH HATCHERIES ON GREAT LAKES

Nearly everyone in Canada is aware of the enormous amount of fish of all kinds that is taken from the Great Lakes during the fishing season, which extends from early spring until late in November. Thousands of men are at work every day cleaning out the nets and preparing the catches for shipment to the big markets throughout Canada and the United States. A trip over the waters of the lakes will reveal the homes of these fishermen scattered along the shores from Kingston to the head of Lake Superior.

To offset the heavy drain on the resources of the lakes, the Dominion Government established at various points fish hatcheries, where the little minnows are hatched from the eggs and later put into the lakes. A number of these stations are in Ontario, the chief plants being at Sarnia, Sandwich, Collingwood, Ottawa, Wiarton, Southampton, Newcastle and Port Arthur. The United States Government also has a number of these stations along the American shores where a very large number of fish are also turned out.—Rod and Gun.

Hose Connects With Spigot of Bath-tub and Sprays Strip

For the convenient handling of photographic films at home a photographer has invented a film washer. This consists of a rubber tube which connects with the spigot of the bath tub as a bath spray does and has a clip attachment on the other end. This attachment consists of two flat clips that work on the same principle as a paper clip. They hold one end of the film and the hose is then hung over a gas bracket or towel rack or some similar object so that it is some distance above the tub and the film can dangle its full length below. The water is then turned on and is sprayed gently over the film, washing it thoroughly and without the fingers touching it anywhere. Any spigot in the house will do quite as well, but a bucket should be provided over which the film can be hung.

MAKE A GHOST

Your Own If You Use Your own Name —Try It

Want to see what your "ghost" looks like? That's easy!

Take a sheet of writing paper and fold it. Then write your name in ink along the crease. Use plenty of ink. Fold the paper again quickly, while the ink is wet, and rub thoroughly so the ink spreads. You can make two different ghosts by writing your name on one paper just above the crease on another right over the crease, half above and half below it. And no two ghosts will be exactly alike. Every time you write you'll get a different one. Get your friends to try it, too, and exchange ghosts with them. The queer shapes different names make are very amusing.

CENTURY OLD CANOE

Relic of Indians Washed Ashore at Niagara

During a gale which swept Lake Ontario there was washed up on the beach at Niagara-on-the-Lake an old dugout canoe, which caused the towns-people a good deal of speculation, as judging by its timbers it is certainly very aged. The strange craft came ashore in two sections, which, put together, made a canoe of twenty-five feet. It is a dugout, made of a huge tree trunk, as it is nearly six feet wide. It is entirely covered with bark. The supposition is that it was an old Indian war canoe which sank in the Niagara River maybe a century ago. Becoming embedded in mud at the bottom of the river, it lay there for many years until loosened by ice or a shift in the current. The Niagara Historical Society have possession of the canoe.

CASTLE FOR THE NATION

Finely Preserved Relic of the Norman Attack Upon Wales

Weobley Castle, which dates back to the Norman attack upon Wales in the eleventh century, has been presented by Miss Talbot to the nation. The old castle, which stands on the Gower Peninsula, bears a most imposing appearance when approached from the estuary, of which it commands fine views. It is a splendid specimen of a castle, and possesses beautiful architectural features, [illegible] ... sliding round and hexagonal towers in almost perfect condition.

Weobley Castle was built by Henry Beaumont de Newburgh, who also built Swansea Castle, and was for centuries the property of the Delabere family. In the sixteenth century it fell into disuse, and a farmhouse was built within its great hall.

The farmhouse will be cleared away as a blot upon its surroundings. Every stone in the castle walls will be cemented and grouted, and the loose ones replaced. Arches will be opened up, angles bricked up, and the building generally made thoroughly secure.

MIXED FARMING

Important Growth in Western Live Stock Herds

It is encouraging to learn from the Toronto Globe correspondent in the West that Southern Alberta farmers are turning to mixed farming. During the spring the first mixed farming convention was held at Lethbridge. Dr. Rutherford, ex-Dominion Live Stock Commissioner, talked about feeding beef cattle; Prof. Elliott of the C.P.R. farm at Strathcona spoke about dairying, and Mr. W. F. Stevens, Live Stock Commissioner for Alberta spoke about swine; but nothing was said about the use of tractor engines or the best way to grow grain. Throughout Alberta this feeling is favor of live stock is growing, as the figures published a short time ago by The Globe show. It was shown that, as compared with 1,736,900 head of horses, swine, sheep and cattle, including beef and dairy breeds, at the beginning of 1912 there were in Alberta at the beginning of 1913 some 2,005,886 head.

In Saskatchewan, too, the holdings of live stock have increased of late:

Dr. J. P. Creamer, of Qu'Appelle, has been appointed by the Hon. Martin Burrell to do duty as western representative of the live stock branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture. His work will be the stimulation of the prairie live stock industry and of mixed farming generally.

BIG STEEL PLANT

To be Built Near Montreal by English Capital

The big industrial corporations of Great Britain and the United States are realizing the significance of the rapidly-growing markets of Canada. The firm of Armstrong, Whitworth & Co. Limited has officially announced its intention to erect a steel works establishment on the south shore of the St. Lawrence River, directly opposite Montreal, east and southeast of the town of Longueuil. Two hundred and fifty acres of land have been purchased at a cost of $400,000; the water frontage of this property extends two thousand feet.

Tenders have been received and contracts will be immediately awarded for the erection of the first series of buildings, which will cover 70 acres; the estimated cost is $1,000,000, and the plant will be in running order in a year's time, giving employment to 800 men. This number will be increased to 5,000 two years hence.

The tenders call for the erection of a large building, five hundred feet in length, of concrete and steel, together with a number of other lesser [illegible] everything large and small requiring the best quality of steel will be [illegible] out of the Longueuil works.

FOSTER FACTORIES

Calgary Municipal Mother-house for Experimental Work

In submitting to the ratepayers a by-law to authorize the fitting up of a house to foster industry, the council of Calgary showed most commendable enterprise which other cities might well emulate.

The Prince Albert Times comments approvingly and adds:

"Briefly the scheme is to provide a suitable building divided into small suites of rooms each well provided with light, power and water to enable the tenants to carry on small manufacturing plants. Men with large ideas and small means will be encouraged to start manufacturing in one of these suites. The rent being nominal, the water, light and power supplied at cost, they have practically only to provide the particular tools, machinery and furniture of their specialty. Of course, only applicants approved by the committee of management will be given accommodation in the building and their space therein is strictly limited, so that a successful and growing business must perforce seek outside quarters for expansion, thereby making room for another beginner. In the ideal mother-house, an enterprising committee of management will even finance the beginner, whose object satisfies them as being sound.

"Such an establishment may well be called a mother-house, or incubator of industry and while there are no Canadian examples to point to, there are several in the New England States."

BOYS ON THE FARM

How to Attract the Lads to the Soil

Three years ago a farmer living in the county of Wellington, who had a couple of hundred acres, clean and a satisfactory bank account, was told by his son that he was going into Guelph to team for a dollar and a half a day. He did not like the drudgery of farm work, and he had no cash. The father, who tells the story, said it nearly broke his heart to think his boy would leave such a farm as he had to team in the city for a dollar and a half a day. He thought it over, and finally he said to the boy that if he would remain on the farm he would buy him the best herd of shorthorn cattle in the country, and he could have them for himself to look after.

The boy accepted his father's offer, and this is the third year since the experiment was tried. His father says it is difficult to get him to the city for things that are absolutely necessary. His whole interest is taken up in developing the herd. He says you could not drive the boy off the farm. He has learned the points of his herd and how to develop them, and to produce a better animal than anybody else. He has found an outlet for his abilities, tested to their full bent.

A farmer up in Simcoe county introduced the writer to his son, a lad of fourteen years. The father was manifestly proud of him. He said that the boy's grandfather had presented him with a few pure-bred sheep. "Now," said he, "the boy has sheep on the brain. He reads every book and paper about sheep he gets his hands on. There is no mistake about it, he is going to be a farmer."

The Cattle Industry

"It is extremely doubtful if Chicago will get any grass beef from western Canada this season," said J. B. Watson, of Macleod, who brought several heavy shipments across the line last year. "The best steers I have been able to get on grass there delivered at Moose Jaw, Sask., is 7¼ cents, and they are the same grade I bought a year ago at 6 and 6½ cents. The fact is cattle values have appreciated sharply in Western Canada during the past year. Even with the duty off I do not believe Chicago would get many Alberta cattle as all the beef grown in that section now is needed for home consumption."—From the Chicago Breeders' Gazette.

No More Asthma A Cure Discovered That Really Does Cure

Thousands Testify to the Lasting Benefit Derived by This Marvelous Preparation.

The country is simply wild over the wonderful cures of chronic asthma that are being made every day by Catarrhozone. It is a scientific surprise, a perfect marvel the way it brings old chronics back to health. You will say so yourself after you have used it once, say so after the very first time. Ever since people first began to have asthma, Catarrhozone is certainly the best remedy discovered.

Creighton E. Thompson, well known in Calgary, writes:—"Nothing too strong can be said for Catarrhozone. I suffered four years from asthma in a way that would beggar description. I went through everything that man could suffer. I was told of Catarrhozone by a clerk in Findlay's drug store and purchased a dollar package. It was worth hundreds to me in a week, and I place a priceless value on the benefit I have since derived. I strongly urge every sufferer to use Catarrhozone for Asthma, Bronchitis and Catarrh."

The one-dollar package lasts two months; small size, 50c; sample size 25c; all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y. and Kingston, Canada.

Perfect Order at The Fair

The Fair authorities, the city police and the county police, are to be congratulated on the splendid order maintained throughout the exhibition grounds. County Constable Hatton was here, there and everywhere in his successful efforts to maintain order. Several of the commissioners, who visit all the fall fairs in Ontario, remarked to a Times reporter that they had never seen such a perfect system of policing as existed here during the past few days.

This Year's Poultry Show

The poultry show at this year's Fall Fair surpassed all local records. The poultry shown were somewhat inferior, as compared with last year, in numbers, but tremendously superior in quality. The judging of this exhibit had to be stopped at 6 p.m. on Friday for lack of light, but was continued at 6 a.m. Saturday, as the judge, from Cornwall, Ont., had to catch a train. A somewhat amusing feature of this show was this: A little girl born in the city and nine years old, who has often eaten turkey, on passing the cages containing these birds, asked "Daddy, what kind of birds are these?"

Belleville Boy Got Soaked.

Belleville, Sept. 14.—"A Scotch boy about fifteen years of age, will be an inmate of the Victoria Industrial Industrial School for Protestant boys at Mimico, until he is 20 years of age unless he is sooner released by lawful authority. Such was the decision of Magistrate Masson in the Children's Court this morning as he pronounced judgment on the boy, who had pleaded guilty to an indecent assault on a little girl six years old." Such a case confirms the Times contention that Juvenile cases should not be held in secret. Mothers of girls should be told, in a qualified way, of dangers threatening their girls.

RAILWAY FREIGHT RATES LOWER OF WHEAT FREE ALL ROUND

Canadian Grain May Go Into States to be Made Into Flour and Shipped to Europe—Railways Deeply Concerned

Montreal, Sept. 14.—Railway and other interests are much concerned over the fate of the clause in the new American tariff dealing with wheat. If the countervailing duty is stricken out and wheat made free all round then the tendency will be for a very large portion of the wheat of western Canada to find a market in the United States, where it will be milled and shipped as flour to Europe. There is also likelihood of it not only going into the States market to grind, but going into the States in order to be shipped as wheat to Europe, inasmuch as ocean freights are lower from American ports than from Canadian ports.

At the present moment the storehouses at Canadian ports are glutted because there are not ships enough to take the wheat away as fast as it comes from the West.

The only thing the Canadian Pacific will be able to do if wheat is made free in order to hold its business is to reduce freight rates in the west and especially reduce ocean freight rates. As a matter of fact the Canadian Pacific has been able to dictate ocean freight rates for some time as far as Canada is concerned; but if the wheat goes by way of the States they will have to suddenly change their tactics and make substantial reductions both on rail and ocean rates.

Canadian millers who grind wheat for export will as a consequence also have to have lower freight rates by land and sea, and they will also have to pay more for their wheat if the price in the States should eventually be higher there with free wheat than in Canada.

KAISER AS FARMER

Storm-Proof Rye, Hybrid Cattle, and Double Crops of Hay

To the annual gathering in Berlin of the German Agricultural Council, the Emperor delivered a costly address on his experiments at Cadinen, his country place in East Prussia. He spoke first of the improvements in 500 acres of meadow land, on which he had succeeded in raising crops of hay double those of former years, and on which much larger herds of cattle and horses can now graze. Rye was the next subject treated by the imperial farmer. He had got hold of a rye seed which enabled his crops to stand like "Uhlans' lances" when the crops of his neighbors lay flat under the heavy rain. When neighbors heard of his success they came in multitude in their eagerness to purchase seed from the Kaiser. His Majesty declared that he did some excellent business with the sale of this seed.

BRITAIN WOULD WELCOME AID FROM THE DOMINION

Recent Statement of Lord Haldane in Montreal Provides Food For Reflection bY Liberal Blockers

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Sept. 14.—Far removed from the arena of party strife and occupying the highest judicial position in the British Empire or probably in the world, Viscount Haldane has given his views on the Canadian naval question. He is no panderer to one party or the other in the Dominion and the prestige and traditions of the British bench would prohibit him from exhibiting party bias. In an interview in Montreal he said when asked his views on the naval situation that he had great confidence in the ability of Canada to work out and do what she thought best. He continued:

Relief to United Kingdom

"It would be a great relief to the United Kingdom," "if you decide to assist us, and would be a source of great strength to the Empire. The burden is very heavy for the little islands of the United Kingdom to bear, but we are willing to go on bearing it alone as long as you desire us to. Any assistance Canada may determine on however, would be gratefully received, as it would greatly enhance the forces now working to preserve peace. The more Canadians come to take part in the councils of the Empire the more we shall be pleased. This, of course, holds true of the other dominions, Australia, South Africa, etc."

Liberals Prevented It.

This impartial statement is an ironical commentary upon the action of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his party who had a great opportunity to lessen the heavy burden but cynically neglected it.

Sir Wilfrid has stated again and again that he is a Liberal of the Gladstone school. Lord Haldane is also a Liberal of the same school and was until his appointment to the lord chancellorship one of its greatest exponents. The average Canadian would prefer Viscount Haldane's Gladstonian Liberalism because it is more in harmony with the dignity of Canada, than that of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. It would not be difficult to guess which side Gladstone himself would have taken, if he were alive.

CHINA ACCEPTS JAPAN'S DEMANDS

Pekin, Sept. 14.—Japan's demands, presented to China two days ago in connection with the killing of Japanese subjects and the trampling of the Japanese flag by Chinese, were accepted in their entirety today by the Pekin Government.

The Japanese note, containing the demands which were tantamount to an ultimatum, was drafted as a result of the killing of three Japanese and the maltreatment of a consular [illegible] at Nanking, the [illegible] of a Japanese lieutenant at Hankow, and the imprisonment of a Japanese lieutenant at [illegible].

The Japanese Government demanded an apology for insults at the Japanese flag, the punishment of the Chinese officers responsible for the shooting of the Japanese at Nanking, and the payment of an indemnity, the amounts to be arranged later.

PETERBORO' EXHIBITION CLOSED VERY SUCCESSFUL

The Peterborough Industrial Exhibition, generally known as the "Fall Fair," was very largely patronized threatening rain and cold weather on Saturday. A clouded sky, with naturally prevented hundreds of our local citizens from attending. Still, the gathering on the exhibition grounds, was great in its immensity. The Poultry show, the Ontario Government exhibit, the windowless exhibition building and a hundred and one other attractions, including the midway, all pleased thousands of people. Fortunately the rain held off and delighted a crowded grand stand and a well filled fence rail. The directors of the fair are to be congratulated and complimented on the successful issue of their endeavors for the year 1913.

Drink and Lunacy

Some idea of the appalling ravages made by the drink scourge in present-day France may be formed by the terrible series of statistics showing the relation between alcohol and madness which specialists attached to the principal Paris lunatic asylums made public.

These figures reveal that since 1866, when exact records were started, the proportion of male lunatics whose loss of reason is caused by drink has increased 14 per cent. to 47 per cent.; while on the female side the percentage has risen from less than 1 to 10

IF KING COMMANDS CONFERENCE, BOTH PARTIES WILL AGREE

Prominent Peers Confer With His Majesty on Lord Loreburn's Proposal

London, Sept. 15.—Though the Cabinet Ministers have so far made no response to Lord Loreburn's appeal for a Home Rule conference, week-end visits of Unionist statesmen to the King at Balmoral, including Bonar Law, Lord Curzon, Lord Fisher, and Lord Revelstoke, have given a new significance to the appeal; and it is beyond doubt that the [illegible] is now engaging the serious attention of leaders on both sides.

Conference Unlikely.

It cannot be said, however, that to-day's comments of politicians and party newspapers afford much ground for believing that a conference will be brought about.

Curzon Denounces Scheme.

Lord Curzon on Saturday flatly declared the proposal to be impracticable, that the gulf between himself and John Redmond was not to be bridged, and Joseph Devlin yesterday suggested the same thing more indirectly, although he would heartily welcome the Home Rule bill based on a universal agreement. Indeed the only whole-hearted support of the conference from any Irish quarter comes from William O'Brien, who thinks that neither the Liberals nor the Unionists can or will refuse to participate in one, if the invitation so do so comes from the King.

ESPERANTO CHIEF EXPLAINS HOW TOWER OF BABEL FALLS

Society for the Spread of the New Universal Language Has Been Formed in Toronto

Toronto, Sept. 15.—A new Esperanto Society for Toronto has been started, and Mr. Pemon of 239 Bathurst street, was appointed secretary. The meeting had the advantage of the presence, in an advising capacity of Mr. H. Bolingbroke Mudie, perhaps the chief living authority on Esperanto. Mr. Mudie, who is a member of Mudie's—The firm famous for their circulation libraries—who is president, both of the British Esperanto Association and also of the Universal Esperanto Association, is in Toronto merely on a pleasure visit, but wherever he goes he takes his enthusiasm for Esperanto with him.

In the course of a chat, Mr. Mudie mentioned that Esperanto, the international language—the language that "is doing for spoken and written communications between peoples what notation has done for musicians and flag-signalling at sea for sailors" —is being greatly used by the immigration departments of various countries, and he thought the Canadian Immigration Department should follow suit.

"The New Zealand Immigration Department," he said, "publishes circulars in Esperanto, and is finding the use of this language very valuable in making known the advantages of New Zealand in other countries. The Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce arranged lectures all over Europe in Esperanto—I heard them in Poland—setting out the advantages of California.

MAKING HEADWAY.

Asked as to the progress Esperanto is making, Mr. Mudie said it was extraordinary. And he attributed this not only to the increasing evidences of its usefulness, but also to the ease with which it could be learned. "It is at least fifty times easier to learn than any national language."

SERIOUS AUTO CAR ACCIDENT

Mr. Davidson's Niece Was Hurt When Auto and Street Car Collided

Yesterday evening, at 5.10, as a street car was passing northwards on George street, as the car arrived at the corner of Dublin street, an automobile suddenly shot out from the west side of the street, going east. The auto tried to cross in front of the car, which was pursuing the even tenor of its way. The motorman had rung his gong, seeing the approaching car. The motorman at once reversed his power and put on the brakes. The street car collided with the auto almost squarely in the centre of the latter.

Mrs. J. A. Davidson, of Smith, was driving the auto. When the accident occurred Mr. Davidson was not thrown out, but his little niece was injured. She was carried into Hooper's confectionery, corner of George and Dublin street. Dr. Morgan was called.

At a late hour last night, Dr. Morgan pronounced his patient as out of danger.

EPWORTH LEAGUE GEORGE ST. CHURCH HOLDS 1ST ANNUAL RALLY

The successful Epworth League of George street Methodist church held Sunday and yesterday, its first annual rally. On Sunday both services were characterized by good attendance and visible zeal.

Both services were addressed by Rev. Mr. Doyle, of Winnipeg, one of the Western secretaries of the Canadian League. At the evening service a platform program was in evidence at which Mr. C. S. Thompson, President of the local League, Mr. Coon and Revs. Doyle and Purvey spoke.

On Monday night the following inspiring message from Rev. Mr. Couch, a former pastor of George street church, but now of Ottawa, was read.

Rev. Mr. Couch's Message.

Dear Fellow Leaguers of George St. Methodist Church, Peterborough.

Your President Mr. Thompson has written me that your "Rally" takes place on Monday evening, Sept. 15, and has kindly asked that I send a message for that occasion. This I gladly do. For at once your pleasant faces seem to stand before me. Pleasant are the memories of the past. I have watched your growth and once again I say to you—Go Forward! Seek the new! How significant that under the very shadow of the end, Jesus said a "NEW," a fresh, "Commandment I give unto you that ye love one another."

That love will always make life worth living and it has an eternal power of renewal. One of the last things Jesus did was to point His disciples to the fountain of ever-new and ever fresh life. It was into the life of love He had led them. It was old in a sense, but Jesus made it new by His own life. He made love a richer thing than it had ever been before—made it new. It was in that life He wanted them to continue when He was gone.

But this was not all. They were to go on LEARNING as well as loving. Jesus speaks not only as a friend, but as a teacher. He had been teaching truth. And here in those last days, He says He has not told them all He had to tell; He had kept some things back. Therefore Jesus does not make the things He had taught final—He warns them against that notion. He wants them to keep themselves open to the guidance of the Spirit from the Father which leads man into all truth. This word ought to serve as the charter of spiritual freedom for the Christian. It is the grand assertion of the power of the soul in touch with God to achieve progress in knowledge of things divine. It ought to have made impossible and final bondage to written things but thanks to God, the influence of the dogmatist is growing less and less.

We must believe what we know to be true—that the Divine Spirit leads man to-day into the knowledge of Divine things and that revelation is continuous; and we must claim freedom for every loyal soul, freedom to learn, to discover, and to grow. Jesus in the last days assured us that many things had not been told, and if Jesus were here to-day He would say the same thing. Many things of the Infinite Wisdom are still to be known, and the store is inexhaustible.

The Fellow Leaguers seeking religion a corresponding faith to the doctor's. May your eyes brighten as you think of the days to come. Say—"The past is great, but the future is greater." Jesus looking upon His own work said to His disciples—"Greater things than these shall they do because I go to My Father." "When the Spirit of truth is come He shall guide you into all truth." The Spirit is still guiding, and will guide, and in the coming centuries there will be more marvelous unfoldings of the Divine purpose richer knowledge of God, deeper religious experience wider wisdom than any yet granted to man. See that you get your share of these things. Go on with your life. Advance!

Isaac Couch.

WAR WORSE THAN HELL SAYS MAN FROM BALKAN

American Surgeon Here Who Was in Balkan Battles

Dr. A. F. Maxwell, of Detroit, is spending a few days in Peterborough, on his way home from the Balkan War, where he had a good chance to perfect his knowledge of surgery. He spent an hour in The Times office yesterday, where he related some of his experiences in the East.

In speaking of this he averred that war is hell. The side of war that deals only with the suffering and not with the glory shows that civilization has accomplished little except to increase its horrors. Men accustomed to sights of sufferings and sorrow declare that never has there been anything in their experience to equal the scenes witnessed in the Balkans. They have made calculations based on other wars and their cold, analytical conclusions are that battle is becoming more and more terrible and that it will be more murderous in the future than ever.

It is true, remarked Dr. Maxwell, they declare that wars are shorter than they used to be and it is probable there will never be another that will last ten, twenty or thirty years, as has been the case in the past. This simply means that the blows struck are heavier and that battle is less humane. The Franco-Prussian war lasted but a short time—a few months—and the German army lost ten men killed for every fifty-eight wounded. In the war between Japan and Russia in 1904-05 there were ten men killed for every thirty-eight wounded.

The popular impression is that wounds made by the modern steel jacketed bullets are not severe because of its great penetrating powers and rapid revolution. While there have been many instances of wounds thus inflicted which were not serious the chance of a serious wound was largely increased by the introduction of the steel jacketed bullet, according to the experts.

The bullet, with the modern rifle, has a longer range and is liable to lose its jacket. When this happens it becomes a jagged, tearing mass of soft lead that makes frightful wounds. The bullet is also liable to strike something else before it hits its victim and become bent. A small, hard stone will bend a steel bullet almost into a right angle and its bite is fearful.

But it is not alone the rifle that inflicts the bad wounds. The perfection of field artillery has enlarged the sphere of horror. Whereas in the Franco-Prussian war the number of wounds caused by bursting shells was 91 per thousand troops engaged, the number in the Balkan war was 360 per thousand, or four times greater.

The execution done by the shrapnel shell has increased to an unusual degree. Shrapnel is a form of iron or steel shell which bursts over the heads of troops and showers them with small round balls.

Altogether, the investigators agree war has become considerably worse than Gen. Sherman so tersely described it. The only redeeming feature is the fact that science has provided ways for the saving of more of the wounded than was the case formerly.

THE WEATHER.

To-day—Strong easterly winds, with occasional rain.

MORE SAFETY FOR LOCAL CANAL CRAFT

The Department of Railways and Canals, and Marine and Fisheries have had representations made to them, through Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., requesting an enquiry regarding the evident need for better lighting accommodations on the Trent Canal between the city and Lakefield. Mr. Burnham has realized that this necessity has become pressing, as many accidents have been incurred by boats, several gasoline launches having nearly run over a

It is also proposed to enforce a rule compelling all small boats to carry lights by night. This is very important, as we know of cases where people have almost lost their lives by collision on account of such boats not carrying lights.

M'GARRY TO BE HOST TO BECK AT RENFREW

Toronto, Sept. 15.—Renfrew, the Bailiwick of T. W. McGarry, M.P.P., the wild Irish rose of Ontario politics, will be doubly or trebly proud on Thursday of this week.

The Renfrew fair will be in full bloom; Mr. McGarry will be there; and Hon. Adam Beck, chairman of the Provincial Hydro-Electric Commission, will speak.

Renfrew is entitled to Mr. Beck's electrifying presence. There's a local plant, and a dam is being built at Round Lake for storage purposes. Renfrew has spent or will spend, about $165,000 on Waterworks, waterpower, etc.

Renfrew exhibition will feature an electrical demonstration, and Mr. Beck will see some of the finest horses in the east, exhibited by millionaire lumbermen.

Before returning home, Mr. Beck will spend a few days in Ottawa and Montreal.

WANTED—A MAN CAPABLE OF FILLING 3 IMPORTANT CITY OFFICES

City is Anxious to Secure an Official to Inspect Electric Wiring, Building and Plumbing, Will Invite Applicants for the Positions Singly, Dually or Jointly

A joint committee of the City Fire, Water and Light and Property Committees met last night to formulate some policy in regard to the appointment of Civic Inspectors to assume the responsibility for approved building operations, electric wiring and plumbing. The real question before the committee was whether any of the offices should be combined or each stand alone. The appointment of a wiring inspector is an enforcement in the hands of the Hydro-Electric Commission by act of Legislature.

Ald. Johnston and Ald. Green moved that Council invite applications for: First, a Building Inspector, a Wiring Inspector, and a Plumbing Inspector, each office to stand alone; Second, Building and Wiring Inspector combined; Third, Building and Plumbing Inspector combined; Fourth, Building, Wiring and Plumbing Inspector combined. Applications to be in by October 1. —Carried.

Mr. Strickland, Chief wiring Inspector for the Hydro-Electric Commission, was again present with his advice and information on the question, and incidentally offered that Peterborough is grouped with other Ontario places under Hydro-Electric's fatherly eye in the matter of wiring inspection as one of the Province's chief cities. He also reiterated that were a wiring inspector not appointed within a reasonable time, the act is in such shape that the Commission can ORDER such appointment.

HUNGERS OMINOUS SPECTRE STALKING THROUGH IRELAND

Dublin Foul Slums Will be fighting Starvation by the End of the Week

New York, Sept. 15.—A London cable says:

Hunger has become the ally of organized capital in the fight against the Dublin transport workers. By the end of this week the spectre of starvation will be a grim reality in the foul slums of the city, where life at best is a hand-to-mouth struggle to keep body and soul together.

There is no sign of weakening however, on the part of James Larkin's deluded followers, despite a steady and ominous growth day by day of the employers' lockout.

Larkin, speaking at a labor meeting in Manchester, said he believed he had a divine mission to make men and women discontented.

Since he went to Ireland, in 1907, he had raised the flag of discontentment from Belfast to Cork, and brought a new hope and a new gospel to the working classes of Ireland.

YOUNG GIRL WAS ROBBED ON BRIGHTLY LIGHTED STREET

Miss May Love of Winnipeg Set Upon by Thugs at Corner of Front and Yonge Streets Last Night

Toronto, Sept. 15.—A stranger in the city, Miss May Love, of Winnipeg, who was on her way to Madoc to attend the funeral of her father, was the victim of a bold highway robber, who snatched her chatelaine at the corner of Front and Yonge streets shortly after 9 o'clock last night. The thief secured $30 in money, a railway ticket and nearly $600 in cheques, and although pursued by Miss Love, a small slight woman, succeeded in making good his escape.

Miss Love was walking toward the Union Station, and felt secure from molestation owing to the brightly lighted streets. At the corner of Front and Yonge streets, she stopped to ask a woman if she was on the right street to take her to the Union Station. Receiving an answer in the affirmative, she proceeded on her way. It was then that she noticed two men who's actions were suspicious. One walked away in front of her, while the other followed behind her.

Keeping her eye on the man in front she was not aware of the presence of the second man until he came up beside her and made an attempt to snatch her chatelaine. Miss Love dropped her suitcase and when the thief saw that she was going to resist him he struck her a blow on the side of the head. He then grabbed the chatelaine and ran over behind the advertising boards at the fire ruins.

Her screams for help brought a motorman of a passing car to her assistance, and together they gave chase to the thief. A constable also endeavored to locate the thug, but nothing was to be seen of him.

Fearing that she might lose her train, the young woman proceeded to the Union Station, where she told her story to the officials, who kindly arranged for her transportation to Madoc.

AUNT SALLY'S ADVICE TO BEAUTY-SEEKERS

C. M. P.: The neck should receive similar attention to that given the complexion, so color and texture of skin will be the same. A yellow neck and a white face give a discordant effect. I advise using for both neck and complexion, the treatment recommended to "Monica."

F. M.: First, stop scowling, if you would get rid of the lines between the eyes. The best application for such lines, and all wrinkles, is a solution of powdered saxolite, 1 oz. dissolved in witch hazel, ½ pint. Bathe the face in this daily until entirely relieved.

Monica: You hardly need such a list of cosmetics as you mention. Ordinary mercolized wax will help you more than any or all of them. It will gradually absorb the withered, discolored complexion and you will soon have a new, youthful and healthy-looking skin. You needn't get more than an ounce of the wax, which will cost you little at any druggist's. Apply nightly, like cold cream, washing it off mornings.—Woman's Realm.

VAMBERY IS DEAD, FRIEND OF HAMID AND OF VICTORIA

Budapest, Hungary, Sept. 15.—Professor Arminius Vambery, one of the best known travelers and scientists of the nineteenth century, died here to-day in his 82nd year. He was much revered both in his native Hungary and other countries and his works were widely read.

He traveled throughout Central Asia as a man in the disguise of a dervish and on his return he was appointed professor of Oriental languages at Pest University owing to his profound knowledge of the various idioms.

Real Birthday Unknown.

Arminius Vambery celebrated on March 19th, the 82nd "official" anniversary of his birth. His real birthday lay somewhere between Great Cholera and the Little Cholera that ravaged Hungary in the early thirties of last century. When asked to sign Queen Victoria's birthday book at Windsor in 1889, he confessed his ignorance and with royal permission entered the date of March 19, 1832. "I am quite sure," he writes in his Memoirs, "that among the many guests there were never another to whom the day and year of his entry into this world were unknown.

Early Years.

Whatever born, Vambery was the son of a devout Jew and distinguished Talmudist named Bamberger, whose patronymic suffered in course of time a Magyar change into Vambery.

ACTRESS AND NAVVY

Kiss the Reward for Preventing a Street Accident

Outside a jeweller's shop in Paris stood a splendid motor-car. Towards this, after purchasing a bangle, tripped a dainty little actress, exquisitely dressed. But the pavement was being repaired, and a loose stone caused the lady to stumble. She would have fallen on to a heap of débris had it not been for a burly laborer, who threw his arm round her waist.

With a grateful smile she turned to the man and thanked him sweetly. Then she offered him a piece of silver, but he shook his head. The lady blushed, and there was a moment's hesitation. Then, raising her veil, she offered her delicate cheek to the son of toil. "Kiss me, sir."

And the big navvy, blushing like a schoolgirl, but with the manner of an old-time gallant, imprinted a kiss on the fair one's cheek. The navvy turned to his companions, and said: "What an angel! I won't wash my face for a month!"

HAIR OF YAK TAILS

Brings Ten Dollars an Ounce as Commercial Commodity

Among the many animal products imported for a wide variety of purposes from foreign lands is white hair. It is of various sorts and has a wide range in value. White hair of the Syrian goat, known as Asiatic white hair, comes from Syria, Persia and Tibet. The body hair of the Syrian buck grows to sixteen inches in length, the beard to twelve inches; but in a lot of 15,000 or 20,000 pounds there might be found less than 25 pounds of 16-inch hair. All the lengths are utilized.

The long white hair of the Syrian goat is as fine as human hair, in place of which it is used for some special purposes, principally for the making of theatrical wigs and beards. To prepare it for these uses it is put through various washing processes and is combed to free it of all foreign substances and to straighten and smooth it. In this first finished state it is put up for market in little straight rolls or bundles. It is also sold in partly manufactured form, made up into curls and weaves of various shapes and sizes.

Slips in Oratory

Even the most facile speakers are guilty of unpardonable errors in their oratory. Mr. Arthur Balfour on one occasion spoke of "an empty theatre of unsympathetic auditors," and Lord Curzon of Kedleston remarked that "though we are not out of the wood, we have a good ship."

Mr. Asquith once stated that "redistribution is a thorny subject which requires delicate handling, or it will tread on some people's toes."

Mr. St. John Brodrick, when a member of the House of Commons, told that assembly that "among the many jarring notes heard in this House on military affairs this subject (mobilization) at least must be regarded as an oasis."

In a debate on the London Education Bill Mr. Walter Long said, "We are told that by such legislation the very heart of the country has been shaken to its very foundations."

The late General Redvers Buller, desiring to convey that there was little to be gained by so-called Army Reform, declared that "the Army is honeycombed with cliques and biases go by favor in this web of axe-grinders."

Likes Canada Best

Rev. Father Lebeau, of the Archbishop's palace, Ottawa, returned from a tour of France, England, Spain, Portugal, Switzerland, Egypt and the Holy Land and made this statement:

"After visiting all the European countries and the Eastern ones, too, I find that I never appreciated Canada so greatly. There is a spirit of liberty here which I found in no other country I was in. There the rich are rich and the poor hopelessly poor. Here in Canada we know how to enjoy life as they do not."

Strength of Concrete

A concrete motion picture theater recently built in England is 89 feet long by 42 feet wide and 18 feet high, yet the walls are only two inches thick.

FIRST TRIP HOME IN FORTY YEARS

Pioneer of the West Went In With Lord Strathcona and Saw the Country Develop

After forty years' absence from Montreal, Leon Pare, fur trader, bonanza wheat rancher and pioneer of the Duhamel district of Alberta returned to his home city for a visit to his relatives. Mr. Pare, whose career has been an active one, was born in St. Sulpice, L'Assumption County, Que., some eighty years ago. It is more than forty years since he left Montreal for Fort Garry, as Winnipeg was then known, in company with Donald Smith, now Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal. The old man gives the following account of the trip:

"There were more Indians than white people at Fort Garry when Donald Smith, governor of the Hudson's Bay, and I arrived there in the summer of 1873. We travelled by train from Montreal to St. Paul, by way of Chicago, and the overland trip by stage from the Mississippi River to the company's post at Fort Garry was anything but pleasant. We had a rather rough time of it, but to me the novelty offset the hardships. Then, too, I recalled that Smith had walked alone from Fort Garry to Montreal and return. Travelling in a stage coach, of course, was easier than walking."

Becomes a Trader

Pare remained at Fort Garry six months and entered upon five years of service for the Hudson's Bay Company at Fort Qu'Appelle and Carlston. From the Indians who came to trade at Fort Qu'Appelle he heard of the large fur catch on the Battle River, and was told of the opportunities for making money. He severed his connection with the company in 1878, and became a trader, with headquarters near Camrose.

From Duhamel Pare made three trips overland to Winnipeg, travelling in a Red River ox-cart.

He would leave in the early spring with a load of furs and return late in the fall. At Duhamel Pare had an exciting time during the Riel Rebellion. One night his little trading post was surrounded by Indians and half-breeds, who told him that all the white men had to be killed. As Pare was the only white man for many miles around, it would not take them long to finish the job. They wanted Pare to open his store. When he refused they forced it open, using a big log as a battering-ram. The old Hudson's Bay lock was so strong that the frame broke before the door and by carrying the door away entrance was gained. The invaders took all the goods in the store and departed. A few days later they returned for more goods, saying he was deceiving them. They succeeded in locating his catch of furs and carried them off as well. This was the end of the disturbance, as the Indians were summoned to help Riel at Batoche.

Takes up Ranching

"After I quit trading," Pare said, "I took up ranching in the Duhamel district. It was a wilderness, the only other white man in the territory being Father Bellevaire, who looked after the Indians. Later, I went in for mixed farming and made lots of money. Neither Calgary nor Edmonton could boast of more than a handful of people when I first saw them. There was not much at Calgary when I went in with a catch of furs on the first train sent out over the Canadian Pacific Railway. The Hudson's Bay Company's trading post in Edmonton was then known as 'the last house in the world.'"

MADE THE JOKE COMPLETE

Mrs. Brown Took Advice That Was Good, and Also Had a Little Fun Out of Incident.

Mrs. Brown, talking with a friend one morning, happened to say:

"I have such a bad sore throat. I'm afraid I cannot go to that dinner party tomorrow night."

Just then something went wrong with the connection, and she heard a strange voice break in:

"Gargle your throat with baking soda, and I think you will be able to go to your dinner."

"Who is this speaking?" asked Mrs. Brown, startled.

"Oh, that you will never know," answered the voice.

Mrs. Brown was greatly amused and decided to try the remedy. Her throat improved and she went to the party. During dinner she chanced to overhear the gentleman opposite say to his neighbor:

"I had an amusing experience the other morning. I was telephoning and the wires became crossed. I suddenly heard a lady's voice say: 'I have such a bad throat I shan't be able to go to that dinner party.' Just for fun, I broke in and said, 'Gargle your throat with baking soda and you'll be all right.' The lady's voice in reply sounded rather surprised. I wonder if she took my advice."

Mrs. Brown was greatly tempted to reveal her identity as the heroine of the episode, but she decided that she could get more fun another way. She made careful inquiry of her hostess as to the gentleman's full name and address, and next morning called him up. When he answered she said:

"I just wanted you to know that I took your advice, gargled my throat with baking soda, and was able to go to the dinner."

"Who—who is this speaking?" came an astonished voice from the other end of the wire.

"Oh, that you will never know," answered Mrs. Brown, laughing, and rang off.

THE ADRIANOPLE PUZZLE

Adrianople is puzzling the European powers. A Turkish force is there in open breach of the London treaty. The Bulgarian flag has been hauled down though Turkey ceded the city to Bulgaria. In vain the powers have told Turkey that she must retreat to the frontier she accepted. Her answer is that at all costs she will hold the territory that she has recovered. What are the powers to do? They would like to compel Turkish retirement to the Enos-Midia line, which was drawn with their approval; but they cannot agree to use force for the purpose, and force is the only thing that could cow the Turks in their present temper. The powers having stated that they will not unitedly resort to arms nor [illegible] their mandate to a single power, the Turks feel safe as long as Russia does not move on her own account, and will probably stay where they are till overcome by monetary exhaustion.

That will not be this week, nor next. The bulk of the people are eager to contribute toward the cost of army maintenance, and will manage to supply money enough for a time, though the keeping of from 250,000 to 300,000 men on a war footing involves enormous expenditure. With Talaat Bey in the Constantinople Cabinet, Enver Bey at Adrianople, and Izzet Pasha in command at the army headquarters, the military party controls the government, and is likely to keep power till it stumbles with the empire [illegible] over the empty purse. That is what has to be faced. For the powers are not idle, but are employing the ponderous engine of financial coercion to straighten out the Adrianople puzzle. That engine moves slowly, but before long its closing of the money market against Turkey may prove effectual.

The negotiations between Turkey and Bulgaria may complicate the situation. Has Bulgaria been forced into them through exhaustion? Or is she acting on the advice of some of the powers? There is as yet no answer to these questions. Much depends on whether Bulgaria has been acting in weakness for herself alone, or with the strength of a great power urging her on. As to the aim of Turkey, it is said that she desires an agreement with Bulgaria in opposition to Greece — an idea that might tempt Bulgaria irritated by the Greek retention of Salonica and Kavala. What is certain is that Turkey is trying to make a new frontier treaty with Bulgaria, practically abrogating the London treaty. Thus the Enos-Midia frontier would be taken from under the feet of the powers and they would seem to have nothing to stand on. But if they are in earnest they will find a secure footing and continue their efforts until the last of the Turks have to retreat, not merely to Eastern Thrace, but to Western Asia.

A Bad Heart, Its Cause and Cure

Many, Firmly Convinced They Are Dying of Heart Trouble, Have Often the Strongest Hearts.

Sometimes you wake up at night, heart throbbing like a steam engine. Your breathing is short and irregular; pains shoot through the chest and abdomen, and cause horrible anxiety.

Your trouble isn't with the heart at all. These sensations are the outcome of indigestion, which has caused gas to form on the stomach and press against the heart.

"Just read what happened to Isaac [illegible], of Belle River, Ont.:

"Three months ago I was a weak, sickly man. My appetite was poor, food fermented in my stomach, I had sour risings and indigestion. At night I would often waken with gas in the stomach and heart palpitation.

"I consulted my doctor and used remedies that my friends advised.

NOTHING HELPED.

"One day I received a sample of Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and my cure commenced. To-day I have a vigorous appetite, strong heart action and no sign of indigestion. I feel younger and healthier than ever before."

Your druggist or storekeeper sells Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box or five boxes for $1.00. By mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

EAT CABBAGE, FISH, SAUSAGE, NEW BREAD

No Indigestion, Gas, Sourness or Upset Stomach if you'll take "Pape's Diapepsin"—Try This!

Do some foods you eat hit back—taste good, but work badly; ferment into stubborn lumps and cause a sick, sour, gassy stomach? Now, Mr. or Mrs. Dyspeptic, jot this down: Pape's Diapepsin digests everything, leaving nothing to sour and upset you. There never was anything so safely quick, so certainly effective. No difference how badly your stomach is disordered you will get happy relief in five minutes, but what pleases you most is that it strengthens and regulates your stomach so you can eat your favorite foods without fear.

Most remedies give you relief sometimes—they are slow, but not sure. "Pape's Diapepsin" is quick, positive and puts your stomach in a healthy condition so the misery won't come back.

You feel different as soon as "Pape's Diapepsin" comes in contact with the stomach—distress just vanishes—your stomach gets sweet, no gases, no belching, no eructations of undigested food, your head clears and you feel fine.

Go now, make the best investment you ever made, by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder.

MUSIC and DRAMA

MISS MAUDE ADAMS.

One of the few things that the public knows about Maude Adams, who is to be seen here in Barrie's classic play, "Peter Pan," is that she has a great fondness for children. This came out during one of the long runs of the play in New York.

Without ever announcing her intention to any one Miss Adams hired a big theatre on the Bowery for an afternoon. This done through her own efforts and that of her agents, she invited three thousand of the children living in the poorest and most congested district of the city to a performance of "Peter Pan." It was only after everything had been arranged that the actress told Mr. Frohman anything about it. The scenery and paraphernalia were all transferred to the Bowery Theatre, and the performance was a perfect one in every detail. To those who are familiar with Barrie's whimsical and delightful play it is easy to imagine the sheer joy of that performance to the urchins of the big city. Miss Adams found great comfort and delight in the undertaking and would not permit the members of her company to contribute their services for the performance, much as they insisted upon doing so. Barrie's work is a marvelous one in many ways. It possesses the wonderful faculty of delighting the child and at the same time of appealing to the understanding, the emotions and the sense of humor of the adult. Grand Opera House, Peterborough, Thursday, September 18th.

MR. LAWRENCE BROUGH'S ALL CANADIAN TOUR, 1913-14.

Mr. Lawrence Brough, star of the "Lady of Ostend" Company, now on an all-Canadian tour with an all-English company, who plays at the Grand Opera House next Saturday, Sept. 20th, matinee and night, relates an amusing experience he once had whilst on a short vacation to the United States, in the days when he was inexperienced in the ways of American hotels.

Together with his wife Mr. Brough decided to spend a week at Niagara, and upon arrival they went straight to the best looking hotel in the town. When he had registered, Mr. Brough enquired the rates for himself and wife.

"American or European?" asked the clerk.

"American," declared Mr. Brough, who after two weeks' residence in the States, considered he was entitled to claim any concessions that were usually accorded to Americans—for so he interpreted the clerk's query.

"Ten dollars a day," quoth the clerk.

A rapid calculation on Mr. Brough's part told him that this was the equivalent of two pounds of English per diem, and turning to his better half he told her in an awed whisper that with strict economy in the feeding line they might manage to get through on two pounds and ten shillings per day for the week, and they straightway started out to find a reasonable restaurant.

On the way out to the pavement they passed a splendidly appointed dining-room, and Mr. Brough said his mouth watered at the lovely things laid out upon the tables. But he had determined to limit his expenditure to £2.10.0 per day, so away they went.

"The only way to get real value for all that money would be to sleep the whole week through, wouldn't it?" asked Mrs. Brough, and her husband agreed, at the same time speculating what it would cost in such a hotel to get a plate of real roast beef a l'Anglaise.

The week's visit concluded, Mr. Brough demanded his bill at the cashier's desk—$60. As he paid over the money Mr. Brough was asked by the clerk how he had enjoyed his stay, and commented upon the fact that neither of the visitors had been in to meals very often.

"Very often?" echoed Brough. "Never, you mean! By Jove, if it costs $10 a day for a bedroom, it would surely have been $20 extra for meals. And I tell you, my boy, I cannot afford such sums as $30 a day—the acting business won't run to those figures."

With an extremely puzzled air, the lord of the ledgers looked hard at Brough, and then explained in a gently commiserating tone of voice, "Of course, when you stay at a hotel on the 'American' plan, that means that your meals are all included in the daily rate."

When Mr. Brough tells his story against himself his brows contract, he looks fierce, and his description of how his wife led him gently from the hotel, limp as a soaked collar, is funny in the extreme. "If ever a man deserved kicking, that man was Me" he concludes.

Toronto Mail and Empire, Sept. 9, 1913.—"For splitting laughter there have been few farces in Toronto that can equal 'The Lady of Ostend' . . . kept the audience in a state of laughter practically from the commencement."

NEW EXHIBITION BUILDING

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Now that, under its present capable management, the Peterborough Fall Fair has attained the pinnacle of success, it is time the city should establish more suitable buildings. It seems a disgrace that a city of 20,000 people should tolerate such a ramshackle old shed, as now disfigures the Exhibition grounds. Many villages of 1500 people would be ashamed of such a structure. Consider Peterborough with a wheezy old shed whose recently patched roof looks like the back of a moulting hen. Let us get busy before next Fall.

IF CHILD IS CROSS, FEVERISH AND SICK

Look Mother! If tongue is coated, cleanse little bowels with "California Syrup of Figs."

Children love this "fruit laxative," and nothing else cleanses the tender stomach, liver and bowels so nicely.

A child simply will not stop playing to empty the bowels, and the result is, they become tightly clogged with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sours, then your little one becomes cross, half-sick, feverish, don't eat, sleep or act naturally, breath is bad, system full of cold, has sore throat, stomach-ache or diarrhoea. Listen, Mother! See if tongue is coated, then give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the system, and you have a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers give "California Syrup of Figs" because it is perfectly harmless; children love it, and it never fails to act on the stomach, liver and bowels.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

SPORT IN CANADA

A Plea for Lacrosse and Other Trials of Strength

The game of baseball is a striking contrast to the sedate, leisurely Old Country game of cricket with its intervals for tea and its innings lasting two or three days. Nowadays there does not seem to be so much written or said about the real Canadian national game: lacrosse. It would be pity indeed if lacrosse were to be allowed to pass and become forgotten in Canada. For a manly robust summer game the pleasure of a well-matched lacrosse battle would be hard to excel. It may not be so entertaining to the spectators, but for a downright test of physical fitness and combination it is equal to any in the field. In modern times the tendency in sport as in work appears to be away from brawn in favor of brain. The midways at the fairs know nothing of the tough old boxing booths where brawny rustics were invited to don the gloves; wrestling on the green has given place to Japanese acrobats and vaudeville turns.

The opportunity to watch a straight bout between burly champions comes rarely. To see such a splendid specimen of manhood as Sybeco, or Frank Gotch, the western farmer, is a stirring incentive to the youth who is inspired to build up a robust constitution. How much better, with all its rough, strenuous work, is the glove fight and the wrestling match, than the morbid gazing at freak animals and fake criminal cars. Happily the sturdy spirit of sport still prevails in Canada; and even if lacrosse has to give way for baseball nothing will displace the stalwart contests of autumn on the Canadian football field and the fast hockey games of winter.

SOME GOOD EXERCISES

Arm Movements and Deep Breathing Produce Results

Stand in front of a widely opened window, put your hands well back on your hips, fingers pointing forward, and take two or three deep breaths, gently exhaling in the same way.

It is wonderful how this steadies one's nerve. Try it some day when you are feeling inclined to weep hysterically and you will realize how effective it is.

It is very important that one should not overdo things in any case. This is where amateurs, exercising entirely on their own responsibility, generally go wrong. They think that by exercising a lot they will improve in health sooner. Never was there a greater mistake.

Begin gently. Don't try to do too much. One exercise repeated six times is enough at the start. Don't be discouraged if you cannot draw very deep breaths at first. You will improve gradually.

Never attempt to do breathing exercises immediately after meals. Wear loose clothes, for preference a loose dressing gown only, when doing breathing exercises. Do them regularly every morning.

Do them in the open air if you can. If not, do them in a room with the window wide open. When you are in the open air take good, deep breaths every now and then.

ROGUES USED TITLES

Rogue Count Had Lived by His Wits for Twenty-six Years

For a daring robbery the Paris police laid two rogues by the heels who went by the titles of "Robert de Crecy, Comte de Kersant," and "Cigar Stump," the latter being a dwarf. Their real names are Pierre Michel and Paul Aubert.

A Parisian jeweller received a letter purporting to come from two wealthy German merchants passing through Paris, who were desirous of purchasing six gold watches. The letter requested that some watches should be sent to a café in order to permit a selection to be made. The jeweller complied and sent an employé with a box containing twenty watches, valued at $3,000.

The pseudo German merchants made their choice, and then asked the employe to inquire over the telephone what would be the cost of engraving on the watch cases a monogram and a count's crown. The employe went to the telephone, but when he returned the "merchants" had vanished—and the watches with them.

The same evening the police arrested the "Cigar Stump," who is four feet high and in his sixtieth year. He promptly denounced his accomplice, who is known to the police as the "King of Swindlers." The latter was found sitting in a cafe on the boulevards when arrested.

At first he haughtily declared that he was Count Robert de Crecy, and that the detectives were mistaken. He threatened to use his influence to have them dismissed for their alleged blunder.

But at the police station Pierre Michel, who is about forty-five years was the long-sought "King of Swindlers." He admitted that since the age of twenty he had never purchased any clothing, having always secured his new garments through a swindling trick. He confessed that he has victimized hotel managers and boarding-house keepers throughout the country to the extent of $60,000 during his career of crime.

Michel would introduce himself at an hotel in the uniform of a captain of Colonial infantry, saying he had arrived from the Riviera, and that his luggage was following on the next Sunday. When Sunday came he insisted on the proprietor accompanying him to the station, and set him down before the buffet on pretence of going to get his boxes.

Then, in a swift motor car, he would return to the hotel, saying there was a quantity of opium in the trunks, and that he had not enough money to pay the duty, on which account the proprietor had authorized him to be given $100. Rushing back to the station he would play the same trick on the proprietor, and, telling him to wait a moment whilst he paid the duty he would disappear.

BICYCLE USEFUL IN WAR

Demonstrated in England That It Would Be of Value.

The manoeuvres of the British army have brought the bicycle into favorable notice, and the probability is that vehicle will receive an important standing. With good roads, such as are found throughout England, the bicycle has demonstrated its reliability and utility.

Some thirty-five hundred cyclists were attached to the cavalry, and the rapid movement of that large body was surprising to most observers. It is conceded that the bicycle would be no substitute for a horse in a battle charge, though the destruction possible with two or three thousand motorcycles at full speed would certainly cause some confusion, especially if the riders were protected with steel shields.

The direction of a cycle command would require specially trained officers; in fact, the French have had the subject under consideration for some time.

A combination of motorcycles and bicycles probably will be the final outcome, for one motorcycle can tow four or five mounted bicycles over ordinarily good and level roads at a speed of fifteen or twenty miles an hour. For distances of, say up to thirty miles, a motor bicycle regiment could be transferred to emergency points in far less time than by railway, even assuming that the railway were convenient for loading and unloading.

A MISSING TALISMAN

Russia's Royal Family Much Worried Over Non-Recovery of Jewels.

The Russian Czar and Czarina are much perturbed over their inability to recover a diadem of brilliants, which has a curious history attached to it. It was lost unaccountably by the Empress at the funeral of the Grand Duke Vladimir and though almost the whole staff of the Russian secret police have been searching for it since, not a trace of it can be found. The real origin of the diadem is wrapped in mystery, but tradition says it was discovered on the head of a saint in St. Serafim's Cathedral in Moscow, and the Empress wore it to ward off evil spirits, though it doesn't seem to have been very successful in her case. But the great thing about this diadem is that the pearls and diamonds of which it is composed are said to foretell by their condition the well-being—or otherwise—of the Russian Royal family. If danger impends, the diamonds lose their sparkle and the pearls their soft lustre, while if the prospect brightens the stones resume their pristine beauty.

What makes the Royal couple anxious to recover this talisman is that they superstitiously attribute the Czarevitch's delicate health to its disappearance.

Hoards up Public Letters.

Arthur Wheeler, a postman, who had a singular mania for hoarding up letters belonging to the public without apparently tampering with a single one, was charged with stealing 376 letters, postcards, and packets at Farnborough. Packets of letters were found in his kitchen, bedroom, and coal cellar, and in his clothing. Some of them bore dates three years old. An official of the General Post Office said a similar occurrence happened at Christmas, 1907, when he returned 250 letters to the authorities. He was bound over for one year.

EXCITING BOAR HUNT

Lord Hardinge Proved Himself Adept With the Spear

In the course of a recent tour in India Lord Hardinge had an exciting experience at [illegible], to which place he had motored to take part in a boar hunt. The hunting party consisted of about half a dozen spears, and the beaters who entered the coverts drove into the open a fine herd of pigs. Amongst them a boar which, separating itself from the herd, gave a capital run to his Excellency, the Maharajah, Captain Medlicott, and Thakur Gopal Singh. The boar proved full of fight, and as the huntsmen closed upon him he turned and charged straight at the Viceroy's horse. His Excellency took the boar cleverly on the point of his spear, getting well home in the shoulder. Twice more, however, the pig charged before he was finally despatched. A pig 150 pounds in weight, Lord Hardinge's victim proved the biggest of the bag of ten.

NEW ELECTRIC HEATER

In Reality a Carpet Containing Heating Element

A novel electric heating system has been brought out by a Zurich firm of electrical engineers—namely the heating of a carpet laid upon the floor. It is claimed by the inventors that this is the most rational, effective, and economical method of heating, inasmuch as the surface with which the feet come into contact is raised to a predetermined temperature, as it is well known that if the feet are kept warm the whole body is comfortable. The device comprises a heating element which is run through the carpet, and which is attached by a flex and socket to a wall-plug. This heating element is flexible, and is protected by a stout covering to preserve it from wear and tear; it is also waterproof. The system is so devised that all possibility of overheating the carpet is avoided. The invention can be adapted to any size of carpet, from the cover of a footstool or a rug to a large carpet covering the whole floor of a room. The invention can also be applied with equal facility to a bed and to medical appliances where heat is desired, thereby dispensing with the hot-water bottle and other conventional devices. The average person might fear the danger of fire from such a system, but with this device all such apprehension is unfounded.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at the office of any Local Agent of Dominion Lands (not sub-agent), on certain conditions.

Duties.—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required in every case, except when residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside of his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Six months residence in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and 50 acres extra cultivation. The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land after report by Homestead Inspector on application for patent.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price, $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

THE BALKAN WAR SONGS

Bulgaria and Servia Particularly Have Inspiring National Hymns

Like other patriotic hosts told of in story, Bulgarian soldiers march to battle to the tune and tramp of a national hymn which has the power of stirring up a tremendous enthusiasm among them. It is a simple tune, but one of the sort which has helped to make a great deal of history since the world began. Students of folk-song know little about Bulgarian music; the people in general know nothing. It is not long ago that a Prussian official charged with the duty of keeping all kinds of national music on file for state functions in Berlin found himself at a loss for the national hymn of Bulgaria and some of its native music with which to show the customary courtesy to King (then Prince) Ferdinand. And when he succeeded in extricating himself from the dilemma at the eleventh hour he made the discovery that the royal representative of the Bulgars was but little interested in the songs and tunes of his political children. Bulgaria's national hymn was first sung in the Russian army in the war with Turkey. It was the tune to which the Shipka Pass was stormed. It also has the kind of sentiment which fits it for the bayonet charges of which it is said to have been the inspiration, but save that it came into use in the Russo-Turkish War we know nothing of its origin. It may have been created by a popular poet and musician; but it rings as if it had simply grown—like the best of folksongs.

Montenegro has a really stiff national air, "Onward! Onward" (Ohamo, ohamo, za ogga oha), and Servia is as devoted to its national hymn as are the Frenchmen to their "Marseillaise." It is a fine bit of poetry and music, and it words are worth reproducing:

Servia, peaceful land of flow'rs,
Home of vines and leafy bow'rs,
Thou, the Danube's gentle daughter,
Rise; prepare for slaughter!
Foes are near! Will Servia cower?
Rise, and strike for freedom's dower:
Tho' no stately tow'rs have we,
Yet our land is fair and free!
Servians, quit the plough and tether,
One and all we'll fight together!
Foes are near! Will Servia cower?
Rise, and strike for freedom's dower!
Free are Slav and Dane's [illegible]
Shall then we be Turkish slaves?
Like Stefan, so famed in story,
We will lead to glory!
Foes are near! Will Servia cower?
Rise, and strike for freedom's dower!
Balkan [illegible], Moravian land,
Free shall be from tyrant's hand!
Servians quit the plough and tether,
One and all we'll fight together;
Foes are near! Will Servia cower?
Rise, and strike for freedom's dower!

BUILT LIKE A BIRD

Another Step Towards Solving Problem of Successful Flight

The Etrich monoplane, of Austrian make, stands out as one of the most remarkable designs of this class of aerial machine, and it represents a type that bids fair to be more permanent than many other models which from time to time have created sensations.

The monoplane has fallen into disfavor with the military authorities in several countries as a consequence of an unfortunate series of accidents, which were debited rather unfairly to the machine without taking sufficiently into account the variable human element.

Of the Etrich monoplane, it may be said that it is designed to remedy some of the defects which have been pointed out in monoplanes. Great strength and automatic stability to a high degree are the two most notable features. It is birdlike in appearance, and the wings are curious in that they are curved backwards and upwards at the ends. The tail is birdlike also. From tip to tip the machine measures no less than 42 feet, an enormous width for a monoplane. Its length is 37 feet.

The wings are the weakest part of the monoplane as a rule, and in the Etrich a very remarkable method of construction seeks to remedy this. Three main spars project from the central body, and the cross-ribs are secured to these and then covered with fabric. A cantilever bridgelike structure of steel tubing supports the main spars and thus gives a degree of strength to the planes which enables them to be made of ample dimensions. The rear part of the plane is built up of bamboo ribs covered with fabric so as to form a flexible trailing edge. In this again there is a suggestion of bird formation being followed. The wing-tips are turned up at the rear, and natural stability to a high degree is obtained thereby. The pilot also has control of the wing-tips. The central body is made of steel tubing strongly braced and the front part is covered in with metal sheeting. The largest machine is a three-seater, and it has an engine of 120 horsepower. The Etrich monoplane is largely used in the Austrian army, and by its strength, power, and reliability, it seems peculiarly well adapted for naval and military work.

A PERILOUS POSITION

Many Attempts Made on Lives of India's Viceroys

There is only one case on record of the actual assassination of a Viceroy of India—the Earl of Mayo being fatally stabbed by a prisoner in 1872 during a visit to a convict settlement. The murder had no political motive, but during recent years, as a result of the unrest which followed the partition of Bengal, the life of a Viceroy has been aimed at on more than one occasion.

In November, 1909, Lord Minto was making a tour of India, and during a procession through Ahmedabad two bombs were thrown at his carriage. One was cleverly intercepted by the sabre of a sergeant of the Inniskilling Dragoons; the other hit the umbrella which was being held over Lady Minto and fell harmless to the ground. The culprits were never discovered.

In November, 1910, when Lord Minto was holding his farewell reception at Calcutta, three natives who had got in with forged passes, were arrested on the charge of shadowing the Viceroy. Lord Minto escaped other perils. During the trial of some conspirators in 1908 one of the prisoners confessed that their plans had included a plot to assassinate Lord Minto, Lord Kitchener, and other high officials. The informer was afterwards shot dead in his cell by a fellow prisoner.

In November, 1907, Lord Minto was making a prolonged tour, when the officials got wind of a plot against his life, and the Viceroy's tour was cut short. In February, 1908, while his lordship was at Assam for a few days' shooting his train passed a spot where a few hours previously a bomb was thrown at a passing train, and the coincidence gave rise to disquieting suggestions at the time.

Lord Minto's predecessor, Lord Curzon, was also once in peril. During the hearing of the Kolhapur bomb case in April, 1911, one of the prisoners confessed that at the Delhi Durbar of 1901 four men were deputed to kill Lord Curzon as he was passing in the procession, but the courage of the conspirators failed at the last moment.

Other distinguished Indian officials have been in peril. Four attempts were made in the course of three years to murder Sir Andrew Fraser, Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal. Three bombs were buried at the train in which he was travelling, and once a native fired at him in a lecture hall in Calcutta.

KEEP YOUR RAZOR IN PROPER SHAPE

Easy to do so if You Follow the Barber's Advice—How to Use a Strop

"Razor in good order, sir?" asked the barber as he wiped the blade.

"Fine!" murmured his customer. "Beats me how you keep the edge on them that you do."

"Oh, that's a matter of knack! I suppose that you've never thought that your razor might want a rest. After you've used a razor for a while you can't get a good edge on it. Put it by for a time—two or three months clear—and you'll find it will come all right.

"Shaving is really only a matter of cutting and stropping properly; one that anyone can learn if only they will go the right way about it."

"Stropping, of course, you'll have to do before and after shaving. The secret of stropping is to strop lightly on a strop that gives a grip, taking care to give the last turn on the side that comes next the skin. Then, if there's any slight turn on the edge, it doesn't pull. Most strops are all right if they're attended to occasionally; but, if they're not, they get too hard and smooth to do much good. A plain piece of belting is as good as anything. Rub this on the wrong side with olive oil till it's soaked completely through. Then take a little powdered vegetable charcoal—the same stuff you get for medicine—and rub it well in on the right side. A strop like that has grip enough to give an edge to any razor that's not tempered too hard.

"Given a razor in perfect condition, you can provide yourself as good a shave as any barber can. Lather well; the more time you spend with the brush, the less you'll need with the razor. That's my experience.

"And don't forget to dip the blade into hot water before you start. A razor-blade under the microscope is just like a saw, and if oil or grease collects in the gaps, it won't shave clean. The hot water removes the grease.

"And, by the by, don't keep your razors in the bath-room. The fine edge will be destroyed by rust if you do. Keep them in a dry place."

Long Wireless Talk

Clear communication was established one night between the wireless station at Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., and the station at Queen Island, which lies north of Victoria, B. C.

This was not a series of disordered dots and dashes, but a clear message. Both operators exchanged congratulations and greetings.

Recently a message being sent from a vessel in the Southern Atlantic to New Orleans was picked up at the Sault.

AROUND THE WORLD IN SEVEN DAYS

Airmen Think it a Possibility of the Not Far Distant Future With Powerful Hydroplane

There is no mistake about it—the world is growing smaller. Magellan its first circumnavigator, took no fewer than three years over the task. In 1907 Lieutenant-Colonel H. Burnley Campbell, a veteran of sixty-four, raced round it in a little over forty days. This is the record, so far; but it will probably be broken in the not far distant future.

The waterplane, of course, is destined to accomplish this seeming impossibility. It can be done, airmen have no doubt. It is merely a matter of building machines big enough with sufficiently powerful engines and adequate storage capacity.

First will come the flight across the Atlantic—roughly speaking, two thousand miles from land to land.

Then will follow preparations for the greater journey—the crowning aerial achievement of all—the flight round the globe.

This is not so difficult as it sounds. Possibly the flight across the Atlantic from, say, St. John's, Newfoundland to Valentia, on the south-west coast of Ireland will be a more trying ordeal to airmen than any single stage in the round-the-world flight. And for this reason. The North Atlantic is proverbially a rough and stormy ocean, even in summer.

The aeronaut who essays to fly round the world, on the other hand can choose his own route; and this means that he can fly, for the most part, over tropical seas, and in air of an equable temperature.

Nor need he at any time make a longer land-to-land journey than that which will have to be accomplished by the winner of the trans-Atlantic flight. His jumping-off place, so to speak, will probably be Cape San Roque, in Brazil, whence he will set a straight course for Sierra Leone, approximately one thousand miles distant. From thence he will steer his machine up along the African coast, hardly ever out of sight of land, and then through the Straits of Gibraltar, and, by way of the Mediterranean, the Red and the Arabian Seas to Ceylon.

Thence past the "Spice Islands" as the old navigators christened them, he will fly, by way of Torres Strait, out into the Coral Sea and the broad, isle-studded Pacific, and so back by way of Panama to his starting-place.

Approximately, the distance travelled by the route indicated will be about 30,000 miles, and this can be covered, by a waterplane of 200 horse-power, at the rate of one hundred miles an hour, making 300 hours of actual flight.

Assuming the pilot to fly on an average fifteen hours out of each twenty-four, the remaining nine hours being devoted to resting, he would accomplish the entire journey in twenty days, less than half the shortest time taken for the trip up to now. Or if a waterplane be built of sufficient size to carry three men comfortably, so as to allow of a practically continuous flight being made, with only brief stops for petrol and provisions, then the world may be flown round in about twelve and a half days.

And even this is not the limit. Experienced airmen expect to be able to construct presently machines that will be capable of flying at the rate of 200 miles an hour; and this, of course, may mean that the world will be circumnavigated aerially in less than a week.—Answers.

EFFECT OF FEAR

The Response of the Body When an Emergency Arises

In a paper on the subject of fear and its effect upon the human body, prepared by Dr. G. W. Crile, a London physician, it is explained that under the influence of fear the organs of the body are divided sharply into two classes—those that are stimulated, and those whose work ceases temporarily.

Under the first classification come nerve systems, which cause movement—the mechanism for raising the hair, the respiration, the sweat glands, and, it is found, the thyroid gland and the adrenal gland.

On the other hand, the entire digestive functions are paralyzed. So far as we know, the organs stimulated increase the efficiency of the animal either to fight or flight. The increased action of the muscles of the heart increases the efficiency of the circulation; the secretion of the adrenal gland causes a rise in the blood pressure; the increased activity of the thyroid gland causes an increased activity of the tissues, and the production of glycogen is a symptom that the body is preparing fresh supplies of energy. Increased respiration is necessary to co-ordinate the supply of oxygen with this manufacture; even the sweat glands and dilated nostrils are playing their part. The digestive organs cannot help, they can only hinder; so the body does the best it can by shutting off the nervous current to them and saving the vital force which they would consume.

Thus, because fear first rose from injury, its phenomena are due to a stimulation of all the organs that add to efficiency in self-preservation, and a stoppage of those which are non-combatants. Fear takes many forms in civilised society, but nature has only one means of expressing it physically, and that does not alter.

Blinding Headaches From Catarrhal Irritation Now Quickly Cured

The New Inhaler Breathing Treatment Does Away With All This Sort of Thing.

"A stuffy cold in the head, or an old fashioned attack of Catarrh are simply ancient history to me nowadays," writes S. Nathan Smith, from Cornwall, Ont. "I used to have the worst kind of blinding headaches. They were torture to me on damp days when my catarrh was bad. I would still perhaps be suffering but for the fact that I saw a friend inhaling Catarrhozone with apparent pleasure, and I got the dollar outfit in the Windsor Hotel Pharmacy in Montreal. I could scarcely believe the way Catarrhozone cleared out my head. It let me breathe easier than I had breathed for five years. Catarrhozone has cleared away every vestige of Catarrh from my system. My breath used to be rank—now it is sweet. My digestion was constantly disordered, but since the catarrh is cured I have no stomach trouble. I am a perfectly well man, and Catarrhozone did it all."

For speakers and singers and persons troubled with an irritable throat, bronchitis, asthma, catarrh or la grippe, Catarrhozone is of inestimable value.

The inhaler can be carried in your pocket and may be used at any time or in any place.

Large size, guaranteed, and sufficient for 2 months' use, costs $1; smaller size 50c.; sample size 25c. All storekeepers and druggists or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Why Not Lend Local Man?

Lindsay is going to have an experienced plain clothes detective at their fall fair. Why not lend Detective S. H. Newhall or Will Meagher? He would then chase pickpockets out of the district as well as from our city.

How Heavier Loss Saved.

Much loss was spared at the big Bobcaygeon fire on Sunday, reported in yesterday's issue, by Superintendent McClellan giving permission to have the side dam of the grist mill opened. This supplied more power to the mill and enabled them to get much more pressure for pumping purposes.

Case Enlarged.

A young man named Godfrey before Magistrate Dumble yesterday, was charged with assaulting Thomas Murray. Murray appeared with his face and head in bandages, so G. N. Gordon, counsel for defence, and D. O'Connell, for the complainant, asked for an enlargement until Monday. Godfrey is out on bail of $100.

Work on Hydro-Electric.

Work on the Hydro-Electric underground wiring is progressing rapidly. The work, now in progress, under the capable foremanship of Mr. Johnston Greer will be finished this week. Change in Train Time.

For information of our readers, we might say that the Grand Trunk Railway has issued a new passenger time table. The only difference in the local trains is the morning train to Lakefield. Hitherto this train left at 8.25 and returned at 9.50. Now this train leaves at 7.00 and returns at 8.05.

Old Building Unlawfully Removed.

Isaac Eastwood was charged in Police Court yesterday morning with erecting a building inside the fire limits contrary to the city by-law. City Solicitor Hall was not ready to go on with the case, neither was G. N. Gordon, counsel for Mr. Eastwood, so the case was enlarged until next Monday.

It will be a grand opportunity for old and new members to become acquainted in the Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute, by permission of the Board of Education.

Few Flies Here Plight.

Peterborough has had less flies during the past summer than ever before in the city's history. Sanitary Inspector will have the thanks not only of bald headed men but of both men and housewives. The garbage cans placed along our residential streets, may be conducive of recollections of the Scugog River; still the flies have flown. It is not too late to swat the fly as every fly living until spring has the potential ability of raising several millions more.

Wild Rabbit Caught Here.

Last night as Mr. Amos Henry and Mr. P. Barlow, of the Snowden House, were passing the corner of George and Hunter streets, under the beams of the electric light, they saw a greyish white object pass quickly. They rubbed their eyes and found the flash of light was a wild rabbit that had, in some way strayed into the city. They got busy and cornered the little mammal. After catching it they evidently considered the woes of a Peterborough man who might be doomed to live in Lindsay and let it go.

Further Particulars "Bob" Fire.

Word was received yesterday by The Times from Mr. S. H. Claxton, Bobcaygeon, concerning the fire in that village. Mr. Claxton says in part: "Fire this morning (Sunday) 5.30 a.m., destroyed Brooks Grocery, Verlum Lodge Rooms, the Bank of British North America, Woolards Drug Store, Russell Thurston's Harness Shop, Capstick's Agricultural Store, Bardo's Barber Shop and Bardo's living rooms, also Walker's Bakery. Owing to the fire engine being out of working order, or the inability to get it started, was the cause of the fire spreading to the other stores. Fire started in Russell Thurston's harness shop, and was discovered by Mrs. Hill on her way home from all night watch nursing.

Health and Beauty Answers

BY MRS. MAE MARTYN.

Clara: Your yellowness around chin and neck and general "all-gone" feeling mean that your liver requires a regulator and I would suggest a plain kardene tonic. This will cleanse the blood and give tone and strength to the liver and kidneys and when these organs are in a healthy condition you will be free from bilious attacks, obstinate headaches and the pains in small of back and [illegible]. To prepare this tonic put 1 ounce kardene into ½ pint alcohol (do not use whisky), then add ½ cupful sugar and hot water to make a quart. The dose is a tablespoonful before meals. The kardene tonic is excellent to clear the skin of pimples, blotches and sallowness and its use [illegible] frequently saves doctors' bills. Absolutely safe and inexpensive.

Birdie: Your dry hair and dandruff are common troubles which are very easily cured. Try this tonic which I and many of my friends have used and found perfect. Mix one ounce quinzoin with ½ pint alcohol and add ½ pint cold water. Rub this invigorating tonic into your scalp twice a week and the hair roots will take on a healthy growth. I know of nothing so prompt and sure in destroying dandruff and to remedy itching scalp. This tonic is wonderfully stimulating to hair growth and should be used in connection with eggol shampoo. I am writing today about eggol also. See answer to Beulah.

A. D. Y.: Yes, a delatone paste is the most satisfactory thing of which I know for removing not wanted hairs. With water and powdered delatone make sufficient paste to cover the hairy growth and after two or three minutes remove, wash the skin, and it will be smooth and hairless. This is a harmless, quick treatment.

Esther: Your wrinkles, especially in middle age, are inexcusable and a certain remedy for them consists in treating the skin thoroughly with a plain almozoin cream jelly, easily made at home. This is made by [illegible] 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine in ½ pint cold water, into which is then dissolved 1 ounce almozoin. Massaging with this simple vegetable cream jelly will quickly rid the skin of lines, blackheads and wrinkles and when used for flabby muscles and hollows will make the flesh firm and smooth.

ULSTER ARMY OF DEFENCE EXCEED ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND MEN

Conference with King is Off, Said Sir Edward Carson To Inspect Troops

Belfast, Ireland, Sept. 16.—Sir Edward Carson, the leader of the Irish Unionists, landed in Ireland to-day, with the object of inspecting the volunteer army which is being raised in the Province of Ulster to support the Provisional Government, which, it is said, is to be brought into existence in the event of Home Rule for Ireland bill becoming law.

Army of One Hundred Thousand.

The Ulster army is said to be thoroughly organized and already to have attained a strength of about one hundred thousand men, which number is expected by its leader to be nearly doubled when recruiting has been completed.

The Irish Unionist leader intends to spend a week in Ulster in company with his lieutenants, with whom he will visit the various corps which have been formed by drilled men of the Unionist clubs and Orange Lodges.

The climax of Sir Edward's visit is awaited on Saturday next, when he has arranged to inspect the Belfast Unionist corps.

Private Meetings.

In the course of the week a number of private meetings of the Ulster Unionist Council will take place to complete the arrangements for the Provisional Government, which it is purposed eventually to establish.

There seems to be little hope of a general conference between the various parties on the question of Home Rule, although the possibility of the holding of an open conference on the subject of Irish government as a whole is still canvassed.

NO SURRENDER IS THE WATCHWORD OF ULSTER PATRIOTS

Yesterday Sees the Beginning of Active Campaign in Ireland

London, Sept. 16.—There are no fresh developments on record regarding the suggested Home Rule conference. While both parties seem to present a desire to bring about a settlement by consent, neither is disposed to take the initiative by making a proposition. Cabinet Ministers are still lying low, and it is noticeable that press comments to-day are few and far between.

Dr. Sanday, the eminent scholar, has proposed that Lord Loreburn and himself should issue invitations for a conference, and gives his idea of what the conference should do.

Can't Surrender All.

Among other things he says it is unthinkable that any party, either Government or Opposition, Nationalist or Ulsterman, should be expected to begin by surrendering the whole principle for which they have been contending.

While this discussion is proceeding, it is significant that Sir Edward Carson is about to open his autumn campaign in Ulster against Home Rule.

Carson's Program.

He arrives to-day and in addition to delivering a series of speeches, he will confer with the Ulster Unionist Council upon final arrangements for bringing into existence a provisional Government, designed for the province if Home Rule should become law.

The Home Rule Council, too, have also arranged a number of meetings in England to be addressed by John Redmond, Joe Dillon, T. P. O'Connor and other Nationalist members, supported by Cabinet Ministers.

TRENTON'S BIG FIRE

Trenton, Sept. 16.—Seven buildings were destroyed or damaged by fire here last night, including the skating rink. The fire had got a good hold before the alarm was raised, and spread to the new Canadian Northern depot and the freight sheds. Although badly damaged, the railway property was not gutted. The loss is partially estimated at $10,100.

THE WEATHER.

To-day—Warm and showery.

STRIKERS FORCING BRITISH LION TO SHOW ITS TEETH

London, Sept. 16.—Britain has a crop of labor troubles and prospects of more immediately ahead. The Dublin strike has taken a decided turn for the worse, and is extending to England. The English Railwaymen's union officials have made strong efforts to prevent them being drawn into the Irish disputes, but apparently they have failed.

1,000 Go On Strike.

Yesterday the English railways, the London and North-Western, and the Lancashire and Yorkshire, became involved. More than 1,000 North-Western men began striking yesterday in support of three of their comrades who refused to handle Irish traffic. Later in the day the Lancashire and Yorkshire men joined them.

Others May Join In.

It is feared that to-day large numbers of railway men on other lines will join the movement. British railway employes have been exceedingly restive since the strike compromise two years ago. They claim that under the settlement arranged then they have since been badly victimized by the railway companies.

Their leader, like Wardle Thomas, have worked hard to restrain them, but there is at least the danger that the men may get out of hand. The railway companies have for some time been preparing for acute trouble, and the fight, if it comes, will be gigantic.

Dublin Employers Aggressive.

Dublin employers are now carrying the war into the enemy's country. Their refusal to resume last week's conference with the workers' delegates means that they are confident of success. Even their friends admit that they have made a technical mistake in thus showing their hand. Over 10,000 are idle in Dublin. One-half of the industrial workers there are out of work and are increasing every day. Leading employers are making it a condition of re-engaging their hands that they should renounce their membership in the Transport Workers' Union. The London omnibus strike also threatens. Tillings, the large omnibus firm, are dismissing men for wearing the union badge on the uniforms. The men's union retort by threatening a general omnibus strike.

Dock Traffic T[illegible]

A strike of 4,000 laborers at [illegible] demanding higher wages, will, if not settled, involve the total arrest of the dock traffic by the week-end. Meanwhile a powerful group of provincial employers is choosing this moment to promote a movement for the repeal of Trades Dispute Act, the Bulwark of British trades unionism.

CUT OFF HEADS OF MURDERESSES, SAY SUFFRAGETTES

French Militants Believe in One Law For Women and Men

Paris, Sept. 16.—While American "women righters" declared years ago that there should be one law for women and men and that as long as the death sentence is on the calendar it should be imposed regardless of sex. French suffragets have taken up the question only the other day.

A woman's meeting, very largely attended, accepted a resolution that to habitually pardon murderesses meant disrespect to the sex. "If a woman commits a crime, justice should be done to her and sentence imposed exactly as if she were a man," said the meeting.

Your correspondent interviewed many of the leading women regarding the above. Here follow the most tell-tale answers:

Duchess d'Uzes: "Crime is sexless."

Madame Auclert, the militant: "There should be no difference of sex at the voting place or the guillotine."

Madame Pelletier, M. D.: "It is ridiculous to say that the sight of a woman on the guillotine is more horrible than the sight of a man in the same place. We militant women do not believe in gallantry and we don't want men to be too gallant to cut off our heads if we deserve it."

Madame Dollon, the lawyer: "Even if a woman kills her own husband she deserves the guillotine as long as that instrument is lawful."

Madame Vincent: "I am against guillotining women, for I had no hand in framing the guillotine laws." (There is true woman's logic for you.)

Daniela Lesueur, the novelist: "I am sure ladies that turn murderers are very much opposed to the death sentence."

HELPED SHERIFF TO ADJUST THE NOOSE

Fort Smith, Ark., Sept. 16.—Oscar Davis, 18-year-old country boy, was hanged at Fayetteville, Ark., to-day, for the murder of Miss Nellie Moneyhan, 20, his school teacher, near Springdale, February 2, last.

Davis assisted the sheriff in placing the noose around his neck, and before the black cap was adjusted, said to the spectators of the execution:

"I want all of you to meet me in heaven."

The boy's mother, who had made a strenuous effort to save his life, was on the outside of the inclosure surrounding the scaffold and swooned when she heard the trap sprung.

Against the wishes of her husband and many of her friends Mrs. Davis carrying an infant, walked many miles through northwest Arkansas getting signatures to a petition, asking the governor for commutation of Davis' sentence to life imprisonment. After getting a considerable number of names Mrs. Davis lost the petition one night. It was stolen from her.

Davis is said to have been in love with Miss Moneyhan and the announcement of her approaching marriage caused him to commit the crime.

INQUEST RESUMED LAST NIGHT JURY RETURNS THEIR VERDICT

"Accidental and Not Enough Evidence to Determine the Person or Persons Responsible"—Recommend a Competent Building Inspector

Last night saw the last scene of the inquest on Miss Sisson and others, who lost their lives in the Turnbull store disaster. Coroner Dr. Greer presided. The jury was polled and all found present. Mr. W. J. Johnston was the first witness called. Mr. O'Connell had left a "blue print" in his office, so that Mr. Johnston was left over.

Mr. John Collins, who worked on the building, said that he mixed the cement for the basement wall and took brick out. The 14 inch wall, had loose brick on the top. They used a crowbar to separate the brick and he could say that the wall was a good one. Here, he identified some of the bricks and mortar, produced in court. The mortar was bad.

Mr. S. Armstrong, City Clerk, next witness, identified the City Building by-law.

City Engineer Hay, next witness, said the by-law covering building and repairs covers almost every requirement. The quality of workmanship is not specified in the by-law.

Mr. Hall, City Solicitor, here explained that the by-law hardly covered such cases as the Turnbull building.

Then County Attorney Wood produced the building permit for the Turnbull store operations. Witness inspected the work contemplated. He looked after it every day. He thought the contractor had taken every precaution for safety. He thought the by-law should be changed. There was a weakness in the interior wall. The outside wall seemed sound. The wall had been weakened by cutting it through.

Ald. Johnston, the contractor, here identified photos of the wreck. Wm. Guy cut out the opening early in the operations. Mr. Might wanted the opening made in the basement wall. The wall between the joists was substantial. To Mr. Gordon, the outside wall was not connected with the inside wall by mortar as well as it might have been.

To Mr. O'Connell, the wall looked sufficient to carry the weight. To Mr. Hall, the opening was to be put in the cellar for fuel purposes. Mr. Belcher and he had talked over the plans.

Mr. Dunlop, who has had 30 years' experience in Government buildings, came here last Thursday and examined the scene of the accident. The cast iron column had rested on a lintel. A nine inch wall would not have been sufficient to carry the weight. The mortar between the bricks he could crumble up between his fingers. The wall was very badly built and the mortar was bad and would not stick to the bricks. The wall was insufficient to carry the weight. He never saw a worse wall than the Turnbull Co. basement wall. The whole building was a piece of "botch" work in the repairs. The wall should have been cut into to ascertain its strength. If proper care had been taken, the accident could have been avoided. The second column appeared to be crushed down by the weight of the bricks. The wall was not built. Two pillars have crushed down.

The jury retired, and after some time returned with the verdict of "Accidental, and not enough evidence to determine the person or persons responsible", also a recommendation to the city Council to appoint a competent building inspector.

RECORD SPEED ON ELEVATOR CONTRACTS FOR WESTERN GRAIN

Government Takes Quick Action to Servé The Needs of Western Grain Growers

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Sept. 16.—A record has been made in transacting government business in the awarding of the contracts for internal storage elevators. Tenders closed at twelve o'clock and within two hours the government had awarded the contract to the lowest tenderers, Barnett-McQueen Company who so successfully erected the huge government terminal elevators at Port Arthur.

Million Each.

The three-and-a-half million bushel elevators, one to be erected at Moose Jaw and the other at Saskatoon, will cost nearly a million dollars each. The tender of the successful company was $300,000 lower than the next offer. These elevators must be completed by December 15, 1914, which will be in ample time to aid in storing next year's crop as until the close of navigation grain will be rushed to the lake terminals.

Record Speed.

To assist in the early completion of these important works the government transacted the business with record speed so that as much as possible of the work could be done this year, the surest guarantee of their readiness for next year's business.

National Scheme

Interior storage elevators are a part of the government's national policy of transportation. To prevent congestion after the close of navigation it was decided to erect such elevators which will relieve the elevators of the long haul to the lake or ocean terminals during the period when lake navigation is closed. While for years such additional facilities were strongly urged by the grain growers nothing was done until the present government came into power.

What It Means

The result of the aggressive action of the government will be seen in ten million bushels additional storage on the prairies for next year's crop. These elevators are so planned that an addition can be made at any time until each has a storage capacity of 20,000,000 bushels or a total of sixty million bushels at the points selected, Saskatoon, Moose Jaw and Calgary.

Port Arthur Elevator

Then in addition to these new interior storage elevators there is being completed this month the new three and half million bushel terminal elevator at Port Arthur which has been built by the government. This elevator which is the most modern and up-to-date at the head of the lakes will greatly relieve the situation there and will tend to prevent a repetition of any of disastrous blockades of past years.

Prevents Car Storage

To prevent congestion, hasten returns from the crop to the farmer and stimulate the milling industry are the objects which will be secured from the government's policy of building a system of public owned elevators. Cars instead of going from the west to the ocean during the winter will be unloaded at these elevators and thus prevent the annual car shortage. Instead of the farmer having to wait the arrival of his grain at the terminal points it will be cleaned and inspected and a certificate issued at the interior storage elevators, giving much quicker returns.

Another Saving

Also a considerable saving will result from the drying and cleaning facilities installed as there will be less danger of grain spoiling than on the long haul and that much money will not be spent and wasted in paying freight to the head of the lakes on useless grain and noxious weeds, these being removed in the cleaning process which will now be near the point of shipment instead of at the end of the rail haul.

THAW SCORES ONCE MORE CASE IS AGAIN ADJOURNED

Lunatic Given Another Week's Grace—Roger Thompson to Be Freed

Littleton, N.H., Sept. 16.—Harry K. Thaw's application for a federal writ of habeas corpus to-day was continued for one week, on the request of Thaw's counsel when the case was called before Judge Aldrich in the U.S. District Court. It was thought probable that Thaw would be taken this afternoon to Concord, where Gov. Felker has set to-morrow morning for a hearing on the extradition warrant issued by Acting-Gov. Glynn requesting Thaw's return to New York State.

This was a victory for Thaw since the New York authorities were anxious to have the writ quashed.

"Gentleman" Roger.

Montreal, Sept. 16.—When the case of "Gentleman" Roger Thompson, the chauffeur who drove the car from Matteawan with Thaw, comes up in Sherbrooke on Thursday next he may be discharged.

With Thaw out of the country the immigration department has accomplished its end, and there is little interest in his chauffeur.

Thompson has received an offer from a Canadian Vaudeville circuit, to tell the story of the escape of Thaw from Matteawan in the form of a monologue, and is considering it.

The exact time for the resumption of Thaw's hearing was not set by Judge Aldrich, the court saying the delay would be about a week.

While the court was giving the decision, Thaw looked across the counsel table and smiled broadly at Wm. T. Jerome, who clearly was nettled at the turn the affairs had taken.

KILL TRAINMAN EVERY 7 HOURS

Arbitrators of Railroad Men Told of Accidents in United States

New York, Sept. 16.—"A member of the Brotherhood of Trainmen is killed every 7 hours and 15 minutes and every nine minutes a man is maimed."

This was the testimony today of William Lee, representing the Order of Railway trainmen, at the meeting of the arbitration commission in the controversy between 42 eastern railroads and their conductors and trainmen over the employes' demands for more pay and shorter hours.

When this statement was later challenged by Elisha Lee, counsel for the railroads, William Lee cited the statistics in the interstate commerce commission's report. This report on June 30 last gave 3005 railroad employes killed in the United States during the year.

A. B. Garretson, president of the Order of Railroad Conductors, also a witness, complained of what he called the evil of dead-head crews. These crews, he said, were composed of men who have run a loaded train to a given point, have no more work to do and are not paid for the time they spend in travelling back home.

Frank J. Warne, professor of economics at the University of Pennsylvania, presented charts dealing with statistics gathered from the reports of the interstate commerce commission, the federal department of labor and other bureaus.

By some of these statistics Mr. Warne tried to show that railroads have steadily abandoned old cars of light tonnage for the heavier type. The discussion of tonnage, the train men said, was introduced to prove that a train today can carry more freight than a train of the same size 10 years ago, and that because of this increased tonnage the same number of [illegible] a train that formerly would have required [illegible] and therefore a larger [illegible].

The commission will [illegible] on Monday.

INSPECT FRENCH DEFENCES.

London, Sept. 16.—A Paris despatch states that a group of twenty Canadian officers are now visiting the French eastern frontier, inspecting its defence methods with the knowledge, approval, and assistance of the French military authorities. Col. Hughes and his officers are expected to be back in a day or two.

Self Help For Nervous Persons

Can often be achieved by a simple change of food and drink.

Much nervousness is caused by tea and coffee drinking—eminent medical authorities having demonstrated that the drug, caffeine, in these beverages is a definite nerve poison to many persons.

Tea and coffee have no food value whatever, and are deceitful friends. Under their use the nerves first become irritated; then so sensitive and "on edge" that a slight variation from general health often appears most serious to the victim.

However, Nature responds quickly to common-sense treatment, and right living frequently does more than medicine. So, if you value peace and comfort, try this easy experiment.

Stop tea and coffee entirely, and have hot, well-made

POSTUM

This pure food-drink made from prime wheat has a delicious flavor and a fine dark brown color which changes to rich golden brown when cream is added.

It contains the genuine nourishing elements of the grain, but is absolutely free from the tea and coffee drug or any other harmful ingredient.

Postum comes in two forms.

Regular Postum must be well boiled.

Instant Postum is a soluble powder. A spoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a very palatable beverage instantly.

Thousands have been wonderfully benefited by using Postum instead of tea and coffee—

Women as Writers

The proportion of women in journalism is larger than in any one of the callings open to women except teaching. There are 30,098 journalists in the United States, of whom 2,193 are women, or 7 per cent. In law there are 1,010 women out of 114,703 in all in this occupation, and 7,399 among 134,336 practitioners in the medical profession. If the proportion of women were known in architecture and in the higher ranks of teaching, the comparison would be as favorable to journalism. It is only in the field of writing that the woman is paid on the same basis as the man, receives the same consideration and obtains as large a return. In every other field there is some discrimination against the woman, but a publisher pays as large a percentage on the novel by a woman as on that written by a man. Women have received some of the largest sums paid in fiction.

WARBLES ON CATTLE

May be Exterminated by Systematic Effort and Much Patience

One of the very harmful insect pests of live stock is the ox warble fly. The grubs in the backs of cattle are a source of irritation, and the punctures which they produce seriously reduce the value of infested hides for leather products. The flesh around the wound is sometimes so changed by the inflammation set up by the grubs that it is unfit for sale and must be discarded. This causes substantial loss, especially as the more valuable cuts are most frequently affected.

The adult ox warble fly is half an inch long, very hairy and dark in color. During the summer the female deposits eggs upon the hairs of cattle, particularly on the legs just above the hoofs. The animal licks the hairs where these eggs are placed, and the larvae hatched from them are carried by the tongue into the mouth. The young maggots pass into the gullet and penetrate its walls. From the gullet they migrate to the back, where they may be found under the hide during the late winter and early spring months. Small lumps or swellings on the backs of cattle indicate the position of the grubs. Each swelling is perforated by a small hole, through which the mature grub emerges from the warble cell in the spring and early summer. They then enter the pupal stage, in the ground or under rubbish. In from three to six weeks the adult fly escapes from the pupal case through a circular opening in one end.

Every farmer should make a thorough and systematic attempt to exterminate this pest. This may be accomplished by the destruction of all grubs during the early spring months. The grubs when ripe may be extracted by squeezing the warbles between the thumbs. All extracted grubs should be destroyed. This will reduce the number of adult flies, consequently fewer eggs will be laid to produce grubs the next season.

Practical Hints in Care of Horses

For the treatment of horses while in the stable the following regulations are suggested:—

1. The best order of feeding is: Water, hay, water again, grain.

2. Never give grain to a tired horse. Let him rest and nibble hay for an hour or two first.

3. Water the horses as often as possible; but let the horse that comes in hot drink a few swallows only.

4. Always water the horse after he has eaten his hay at night. This is important not only for his comfort, but for his health.

5. Do not forget to salt the horse once a week; or, better yet, keep salt always before him.

6. Give a bran mash Saturday night or Sunday noon; and on Wednesday night also, if work is slack. After a long day in very cold or wet weather, a hot bran mash, half bran and half oats, with a tablespoonful of ginger, will do the horse good.

7. Keep a good, deep, dry bed under the horse while he is in the stable, day or night, on Sundays especially. The more he lies down, the longer his legs and feet will last.

8. In order to do well the horse must be kept warm. Give him a blanket on cool nights in late summer or early fall, and an extra blanket on an extra cold night in winter.

9. In cold rains do not tie up the horse's tail. The long tail prevents the water from running down the inside of his legs.

10. Take off the harness, collar and all, when the horse comes in to feed. He will rest better without it.

11. Never put a horse up dirty or muddy for the night. At least brush his legs and belly, and straighten his hair.

12. In hot weather, and in all weathers if the horse is hot, sponge his eyes, nose, dock, the harness marks, and the inside of his hindquarters when he first come in.

13. When the horse comes in wet with rain, first scrape him, then blanket him, and rub his head, neck, loins and legs. If the weather is cold put on an extra blanket in 20 minutes. Change the wet blanket when the horse dries. Do not wash the legs. Rub them dry, or bandage loosely with thick bandages. It is far more important to have the legs warm and dry than clean.

14. Examine the horse's feet when he comes in, and wash them if he does not wear pads. If a horse in the city is not shod in front with pads, tar and oakum, which is the best way, it is absolutely necessary to keep his feet soft by packing them or by wrapping a wet piece of old blanket or carpet around the foot, or by applying some hoof dressing, inside and out, at least three times a week.

15. Speak gently to the horse, and do not yell at him. He is a gentleman by instinct, and should be treated as such. The stable is the horse's home, and it is your privilege to make it a happy one.

While city and country conditions are widely different, the proper care of a good horse is practically the same either in the city or on the farm, this being especially true of draft horses. These suggestions are, therefore, of great value to those farmers who love good horses and are anxious to give them the care they deserve.

A SPLENDID DINNER FOR HEARTY EATERS

Short ribs of beef, brown gravy
Plain boiled potato Bread
Sweet dill pickles
Apple pie Cheese
Coffee

Put the ribs to boil in just enough water to cover them, [illegible] add two pepper pods, [illegible] onion and one laurel leaf. Boil slowly until tender. Take up, wipe dry, lay in a baking pan, sift little flour over them and brown in oven. There will be enough fat in the pan for the gravy. Heat it, stir in one heaping tablespoon of flour and stir well until lumps disappear. Turn into this flour and fat one and one-half cups of cold water and allow to boil five minutes.

Place the ribs on a platter, peel the potatoes which have been boiled with their jackets on, place them around the ribs and send the gravy to the table in a gravy boat.

This dinner will be eaten with a relish by every one in the family.

RED RIVER ROUTE

A Proposed Water Route From Fargo, N.D., to Hudson Bay

The latest scheme to obtain transportation to Hudson Bay, is by dredging the Red River, and establishing a navigable route from Fargo, N.D., to the Bay. Experts have been working on the practicability of such a project and it is believed to be possible to dredge out the shallow places in the river and make it possible for freight boats to travel with comparative safety. This work will be costly but once done should be a great boon to transportation to the Bay. It has been estimated that the water route to the Bay will be a saving in distance to haul freight of almost 1,000 miles. This will be a great help to transportation from the Northern States. Winnipeg, which is the key to the West, will come in for a share of the benefit from this water route. At present boats travel from that city to Lake Winnipeg, but in event of the establishing of the boat route from Fargo to the Bay, this present water route will be much improved. [illegible]

"A Progressive Peterborough."

OUR POINT OF VIEW

Hon. W. T. White is going to study western conditions, just as Hon. W. S. Fielding didn't use to do.

We are told that the off-again on-again tour to be undertaken by Sir Wilfrid Laurier will begin in Quebec. Chances are it will also end there.

If there is no naval legislation before Parliament next session the Laurier Opposition will be saved from making another exhibition of themselves and Canada.

To judge from the Toronto Telegram's criticism of the Minister of Education, one would suppose that the Telegram Bosses regard Pyne as good cabinet timber.

A soft answer may turn away wrath, but it doesn't have that effect on the fellow who wants to sell you an accident insurance policy.

A Peterborough labor man says the time will come when the whole world will work eight hours a day. Probably about the time that the noble order of Sons of Rest is extinct.

The Indian woman who was recently divorced from her ninth husband ought to go to Newport, the American society centre, and let the high society dames know how the thing is done.

Sir Thomas Lipton has joined the London Times in its expression of regret that Great Britain is unable to see her way clear to participate in the Panama Pacific exposition at San Francisco.

They say now the Henri Bourassa is to run in Chateauguay. In view of the Nationalist control of the Laurier Opposition as demonstrated in the Senate's rejection of the naval bill, it should not be surprising that the Nationalist leader should seek to jump into the first Liberal seat that becomes vacant.

A GOOD RECORD

The Borden Government has been in power for nearly two years, and it can look back on a number of things well done in the interests of the Canadian people. The farmers have reason to thank the administration which directly aided them by the appropriation of millions towards fostering the science of agriculture. The days of Sidney Fisher with his theoretical philandering are over. Instead there is help given in the direction it is needed most. Notwithstanding the fact that the Senate, at the bidding of Laurier, twice destroyed the bill for the improvement of highways good roads are bound to come, and come by the efforts of the present government to give the people of the rural districts this much desired boon. The Senate cannot forever block legislation in the interests of the people as a whole. Then the government can look back upon its efforts to save the self respect of the people by aiding the motherland in the matter of naval defence, with a feeling of confidence that in its naval bill it sought to give that assistance in the manner mapped out by the British Admiralty as being of the greatest usefulness. No amount of specious reasoning on the part of Laurier and his friends can disguise the fact that the people of this Dominion, are not only ready, but anxious to play the part of manliness, instead of childishness. The administration of the various departments of the public service has been along safe and sane lines. The welfare of the people has been the aim of the Premier and his colleagues, and all is well.

Weak, Tired Folks Given New Vigor

STRENGTH RETURNS, HEALTH RENEWED, VITALITY OF YOUTH RE-CREATED

Exhaustion and Bodily Tiredness Every Day Being Turned Into Vigor and Ambition by Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

From [illegible], N.B., comes the following from Mrs. W. A. Reynolds: "A year ago my health began to fail. I lost my appetite, became nervous and sleepless. My weight ran down, I became pale, hollow-cheeked, and black rings under my eyes. I really felt as if the desire of life had left me and when spring time arrived I was in the blues. I read of Dr. Hamilton's Pills and got five boxes at once.

"Within a month my appetite and color were good. I gained strength and felt like a new woman. New life and vigor returned, and my friends scarcely knew me. A medicine that will do this should be in every home."

Good health means much to you. Success and happiness depend upon it. The maintenance and source of health is found in Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box, or five boxes for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers, or by mail from the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

"Whig" Coined by Burke

The parliamentary origin of the term "whip" goes back to 1769. In that year, writes Sir Courtenay Ilbert, "there was a great debate in the House of Commons on the petition against the return of Col. Luttrell for Westminster in the place of Alderman Wilkes, who had been expelled from the House by its order. The King's Ministers made great efforts to bring their followers together from all quarters for this debate. Burke, who took part in the debate, referred to these efforts, and described how Ministers had sent for their friends to the north and to Paris, whipping them in, than which, he said, there could not be a better phrase. The phrase thus adopted and commended by Burke caught the public fancy, and soon became popular."

Passive Resister's Court Dress

Edward Burton Reeves, a passive resister, appeared before the Norwich magistrates in what he described as his "court dress," and was fined $1.25 for assaulting a rate collector. He wore a red jersey on which was inscribed in white letters, "For God and home in every land." On the back of the jersey were the lines:—

Not once nor twice in our rough island story
The prison cell has been the path to glory.

One New York office building has electric wires enough to more than reach across the continent.

CANADA'S EXPORTS INCREASING

According to statistics compiled by the Department of Customs, presided over by Hon. J. D. Reid, the volume of exports of manufactured articles from the Dominion is increasing rapidly. For the first four months of the present fiscal year ending July 31st, Canada exported $16,051,000 worth of manufactured goods, compared with $12,659,000 worth for the corresponding period of 1912.

The exports of fish are also rapidly increasing. For the first four months of the present fiscal year, $5,032,000 worth of fish were exported, as against $3,748,000 worth for the first four months of the fiscal year 1912.

The products of the forest and mine also show large increases in volum of export. Of minerals we exported $17,180,000 worth, and of forest products $14,171,000 worth. These figures are considerably in excess of the exports for 1912 for the same period.

FIRST SHOTS AT A CARIBOU

J. T. Studley Fired Seven Times in Vain Because He Had "Buck Ague."

What the "buck ague" is like is described in "The Journal of a Sporting Nomad," by J. T. Studley. The author's first attempt against the caribou resulted in humiliation. He tells that Johnny, his Indian guide, suddenly dropped like a stone into the wet grass and muttered "Stag," and there, sure enough, strolling along the front, was a fine caribou. "I sat down, resting my elbow on my knee, waiting until he should put in an appearance on my side of the rock. I had the rifle to my shoulder and at last the grand beast walked into view, not more than 100 yards away. He stopped, looking about him, and I drew a bead on his shoulder. Useless! The rifle wabbled all over the place, and for the life of me I could not keep it still, nor hold my breath. My heart was in my mouth and all the time the rifle trembled and shook. The caribou moved on a few paces and I determined that if I meant to shoot at all I must obtain better control of my nerves. I still covered him with the sights, or thought I was doing so, as I pulled the trigger on the beast that was standing broadside on, with his head turned from me.

"I was using a 500 Winchester Express, and it was the work of an instant to pump another cartridge into the chamber and fire again. Still no move on the part of my target. He faced the other way nonchalantly, listening with interest to the echo of the rifle in the distant canyons. I was getting desperate now and could hear the Micmac muttering all sorts of imprecations behind my back, which only made things worse. I fired five more shots at that caribou as he stood as though carved in wood, persevering until he turned off calmly into a belt of timber.

"This story is an absolute fact. I would not have credited it had I not been the one to make such a fool of myself. My feelings can be more readily imagined than described—I could have cried with vexation and shame. Johnny took the rifle, looked it over, patted it as though he would demand of it whether the fault lay with it or the user, and I tried to make excuses to myself for myself."

Generous Breeze.

Apropos of the bumper crops of 1912 Secretary Wilson of the department of agriculture said in Washington:

"I heard a story the other day about a long-headed farmer. An auctioneer was to auction off his fields of standing grain and the farmer said to him:

"'I hope to goodness we have a good stiff breeze the day of the auction.'

"'A good stiff breeze? What use will that be?' asked the auctioneer.

"'You must be green, young fellow,' said the farmer. 'Don't you know that when grain's waving in the breeze it looks a lot thicker—you see the same heads two and three times over.'"

FANS LIKE BASE STEALERS

All the Managers Are Out After Speed Merchants

Baseball fans like clever pitching, delight in plenty of slugging, enthuse over sensational fielding, but enjoy no feature of the game more than the art of base-running. Nothing excites the fans more than some bit of daring on the base lines. What could be more thrilling than a cleverly executed steal of home, with the winning run of the game.

Speed, properly converted, is the main asset of every successful team and the crying need of every club that is in the rut. A team that always needs a bunch of hits to get only a few runs is a club that will not be at all dangerous in the long run. It is the team that is always taking chances on the bases, the club that makes its opportunities, that generally cuts in on the world's series melon. When a baseball club is going badly inject a little speed into the aggregation and it will usually take on renewed life and energy at once.

AN EARL'S DAUGHTER ON VIENNA STAGE

Takes Clever Dancing Turn in a Biblical Drama Entitled "Judith"

The one social topic of conversation in Vienna has been the appearance there on the stage as a dancer of Lady Constance Stewart-Richardson, daughter of the Earl of Cromartie, and a niece of the Duke of Sutherland. Lady Constance appeared at the Volksoper, or People's Opera House, in the name-part of a drama entitled "Judith," which had been prepared for her from the Apocrypha. Tickets were eagerly snapped up, particularly in aristocratic circles. Lady Constance Stewart-Richardson was a constant and much-desired guest in the families of the Austrian nobility, which is known to be the most exclusive in the world. The drama of "Judith" is based on an incident supposed to have taken place during the Maccabean wars, after which Judith becomes a famous Jewish heroine. The music is extremely interesting, consisting of a number of old Assyrian and Hebrew melodies. There are five principals, a chorus of fifty voices and a ballet of twenty-four girls. The performance, it is stated, was originally intended for London, but there were objections in high quarters, and to these Lady Constance is said to have given way.

To an interviewer who asked what induced her to take to dancing Lady Constance is reported to have said: "I am a Highland woman from Tarbet Castle, where, in my early childhood, I ran wild, and gave myself up to all sorts of sports.

"I am one of the best swimmers in England, and have three times carried off the Ladies' Silver Challenge Shield. I am also a first-rate salmon fisher, and am, above all things, a huntress.

"I have hunted in Africa," she continued, "with my husband, and on my own account, I have hunted and killed lions in Tibet. I went out after bears and steinboks.

"On my return to London I happened to see Isadora Duncan, the classical dancer, whose art has been admired everywhere. She made dancing all the 'go' among young Englishwomen. The craze took hold of me, too. I began to dance, danced in English aristocratic families with success, so I was seized with a desire to appear in public. But the very idea naturally shocked my relatives. I came to Vienna to dance, because Vienna is known to be an artistic city, of refined taste, and because here people's views are less straitlaced. All the aristocratic families know that I am going to dance, and yet my reception among them has been of the kindest nature."

"And why did you choose Biblical drama?"

"I am very fond of the Bible," Lady Constance replied, "and read it very much. The figure of Judith has always fascinated me as one of the most splendid female ones in the Apocrypha. I happened to pass the Great Portland street Synagogue, heard singing, and went in. The Hebrew melodies I had never heard before thrilled me. Then and there I was seized with the idea of dancing as Judith in a Biblical drama. I saw Bantock, and got him to write for me the music to a Judith libretto."

Love in the Home

The love which should exist between husband and wife includes devotion, kindness, unselfishness, respect and admiration in one person for another. Where this exists in marriage the life, even if one of privation, is happy. No discords can arise, for the reverence of each for the other is so great that it gives the most perfect love. But sentiment, [illegible] is not love. Love is more than that. It goes to the very core of the being, [illegible]

Thrown Overboard From Steamer But Jump Back on Deck

The strange conduct of part of a steamer's cargo was described in the Commercial Court in respect of the loss at sea of a quantity of mineral waters. The steamer Hardy left Treport, having two tons of metallic sodium stored on the fore hatch upon deck. His lordship remarked that he recollected an experiment with sodium while he was at school. A small piece was placed in water, and, by catching fire and jumping about, it caused much amusement. It was stated on behalf of the plaintiffs that the sodium broke away from its lashings, and the water, getting to one of the cases, set it on fire. The captain of the Hardy was not aware of the nature of sodium, and played the hose upon the cases. The result was that the contents were also set on fire, and there was a series of explosions. Next the captain decided to heave the lot into the sea. This was done, but, to the surprise of himself and the crew, several of the cases jumped back on board. Then the hold caught fire, and the captain ultimately gave the order to take to the boats. The mate was drowned, several of the crew were injured, and the captain himself was badly burned. Very soon the ship broke her back and went down. It was the plaintiffs' case that the vessel was unseaworthy by reason of the sodium being carried on deck. For the defendants it was submitted that the vessel was lost by reason of the fire in the hold. It was denied that the ship was unseaworthy, and it was contended that the defendants were exempted from liability by reason of perils of the sea. His lordship gave judgment for the plaintiffs.

AN INTERESTING RELIC

Part of Sir Isaac Newton's Apple Tree Preserved

Future visitors to London, who go to Burlington House to see the piece of Isaac Newton's apple tree which was presented to the Royal Astronomical Society recently need be troubled by no doubts as to its genuineness. Seldom, in fact, has a relic of such interest been so clearly authenticated as this bit of the apple tree that grew in Newtons' garden and the falling of the fruit from which suggested to him the idea of gravitation.

The tiny log, which now reposes in a glass case, is about two and a half inches in diameter and three inches in width. It does not look like the wood of an apple tree, but at Kew, where it was microscopically examined, its character was vindicated and it was proved unquestionably to be part of an apple tree. The story of the log is told in detail, moreover, by Charles William Walker, the member of the Royal Astronomical Society who presented it to that distinguished body.

"It is," he says, "a piece of the apple tree at Woolsthorpe, the home of Sir Isaac Newton. The history of this piece of wood and the way in which I came to have it is as follows:

"My father, Richard Walker, was born at Bradmore, Nottinghamshire, at the Manor farm there in 1807. He went to school when he was ten or twelve years of age to a clergyman at Stoke, Lincolnshire, named Pearson. My father told me that while he was at school there was a very wild wind storm one night, and that in the morning news came that Sir Isaac Newton's apple tree had been blown down at Woolsthorpe. The schoolmaster, Mr. Pearson, and several of the boys at once set off for Woolsthorpe, where Sir Isaac Newton's house was, and which is not far from Stoke, which is on the Lincolnshire side of Belvoir castle.

"When they arrived there they saw the old apple tree lying on the ground. It had been propped up all round for very many years, and every effort had been made to preserve it. My father said he did not know by what authority Mr. Pearson acted, but the schoolmaster obtained a saw from somewhere and sawed a good many logs of wood from the branches. My father got one of these pieces, which he always kept as being of great interest. Many times he was asked to part with it, but always refused. My father showed the piece of wood to me and told me all the circumstances under which he got it. There cannot be the least doubt that it came into his possession in the way I have [illegible]."

LINERS SEE-SAW ON A WAVE TOP

Novel Experience of a Cunarder in an Atlantic Storm—Burial of a Child at Sea

A magnificent triumph over mountainous Atlantic seas, during a gale which blew at the rate of a hundred miles an hour, was the thrilling accomplishment of the Cunard liner Mauretania. During a voyage from England she was handicapped by terrific storms, which buffeted her at times like a mere cockle-shell. When half-way across the liner's wireless rigging was blown away to leeward, and the Mauretania was listed just as a gale bends a tree. In the middle watch of one night the Cunarder literally see-sawed on a wave, the first time in ocean steamship annals that such an engineering and navigating possibility had ever been practically demonstrated by experience. This strange situation, which is regarded as a splendid test of the constructive unity of the vessel, was observed by Mr. G. B. Hunter, a member of the firm which built the Cunarder. The ship poised on the crest of a sea mountain, both bow and stern in the air, the four propellers turning above the water, and she conquered every combination of the warlike element. Not a rivet was started, says Mr. Hunter, and the ship was as lively, solid, and spontaneous as a single plank, yielding gracefully and buoyantly to the forces of Nature. Then she dived head under into a hole in the ocean, her propellers spinning out of the water. The next wave broke all the windows out of the wheelhouse, smashed the forward windows in the lounge, burst in a door opening into the lounge on the port side, carried away an entire length of rail on the boat-deck, and tore off the matchboard ceiling from the overhang of the wheelhouse extending over the boat-deck. When the ceiling went the electric wires inside of it—the means of communication between the pilot-house and the engine-room—were carried away also, and signalling to the heart of the steel monster had to be carried on by means of speaking tubes. The steel bulwark athwart the boat-deck forward, against which rest the tips of the derrick booms, was a stretch of bent and broken barrier. It was pummelled and punctured by the slamming seas, which tipped the teak from its top. No one was injured. While the ship was groaning under the assaults of wind and wave, Violet Richardson, three and a half years old, and English girl, became ill with diphtheria, and the ship's surgeon decided to perform the hazardous operation of tracheotomy. She was taken to the ship's hospital, and died from shock. The girl and her mother, Mrs. Julia Richardson, were on their way from Rotherham to join Mr. Richardson at Carbonado, Washington. The steerage passengers were moved by the death of the little girl to contribute the mother's fare to Washington, whither she had to take her nine-months-old baby, Connie. The sympathy of the steerage passengers spread to the second cabin, and ultimately $300 was raised for the mother. Violet's body was sewed in canvas, to which were attached white lilies from the ship's conservatory, around all was wrapped the Union Jack. Staff Captain Brown read the burial service, and the body was slipped from the grating into the sea. The ship reduced speed for the burial.

Youth at the Treasury

Many Chancellors of the Exchequer besides Mr. Lloyd George have occupied that office before reaching fifty. Addington and Pitt were both under fifty. Robinson was only forty-five at the end of his term, while Goulburn was forty-six. Peel relinquished this office at forty-seven, and Baring at forty-five. When Disraeli had his first short experience in 1852 he was forty-eight, and Mr. Gladstone was only forty-three at the time of his first Budget. Ward Hunt went out at the same age, the present Lord St. Aldwyn completed his first term at forty-two. On the whole, youth has reigned at the Treasury, though Canning, Lowe, Stafford Northcote, Sir William Harcourt, Childers, and Ritchie had all passed fifty when they went there.

Discovery of Ancient Coins

An Italian farmer has made a valuable archaeological find in a field near Lodi. He discovered an earthenware vase containing 5,000 silver coins of the Roman republican period. The vase weighs about 50 pounds. Most of the coins are rare specimens and are in an admirable state of preservation. The field is owned by Count Bonacossi, who has renounced his right to a claim of one-half of the value of the discovery and has allowed Prof. Dalleoni to remove the coins to the museum at Ancona for identification. Only one-half of them have been examined as yet, but their value is estimated at more than $1,000,000. The Government gave the farmer $25,000.

Substitute for Coal

Tests by United States government experts show that lignite can be briquetted for fuel without the use of any additional binding material.

Ball bearing shafting, introduced into a shoe factory, saved 30 per cent. of the power.

Tempting the Postman

At Edinburgh a young man pleaded guilty to having endeavored to induce a postman to detain or delay letters, and to having fraudulently obtained from the postman two letters addressed to a Leith bookmaker, stamped with official postmarks indicating that they had been posted at Dunfermline before 10.45 a. m. on a certain date, and to having enclosed in one of the envelopes a coupon offering to make a bet on the result of football matches played on that date, which matches had, as he already knew, been played earlier in the day. He was put on probation for six months.

Much Gold Stolen

Despite the precautions which are taken to prevent theft, it is said that gold to the value of $5,000,000 is annually stolen from the mines on the Rand, South Africa. This thievery is done systematically and although a corps of detectives are employed for the purpose of detecting theft, there have been no convictions for a long time. There is a woman who has grown very wealthy in the business of buying gold, and although the officials are sure of her nefarious calling, all efforts to trap her have been unsuccessful. Special laws have been passed to meet the requirements of the gold mines, but even that has been ineffectual.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at the office of any Lands Agent of Dominion Lands (not Sub-agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required in every case, except when residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside of his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Six months residence in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and 50 acres extra cultivation. The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land after report by Homestead Inspector on application for patent.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price, $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

Britain's Best Customer

India to-day is the best British customer in the world. Of every hundred pounds' worth of British products and manufactures, she takes fourteen pounds ten shillings' worth—or more than one-seventh. For the last fiscal year her purchases from the United Kingdom reached the vast total of nearly 365 million dollars, while those of Germany, the next best British customer, aggregated less than 300 million dollars. The value of the British manufactures and products exported to India far exceeds that of those exported to Canada and the United States combined.

School for Straphangers

In Duesseldorf, Germany, a campaign of education is under way for street car riders, the idea being to facilitate the service and to avoid many of the dangers to which passengers often expose themselves unnecessarily. Fifty per cent. of the accidents are due to persons alighting or embarking while the vehicle is in motion, and for the purpose of demonstrating the proper and approved methods of performing these operations a moving picture exhibition was devised. The result is very satisfactory and a great improvement in the condition of affairs is noted.

IN TURKISH CHOLERA CAMP

English Newspaper Correspondent Tells of the Horrors He Witnessed at Hademkeui.

The scenes of death and desolation and despair which are part and parcel of the kingdom of the god of battles seldom have been brought so vividly to the minds of peaceful people as in the terrible realistic pictures of Turkish cholera camps and in the dispatches of hardened war correspondents, whose souls sickened at the horrors they witnessed. There were several cholera camps, but the most dreadful examples of irremediable suffering and wholesale deaths, under conditions that made death a welcome friend, were seen in the main camp at Hademkeui, a short distance behind the headquarters of Nazim Pasha, the Turkish commander-in-chief, on the Tchatalja lines.

"The horrible scenes in the villages in the rear of the army pale altogether into insignificance when compared with the horror of Hademkeui," wrote a correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph, "where the remnants of the army defeated at Lule Burgas were finally rallied. Three days ago I rode over the hills from the place where I was encamped, intending to visit Hademkeui. I mounted the last slope which hid the valley in which it lies, and then I was brought to a standstill by the awful babel of sounds which arose from beneath me. I was gazing into the valley of the shadow of death. There is a station at Hademkeui, and a train was in the station. It was black with the most wretched specimens of sick humanity seeking to escape from the dread specter. The large square in the center of Hademkeui resembled a successful fly-paper in midsummer. It was covered with the corpses of the dead and the writhing bodies of the living in all attitudes—some prone, some sitting, some kneeling, some constantly shifting, some with hands clasped in supplication. In some parts of the area the dead were piled in heaps; in others those still living were almost as closely packed. This shocking lake of misery was being constantly fed by rivulets of stretcher-bearers, bringing in fresh victims from the camps and forts, and by others who crawled in of their own accord, seeming to prefer to end their days in the company of their fellow men or else expecting to find succor."

PRESCRIBED DRESS OF BRIDE

Color of Costume Worn Has Had [illegible] Significance From the Most Ancient Times.

Until the eighteenth century, from earliest Saxon times, the bride of the poorer folk came to the wedding wearing a plain, white robe. This was a warning to the public that, since she brought nothing to the marriage, her husband was not responsible for her debts. At the beginning of the eighteenth century brides began to introduce touches of color into their costumes. Blue was for constancy and green for youth. Yellow was never worn, as it stood for jealousy, while golden also was shunned, as it meant avarice.

Although the ancient Roman and Hebrew brides wore yellow veils and the early Christians of southern Europe enveloped both man and wife in one large cloth, it was not until Shakespeare's time that veils for brides appeared in England. Prior to that time the custom had been for the bride to go to her wedding with her hair hanging loose as a sign of freedom. Immediately, however, upon entering her new home she bound up her hair. This was a sign of submission.

HOW GOLD PENS ARE MADE

Platinum Ore the Ingredient, and the Process Is Something of a Complicated Matter.

Metallic iridium, used so extensively for the points of gold pens, is made from the powder obtained in the wet way from platinum ore by heating to a high heat in a sand crucible and then adding stick phosphorus. The iridium, which cannot be melted alone, is thus fused in the form of an iridium phosphide. To remove the phosphorus the phosphide is heated with lime and the iridium is left in the form of a hard, white mass. It is now so hard that it cannot be filed or cut, and is broken up into small pieces for soldering to the points of gold pens. These small pieces are ground to the right size on a copper disk wheel with emery or carborundum. It is said that an ounce of iridium will make from 5,000 to 10,000 pen points. It has also been found that the iridium thus prepared is practically as hard as the ruby. No steel tools can make any impression upon it. At one time much less expensive than platinum, iridium now is worth more on account of the demand for hard platinum, in which the iridium is the hardening agent.

REVEALED BY FINGER NAILS

How Observant Person May Judge With Absolute Certainty the Character of His Neighbor.

It is always amusing to speculate on the character of one's neighbor. A very simple aid in so doing is to watch the nails. If a man's or woman's nails are long and slender, you may be quite certain that person is not so robust physically as the possessor of short, broad nails.

Whereas men and women with the long, narrow type of nails are hyper[illegible] nails are almost always conspicuous by the strength of their logical powers. It is the latter who make the best and most reliable critics.

A further and almost certain characteristic of long nailed people is their intense depreciation of themselves and their own efforts in any branch of work. The feeling almost amounts to pessimism with them. Such a point of view however, seldom troubles those possessing short nails. In fact, more often than not rather the reverse is the case; they are inclined to be overaware of themselves.

FARMER AND CROW

Thieving Bird Is Not Welcome Regardless of His Virtues

On the Pacific Coast a heated discussion raged around the crow, that pert, competent bird who has outlived the guns and traps of man for many, many years. Opinions as to his merits and demerits were sharply in contrast, the farmer taking a firm stand against the ornithologist, each evincing for the other that degree of contempt that is always shown when science and casual observation clash.

The farmer, as a rule, is no bird lover, because his life puts him in a position where he notices the depredations of birds, and does not furnish him the opportunity of seeing the good his feathered visitors perform. He is naturally scornful of all theories which postulate that the bird pays his way by his destruction of pests. The crow dining on some parasitic bug, beetle or fly does not attract his attention as does the crow in the cornfield or elsewhere in the crops.

Against this the man of science brings a bill of fare of the crow, with statistics concerning the contents of the crow's stomach, all of which counts but little with the farmer, who knows what he sees with his eyes.

As an academic discussion there is perhaps little interest in the morality of the crow and his keeping of the commandments. His activities, whether they be good or bad, affect the farmer for the most part, and the farmer turns down his thumbs and demands the life of the crow. The farmer is the one who will suffer or profit in either event and as for the crow he is quite capable of looking after his own interests. He is a merry vagabond who finds his sustenance and joys everywhere.

BEAUTY BEHIND THE WEB OF FASHION

Does the veil of intricate and pronounced design enhance or mar the beauty of the wearer? There is only one answer to this when the observer is looking at the clever model pictured, who is wearing a fine mesh veil through which runs a large vine-like figure.

MARRIAGE CUSTOMS IN ARMENIA

In Armenia everybody has a good time at a wedding except the bridegroom. First of all, the friends gather, and an entertainment, with dancing, takes place. The bridegroom is expected to arrive after the entertainment is at its height, and it is considered good form for him to appear with his face covered with powder to simulate pallor induced by the solemnity of the occasion.

The day after this opening marriage feast the bride rides to church and the bridegroom walks. The priest, who receives them in the porch, reads to them a short sermon on their duties in the matrimonial state, and then the wedding party proceeds to the altar, where the foreheads of the high contracting parties are bound together with gold chains.

The wedding festivities continue for at least three days after this and the couple are not regarded as really married until the ceremonies have all been concluded. The social obligation of the wedding is gone through with as conscientiously as the religious part.

MRS. CORNELIUS VANDERBILT

INSECTICIDE SIFTER

Scatters Dry Preparation and Lessens the Labor

For the destruction of insect pests that affect low-growing vines or bushes a New York man has patented the sifting apparatus shown in the illustration. It is designed for the use of insecticide in powder form and applies arsenate of lead, lime, hellebore, paris green compounds and similar preparations with equal facility. A cylindrical can with a perforated lower portion contains the powder and by a regulating device the amount of poison scattered can be governed. The old-fashioned way of spraying vines was to make a liquid solution and to cover an acre of ground required a great deal of unnecessary labor, owing to the weight of the water in the mixture and the fact that only a comparatively small area could be sprayed with one load. It is claimed that this sifter will spray an acre an hour.

NO WATER TO INCREASE WEIGHT

A SHARP-EYED BOY

He Picked Out in Crowd Grandfather He Had Never Seen

"I don't know my own son. I am afraid I will never find him in this crowd, and I have been waiting eight years for this," complained an elderly man at the Montreal station as he looked searchingly about among the hundreds of immigrants who had just arrived. Just then a little chap not more than four years old ran up to him, and, pulling at his coat, cried out: "Why here's grandda." The child's mother was about to reprove him for speaking to a strange man when a stalwart Welshman just behind the child called out:

"Baby Jim is right. It is grand-da."

Thus was the reunion of the Morgan family consummated.

The elder man had left the old home eight years before when his son was but a lad of fifteen, and had been working in Ontario in an effort to make the money to bring the rest of the family to Canada. He has had his share of hard luck, however, and the years passed without the object being attained. The son was prosperous enough in Wales to take unto himself a wife. For some years he worked as Mr. Lloyd George's gardener at the house which was burned by suffragettes.

The father finally prospered and sent the money to aid his son to come to Canada, bringing with him the wife and child which his father had never seen.

The elder Morgan had sent his picture home to England, and the little boy had been taught so carefully about his coming to see "grandda" that his bright eyes were the first to notice the grizzled workman, who had aged so much that his own son hardly recognized him.

THE PECULIAR CUTTLEFISH

Little Creatures Kept in Tanks to be Milked of Their Ink

A curious thing is the cuttlefish with its long arms and bulging eyes. At several points on the British coasts there are located cuttlefish farms where the little creatures are kept in tanks to be "milked" of their ink. This ink, which is kept in a little bag or sack, is very valuable and each little cuttle will yield about $2.50 a year. The tank or pond is connected with the sea by a pipe and a thousand or more cuttles are kept in a single one. When it is considered an opportune time the sluices of the ponds are opened and the water is gently agitated. The cuttles then swim around the pond and as soon as one passes through the sluice is closed. The cuttle passes down a small channel into a basin or metal receptacle and as soon as it is securely there the water is drained off. This frightens the fish and at once it ejects its precious liquid into the basin. In this way, one at a time, the "milking" is completed.

Cured My Cough In One Night

Relieved Me of a Throat Weakness That Resisted Every Treatment.

"SUFFERERS, FOLLOW MY PLAN"

"After being loaded down with a chronic hacking cough for months, you can imagine my joy at finding such a relief from it," writes Mrs. C. A. [illegible], of [illegible], Mass., U.S.A. "I was troubled with an irritable throat weakness and asthma that simply defied every medicine I ever used. I was discouraged until a friend recommended Catarrhozone so strongly that I bought a dollar outfit from my druggist. I breathed in the healing fumes of Catarrhozone very deeply—used the inhaler five minutes every hour. After the first day I was better, and next morning my cough was gone. My asthma is cured, my throat weakness is gone, and I am well. For two years [illegible], with the aid of Catarrhozone, I have kept perfectly well. I have also used Dr. Hamilton's Pills for constipation with grand results, and consider your remedies have done wonders for me."

Thousands of wonderful cures are reported every year. Catarrhozone does all that is claimed for it, and is certainly most efficient for colds, bronchitis, throat trouble, asthma and catarrh. The two months' treatment (large size), price $1.00, is guaranteed, smaller size 50c., sample size 25c., at all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Big Chimney Completed.

A big chimney which has been under construction at the DeLaval Co., under the supervision of Mr. W. J. Smith is completed. It is very picturesque and adds greatly to the general appearance of the factory. It is 115 feet in height.

Mrs. Finlay Goes Home.

Mrs. Finlay, a victim of the Turnbull disaster, has been removed from Nicholls Hospital to her home in Norwood. Great care had to be taken in her case and a small cot and water mattress was used. Bellegham's ambulance conveyed the patient to the C.P.R. station.

Former Local Man Back.

Mr. W. H. Keller, of Toronto, who resided here in 1880 and previously, is back in the city. He has since leaving Peterborough lived in United States. Mr. Keller is in the city to repair his property at 165 Sherbrooke street.

Peterborough Enterprise.

As a sample of the recognized worth of Peterborough artisans, Messrs. Alexander & Miller, the local electricians are now, amongst other contracts engaged in wiring the Whitby public library and the local Vermont Marble Co. buildings. Next week they began operations on the Norwood Armouries.

St. John's Harvest Festival.

St. John's flag is flying this morning in honor of the Harvest Festival which is being celebrated to-day. The preacher at the evening Festival service at 8 will be Rev. Dyson Hague, M.A., of Toronto, late of London, Ont. Mr. Hague is the author of "The Protestantism of the Prayer Book" and other well known works, and has been closely connected with Wycliffe College.

A Grand English Home.

Mr. Louis Bond, who is a guest at the Munro House, and in the city as an organizer for the Independent Order of Foresters, has some interesting photograph's of his father's residence in the County of [illegible]. His father is rector of three parishes in that county. The photographs show a magnificent building, the [illegible] of which any private [illegible] of Peterborough might be [illegible]. The rectory depicted, is situated in a magnificent Park that, he says, has a big artificial lake covered with water lily pads and blossoms.

Things Different Here.

Things are different in Kingston, in this city regarding the disposition of drunks. On Sunday a drunk, too incapable to walk, and carried to the police station by the cops, was let go with a warning. Had such a case occurred here, the possibility is that the unfortunate victim would have been given a month on the hill, with threats of a trial in the secret Juvenile court. Had this threat been carried out, this victim of alcohol might have been fined 30 cents provided the press were muzzled.

Thought to Be Burglars.

At 2 a.m. yesterday two tramps, evidently of American vintage, loafed about the destroyed Turnbull premises. Mr. "Fatty" Dundas, lately of the local fire brigade, is engaged as night watchman at this spot. He recognized one of the pair as having looked a little too closely at this spot the preceding night. The supposition is that these men may be burglars and watching a chance to break in through the north wall, where there are open places and evidently made entrance to the Clarke Jewellery store. Mr. Dundas gave chase to the pair, but they made their escape in the dark.

Other Rube Police Towns.

It would seem, in justice to local police methods, that Peterborough is not alone in trying to muzzle the press. Guelph Mercury says: "The Mail and Empire has a complaint to make against Chief Randall, of Guelph. The Toronto paper 'phoned the chief for information about James Ray, who "worked" a local bank. This was refused, the Toronto paper getting neither the name of the man wanted nor a description. The Mail already had the story from Galt, and the Guelph end of the story, as the chief could have given it, would simply have been appended thereto. This business of keeping information from the press is a common practice, especially in police and railway circles."

Former Local Man's Success.

Word was received here from 2732 Sacramento Ave., Chicago, from an old Peterborough boy, Mr. W. Fleming. As previously noted in The Times, "Billy" intends to make Peterborough the winter headquarters for his circus and Indian Congress. Mr. Fleming has had some 50 private cars made for transporting the show. He has recently acquired a considerable interest in the "Rice Bros." circus. He will probably combine his Indian Congress with the Rice show. Billy has been out scouting for talent among the Apache Indians. He says: "I have had tom-toms played in my honor, had the "white ghost" dance put up for me and now I have been made a "white chief" of the Apaches. It makes me laugh to think what my old pals in Peterborough would think of this."

HOW YOU CAN HAVE SMOOTH HAIRLESS SKIN

Here is an effective and harmless treatment for removing hairy growths from chin, lip or cheek, and which can be used in your home: With powdered delatone and water make enough paste to cover the hairy surface, apply and in 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. This leaves the skin smooth and free from blemish. To make eyelashes grow long and curly, apply pyroxin at lash-roots with thumb and forefinger, and for thin eyebrows rub some on occasionally. This causes them to come in thick and glossy. Be careful and don't get any pyroxin where no hair is wanted.

[illegible] BARGAIN ANNEX EVENT

The CRESSMAN [illegible]

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 17th, 1913

HEAVY STRIPED FLANNELETTE 12½c

The generous width of this useful material is 35 to 36 inches. And it is extra heavy, made in England, and procurable in many neat patterns. We doubt if the usual 15c lines are as good as this flannelette at, per yard... 12½c

WASHABLE BLOUSES OF SCOTCH CHAMBRAY AND PERCALES AT 45c

THESE BLOUSES WILL BE A PLEASANT SURPRISE TO EVERY VISITOR TO THE ANNEX, who pauses to look at, or to handle them. That the material and patterns are good, and the price remarkably low, everyone will agree, for it is doubtful if 45c would buy enough of some good fabric to make such a Blouse. Most of them are in light and medium colors, and some are cut with the attractive and stylish turn down Dutch collar, while others are made with a high collar, and are quite correct and appropriate for Autumn or Winter wear. A moment's consideration, and one will feel assured, that from 85c to $1.00 would be the ordinary price for these garments, so the extra good value the Annex offers at a saving of at least 40c should not be neglected by those girls and women who are in need of washable Blouses...... 45c

ALL SIZES 34 TO 42

WOMEN'S AUTUMN UNDERWEAR 22c.

CLEANSES YOUR HAIR MAKES IT BEAUTIFUL

It becomes thick, wavy, lustrous and all dandruff disappears—Hair stops coming out.

Surely try a "Danderine Hair Cleanse" if you wish to immediately double the beauty of your hair. Just moisten a cloth with Danderine and draw it carefully through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; this will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or any excessive oil—in a few minutes you will be amazed. Your hair will be wavy, fluffy and abundant and possess an incomparable softness, lustre and luxuriance.

Besides beautifying the hair, one application of Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; invigorates the scalp, stopping itching and falling hair.

Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating properties cause the hair to grow long, strong and beautiful.

You can surely have pretty, soft, lustrous hair, and lots of it, if you will just get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and try it as directed.

GENERAL AMERICA MAY YET BE UNITED

Washington, Sept. 16. — From an interchange of opinion on the proposed union of the Central American republics, is expected in diplomatic circles here between the State Department and the republics in question—Guatemala, Nicaragua, Honduras, Costa Rica and Salvador—it is believed that the plan suggested by General Estrada Cabrera, president of Guatemala, would be acceptable to his neighbors with the exception of Costa Rica.

The latter country, it is said, would favor the union if its capital city, San Jose, were made the capital of the United States of Central America. Guatemala City, the largest in the territory embraced by the plan, is favored by a majority of Central Americans.

Considerable interest in Latin-American circles here attaches to the willingness of Cabrera to reopen the subject. It is taken to mean that he will offer himself for the presidency, and it is said he would be acceptable to the five republics.

The plan is not a new one, as it was suggested by James G. Blaine and approved by the United States government when he was Secretary of State. Mexico at the time was pressing Guatemala in a boundary dispute.

INSPECTORS WANTED

Applications addressed to the undersigned and marked "Applications" will be received up to 4 o'clock P.M., on October 1st, next, for the three positions of Building Inspector, Sewing Inspector, and Plumbing Inspector, for the City of Peterborough. UNIONISTS WILL NOT WALK INTO SPIDER'S PARLOR

Old Flies Are Too Wily to be Trapped by the Government

London, Sept. 17.—Premier Asquith is freely stated in Government circles to be more than a little annoyed at the intervention of Lord Loreburn in the Irish government controversy without any previous hint to himself.

He holds that as the Cabinet have placed their plan fully before Parliament and the country any alternative or amended plan should be made equally clear. He will not consent to any idea of a conference unless upon preliminary basis for settlement which are far more definite than any Unionist in a responsible position has yet put forward. If, indeed, he did so consent the fighting element in his party would drop away from him, while he would alienate the Nationalists for all time. It is significant that Redmond remains silent. If there has been the least sign of yielding on the part of the Cabinet he would have been found ready to speak and to speak very plainly.

Mr. F. E. Smith, addressing the Unionist demonstration at Kilkeel said that Lord Loreburn had taken a long time to discover what Ulster had been saying for the last three years that the Unionists would have no compromise on the Home Rule question. "Sir Edward Carson, who also spoke, said the Unionists in Ireland were not going into a conference which meant an absolute surrender. They knew no surrender.

"A nice conference it would be," remarked Sir Edward, "just look at the position of the parties who would enter it. There would not be a free agent in the lot." The Unionists were not going to be led into a spider's parlor. They might be flies. They had had too much experience of treatment by the Government of the Ulster question, no matter what might happen the loyalists were determined at all costs to preserve their civil and religious liberty.

LIBERAL CLOSURE BILL IS DIFFICULT OF EXPLANATION

Speeches of Hon. Robt. Rogers in the West Causing Much Anxiety to Liberals

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Sept. 17.—Since the return of Hon. Robert Rogers from his western tour the Liberal press has been renewing its attacks on the Minister of Interior. It is not to be wondered at the Opposition journals are not feeling in kindly mood to the Minister of Public Works. He made two particularly vigorous speeches in the west which have put the Liberal party in a most curious position and to which there has been so far no reply.

Hypocrisy Exposed.

At Vancouver Mr. Rogers exposed the hypocrisy of the Liberals in opposing the closure bill. He produced a bill which has been prepared by Hon. A. B. Aylesworth, Minister of Justice, under the Laurier regime, which was far more drastic than the closure measure passed by the government last session. The fact that the Liberals had prepared a bill of such a character and which would have been made law if Laurier had been returned to power reduced the strenuous opposition of the Liberals to a ridiculous farce.

Scott Record.

Mr. Rogers made another speech at Moose Jaw which revealed the outrageous character of the campaign which the Scott government carried on to win the last provincial contest in Saskatchewan. Mr. Rogers produced piles of evidence and sheaf of affidavits which showed that the Liberals had only won by a wholesale manipulation of the lists. Hundreds of aliens were placed on the lists while hundreds of British subjects were disfranchised.

Scott's Own One.

Mr. Rogers presented sworn statements to show that in the constituency by Premier Scott, a riding in which he gained his seat by a majority of 280 votes, the names of 500 Britishers were struck off the list and the names of 300 foreigners put on. These changes although they were put up to Scott and the Scott government have not been answered. They can't be answered.

HON. FRANK COCHRANE ON INSPECTION TOUR

Special to The Times.

Ottawa, Sept. 17.—Hon. Frank Cochrane, the energetic Minister of Railways and Canals, has again been out "seeing for himself." Mr. Cochrane has made it his business since taking the important portfolio of Railways and Canals to personally visit as much as possible of the enormous territory covered by the railways coming under his ministerial supervision. He has lately taken a trip over the line of the National Transcontinental through northern Ontario and as far West as Winnipeg, studying the route and construction of the newly completed line and satisfying himself as to what has been done and what remains to be done to make the road serve to the fullest extent the purpose for which it was built.

Mr. Hearst There Too.

With Mr. Cochrane went Hon. W. H. Hearst, Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines in Ontario, so that the whole situation was studied from both the Dominion and the provincial standpoint. This is good business. It is the sort of personal supervision that private enterprise would demand and to which the people of Canada, as proprietors, are no less entitled. But it is the sort of thing that formed all too small a part of the administrative program of the late government. The inauguration of business methods in public affairs means greater competency, better values. It means dollars and cents to the people of Canada.

GERM OF RABIES IS DISCOVERED BY JAP DOCTOR

New York, Sept 17.—The rabies germ has been isolated and cultivated by one of the scientists connected with the Rockefeller Institute of Medical Research, Dr. Hideyo Noguchi, it was announced recently.

For thirty years pathologists have sought to isolate this germ, which produce hydrophobia, but unsuccessfully.

Dr. Noguchi began in 1912 the experiments which resulted in the discovery, nearly fifteen series of cultivations being necessary. The brains, or medulla, removed aseptically from small animals infected with virus were used. The method of isolation is described as similar to that employed successfully in cultivating the spirochaetes of relapsing fever.

Dr. Noguchi was born in Japan in 1876, was graduated from the Tokio Medical College and subsequently took post graduate courses at the University of Pennsylvania and abroad.

The Building Inspector

In our issue of yesterday appeared the verdict of the Coroner's jury relative to the recent Turnbull store disaster. The verdict was seemingly a just one and the only solution, in the circumstances, of a difficult proposition.

It would seem though that in recommending the city to appoint a competent building inspector, the jury might have gone further. It is, of course too late to undo the awful horror of the Simcoe Street wreck. Still, to avoid the possibility of a recurrence of a similar catastrophe, the building inspector should immediately investigate all the central business section of the city as well as places of amusement. It is not going to be too much to say that some of these stores are notoriously unsafe. Hundreds of people gather daily in places of business, where iron columns are the only support of the various floors. For all the public knows, these columns may have quicksand for their pedestal. Let the building inspector inspect the old as well as the new buildings of Peterborough.

TAFT LOSES 80 POUNDS WEIGHS ONLY 240 NOW

Yale Professor Has Faded Away Since Leaving White House

Brooklyn, Mass., Sept. 17.—When former President Wm. H. Taft appeared on the golf links here today visitors to the Country Club remarked that the Yale professor was looking thin.

"Yes," said Prof. Taft, "I weigh only 240 pounds now."

He admitted that this is just eighty pounds less than he weighed when he quit the White House.

CANADA'S FISHERIES ARE NOW WELL PROTECTED

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Sept. 17.—The Hon. Mr. Hazen, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, as a representative of the Maritime Provinces, is optimistic about Far Western and Middle Western condition. On his recent return he said: "I found very satisfactory conditions in the fisheries industry in British Columbia. The legislation concerning licenses enacted last year by the present government has had the effect of attracting a great number of white fishermen to the exclusion of the Jap and next year the number will still further be increased. The policy of the present government will be to maintain the policy of encouraging independent fishermen."

Re-Stocking Lakes.

Mr. Hazen also found that the fisheries regulations in the Prairie Provinces were being better observed. Much depletion of fish stock in the past had occurred, but re-stocking would be carried further by the Marine and Fisheries Department to counteract the loss incurred by depletion.

It is satisfactory for a minister to find that the work to which he has put his hand is bearing fruit.

HERE'S GOOD NEWS FOR WESTERN FARMER

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Sept. 17.—Hon. Dr. Roche, Minister of the Interior, in a speech made this week at Regina, made some important announcements which will be welcome news to the western farmer. Dr. Roche announced that he was planning to encourage mixed farming and the cattle industry on the prairie provinces. He stated that the government intends to carry out in the main the recommendations of the Ranching Commission.

An eighteen ten year lease that cannot be cancelled without an appeal to the government will be enforced and other minor changes of benefit to the rancher will be made.

Homestead Regulations.

Dr. Roche announced that there would likely be some changes in the homestead regulations this coming season. The registration system will be simplified and the regulations will be made less stringent. It will also be stipulated that a man on a homestead may, instead of breaking certain acreage, substitute the raising of a certain head of cattle.

CITY'S BOARD OF WORKS IN BRIEF ROUTINE SESSION LAST NIGHT

The City's Board of Works met last night in business session, Chairman Ald. Buller presiding. There were also present Aldermen Anderson, Gillespie and Johnston.

Downie St. Creek Again

City Solicitor E. H. D. Hall, reported that legally speaking, everything is in pretty good shape for proceeding with the Downie Street creek diversion. An early beginning of this work may at last be looked for.

Who Breaks the Globes on Smith St. Bridge?

Complaints reached the Board that the electric light globes on Smith street bridge are continually broken, and consequently many lights not burning. The chairman was authorized to secure the agency of the police to punish offenders in this direction.

For Pavement Work.

The mayor, chairman and city engineer were authorized to act at their discretion in the matter of the pavement contractors' request for the loan of the city's road roller, at a rental of $1 per hour, for use in street pavement construction.

FIND BOYS DEAD IN EACH OTHERS ARMS

Bullet Wounds In Bodies Indicate Nebraska Youths Were Murdered.

Lincoln, Neb., Sept. 17.—Discovery of bullet wounds in the bodies of John Rys, aged 16, and George Dimer, aged 9, who were found dead Saturday night near Havelock, leads to the theory that the boys were murdered.

The bodies were found in a state of decomposition. The boys were locked in each other's arms as though they had sought to protect themselves from some attacking force. That they had been gored by an infuriated bull was the first theory, but Edward Hoffman, a farmer, maintains there were not cattle in the field where the bodies were found. The boys had been missing since Thursday, after their departure on a day's hunting trip.

CANADA'S PARLIAMENT OF INDUSTRY URGE REVISION OF SCHEDULES

President Gourlay in Annual Address Takes Optimistic View of the Business Situation

Halifax, Sept. 17.—The convention of the Canadian Manufacturers Association got well under way this morning when Mr. R. S. Gourlay delivered his presidential address and a number of reports were presented.

President Gourlay said in part: "This annual meeting of the C. M. A. is in reality a Parliament of Industry. The problems reserved for your consideration are of real present importance in our industrial life; your deliberations thereon will be followed in the press with keen interest, and while your decisions may lack the force of legislative enactments, their influence for good or for evil may be greater and more far reaching than you know. Let us express the hope, therefore, that you will approach the business that awaits you with broad minds and open hearts, remembering always that your first duty is to Canada and that if you would uphold the highest traditions of your organization not only must your discussions be tempered with moderation, but you must be prepared at all times to subordinate individual advantage of the common good.

"The year that has passed since our last convention has been in many respects a memorable one, filled with happenings of great moment both at home and abroad. Here in Canada it has divided our two great political parties on an issue that should have united, rather than separated them, while the check it has placed on over-speculation and the lessons of business caution it has taught us have been both timely and salutary."

A TORONTO GIRL GOING TO SLEEP FOR TWO WEEKS

She Has Done it Twice a Year For Two Years.--A Russian Jewess Now Nine Years Old

Toronto, Sept. 17. — There is a Toronto girl, Rosie Stance, a resident of 19 Centre ave., since Easter, who goes into a trance twice a year. At any rate, that is what she has done in Russia, and now she shows signs of doing it here. It happens over Easter and October, premonitory symptoms being extreme nervousness. This has happened ever since she was two years old, when a cat jumped on her in the night and frightened her. That, of course, was in Russia, whence the family came only a few months ago. The girl got past the immigration officers because, ordinarily she looks perfectly healthy. A Toronto doctor, indeed, has pronounced her "all right," and she therefore cannot be sent to Orillia.

When the cat jumped on Rosie, she woke up and ran from the room. Then she went into a two weeks' sleep. There is a foam in her mouth when the semi-annual repetition takes place.

Twice a year, in the autumn and at Easter, Rosie, who is 9, passes into a trance, and cannot be awakened for at least two weeks at a time. When she wakens she eats very heavily, then [illegible] until the next attack. But her brain is badly affected by this, and she cannot talk, except in disjointed, meaningless words.

She wanders away from her home, and on the streets become the butt of children who can't understand. She can only whimper from time to time like a wounded animal, and the first time she was found it took the officer a full day to locate her home on Centre avenue. Her parents are Russian Jews and have three other children, but they are very poor and dare not incur that poor man's nightmare, a heavy doctor bill. So Rosie, who is showing strange symptoms of the usual autumn sickness, was led crying back to her home this morning, having escaped yesterday.

UNITED KINGDOM IS FACE TO FACE WITH GREAT NATIONAL STRIKE

Eruptions, So Far, However, are Confined to Larger Cities --Ireland May Soon Have Food Famine

London, Sept. 17.—A great national strike, as it was described this morning by one of the trades union leaders, threatens the United Kingdom. Beginning with the lockouts of large numbers of workmen last week in Dublin, in consequence of the strike of a number of members of the Transport Workers' Union because of the employment of non-union laborers, rumblings of discontent have since been heard throughout the entire labor community of the British Isles, but thus far eruptions have occurred only in the larger cities.

The sympathetic strike of the Liverpool dockers and the Transport Workers on the railroads there and at Birmingham, has already partly crippled the three great trunk railways serving the Midland counties of England, namely the Midland, the London and Northwestern, and the Great Western, while the Manchester Ship Canal company also is contending with a strike of its dock laborers for better wages.

Seven Depots Idle

At Liverpool seven of the great freight depots were idle this morning and others are likely soon to be closed for want of traffic.

Peace, too, seems to be a long way off between the workmen and employers in Ireland, as all attempts have hitherto failed to settle the Dublin trouble which was the direct cause of the stoppage of work at Liverpool and Birmingham.

The difficulty of getting provisions into the Irish capital to-day has become so great that it is believed the markets there will have to close their doors.

Strike in the Midlands.

London, which has been only indirectly affected by the strikes on the railroad systems in the Midland, is more directly interested in the threatened strike of the motor omnibus drivers which has now drawn nearer, as the firm which forbids its employes to wear union badges this morning refused to permit any man disobeying its order to take out his omnibus. The men thereupon held a meeting and passed a resolution in favor of striking. If this should be put into effect, it will tie up all the motor omnibuses and tube lines in London and the men have sent an ultimatum to the employers demanding the reinstatement of their dismissed comrades by Friday.

SEEKS TO TRACE TWO FAMOUS DIAMONDS

One Owned By Duke of Burgundy, Other Jewel of Charles the Bold.

Paris, Sept. 17.—Experts have been indulging in considerable polemics as to what has become of certain famous diamonds, one of which is a celebrated gem said to have been lost by the Duke of Burgundy when he was killed in the Battle of Nancy. The other is an equally famous diamond worn by Charles the Bold. The former, according to tradition, was picked up on the battlefield by a soldier, who afterwards sold it for two French livres at Nancy, but its subsequent history is not known. The other was also picked up on the battlefield by a Swiss soldier, and was sold to a priest for a florin.

The diamond, it is said, is the famous Sancy diamond, which is still, or at least, till very recently was the property of the Russian lady, Princess Paul Demidoff. The priest who bought it from the Swiss soldier for one florin sold it afterwards for two florins.

"GENTLEMAN ROGER" NOW GIVEN LIBERTY

Crown Had No Evidence to Offer Against Chauffeur Hired By Lunatic.

Sherbrooke, Que., Sept. 17.—Roger Thompson, the chauffeur, who drove the car in which Thaw escaped from Matteawan, and who was arrested at the instigation of the Canadian immigration authorities on a charge of entering Canada by stealth and with bringing a lunatic into the country, was this morning given his liberty by Judge Mulvena before whom he appeared. The crown attorneys intimated that they had no evidence to offer.

Thompson said he will now try to get the automobile in which he drove Thaw from the asylum, and with it will tour Canada and perform at vaudeville houses.

Strength

Does not come from exercise alone, but also from the food one eats.

For real strength there is no better food than

Grape-Nuts

A breakfast dish of Grape-Nuts and cream is the regular morning custom of a mighty host who know the value of right food.

Being partially predigested, Grape-Nuts is quickly converted into strength for body and brain—the power to "do things."

UNCLE OF EUROPE

Prince Waldemar of Denmark, though still a comparatively young man, fifty-four years of age, is uncle to five rulers of Europe, the Kings of England, Denmark, Norway, Greece, and the Emperor of Russia.

Prince Waldemar, besides being an Admiral in the British navy, is interested in commercial ventures. He is a personal and intimate friend of several East Asiatic rulers, especially the King of Siam, and his friendship may to a great extent be credited to the success the "East Asiatic Company" has achieved in East Asia. The Prince is the only surviving brother of Queen Alexandra, and after the death of his brother King George of Greece he inherited the title "The Uncle of Europe."

Clever Painter

A Russian artist has invented a method for painting several theatrical scenes on the same canvas, the pictures changing as the light thrown on them changes.

BIBLE HISTORY

A Lecturer Brought to Light Some Interesting Facts

At a lecture delivered by Herbert Bolton, the director of the Bristol museum, some very interesting facts in connection with Bible history were brought to light. He pointed out that the museum is rich in illustrations bearing on Bible history. He showed his hearers a set of carpenter's tools brought from the little village of Nazareth, probably similar to those in use at the time of Jesus, and mentioned that the Capper Pass collection of antiquities served to give a clear idea of what the Roman people were like in the Master's day. Specimens of the precious stones and gems which formed the foundation of the New Jerusalem, as recorded in the book of Revelation, were shown, also "tear bottles" and other ancient vessels from Corinth.

Passing to Old Testament history, mention was made of the examples of Assyrian sculpture, possessed by the museum, which were discovered at Nimrod, the ancient Calah, and including the figure of one of the most famous kings of Assyria, Ashur-Nasir-Pal.

Another interesting exhibit was a few Babylonian clay tablets inscribed with cuneiform writing, and among them was one bearing the name of a city (Erech) mentioned in Genesis x:10. Two Babylonian bricks bore the name of Nebuchadnezzar, and a head and bust of an official who acted as taskmaster to the Israelites; also the head of one of the Pharaohs.

The museum collection included samples of Egyptian pottery, jewels, beads, etc., which illustrated the kind of treasures which the Israelitish people borrowed when they spoiled the Egyptians, while a priceless possession consisted of a vase, which was once the property of the Pharaoh of the Exodus, and formed part of an offering to one of the temples. However interesting Bible study may be it can be made most fascinating and instructive when accompanied by illustrations of the times and peoples who actually lived in those far-off days. The Bristol citizens are to be congratulated on the valuable possession of their museum and art gallery.

DRESSING THE BABY

Utility and Cleanliness More Important Than Beauty and Frills

Although of late years the mother's vanity in the matter of baby clothes has given place to the comfort of the child in a great measure, yet we still find mothers who do not dress their children properly. Either through ignorance or pride they still put too few or too many clothes upon them.

Remember a baby's flesh is as easily hurt as a rose leaf and, while embroidery and laces may look beautiful to you, they do not feel at all good to baby when they chafe his little neck and arms with their starchy freshness.

Use the softest fabrics you can afford when you make your baby clothes. Make the shirt to slip over his shoulders, leaving him free from any tight bands. Don't have his diaper too big, as that will make him bow-legged.

Never allow your baby to wear any garment at night it has worn during the day. When it sleeps, if possible, let it be outdoors or at least in a room with the windows open.

Don't put clothing on your baby that is not perfectly clean. Although we have been told that cleanliness is next to godliness, it sometimes seems that some mothers think it is next to impossible.

Put all your efforts on the cleanliness and hygienic care of your baby and never mind the frills on its clothes.

Some time when you have an opportunity go to a children's hospital and see how trained nurses and physicians clothe the children left in their care. Only comfort and cleanliness are given any thought in the dressing of these little atoms of humanity whose welfare is of such importance.

A CHRISTIANIZED ESKIMO

In Spite of all Persecution He Stuck to New Faith

The whole life of the primitive Eskimo is governed by precedent. Although outwardly the freest and most irresponsible being in the world, he is in reality the slave of public opinion and the numberless customs and superstitions of his ancestors. The ways of his fathers are good enough for him, and the world of the old men and witch-doctors, who treasure up ancient precedent like the Pharisees of old, is the standard he lives and dies by.

For an Eskimo to break one of these unwritten laws is to render himself a social outcast. Although treated with kindness, he is no longer reckoned as a member of the tribe. A brother-in-law of a [illegible] chief had early embraced [illegible], being converted on a trip to Nome by one of the first missionaries. Being a very conscientious man, he soon recognized the incompatibility of retaining his faith and conforming to the worship of his people. The spirit of the Scotch Covenanters was in his veins. He refused to go through the usual rites of his people, and prayed to the God of the white strangers at home. As a result he was forbidden his place in the village kazga (or meeting place), where every man has his recognized station, carefully graded according to merit. His son was not allowed to dance with the young men or witness any of the councils or witch-doctorings reserved for the men; his daughters could not take part in the annual dance of the women, nor was any member of the tribe bold enough to ask them in marriage. They all married Siberian strangers and left the old man's house desolate, but he stuck to his faith to the last. Always cheerful, always ready to help, living daily the faith that was in him, he was one of the few of his race who was brave enough to withstand the witch-doctors.

A Horse Worth Having

There are horses which race
At a terrific pace,
And others that people have had—
Which are splendid, of course;
But show me a horse
As safe and as frisky as dad.

When you wish for a ride—
Well, you jump to his side,
And whisper a word in his ear;
Then you're up ere you know,
And away you can go
Like a [illegible] for there's nothing to fear.

You can whip him and shout
While he canters about,
But he's never been known to refuse;
And it's little you reck,
For the rein is his neck,
And his hands are the stirrups you use.

So to bed you can ride;
Then he [illegible] by your side,
And you [illegible] and he
The story he'll tell
[illegible]
And—well, that's the [illegible]

OUR POINT OF VIEW.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier's proposed tour of Ontario seems to be suffering from a severe attack of cold feet.

Perhaps Sir Wilfrid is of the opinion that British connection is still popular in Ontario, and coyness in calling off his political tour.

A new book called "Educational Unrest," and it is to be presumed that it describes the feelings of small boys when the school session begins.

With a bumper harvest in the United States and a surplus of wheat for export there, to say nothing of the price of being higher in Winnipeg than Minneapolis, the reciprocity cry has become a mere faint, disheartened whisper.

Canada is rid of Thaw, for which Canadians are duly thankful. Let them fight the case out in the United States, where the whole unsavory mess had its origin.

Without going into the merits of the Pelkey-Burns controversy, it is quite possible that the next bout between these two sturdy pugilists will not be "fixed," and that the charge to see it will not be exorbitant as was the case last March.

The government at Washington has decided to permit the shipment of explosives to Mexico "for use in the mines," but as most of the mines are idle the dynamite will be used to blast railroad bridges and blow up buildings rather than allow it to go to waste for want of use.

If the gentle Emmaline Pankhurst comes to this country and attempts to introduce her militant methods, it is a safe bet that she will become acquainted with the interior of a Canadian jail. Furthermore, if she starts one of her hunger strikes the prison authorities will forget to use the food pump.

If it is true that the Saskatchewan legislature has passed a law enabling aliens to vote, the Dominion government ought seriously seriously to consider whether that act should not be disallowed.

ST. CLAUDE'S SCHOOL TROUBLE.

Our esteemed contemporary, the Christian Guardian, publishes the following which requires little explanation or comment. It shows that "eternal vigilance is the price of liberty" as much now as it ever was in the world's history.

"In St. Claude, Man., there is a four-roomed, lay public school which, during the past three years, has been attended by all the children of St. Claude School District. But there is in St. Claude a Convent of the Sisters of the Five Wounds, and somebody thought that it would be advisable to have some of the children taught by the sisters in the convent. A petition to this effect was circulated, and, we understand, largely signed by the French-Canadian Roman Catholics, who form a majority of of the populace. The trustees of the public school, acting upon this petition, have accordingly closed two rooms of the public school, and now all the girls in St. Claude, Roman Catholic and Protestant, who which to attend the public school must go to the convent and be taught by the sisters. The incident has brought into prominence the other fact that in St. Boniface, St. Norbet and St. Jean the public schools for girls are held in convent buildings. It is said that the case in St. Claude is worse than the others in this respect, that the public school for boys and girls was formerly in the convent building, but the work was so unsatisfactory that after a bitter struggle with the church authorities the lay school was built in 1909, at a cost of from $6,000 to $8,000, is left empty in order that the and now the half of this school is left empty in order that the children may attend the convent school. And this is a public school, and in Canada! How many Protestants would be willing to submit to this?"

Stuffy Feeling About The Nose Relieved At Once

Tells How to Cure Hawking and Spitting, and Drive Out Catarrhal Colds.

Isn't it miserable to have a stuffed-up feeling in the nostrils — to be scarcely able to draw a full breath. When Catarrh gets into the nose you're bound to know something is radically wrong.

A dead sure cure, and a simple one to use, is Catarrhozone; you just breathe it—that's all. You see Catarrhozone Inhaler sends healing piney vapors through the nose, throat and lungs, and these antiseptic soothing vapors are death to colds or Catarrh.

Thousands testify every year that nothing ever discovered will cure a cold, or help the throat like Catarrhozone. Mr. Everett L. Wasson, of Blair, N.B., writes:—"About five years ago I took a cold in the head and Catarrh set in. It kept increasing by leaps and bounds. I kept putting off getting anything but I at last I found I would have to. After trying several things I heard of your remedy, "Catarrhozone," and procured a bottle and began using it. I was not long in finding out I had struck the right thing. I am recommending Catarrhozone to all who have Catarrh, etc."

Catarrhozone is the greatest remedy for colds, etc., since people have to have colds. Get the dollar package and let the whole family use it. Medium size, 50c.; sample size, 25c. All storekeepers and druggists or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Ont.

HUNTER STREET DIGGING.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I would like to ask any business man in Peterborough if, in his own private affairs, he would tolerate any such system as that followed by the city on Hunter street. This street has been tunnelled and dug up so many times recently that the authorities must suspect that gold or silver is to be found, if they only continue prospecting. This street has been dug up twice in one week.

IN PASTOR RUSSELL'S DEFENCE.

Editor Morning Times.

Dear Sir:—In your issue of 12th inst., I notice an article from a New York paper headed "Pastor Russell's Exposure in Courts." As editors generally are fair-minded men, willing to give both sides of any question they take up, I take it you will be glad to give space to a reply to above named article.

For an example of falsifying with half a truth, it about equals the false witnesses who were 'hired' in the days of our Lord to swear away His life. Pastor Russell has never been convicted of a lie, not even when under oath. He never laid claim to being educated, though anyone who has read his writings knows they are not those of an uneducated or unlearned man. You don't find an illiterate author with a book reaching the 4th million mark. He swore that he didn't go to public school after 14, but he also swore that he had private teachers and that he took up an extensive and far-reaching course of study especially along religious lines. He didn't swear that he knew Greek as a Greek scholar, but that he knew it as one can get a knowledge of it in a good, standard concordance. This is all he has ever claimed and time and again he has recommended his readers to make a use of Young's or Strong's concordances as he was doing. These standard Presbyterian and Methodist works too. His Scripture studies must be pretty good works—if you want to see how good, the next time you come across a student of one of them just take him with you to call on your minister. Nine times out of ten the minister will be afraid to meet the "uneducated, unordained, common fellow." Of course he won't say he is afraid, but he will just about that time have to go away to look after some grab bag social, or turkey supper, or church raffle, or maybe, a sick parishioner and the call will be very urgent. I said nine times out of ten, and you will be wondering what about the tenth.

The tenth one will either get mad or else he will say that he doesn't know very much about the Bible as he thought he did, and maybe he better look into the concordance a little too.

You mustn't blame the other nine too much. A man can't be versed in socials, teas, raffles, grab bags, etc., and the bible at one and the same time. 'Tis a bold change of front the Russell opposers have made. Before the J. J. Ross trial they weren't doing a thing but challenging Pastor Russell as to why he should want to teach the Bible when he didn't know Greek. In a similar way they were condemning him because he hadn't been ordained by some other man. Long before the J. J. Ross trial, Pastor Russell had proven from the Scriptures that no man viewing the matter as he did, could truthfully say that if he were a true, consecrated child of God, he was not ordained to preach, and that is what Pastor Russell swore to. By the way, why can't the man that is so careful of detail, that he has to tell us that Mr. Russell had his feet in the witness box with him, be a little more careful to state important facts that are necessary to a clear understanding of this matter.

This year the sermon by Pastor Russell on "Ordination," has been widely spread among the public because it was asked for, but his "followers" knew the views in that sermon years ago, or at least as soon as they got acquainted with him. The Pastor doesn't climb on a pedestal and say to a lay class below him: "I've been to college and learned Greek, and been ordained by a man, so swallow quick what I tell you and don't ask any question for questions are bothersome things." Rather he says: "Get your Bible and a good concordance and any other helps you can find and weigh carefully what you read, compare and prove and hold fast that which is good." And it's because the Scripture studies are so good that Bible 'students' hold fast to them and we are followers of the Pastor, God bless him, in one sense and in one sense only. He is so far ahead of us in Bible study, and self-sacrifice and patience and Christian love that we can't catch up to him.

If any one would like to read some of the facts from the pastor's standpoint, given without any slander, backbiting, reviling, malice or envy, let him drop a card to the Bible and Tract Society, 13-17 Hicks St., Brooklyn, N.Y., asking for free literature along this line.

Thanking you in advance, Mr. Editor, I remain, yours for the truth,

L. S. Ward.

—The Canal Lock Man——

THE CANAL LOCK-MAN.

(Written for The Times)

The young and old, the short and tall,
Men, women, boys and girls will call,
When'er they take an evening walk,
To see the man who turns the Lock.

They come of course, to see the boats
Upon the rushing waters float,
And when the gates are open wide
Out on the lake to watch her glide.

Now this is what they always tell,
But everybody knows quite well,
They come to have a friendly talk
With the good man who turns the Lock.

Fine yarns—he'll spin them by the yard,
But never touches pipe or card;
So let us pledge him in a toast,
Of water which is his best boast.

For he is jolly embonpoint,
Ready in sport or fun to join,
And jokes are never kept in stock,
By the good man who turns the lock.

Off duty, by his office door,
Perhaps he'll doze—I won't say more—
Or if should lagging fancy choose,
The Morning Times he may peruse.

If water's low and boats are late,
Cheerful and patiently he'll wait;
And punctual too, as any clock,
Is the good man who turn the Lock.

And blessings on his pleasant face,
You'll find him steady in his place,
But I must close lest praise may shock,
The modest man who turns the Lock.

TO PROBE DEATH OF 8 SMOTHERED IN PRISON CELL

Twelve Confined in Death Trap With Only Small Holes For Ventilation

Richmond, Texas, Sept. 17.—The suffocation of eight negro convicts in an underground cell on the State Prison farm Saturday night aroused an investigation backed by the governor of Texas, the attorney general's department, the prison commission and local police authorities.

Twelve negroes, as a punishment for laziness in picking cotton were locked in this cell overnight Saturday. Its dimensions are about nine feet by seven feet high. Its roof is double with air holes placed so that no two shall be opposite each other, in order to admit light. There are six of these roof air holes and four in the floor, fed by pipes.

Many times before this cell had been used for confining several convicts at a time but with no fatal results. Saturday, however, was an unusually sultry day, one of the hottest of the summer throughout Texas, with temperatures everywhere near 100 degrees.

At 8 o'clock Saturday night, according to Capt. Blakely, manager of the prison farm here, the convicts in the dark cell called for water and a bucket full was passed in to them, but after that nothing more was heard from them. Reports are conflicting as to whether there was a struggle in the cell between the eight who died and the four who survived.

Wednesday has been set for the hearing of three guards arrested in connection with the investigation. C. A. Sweeton, assistant attorney general arrived here today to investigate personally for his department.

FATHER O'FLYNN

Author of Words of Famous Song Would Divide His Glory.

During a lecture at the University College, of North Wales, on "Songs of Ireland," Mr. A. Percival Graves, the author of the famous song "Father O'Flynn," gave an interesting account of the origin of the song with which he thought his name was already too much identified.

When a clerk at the Home Office, Mr. Graves happened to be strolling across one of the London parks and the words of the song came into his head. Subsequently writing them out he sent them to the "Spectator" in which they were published.

Ten years afterwards they were set to music by Sir Charles Santley and when first sung scored an immediate success. But the public perseveringly ignored Sir Charles' collaboration in the song and have insisted upon recognizing Mr. Graves as its sole creator.

In many places he is known as Father O'Flynn, his own name being utterly forgotten.

Recovered His Radium

The radium in one of the first bulbs that were received in London had a curious history. A physician in Portland Place was applying the bulb to a patient, when he accidentally let it fall, and a moment after crushed it under his foot. The value of the radium to the physician was very great. He removed his boot from his foot and cut out a square of his valuable carpet. He had boots and carpet burned, and out of the ashes refined the original radium salt. It was placed in a new appliance, and is in use to-day.

BEAUTIFUL, BUT A DEMON

Venomous Snake Admitted to the London Zoo

A new resident had arrived at the London Zoo. He is a snake of the most venomous kind, and goes by the name of Bushmaster. He has a big, ugly head and a beautiful body, but just at present he is very sleepy, because he wants to change his skin. This is not the first specimen of the kind that has been in Regent's Park, but the new arrival is the finest that has ever come to this country. He has not shown his peculiar temper yet, but the keepers are dealing with him warily, for he has an exceedingly bad character. His birthplace was Trinidad, in the West Indies, and he is supposed to be one of the quickest moving of all snakes, as well as the worst tempered. Lachesis (for that is his scientific name) lives in swamps, plantations and forests, both on plains and on hills, and his females are ridiculously prolific. The young are produced by dozens at a time. They are ten inches long at birth, and are brought into the world in a state of viciousness equal to that of their parents.

Crofter's Tragic Death

A remarkable accident, resulting in the death of a crofter in the island of Harris, has been reported. Roderick MacAskill, a stalwart young man, was married last month, and resided with his father. Young MacAskill began to erect a house for himself, and while carrying a stone which weighed 2 cwt. he fell heavily to the ground, with the stone on his back. He was rendered unconscious, and before medical aid arrived he died.

No Riding on Pilots

The Dominion Railway Commission issued an order at Ottawa prohibiting the practice of railway employees riding on the pilots of engines, except when engaged in switching operations. The order arose from the number of serious accidents sustained in this way, and railways must see to it that the practice is discontinued.

Plans, specification and form of contract can be seen and forms of tender obtained at this Department and at the offices of J. G. Sing, Esq., District Engineer, Confederation Life Building, Toronto, Ont., and on application to the Postmasters at Kingston, Ont., and Newcastle, Ont.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed forms supplied, and signed with their actual signatures, stating their occupations and places of residence. In the case of firms, the actual signature, the nature of the occupation and place of residence of each member of the firm must be given.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, equal to ten per cent. (10 p. c.) of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,
R. C. DESROCHERS,
Secretary.

COMPANION CORPSE SECRETED FOR YEARS

Remarkable Story of an Aged Spinster Who Lived With Corpse of Her Friend

In the world of fiction as well as in fact the dread of being haunted by the dead has led to many a dramatic situation and many a strange sequel.

The quiet little market town of Wimborne, in Dorsetshire, provides the latest contribution to the history of romance in this respect, by supplying the remarkable story of an aged spinster who lived alone for nearly three years in a house, with the skeleton of her friend and companion.

More than thirty years ago Mary Kerley and Ellen Griffin were fellow-servants in London, and they formed a friendship which endured till death. They resolved to save money, with the object of taking a boarding-house. After years of economy they found themselves in the possession of £100, and ultimately took over a house at Paddington. Unfortunately, boarders did not prove as plentiful as was expected, and the venture ended in financial failure. The women, driven to despair, sold their furniture, paid what debts were owing with the proceeds and sought seclusion, in order to nurse their sorrows, in the quietude of Wimborne, the early home of Mary Kerley. Here they lived the life of the recluse, and were seldom seen out of doors. How they managed to exist was a mystery, for they were only known to do "little bits of dressmaking." They troubled no one, and nobody appeared to worry about them, the devoted old spinsters being shut up alone with their sorrows, brooding over the loss of their hard-earned savings, which they had hoped to devote to commercial advantage.

Some three years ago Miss Griffin, whose age was then seventy, became ill, and, although medicine was obtained, it was agreed between the two friends that no doctor should be called in. During the last days of her life Miss Griffin, in her delirium, harked back to the days of her childhood, when she spent many a happy hour on the banks of the river at Richmond, and appealed to her companion to promise that when she died her burial should not take place "anywhere, if not at Richmond."

"If you can't afford to bury me at Richmond," she said, "keep me as long as you live." At last the friends were separated by death, and Miss Kerley, unable to realize that she had lost her companion, slept in the same bed with the corpse for two nights. Days, weeks, and months passed away, and still the dead body was kept in the house.

The grim secret of the dwelling, situated in a terrace, adjoining Wimborne Railway Station, was revealed at the inquest as the outcome of a visit to the house of the local surveyor, under the Town Planning Act. The full story of the tragedy was related at the Wimborne Police Court, when Miss Kerley was charged with unlawfully failing to give notice to the coroner of the fact that a body on which an inquest ought to have been held was lying unburied.

Miss Kerley's signed depositions at the inquest were produced, in which she admitted being present when Miss Griffin died. She had slept in the house ever since, and her intention was to keep the remains till her own death, had they not been discovered by the surveyor.

When the magistrates' clerk was reading that it was the wish of Miss Griffin that she and the accused should be buried together, and that the dead woman would "come back and haunt" Kerley if she buried Miss Griffin in Wimborne, the accused wept.

The coroner expressed his own opinion that the skeleton was lying in a natural position, and had evidently been so since death—apparently a natural death, which must have taken place nearly three years ago.

Police-Sergeant Andrews said that Miss Kerley could not in any way have been benefited by concealing the death or the body.

The chairman (Sir Richard Glyn) informed Miss Kerley that she might have been sent for trial, but perhaps she hardly realized that at the time. There was evidently no idea of crime on her part, and she probably acted more in ignorance and, perhaps, superstition than anything else. It was neither the wish of the Bench nor the Home Office to punish her, and she would be discharged.

Fifty-four Years on the Line

After fifty-four years' service under the North British Railway Company, Mr. Robert Brunton, passenger driver, Duns, is retiring. A native of Edinburgh, he was one of the first drivers on the Edinburgh and Carlisle Railway. He went to Duns in 1865, and ran the first train on the Berwickshire branch line. In his fifty years on that branch he has never had a single accident, although thrice he has been "snowed up."

Motor Bike Policemen

Having found motorcycles of prime value in policing cities and counties, Kansas went a step further and made the entire state a unit for motorcycle police work. Under the plan which is being worked out, the organization will have one or more motorcyclemen in each city and town—men who will be ready to respond quickly to any call, no matter what [illegible] of the state [illegible] of a [illegible], there will be [illegible] who can take the trail on short notice and [illegible] "anything on wheels."

SAD LIFE STORY OF QUEEN NATALIE

Divorced by Her Royal Husband, and Her Son Murdered, She Wanders in Exile

"Your Highness, listen! I love Natalie. I have known and loved her since she was a child, and I beg of you not to marry her. Such a union is doomed to unhappiness. You love to rule and command; so does Natalie, and nothing but great unhappiness can possibly come from your union."

But love laughs at prophecies. Why should Prince Milan, the idolized ruler of Servia, as he then was, heed this solemn warning from a woman of the court, a few days before he was to lead to the altar the most beautiful girl in Europe? Was he not madly in love with her? Was she not equally madly in love with him?

It was at Nice that Prince Milan, who in after years was proclaimed King Milan I. of Servia, first set his eyes upon his bride, Natalie. Among the visitors was a Russian colonel, Nathaniel Ketschko, a man of high lineage and great wealth, proud of his birth and his riches, and still prouder of the beauty of his daughter Natalie.

A Brief Courtship

Milan's wooing was as brief as it was blissful and the ill-fated pair were married at Vienna in 1875. Natalie was a generous, impulsive girl of sixteen—the Prince, her husband, but twenty-one. Had she waited another six or twelve months she might have learned that he was a hopeless gambler and spendthrift. He indulged in almost every form of dissipation, and Natalie had only been wedded a couple of months when she discovered that he was a man with whom no one woman could be happy. Marriage made no difference to the Prince's mode of life. At first his wife tried passionate pleadings, then reproaches but in vain.

But there were other women who basked in Milan's smiles, a much more formidable rival than the wife of a Greek diplomat being Artemesia Christich, who, not content with the King's smiles and favors, aspired to take Natalie's place as Queen of Servia. Indeed, it is said that she extorted from him a promise to make her his queen as soon as his existing marriage could be dissolved.

Birth of Alexander

Then came the birth of the baby Prince Alexander—"Sasha," as his mother fondly called him—the man who, in after years, was to be stabbed to death, together with the lady-in-waiting, Draga Maschin, whom he led to the altar in defiance of the wishes of all Servia.

But the birth of the baby Prince, instead of linking the parents together in a new bond of affection, was the innocent cause of widening the breach. The scandalous doings of Prince Milan went on, and when his son was old enough to be influenced, his father began to poison his mind against his mother.

Sick and weary of the whole business, Natalie, whose popularity with the Servians was intensified by the wrongs she had suffered, decided that she would force her husband to abdicate and secure her own appointment as Regent to her son. She made the full story of her injuries public, and enlisted the sympathy, not only of Milan's most powerful Ministers, but of the entire country.

Divorce Secured

Then Milan played his trump card. He determined to divorce Natalie and rob her of her son. The divorce proceedings were rushed through and on October 12, 1888, the marriage was formally dissolved without the unfortunate Queen being allowed to defend herself. Furthermore "Sasha" was torn from her arms, and the weeping mother was left disconsolate.

Nemesis, however, was at hand, and it is now a matter of history how, the year following the divorce, Servian indignation was aroused to such an extent by the scandals that Milan was forced to abdicate, and, while his wife was in exile, their son was proclaimed King. Ultimately Natalie was allowed to return to Belgrade, and had she then played her cards rightly and lived quietly, she would have been allowed to remain in the capital. But she threw herself into political agitation, and thus brought herself into open conflict with the Regents, who at last ordered her banishment.

The most cruel blow of all which Fate dealt Natalie was when her son fell in love with Draga Maschin, one of her own ladies-in-waiting. It has been said that, degraded as he was, this episode in his son's life broke Milan's heart. Whatever truth there may be in the story, it is a fact that a few months later he drew his last breath at Vienna at the age of forty-six. As for Natalie, she still wanders about Europe seeking for the happiness which can never be hers.

A committee representing the Admiralty and three of the leading motor boat clubs are considering the organization of a fleet of privately-owned motor boats to assist the Navy in time of war. There are over 300 motor boats suitable for this purpose around the coast, and a scheme of defence in which these could take part is being discussed.

Titanic Wireless Hero

At a meeting of the Godalming Town Council the presentation was made to the Corporation, on behalf of past and present scholars of Godalming Grammar School, of an oil painting of Jack Phillips, the wireless operator on the Titanic, who was an old scholar, and also a native of Godalming. The presentation was made by Charles Elworthy, until recently the headmaster.

Feeding on Raw Turnip

At the hearing of a charge of child neglect against Michael Campion at Celbridge Petty Sessions, Sergeant Lane stated that the only food he found in the place, which was a laborer's cottage, was a piece of raw turnip, in which were marks of children's teeth. The defendant was found lying in bed, and when questioned he said he got his feet wet in the snow, and had to remain in bed. The case was adjourned for a month to give Campion a chance of doing better.

Child Heroism

A story of the death of two children and the heroism displayed by one of the victims comes from Kilcurry, near Dundalk. Four children were amusing themselves at a raft composed of disconnected planks. They were ten years, seven and a half years, nine years, and seven and a half years. The raft had been got together satisfactorily, and Kiernan gave it a shove on to the water. Mullin endeavored to board it, and in doing so slipped into the water. He screamed for assistance, and was about to sink when the little girl Mary Dunne jumped into the water and endeavored to rescue him. She was unsuccessful, and both perished. Their companions ran away.

Misdirected Bravery

A farmer named Terry, of Ballymacart, Waterford, found a barrel on the sea beach which was filled with some liquid. He took the barrel home, and while examining its contents with a lighted match the liquid blazed up, setting fire to the room. The family at once rushed from the house, but the father, missing one child, made two gallant searches for the little one in the blazing building, sustaining dreadful burns all over the body. It afterwards transpired that the child who was missing was away from the house at the time.

To Bid for Historic Castle

For Castle, Ayr, which formed part of the thirteenth century church of St. John, and within which the Scottish Parliament met in 1315, the year after Bannockburn, to settle the succession of the crown, was offered for sale at Ayr recently, with a reserve price of $10,000, but there was no offer. At the end of the fifteenth century James IV. used to visit the church and make offerings at the altar, and during the Reformation John Knox preached from the pulpit. Oliver Cromwell, during his sojourn in Scotland, used the building as an armoury, and public indignation was so loud that the Protector proffered substantial monetary assistance (1,000 merks, Scots) towards a new church.

FUN FOR LITTLE ONES

Some Little Tricks to Amuse the Children Indoors

Amongst all sorts of amusing experiments which can be made with tumblers, sticks, forks and spoons, perhaps one of the most favorite ones with children is the penny and tumbler trick.

If you fill a tumbler with water—as full as it is possible without overflowing—and observe the line of the water you will find that in the middle of the tumbler the water is slightly convex—that is, forms a depressed line just as if it had been scooped out. This, which is caused by the natural weight of the water, is, however, not apparent to the usual uninitiated, and although the water might, on the edge of the glass, be already on the point of overflowing, any child can challenge a grown-up person to put in it many coppers without spilling a single drop of water.

To perform this little trick the copper must be put exactly in the centre and dropped very gently, first laying the edge in the water. Great will be the surprise of all concerned to see that, according to the size of the glass, five or six coppers can thus be put in until the water in the centre becomes level with the sides, when, of course, the water will flow over.

A most amusing experiment might be tried with a lighted candle. [illegible] a tumbler half full of very cold water and, having lighted the candle, hold it sideways over the tumbler. The [illegible] wax will pour in drops into the water, when the coldness of the latter will congeal the melted wax immediately it touches the surface of the water, thus creating a rough-edged little ball strangely like the flower known as the "lily of the valley." After a good many of these flowers are produced in this way they are threaded one at the time on a long thin piece of wire, a small knot preventing the flower from slipping through.

The wires are then twisted lightly over each other to form the spray of lilies, which, when mixed with strips of green paper cut and twisted to imitate the long pointed leaves, makes a most charming and interesting ornament.

MODERN DESPATCHING

Telephones Displacing the Telegraph For the Actual Handling of Trains

The new system of despatching trains by telephone inaugurated by the Grand Trunk Railway between Montreal and Toronto has been in use long enough for a thorough and satisfactory test. It is intended eventually to despatch by telephone over the entire system.

The method followed is slightly different from the ordinary telephone line in that it is always under the direct control of the chief train despatcher so that the wire cannot be used by operators at way stations except through his office. It is a marked improvement on the old telegraph system which was subject to interruption while being used for transmitting train orders. The telephone is exclusively used for handling orders for the movement of trains, ordinary railroad business being still conducted by means of telegraph.

The old rules are still made use of. All orders are repeated back to the despatcher by the operator for reference to the original copy before the signal "O.K." is given. The numbers of trains and engines, the stations, names of conductors and engineers and other important parts of orders are spelled out in full both in transmission and repetition.

FIRST WESTERN PAPER

Made Its Appearance on December 28, 1859

The Nor'-Wester, the pioneer newspaper of Red River, founded by William Buckingham and William Coldwell, made its first appearance on December 28, 1859. It consisted of four pages of five columns. The lengthy prospectus published in the first number [illegible] the country watered by the Red, Assiniboine and Saskatchewan Rivers. The declared aim of the Nor'-Wester was to stimulate the industrial life of the Settlement and to assist in the work of Government organization. It is a curious commentary on the state of the country in the late 'fifties that most of the advertisements of the first number of the Nor'-Wester came from St. Paul. The paper constitutes a rich mine of information for the closing decade of the history of the Council of Assiniboia, the first local administrative body of the west. It reports the proceedings of the council, gives agricultural and commercial intelligence, publishes the regulations of the Red River Post Office, gives in full Bishop Anderson's charge to the clergy of Rupert's Land, prints editorials on the progress of the Settlement, and protests against the Council of Assiniboia as a form of government.

HELPS PROSPECTORS

Claims Staked as the Result of Information Given by Indians

There are many successful mining camps in British Columbia which owe their beginnings to the curiosity of Indians who have, during their hunting expeditions, come across some mineral-bearing rock and have brought it to the white man to identify. Others wishing to guard their hunting grounds from the intruding prospector have, discovering any mineral indication, [illegible] kept their find a secret lest by its discovery the privacy of their [illegible] should be [illegible] by the white man. Not far from Observatory Inlet, B.C., an Indian hunter chanced to come across a fallen tree which had been torn up by the roots, thus uncovering a vein of good-looking ore. Fearing its discovery would start a mining camp in the best part of his hunting ground and so drive away all the fur-bearing animals from its vicinity, he spent the greater part of a day covering up the lead with moss which he had to pack from some distance. To an old [illegible] of the Nass River is due the credit of calling attention to the mineral deposits of Observatory Inlet. He is one of the first full-blooded Indians to hold in his own name a free miner's certificate in the Coast district of the [illegible] Mining Division, [illegible] are staked.

OLD CONVICT SHIP

The Success Was Built in 1790 and Carried Felons

The ancient British convict ship Success which has been showing herself to the New Englanders is worth looking at from the viewpoint of prison reformers and philanthropists generally. She has been patched up a bit since the days when she transported felons over to the penal colonies of Great Britain hundreds of felons and carried in irons hundreds more who perished on the voyages, still in irons. Originally the Success was an armed East India merchantman with old fashioned ports, from which protruded highly polished brass guns to fight off pirates that had a habit of taking chances with ships bringing [illegible] from the Indies. She might have been regarded beautiful in those days, but as compared with modern models of the clock, high sparred clippers and packets of the '60s she is mighty homely. She was built at Moulmein in 1790 of teak. Her sides are two and a half feet thick at the bilge. She had a square stern, quarter galleries, bluff bows and other peculiarities of the ships of her era. She is 135 feet long, which was big for her day as a merchantman, but vessels of almost her length might be suspended from the davits of the Imperator or the Aquitania. She never made any records as a merchantman, but she created one when she made her last trip across the Atlantic under her own sail, by covering the course in ninety-six days. This is the longest Atlantic trip in modern times. If the human beings who died aboard her should all come back to make a personal inspection of her she would be unable to accommodate them. Some of them, if they brought along their human forms, would be unable to see the old hulk, as they went blind before dying in the "dark holes." The Success went out of commission as a convict ship after the exposure in 1857 of the inhuman treatment of prisoners under the bulk system. From 1860 to 1880 she was used as a woman's prison and is or was a reformatory ship and ammunition store. In 1890 the Success was scuttled by residents of Sydney, N.S.W., after she had been sold. The owners raised her and used her and put her on exhibition. She has been shown five times in London, and her present agent declares that 20,000,000 have since looked her over, including the King of England, the German Emperor and the Prince of Wales.

HOW TO OBTAIN A GOOD COMPLEXION

Steam and Massage Treatment for Blackheads—Olive Oil Plays Important Part

There is probably nothing more annoying to the girl who cares in the least about her skin than the appearance of those unpleasant and disfiguring things known by the name of blackheads.

Many girls spend a great deal of time in trying to rid themselves of the blackheads by squeezing them out with their fingers. These same girls go outside, gaily, soon afterwards, and it is painful to watch their surprised faces the following day when they have found, on examining their complexions in the mirror, that the blackheads are as numerous as they were before.

Some women continue indefinitely with this method of removing blackheads and gathering them as quickly again, but each day they find the pores of their skin enlarging, and their complexions becoming coarser and coarser.

The Way to Cure Them

There is only one way of getting rid of blackheads, and that is by cleansing the skin. If, however, both blackheads and pimples appear on the face, internal as well as external treatments are wanted. Proper dieting often effects a cure in these cases.

To steam the face, fill a basin with boiling water, and cover your head and face, and basin, too—with a big bath towel, so that none of the steam is allowed to escape. For at least five minutes remain thus; then wipe your skin gently dry with a clean, soft towel, rub a little olive oil all over it, and massage the affected parts thoroughly.

You will find that the blackheads practically confine themselves to the chin, around the nose, and to the neck just below the ears. These are the parts that must have the most careful massage; the skin being made to absorb as much oil as possible. Now take a soft handkerchief, fold it so that it forms a pad under the tip of each finger (the nails must not be allowed to come into direct contact with the skin), and very gently force out the blackheads. Do not try to remove too many at a time, or the skin will become inflamed and red.

The Final Process

Next douche the skin thoroughly in quite cold water, to which has been added enough simple tincture of benzoin to give the water a milky appearance. Lastly, massage again this time with cold cream. The cold water douche is important, because it helps to close up the pores which the steam bath has opened.

EFFECT OF MARRIAGE ON LENGTH OF LIFE

Figures Which Prove That Single Men and Women Die Earlier Than Those Who Wed

"Marry if you want to live to a good old age," says Dr. Jacques Bertillon, and he gives reasons, with statistics to back them up.

"A married man or woman has," he says, "thrice as much chance for a good, long run of life as a bachelor or a spinster." He also shows that the average of mortality among widowers is greater than the average among married men; so he recommends that they marry again, provided they are under 60 years of age. To young men Bertillon has this to say:

"Marry and you will do well, even from a selfish standpoint; but watch carefully over your wife's health, as even from this egotistical point of view her loss would be a terrible misfortune; for your life depends in a great measure on her own."

To women his advice is: "And to you I give counsel to marry in your most selfish interest, as mortality among married women is less than among spinsters of the same age—at least, after the age of 30—but the difference is less for women than for men. The mortality among spinsters is much greater than among married women, but it is not twice as great, as in the case of men."

Next comes the widow: "Mortality among widows is distinctly much greater than among married women of the same age. The sweet state of 'widowhood' is particularly fatal to young widows. Their death rate, from 20 to 25 years of age, is twice that of married women at a corresponding age."

Then Bertillon goes on gallantly to say that women have less need of men than the latter have of them. He says the death rate is generally less among women than men of the same age and station. What is the reason? Simply they are steadier. And it is no doubt for the same reason that matrimony conduces to longevity.

"Married people lead a more regular life," he says. "They are more controlled, discreet though this control may be, and it must be discreet, if it is to be useful. Their physical life, like their moral life, is healthier, quieter, and more natural."

Then does Bertillon point to a result in French statistics: For one year which he selected, deaths per 1,000 men, among bachelors between 25 and 30, were 10; while those of married men were only 8; between [illegible] and [illegible] the figure was [illegible] for the former and [illegible] for the latter. With women at the same age the mortality was correspondingly 12 and 8 between 25 and 30, and 24 and 13 between 35 and 60. The death rates among widows and divorcees were, respectively, 15 and 31 per 1,000 women.

NUTMEG LORE

The Good Ones Exude Oil When Pricked With a Pin

The pure food expert at a pure food show took up a nutmeg.

"Watch me jab this pin into the nutmeg here and there," he said. "Do you see how from each pin prick a little oil exudes? Well, that is a proof that the nutmeg is good. When a pin prick draws no oil from it it is a wooden nutmeg, nothing more.

"The nutmeg tree of Asia is seventy feet high. The fruit is like a pear. The flesh of the fruit is like candied citron, and its seeds, our nutmeg proper, are enveloped in a yellow rind that is our mace.

"Nutmegs are dried for two months in a moderate heat. They are then sorted, and the small and broken ones are thrown into the press for the purpose of extracting their oil, the essential oil of nutmeg being a very costly article of commerce.

"The big, fine, choice nutmegs, if they are now put on the market, are all right; but, the oil being so costly, there is a way of extracting it without the use of the press. The fine, choice nutmeg is steeped in hot water and afterwards coated with lime. Then, though all its oil and nearly all its flavor have departed, it looks all right, but it is a worthless wooden nutmeg, and if you grate it over anything you get no flavor, while if you prick a pin in it no oil exudes."

LARGEST PIPE ORGAN

The largest organ in the world is claimed for the new St. Michael's Church, which was dedicated at Hamburg in the presence of the Emperor of Germany. It is over 57 feet high and is divided into five stories. Its largest pipe is 37 feet long, has a diameter of 21 inches, and weighs nearly 1,200 pounds. The smallest pipe is 1 1-6 inches long. The organ is played on five different keyboards, each containing 61 keys, and it has 12 pedals. There are more than 1,000 stops and buttons for controlling the tones. Two electrical motors, each of five horsepower, supply the air pressure.

Women's Ailments Caused by Neglect

Proper Treatment Will Quickly Bring Back Robust Health and Good Spirits.

Women are on the whole more sickly than men. One reason is that their system is more complicated; another and more important reason is they put off measures of relief too long. At the beginning, constipation is the cause of nine-tenths of woman's ailments. The blood becomes weakened and polluted—the nerves suffer and a run-down condition takes root.

Because of their mildness of action as a system regulator, no medicine for women can compare with Dr. Hamilton's Pills. [illegible] quickly responded to the remedial action of Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and the result is as you would expect—pain in the back and side, shortness of breath, and bad color disappear—the functions of the body then operate naturally, congestion and pain are prevented and perfect health returns.

Thousands of happy women say Dr. Hamilton's Pills are the greatest and best blood-purifier, and finest complexion renewer, the most certain regulating medicine known. Sold by all druggists and storekeepers 25c per box, five for $1.00 postpaid The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

He Cut a Corn.

Mr. Michael Neary, porter of the White House was back to work yesterday for the first time in 10 days, following an illness. Whilst "Mike" is no agriculturist, he was busy, eleven days ago cutting corn. Blood poisoning resulted.

Times is Always Stolen.

Possibly one of the sincerest compliments handed out to a local paper was that sprung on The Times yesterday. The manager of the Snowdon House complained to a Times reporter, "We never see that blooming paper of yours. It comes early every morning, but it is always stolen before we get a chance to see it!"

Will Meagher Loses Locket

When the T.A.S. won the City Hockey Championship some years ago, Will Meagher was presented with a gold locket. On Monday evening P. C. Meagher lost the locket. The finder would confer a favor by returning the locket to the police station.

Got Dose of Poisoned Ivy.

Mr. Alexander Elliott, the George street liquor dealer, is nursing a sore neck and face. The neck and face both belong to him personally. The cause of trouble lies between [illegible] and poisoned ivy. Mr. Elliott and a party of friends were taking a hydroplane trip to Gore's Landing. The engine of their boat gave one despairing sigh and died. The party went ashore, some miles down the river, for lunch. Alas and alack! Poor Aleck sat near a bunch of poisoned ivy.

Given Burglar Scare.

A number of residents in the vicinity of the C.G.E. works were given an uneasy half hour yesterday morning when Mrs. Margaret Moore, returning from a short walk with her dog, entered the house and found a burglar crouching in the front hall. The burglar, who had broken in through a rear window, apparently was as frightened as she. Jumping from behind the table, where he was hiding, he ran into the parlor and jumped through an open window to the street. Before Mrs. Moore's cries had alarmed the neighbors and the police, he escaped.

Johnston Got 3 Months.

At yesterday's police court G. W. Johnston was charged with stealing $11 from Mrs. Thomas Arnott, his landlady. Johnston pleaded guilty. He said he had a lot of trouble with his wife and with his nerves. His nerves have all gone to pieces. $8 of the money was recovered in the sole of his shoe. Chief Thompson said Johnston had denied stealing the money during an hour and a half. He was given three months in Castle Nesbitt. The prisoner was arrested by County Constable Bullied in North Monaghan.

A Sad Case.

Mr. Geo. Cochrane, agent of the Children's Aid Society, was in Havelock yesterday investigating a sad case there. This case of seeming destitution was a girl of 16 years of age. The girl was handed over by the Society some six years ago to a farmer for adoption. The farmer has either died or eloped. Still the girl was there. She was handed over to a brother or sister or grandson of the farmer. This "jacket" means no disrespect to the splendid work done by the Children's Aid Society. It simply is an expose of the conditions the Society encounters. The child will probably be brought here for final disposal. The Children's Aid Society, by this expose, is possibly put in a stronger position than it has held here before.

DEATHS AND FUNERALS

Baby O'Shea.

Joseph Shea, the six-months' old son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Shea, of Sudbury, died on Tuesday evening at the residence of Mrs. Shea's sister, Mrs. Lynch, 386 Cedar street. The funeral will be held to-day to St. Peter's cemetery.

TO RENEW COMPLEXION WITHOUT COSMETICS

(From the Dermatologist).

If the excessive user of cosmetics only knew the impression her artificiality really makes upon others, she would quickly seek means of gaining a natural complexion. Let her acquire the mercolized wax habit, discarding make-ups entirely, and she will soon have the kind of complexion that women envy and men admire. It's so easy to get an ounce of mercolized wax at any drug store, use nightly like cold cream, and wash it off mornings. And the results are so remarkable. Gradually the lifeless cuticle peels off, in almost invisible flaky particles. In a week or so there's a brand new complexion, clear, velvety-soft, or girlish color and texture. The treatment is so simple, harmless and marvelously effective, the wonder is that every woman whose skin is withered, discolored, rough, chapped, freckled or pimpled, has not already adopted it.

Let wrinkled women quit pastes and massage creams which mar the skin still more and try this more sensible treatment: Dissolve 1 oz. powdered saxolite in ½ pint witch hazel; use as a face bath. Every line will quickly disappear.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Messrs. Jas. S. Cook and W. H. Norton, the Belleville, Ont., cheese buyers, were guests at the Snowdon House yesterday.

Mrs. J. A. McMillan, of Collingwood, arrives here to-day to rejoin her husband who is on the Munro House staff.

BRILLIANT COLORS FOR FURS DURING COMING SEASON

Milady's Muffs and Collars To Be Died Orange, Pink, Red and Green

Paris, Sept. 17.—The following colors are en regle for fur during the coming season: Orange, pink, garnet, fire-red, green-bronze and Russian-green. Mole skins have gone up a hundred percent since they are especially adaptable to dyeing. Your correspondent was shown an opera cloak of green mole skin, a white fox forming the collar, his legs spread out and head and tail intact.

Another expensive design is a red mole skin mantle with borders of skunk all around, the collar being no broader than a hand.

Iltis which was never highly esteemed has come into fashion on account of its speckled nature, but the black spots are dyed a deeper black than in the original.

PRICE OF ERMINE UP FIFTY PER CENT.

Stoles are very broad, forming a sort of mantilla in the back. Sable stoles are lined with ermine, so milady may turn her stole in the evening and be in the fashion. The price of ermine has advanced 50 per cent. on account of the great demand.

There will be an ornamental muff besides the real thing. The latter is even larger than last year, but the ornamental muff is a tiny barbaboard, and belongs something of no earthly use to keep the hands warm, but an excellent thing to flirt with and make signals.

THE PETERBORO' CHEESE BOARD HOLDS MEETING

The regular meeting of the Peterborough Cheese Board was held yesterday morning. 1,795 cheese offered, some factories selling at 13 5-16c.

Mr. John Riddell referred to the report that New Zealand cheese was bringing a higher price in England than Canadian cheese.

Mr. W. S. Cook stated that the quotations referred to were January and February options. The New Zealand factories have not yet commenced operations, but factories are contracting for cheese which will be delivered in England in January and February. Canadian cheese on the same counter with New Zealand will bring anywhere from one to four shillings per cwt. higher than the latter country's.

RE SALES OFF BOARD.

Mr. Young, salesman for the Myrtle Factory, spoke on the subject of selling off the board, referring particularly to the sales at the conclusion of the last meeting. Cheese worth $3,000 was sold on the street corner. Mr. Young suggested that the causes leading to such conditions should be investigated. Three factories that had been left out of the selections were Myrtle, Lang and Young's Point. To visit these factories for inspection a buyer leaving Peterborough would have to cover 72 miles.

UNION LIFE INQUIRY HAS BEEN ORDERED AT OTTAWA

Investigation Will Reveal Manner In Which Company's Resources Were Dissipated

(Special to The Times.

Ottawa, Sept. 17.—Hon. W. T. White, Minister of Finance, has ordered G. T. Clarkson, liquidator of the Union Life Assurance Company to make a thorough inquiry into the affairs of the company with a view to finding out how the assets of the company were dissipated.

It will be recalled that the Union Life Company, which had no less than 150,000 policy-holders in Canada, was saved from a complete wreckage by the quick action of the Minister of Finance this spring. He made an arrangement with the Metropolitan Life of New York to allow all policy-holders to re-insure with that company so that not a dollar was lost.

Savings Saved.

His prompt action prevented the loss of the savings of those hundred and fifty thousand people. He was most highly praised for his action at the time by all the Canadian financial journals. The present investigation is being ordered in the interests of the shareholders most of whom are British and in the general interests of the public to prevent a repetition of the unbusinesslike methods by which the Union Life was wrecked.

DURHAM FIRESWEPT LOSS IS ABOUT $40,000

Durham, Ont., Sept. 17.—A serious fire occurred here this morning resulting in a loss estimated at from $30,000 to $40,000. Black's hardware store, containing stock valued at $15,000, is a complete loss. McFarlane and Company lost two buildings as well as a large stock valued at $10,000. The frame town hall caught fire several time, but was saved.

SASKATCHEWAN CROPS WAS NEVER BETTER

Regina, Sept. 17.—Reports received by the Provincial Department of Agriculture from twenty-seven correspondents in all parts of Saskatchewan indicate that with the exception of a small quantity of late barley, oats and flax, noticeably in north [illegible] cutting is completed and threshing is well under way. Seldom have crops come to maturity with less damage or in better condition. Early threshing and inspection returns show that practically the entire wheat crop within contract grades.

WOULD RAISE MARRIAGE AGE FOR WOMEN OF CANADA

Interim Report Submitted to Provincial Synod Embraces Many Matters

"The attention of the Synod is called to the fact that while a young woman under the age of 21 years is unable, by Canadian law, to dispose of property, however trivial in value, she is yet permitted to dispose of herself in marriage at the age of 18 years without the consent of parents or guardians, and we would recommend that this committee be authorized to wait on the Provincial Government and urge that such age be raised from 18 to 21. Also, to request that more care should be taken in the appointment as issuers of marriage licenses and their numbers restricted as far as possible."

The above is a part of the unusually interesting iterim report submitted to the Provincial Synod of Ontario at its session this morning for consideration. The report continues:

"It has been proved conclusively that segregation does not segregate—does not, that is, limit, the area covered. For example, in Winnipeg, where the segregated district has been abolished, Quebec and Halifax have followed the example of Winnipeg, and now such a condition as that to which we refer, is not officially tolerated east of the Rocky Mountains."

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES

MOTHER! IF CHILD'S TONGUE IS COATED

If cross, feverish, constipated, bilious, stomach sour, give "California Syrup of Figs."

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish; stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation, poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gentle move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is oftimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Don't be fooled!

FINDS ELDORADO AFTER LONG SEARCH

Edmonton, Alta., Sept. 17.—After searching thirty-two years for gold, John Gunn, aged 72, arrived at Edmonton Monday morning with the news that at last he had reached Eldorado. To substantiate his statements he brought several gold nuggets, some over an ounce in weight. [illegible] interested three local professional men and all decided to file claims [illegible] Tuesday night, their [illegible] being somewhere north of the end of steel.

DESPERATE STRIKE SITUATION IN IRELAND THREATENS COUNTRY

Eighteen at Point of Death as a Result of a Clash With the Police at Finglas When the Officers Fired into a Crowd of Three Hundred

Dublin, Ireland, Sept. 18.—Anything may happen here or anywhere for miles around. In the early morning a group of Royal Irish Constabulary, in front of a public house at Finglas, three miles out of town, fired into a crowd of three hundred. As a result 18 are in the hospital at the point of death.

The Independent Workers of the World, active in Patterson, New Jersey, and in the railway camps of British Columbia, have reproduced their creed here.

Syndicalism has run rampant in this part. It may mean civil war. Home Rule to-day is a pigmy problem. Finglas is an example of the acute situation. Three hundred strikers took exception to serving drinks at village public house to non-unionists. A large crowd then started a riot, which constabulary in an endeavor to quell fired ball cartridges into the crowd. To-day the village was still seething with excitement. The police, reinforced, marched around the parties four deep, almost inviting conflict. At the slightest sign of weakness there is sure to be another clash. These strikers are farm labourers not artisans.

Dublin Now Facing Famine.

Every farmer who has a crop is seeing it gradually being destroyed. In the isolated districts fields of grain, potatoes and cabages have been damaged, agricultural implements burned and remnants thrown into the ditch. Occasionally here in Dublin, trucks pass with "tainted goods" strongly guarded by the police. At the quays empty steamers swing idly at anchor and perishable goods are piled high on the wharves in the city. With wages stopped, poverty is general and famine is abroad. Half starved wives and almost naked children plead for alms.

Ten thousand strikers cheered Larkin at Liberty Hall last night and to-night are marching through the city wrecking trams and smashing whatever seems to represent toil. If this is syndicalism the workers in Canada can learn a lesson from Larkin, who, like a modern Jack Cade, heads the rebellion, which has left Dublin aghast and is spreading to Liverpool, Manchester and Birmingham. It looks like an eruption which will wear its way through all organized industrialism in Great Britain. The leaders of unionism appear helpless to stem the tide of what is really almost unrestrained anarchy.

American Wheat Arrives In Canada

The following despatch shows that American grown wheat is now moving Canadaward. Liberal newspapers, who favored reciprocity, will have some difficulty in satisfactorily explaining.

North Portal, N.D., Sept. 18.—Peter Lyall, who farms eight miles east of here, shipped over the new G.T.P. boundary-Regina line three cars of wheat, the first to be sent over that line. The grain was loaded at North Gate, at the Canadian end of the line, and it is expected that a big quantity of grain will be sent off from that point.

SCOTLAND YARD HAS NO RECORD OF DR. MURET

He May, However, be Wanted Under Another Name--Has Known Priest For Many Years

New York, Sept. 18.—Documentary evidence showing that the Rev. Hans Schmidt, confessed murderer of Anna Aumuller, and Dr. Ernest Muret, the priest's alleged counterfeiting partner have been acquainted for a longer time than Muret admits, has been found, according to the police.

Dr. Muret has claimed that he never knew Father Schmidt before the latter called on him last winter to have dental work done. To-day the police have at headquarters a promissory note for [illegible], dated April 15, 1911, and bearing what purports to be the signature of Dr. Muret which was found in the priest's room in the rectory of the church of St. Joseph of the Holy Family yesterday.

This note, the police believe, proves beyond any doubt that the priest and the dentist have been friends for a long time, perhaps for many years. Inspector Faurot declares the finding of it served to convince him more than ever that the men have in common much more than friendship and that ultimately they will be proved to be relatives.

Urged Him to "Come Home."

Following the discovery in Dr. Muret's offices yesterday of letters and papers indicating that he had at one time lived in London, Inspector Faurot cabled to the Scotland Yard authorities, asking that they make an investigation. One of the letters bearing a London postmark and signed, "Vera," who describes herself as "Your loving wife," urged him to come home as he had nothing to fear "from the detectives." This leads the police here to the conclusion that the Scotland Yard detectives had been trying to locate Muret at once.

HAPPY OLD AGE.
Most Likely to Follow Proper Eating

As old age advances we require less food to replace waste, and food that will not overtax the digestive organs, while supplying true nourishment.

Such an ideal food is found in Grape-Nuts, made of whole wheat and barley by long baking and action of diastase in the barley which changes the starch into a most digestible sugar.

The phosphates also, placed up under the outer-coat of the wheat, are included in Grape-Nuts, but are lacking in white flour [illegible] the miller. These mineral phosphates are necessary to the well-balanced building of muscle, brain and nerve cells.

"I have used Grape-Nuts," writes a Western man, "for 6 years and feel as good and am stronger than I was ten years ago.

NEW GIBSON TRIAL MAY BE REFUSED

Ottawa, Sept. 18.—The fate of Charles Gibson will likely be settled at a Cabinet meeting to be held this afternoon. While neither the Minister of Justice nor any of the officials will give any hint as to what decision will be reached, it is rumored the best Gibson can hope for is a commutation of his sentence and that a new trial will be refused.

APPEAL FOR REFUGE FOR WOMEN AS MEN FIGHT

Ulster Asks English Unionists To Provide Shelter For Non-Combatants

London, Sept. 18.—The British Express is enabled to publish details of a remarkable appeal which is to be made by the Unionist women's organizations to the women of England who believe in the Union, to offer homes and shelters to the women and children should the Ulstermen be called on to fight.

Mr. Harold Smith, in an interview with an Express representative, explained the whole purpose of the scheme, which is approved by Sir Edward Carson.

"We, how know Ulster," he said, "know that the moment the home rule bill is placed on the statute book without the authority of the people, the men of Ulster will resist the authority of an Irish parliament. They will fight to defend their own, and, while they are fighting to remain with the Union, under the same flag, that flies over the rest of the kingdom, they look across to their kinsmen in England in the hope that they will help them in the hour of trial.

DETERMINED TO FIGHT.

"The government has derided them. Their birthright has been sold to the Redmonites for a mess of votes. The English people are helpless in the hands of the party they voted into power, which has mocked their will by bartering the Union for the support of the Irish nationalist party. All that is left to Ulster is to make this individual appeal to the humanity of the English people.

"Will you look after and shelter their women and children while they are fighting?

"This is surely women's work, and work which our women's unionist associations can and will undertake.

"There can be no distinction between rich and poor, for both rich and poor will be fighting side by side in Ulster if the British government sends troops to coerce the sons and fathers and brothers of the men who fought for the union in the Boer war."

CELEBRATE DEFEAT OF RECIPROCITY

Ottawa, Sept. 18.—The second anniversary of the defeat of reciprocity and the Liberal Party, falls this year on next Sunday. The only celebration of the event will be at Ste. Ann De Beaupre, where the constituents of Sir Rodolphe Forget are preparing to give him a banquet on Saturday night. It is likely that Hon. Robert Rogers will attend the banquet and represent the Cabinet.

FALLS OVER HIGH CLIFF

Cousin of Mr. Dawson Kennedy, of Peterboro', Had Close Call

The Mr. William Dawson referred to in the following, taken from the St. Paul's (Minn.) Dispatch, is a cousin of Mr. Dawson Kennedy, of this city.

News of the rescue yesterday in the Alps by monks and St. Bernard dogs of William Dawson, Jr., of St. Paul, vice consul general of the United States at Frankfort-on-theMain, reached here last evening from Geneva.

RESCUED BY DOGS.

In attempting to cross a mountain pass without a guide, Dawson lost his way and fell into a ravine, where he was discovered by dogs from a monastery, who led their masters to his rescue.

WAS ON VACATION.

Dawson left Frankfort September 7 to spend his vacation in a two weeks' trip through Switzerland. He was accompanied by Theodore Grigsnhon, the son of the family with whom he has been making his home in Frankfort. In a letter received Thursday by his mother, Mrs. William Dawson, 720 Goodrich avenue, he said he did not plan to attempt any mountain climbing because he did not have the proper equipment, and told her not to worry herself about him.

EDUCATED IN ST. PAUL.

Dawson is the son of William Dawson, a prominent real estate man of St. Paul, and the grandson of the late William Lawson, a pioneer banker of the city. He received his early education in the public schools of St. Paul, and was graduated from the University of Minnesota in 1906.

STUDIED IN PARIS.

In the fall of 1906 Dawson went to Paris to prepare for a diplomatic career at the University of Paris. He did not complete his course, there, however, as his first appointment to the consular service came eighteen months later.

SENT TO FRANKFORT.

He was first stationed in St. Petersburg. From there he was transferred to the consulship of Barcelona, where he remained for two years. In 1910 he was sent to Frankfort-on-the-Main, to occupy the position of vice consul general, which he now holds.

Members of the family in St. Paul today were anxiously awaiting further news from the young man.

OIL SYNDICATE CONTROLED HERE

Ottawa, Sept. 18.—The Columbian Syndicate, Ltd., which is announced has secured valuable petroleum concessions in Columbia, was incorporated in July 10, 1913. The capitalization is $150,000 and the headquarters of the company will be at Toronto. The provisional directors were R. W. Hart, barrister, Toronto; Pearl Stokes, Janet Sprocklin, Elizabeth Davis, stenographers, and Christy McNaughton, accountant. The officers of the company are not known at Ottawa.

DANISH KING SAVES DROWNING WOMAN OF THE MOVIES

Copenhagen, Sept. 18. — King Christian recently took part in a cinematograph drama.

He was cruising with the Queen and their two sons in his yacht, Rita, off Aarhuus, Jutland, when the party were startled by the sound of shots and shrieks for help. The king immediately gave orders to sail in the direction of the sounds.

They found several boats manned with crews of the most desperate-looking type engaged in a regular battle with rifles and revolvers.

The King was making arrangements for speedy intervention when he saw through the binoculars another boat, a little away from the others, with a man at the stern calmly turning the handle of a cinema-camera. The sight of that unruffled figure made the King smile, and he ordered the yacht to be taken out of action."

RESCUES DROWNING ACTRESS.

Then fate took a hand in the game Mme. Stub, of Copenhagen the actress taking the part of the heroine, jumped overboard to escape from the villian, but half way to the shore she became exhausted and would have drowned if the King had not noticed a genuine ring in her cries of distress. A boat from the royal yacht was manned, and came to the rescue of the drowning actress.

The silent man at the camera stuck to his post and thus gained the distinction for his firm of having a King among his actors.

CHANCELLOR IS NOW BACK FROM THE CONTINENT

The Sudden Return of Loyd George Causes Widespread Speculation

London, Sept. 18.—The sudden return of Lloyd George from the continent where it was announced a few days ago he intended to spend a fortnight has not unnaturally given rise to a great deal of speculation. A number of the morning papers stated positively that the Home Rule situation was the sole cause of his unexpected return. The Chancellor, however has lost no time explaining that these inferences are all wrong.

He has returned a few days earlier than originally intended, he explains, in order to deal with various treasury matters. The Financial Secretary being away on his holidays the Chancellor has no public engagements of any importance before his speech at Bedford next month, when he opens his land campaign.

DAILY STANDARD MAKES FIERCE ATTACK ON EDUCATION MINISTER

Says Dr. Pyne Has Crawled and Crawled to Bilingualists --Paper Demands His Resignation

Kingston, Sept. 18.—A scathing criticism of the Minister of Education and the new bi-lingual regulations is contained in a two column editorial in The Daily Standard (Independent Conservative). Under the heading "Time for Plain Speech," the paper demands the use of English for instruction in the schools of Ontario and says that if Dr. Pyne cannot be prevailed upon to bring about the necessary reforms in this direction he should be removed.

Of the Minister's attitude on the question, The Standard says: "Dr. Pyne has crawled and crawled abjectly to the bi-lingualists. He seems to lack both administrative and executive ability. This is bad enough, but that he should lack backbone—this is absolutely inexcusable in a Cabinet Minister. Beyond the fact that Dr. Pyne, or the Department of Education has given the Province cheaper text books, we have no actual progress that the Department of Education has made under his guidance. His has been a negative rather than a positive rule—a colorless administration if you will."

Should Crawl Out.

"When, then, added to this, is his crawl on this bi-lingual issue it seems to us that the time has come when his next further crawl should be out of the Whitney Cabinet. And if he is not willing to crawl, then his going should be expedited."

MILKMAN SAW POSTMAN DEAD ON THE LAWN

Richard Bloomer Was Apparently Stricken While Entering His Home

Toronto, Sept. 18.—While making his rounds at 3 o'clock this morning George Potts, 132 Borden street, a driver for the City Dairy Company, discovered the body of Richard Bloomer lying on the lawn in front of his home at 10 Orchard Park avenue. Potts summoned assistance and had the man carried into the house, but death had taken place some time previously.

Mr. Bloomer, who was a postman, had been suffering from heart trouble for some time, and it is supposed that while mounting the steps of his house last night he was suddenly stricken.

There is a cut on the side of his head but this was likely the result of the fall, and was not the cause of death.

the police of East Toronto station notified the Chief Coroner, but an inquest will not be held.

Mr. Bloomer was 47 years of age, and leaves a widow and family. He had been in the employ of the General Postoffice for many years, and was highly respected.

THE SENATE'S ACTION HAS NOW PENALIZED BRITISH TAXPAYER

British Liberal Organ Praises Borden's Attitude on the Navy Question

The senates action has penal— —

London, Seot. 18.—In a leading article dealing with Premier Borden's Halifax speech, the Daily News and Leader, the most influental of London Liberal newspapers, to-hay says: 'Mr. Bordens claim to the sole exponent of Canada's nationhood won't bear examination. If it is an anomaly for Canada to have no voice in in the Foreign policy of the Empire it would surely be equally anomalous if her wishes were liable to be overruled by representativis of the other Dominions who might hold divergent views.

Where Borden Excels.

But where Premier Borden has in the opinion of this paper, outstripped his predecessors is in his argument that an increased burden has been imposed on the British tax-payers as a result of the Senate's action. 'We have again and again pointed out that the result of this policy was to increase the burden of armaments on the British tax-payers.' It has thrust upon the people of these islands the heavy task of manning and maintaining three unnecessary Dreadnoughts, and has threatened to launch us once more on a wild career of unlimited naval rivalry."

YOU CAN GO AS FAR AS YOU LIKE WITH THIS GOWN

It's Built to Suit Any Occasion and Has Everything From a Slit to a High Collar

Chicago, Sept. 18.—The "Chicago gown" is the eighth wonder of the world. Leading modistes, who saw a pretty model don it to-day and demonstrate its many virtues at the annual convention of the Chicago Dressmakers' Club, pronounced it just that. The "Chicago" is built to suit any taste and for any occasion. With a single gown, the wearer may prove herself an example of propriety or shock a city—she can go as far as she chooses.

The model who took the spotlight first wore what appeared to be a three-piece street suit. She made an exit and re-appeared minus the coat, wearing a gown of crepe that covered her fully from chin to foot.

Entrance No. 3 brought a slight gasp. The model wore the same gown, but it was extremely decollete. She bent over and fumbled with a hook an eye and it became a slit skirt. More fumbling and the slit extended to the knee. "All these changes can be made in the single gown in the time it takes to powder your nose," announced Mrs. Alla Ripley, the designer.

DEARER THAN GOLD

Many Metals Are Far More Costly—Some Are Peculiar

Gold is generally looked on as the last word in costliness; but, as a matter of fact, there are more metals dearer than gold than there are cheaper. The number of known metals is about seventy.

Iridium, for instance, of which a big find was made recently in Austria, is three times as expensive as gold. Gold is worth nearly $20 an ounce. Iridium is worth some $62, though the price will probably come down now.

Osmium is another metal much dearer than gold. It costs about $50 an ounce. It is by far the heaviest of all known substances, being more than twenty-two times as heavy as water. This metal has the peculiar property of being able to stand without melting the most intense heat known.

Palladium—about $40 an ounce—is just the reverse. It is quite easy to make palladium vanish in steam. Being of a white, silvery color, and untarnishable, it is used for the division marks on scales and delicate scientific instruments.

LOCKING UP THE TOWER

Quaint Ceremony Carried on Nightly in Old London

Very few people are aware of an ancient custom which is still kept up at the Tower of London. Just before midnight a beef-eater and the chief yeoman porter escort the keys from the governor's house to "lock up." Having received the keys, they proceed to the guard-room.

"Escort for the keys!" calls out the porter, and a sergeant then marches off, and the sentries they pass issue the usual challenge of "Who goes there?" to which the [illegible] "Keys."

Arriving at the [illegible] to the Tower grounds, the Lions' Gate, the porter locks the gates, and the party returns to the guard-room, the sentry challenging as before and receiving the same answer. However, on arrival at the guard-room again, the sentry stationed there stamps his foot, at the same time giving the usual challenge.

"Keys," replies the porter.

"Whose keys," the sentry asks.

"King George's keys."

"Advance King George's keys, and all's well."

The porter then says, "God bless King George," and all present respond with "Amen." The keys are then saluted, and returned to the governor's house, where they remain until the next night's ceremony.

Vanity Case in Fan

The liberal use of the vanity boxes on all occasions has been rather [illegible] to those conservative minded individuals who still cling to the belief that the toilet should be completed before leaving the house. It is permissible and seemingly a perfectly natural performance to brush the handkerchief across the face. One would never guess that by this innocent pastime the dust of powder was taking the shine from the face. The idea, ingenious as it is, can be easily managed. The glass powder holder is firmly imbedded in a lamb's wool powder puff with a button in the center of one side. This button is attached by a buttonhole to a tiny square of linen which may be sewed to any handkerchief. The contrivance is in miniature, so that it is scarcely noticeable.

Another novelty of this kind is the fan of imitation ivory. The fan itself is a pretty little affair, and would not attract the attention for a moment if it were not for the tiny vanity box attached by white silk ribbon to the lower [illegible]

HELD FAMILY PEWS FOR OVER A CENTURY

Interesting Fact About St. James Cathedral, the Fourth Edifice on the Same Site

A hundred years is a long space of time in the life of a modern city. Nevertheless, there are plenty of families in Toronto which have continuously held pews in St. James' Cathedral for more than a century. The magnificent pile to-day, is not, of course, the original building, nor was the latter called a cathedral. The first Anglican church, built between the years 1803 and 1807, was constructed of wood, and was, in fact, little more than a "meeting house." But it stood on almost the same site as the present St. James' Cathedral, though, unlike that edifice, which faces north and south, it faced east and west—a location more conformable with Anglican traditions as to the building of churches. This primitive church was opened for public worship in the year 1807, and in March of that year the pews were sold by public auction, subject to the ground rents of four dollars a year for a double, and two dollars a year for a single, pew. The sum received in pew rents for the first year appears to have amounted to about a hundred and forty-five dollars. Among the earliest pew-holders—some of whom, of course, survive—are many names held in high honor and esteem in Toronto. Some of these good old families are extinct. The members of some of them worship at other churches. But, in spite of all vicissitudes—the first church, after reconstruction, was replaced by a stone building (the first cathedral), which was destroyed by fire, as was also in its turn, its successor the second cathedral)—there are still to-day plenty of Torontonians worshipping in the present fourth church and third cathedral, called St. James, whose ancestors were among the original pew-holders in the original wooden church, and in whose families the pews have remained ever since.

CARE OF WORK HORSES

Some General Rules That Apply Either to City or Country

1. Start at a walk, and let your horse work very easily for the first half hour.

2. A heavy draft horse should never be driven faster than a walk, with or without a load.

3. Look to your harness. Avoid these faults especially: Bridle too long or too short; blinders pressing on the eye or flapping; throat-latch too tight; collar too tight or too loose; tugs too long; breeching too low down or too loose; inside reins too long, in the case of pairs.

4. Drive your horse all the time. Feel his mouth gently. Never jerk the reins.

5. Take the horse out of the shafts as much as possible; and if you drive a pair or four, unfasten the outside traces while the horses are standing; they will rest better that way.

6. Teach your horses to go into the collar gradually. When a load is to be started, speak to the horses and take a firm hold of the reins so that they will arch their necks, keep their legs under them, and step on their toes. A loose rein means sprawling and slipping, often with one horse ahead of the other.

7. Water your horse as often as possible. Water in moderate quantities will not hurt him so long as he keeps moving.

8. Blanket your horse carefully when he stands, especially if he is at all hot. Repeated slight chills stiffen and age a horse before his time.

9. Bring your horse in cool and breathing easily. If he comes in hot, he will sweat in the stable, and the sudden stopping of hard work is bad for his feet.

10. In hot weather or in drawing heavy loads, watch your horse's breathing. If he breathes hard, or short and quick, it is time to stop.

11. Remember that the horse is the most nervous of all animals, and that little things annoy and irritate him. Remember that he will be contented or miserable accordingly as you treat him.

"A Progressive Peterborough."

OUR POINT OF VIEW

We may rest assured that the corn crop produced by the cultivation of tight shoes will show no signs of decrease this year.

Now Mrs. Pankhurst is coming to visit us. Better wait till we get rid of Thaw. The dual excitement might prove too much for the unsophisticated Canadian temperament.

From all accounts almost every prominent lawyer in the city of New York has his suitcase packed, expecting a hurry call from Harry Thaw.

We are informed that the young Prince of Wales likes to dress in Scotch kilts and play the bagpipes. Well, there ought to be no objections so long as he keeps his knees clean.

A SIGN OF PROSPERITY

"We did not see a drunken man or woman, an overworked, starved-looking child, a street full of holes or any unused land."

So writes one of the delegation of inginears who recently made an inspection tour of industrial Germany. He saw other things which are like a glimpse into fairyland. For instance:

"There are no street corner loafers. The German railways do not attempt to prohibit but promote water and electric competition. The managers of German railroads are efficient engineers — now lawyers prized for their skill in evading and nullifying laws to protect the public interests."

No doubt there were things with which the comparison wouldn't go so badly against us; things which, on a hurried trip, a well-steered delegation doesn't always see.

But if Germany can do the foregoing as described, it means just so much new hope and incentive to Canadians who, let us presume, will not long be content with an inferior rating.

THE TRIUMPH OF THE CENTURIES

Within the next three weeks small vessels will be able to pass through the Panama Canal. It has been reported that dry excavation has been completed, that the last spoil has been removed from the Culebra cut, and that the dredge will soon take the place of the steam shovel in smoothing out the channel for the passage of ships.

Naturally the army engineers are jubilant and they contemplate the completion of their task with pride. The greatest engineering work of the ages stands revealed to the world, and the world applauds. But who made this success possible? The engineers have accomplished their task in splendid fashion, but we must not forget the part taken by the sanitary science in building this great waterway. The doctors led the way and made it possible for the diggers to do their part.

De Lesseps tried to build a canal without doctors and failed, but the United States profited by the lesson of the French operations. When that country acquired the canal zone that section of the isthmus was one of the most unhealthy in the world. To make it safe for the canal workers it was necessary to combat the deadly yellow fever, the chagres fever and other tropical diseases that make living there by white men practically impossible. So that for the first year or two the work was that of sanitation. The diseases and their causes were stamped out, and the isthmus became healthful and safe.

Strengthens the Throat Assists Public Speakers

Catarrhozone is the Greatest Invention of the Age for Weak Throat, Hoarseness, &c.

Strongly Endorsed by the Clergy.

Because of its strengthening influence upon the vocal cords, Catarrhozone cannot be too highly recommended as a wonderful voice improver. It almost instantly removes huskiness or hoarseness, thus insuring clearness and brilliancy of tone. The most eminent speakers and prima donnas are seldom without Catarrhozone, and credit in no small degree their uniform strength and brilliancy of tone to its influence.

"For many years I have been a sufferer from that terrible disease known as CATARRH.

"Being a professional singer, you can readily understand that Catarrh would be a serious hindrance to my professional skill.

"One year ago I read in the "Progress" a convincing testimonial from one who had been cured of this disease through using your God-sent invention, Catarrhozone.

"Believing in the merit of Catarrhozone, I tried it.

"Catarrhozone cured me, and has been the means of my success.

"You are at liberty to use my name if it will help relieve some from suffering, and I will always remain,

"Bob Bixley, New Glasgow, N.S."

Mr. Bixley is one of the best known singers and entertainers in the Maritime Provinces. Everyone knows him and his testimonial for Catarrhozone is the best sort of evidence of what great benefit Catarrhozone is to those suffering from throat weakness or catarrh.

Pheasant as the Sheep's Friend

A pheasant accompanied a flock of sheep the greater part of the way on their last melancholy mission to Reading Market from Kidmore. The bird had covered five miles when its presence was noticed at Caversham. Shunning the curiosity of the public, the pheasant flew away. The sheep were driven for another mile to the market, and no sooner had they arrived than down flew the pheasant among his four-footed friends.

Company Director at Eighteen

Sentences of nine months and three months respectively were passed at Berks Assizes on Claude Bishop and Reginald George Willats, aged eighteen, directors of the Reading Phoenix Building and Supply Company, on charges of forging bills of exchange. The boys formed themselves into a company, of which they were directors, and appointed Oscar F. H. Phillpotts, aged eighteen, as secretary and director.

Record Chancery Case

A chancery case, the most expensive and the longest on record, was brought to a close, as far as speeches and evidence were concerned, before Justice Parker in London recently. The action which was brought by Messrs. John Aird & Co. against the Tanjong Pagar dock board concerned a $5,000,000 contract for construction of a wet dock at Singapore. The evidence heard on both sides covered 1,832 pages, representing 36,071 questions and answers, and took 20 days to hear. The speeches delivered covered about 800 pages and were delivered during a period of 13 days. Five K.C.'s and a host of juniors were briefed. The leader on one side received a fee of 2,500 guineas and a "refresher" of $500 a day. The leader on the other side received $25,000 with the same refresher. The bill ran into five figures, and the cost of the trial alone worked out at $35 a minute.

THE BUILDING BY-LAW.

Editor Morning Times.

Dear Sir,—I notice by the papers the night before last that Mr. James G. Graham, builder, asked and obtained permission from the Council to erect a new house on Dublin street, with a nine inch wall instead of a fourteen inch wall as required by the fire by-law.

I would like to know why Mr. Graham is allowed to break the by-laws and why the Council can grant to one what they refuse to others. When Mr. Graham was in the Council, J. J. Turner, Jr., was building his residence on Water St., and he was building the lower storey with fourteen inch walls and the upper storey with nine inch walls, and Mr. Graham, the man that now wants to build a complete house with nine inch walls and in a more congested part, was the man that objected, and consequently, J. J. Turner, Jr., my son, had to build fourteen inch walls all through, and adding extra cost of some two hundred and fifty dollars, and now this same Mr. Graham comes before the Council and asks permission to do something that he refused to others, and I am astonished to think that our Mayor and Council should grant permission to Mr. Graham, and especially in such a congested neighborhood, and it is to be hoped the Council will stop the building of this house. The idea of allowing one man to break the by-law and prosecuting another man for doing practically the same thing, as I notice by the papers the Council are after Mr. I. Eastwood.

"British Fair Play to All" should be the motto, and not try to prosecute Mr. Eastwood and then give Mr. Graham permission to do something contrary to the By-law.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor for your valuable space, I remain, Yours truly,

J. J. Turner, Sr.

AS A SYMBOL OF AUTHORITY

Wedding Ring Really Has a Significance Apart From That to Which Sentiment Is Attached.

For ages the wedding ring has been a token of binding authority. The gold symbolizes the purity of affection; the circle the endless love; the price paid for it takes the place of the ancient purchase money. If the ring is lost it is a warning that the husband's love will soon pass away; if broken, that he will die soon.

Tradition has been responsible for many stories concerning the wedding ring; one of these is that the first ring was made by Tubal Cain for Prometheus. This ring was of iron and adamant, the iron signifying hardness and the adamant perfect goodness. The early Romans commonly used a plain iron ring, while the [illegible] English, even in the [illegible] century, used the ring [illegible] the church keys.

It has not always been customary to wear the ring on the third finger of the left hand, but there is a reason for this modern convention. Besides being less used and therefore less exposed to danger, and being the weaker finger and therefore symbolizing the wife's dependence, the third finger of the left hand has been supposed from the days of the Egyptians to be connected directly with the heart by a vein called the "vena amoris." It was indeed the finger of life, and consequently it is most fitting that the wedding ring should adorn it.

FORTUNE FOR PRINCESS

The Late King Leopold's Three Daughters to Share Huge Sum.

Brussels despatches say there is reason to believe that, in compliance with the wish intimated by the President of the Court of Appeal in favor of an understanding being arrived at between the Belgian government and the daughters of the late King Leopold on the question of the succession to the Royal estate, the government has agreed to allow the three princesses to divide $7,500,000 between them.

In his will King Leopold disposed of a large part of his fortune, estimated at $30,000,000, by making it over to a concern known as the "Foundation of Niederfullbach," and this aroused a storm of protest.

Princess Louise began an action against the Belgian State for the recovery of this money, on behalf of her sisters and herself. She lost her case in the lower courts, and appealed a year ago, with the above result.

The late King bequeathed to his daughters only $3,000,000, which he had inherited from his father, Leopold I.

A PRINCESS' UMBRELA

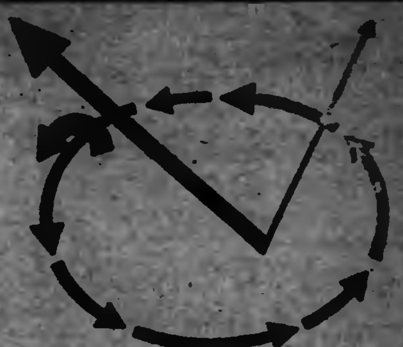
Princess Mary is never seen without an umbrella. The habit is perhaps inherited. The Duke of Cambridge always carried one, and so did Queen Victoria, who used to boast that she was never caught unprovided in a shower.

The Princess has a passion for umbrellas and sunshades, and has a remarkable collection of these, with interesting handles, given to her by members of her family. In the handle of an umbrella which the Prince of Wales brought his sister from Paris is a tiny jewelled watch, which the Prince picked up in a curiosity shop in the Rue de Rivoli, where the dealer insisted that the trinket belonged to Marie Antoinette.

STEALING FINE ORE

Highgraders Adopt Ingenious Schemes to Get the Metal

Some very interesting methods are resorted to by both men and women "high graders" to bring stolen silver in a crude state out of the Northern Ontario mining district, according to a report of the Provincial police. Several used specially constructed dust bags which fitted in a natural manner about the body, and when loaded merely added to the corpulence of the individual. One woman, trusting to the female attire for protection, concealed 50 pounds in her skirts, but was intercepted before making good her escape. Another formed a metal belt of the silver ore suspended on strings, but shared the same fate.



"Did they ask if you had a mouth?"

"Oh, my yes! They passed around Wrigley's SPEARMINT

It's the hospitality confection. It doesn't get stale as other things do. It's low priced and lasting. It's dust-proof and clean.

TOM'S GREAT VICTORY

Not a Question of Mere Dollars and Cents in This Love Affair.

By WINSTON CLIFFORD.

"Father will never consent to our marriage," Majorie lamented tearfully.

"Why not?" Tom asked, kissing the pretty, pouting lips.

"Because he'll say that you can't support me," she cried. "And I'll never be happy with anyone else."

"Of course you won't, for I don't intend to give you a chance to try it," Tom laughed, and caught her again in his arms. "Come, I want to kiss you again to celebrate," he said quietly, taking toll of her lips again.

"Celebrate what?" Marjorie asked, smiling, but not seeming to object to the process in the least.

"The anniversary of our engagement," Tom remarked. "It is now 10 o'clock. At exactly 9 o'clock you promised to marry me, so our engagement is an hour old," was Tom's explanation.

"We'll never get father's consent."

"Marry me without it," Tom suggested.

Majorie shook her head. "No, I love father too well," she said slowly. "We'll have to think of something else."

"What?" Tom asked. "I'm no Napoleon of finance who with a single dollar can meet and defeat your honored sire, as the stories would call him, on Wall street. In the first place, he doesn't move along that thoroughfare himself, and in the second, I know about as much about frenzied finance as you."

"Father takes such good care of himself that I fear there's no chance of your saving his life," Majorie put in sadly.

"To say nothing of it being a somewhat difficult task for a light-weight like me to pull off the rescue stunt with prospective father-in-law's 260 pounds," Tom grinned.

"Don't make fun," Majorie pleaded, for it was a serious matter.

"All right, dearest, I'll try and see what he says right now," and before Majorie could remonstrate he went into the house, for the two had been out on the veranda, and guided by the light under which Mr. Graham was reading his evening paper, soon put the case before him.

"Marjorie Can't Marry Any Man Who Has Nothing More Than You."

"So you want to marry my daughter?" was the quick question.

"I do, sir," Tom replied. "She's dear, and sweet enough to make everyone want to do that."

Mr. Graham shook his head. "No, Tom," he said decidedly. "Majorie can't marry any man who has nothing more than you, with my consent. Of course she can go ahead if she wants to without it, but I don't think she will," and no amount of pleading would change him. He and his wife had married on a very small salary, and he always felt that her early death was caused by the hardships she went through before he was earning enough to take care of her properly.

Majorie fretted, but to no purpose. Occasionally she saw Tom, but always felt she was wronging her father in doing so. Tom worked and saved, but seemed to make no progress in his suit.

Mr. Graham was unhappy, too. He liked Tom, but felt that his daughter was worthy of someone who had already made his mark in the world, and so would not give his consent.

"I'd gladly share a crust with you, dear," she told Tom on one of the occasions when they met.

"I guess I could buy two of them," he said raggedly. It was hard to be called a pauper, when he was earning a fair salary, was not dissipated, and [illegible] working day and night to attain his cherished object.

"I didn't mean that, dear," she sobbed, clinging to him.

"I know, sweetheart," he said slowly. "I guess it's just another phase of this high cost of living," and once more he set himself to solve the problem of how to overcome the opposition of his father-in-law to be.

Matters were in this very unsatisfactory state when Mr. Graham was invited to be one of the speakers at a banquet given a visiting dignitary. He was surprised to find Tom at the same table with himself; in fact, to find him there at all, but he did not know that Tom was a friend of the son of the man who had originated the banquet, which would have explained his presence.

The affair passed off agreeably, the guest [illegible] the visitors [illegible] the lobby of the hotel. Mr. Graham [illegible] Tom [illegible] had gone deeply into the reasons, it would have been that he was trying to find full justification for his attitude toward the young man.

As he came up, one of the number, the son of Tom's employer, was saying tauntingly:

"Afraid to drink, are you?"

Mr. Graham remembered that he had noticed that Tom's wine glasses had been turned down during the banquet.

"No," Tom said quietly, and Mr. Graham realized that Tom was not contributing to the noisy conversation of the group.

"Then what makes you a spoil sport?" continued the young man, who had evidently been drinking too much.

"Me? Oh, I don't drink because I don't care for it, that's all. The next-day headache seems too high a price to pay for a somewhat questionable pleasure the night before," and he laughed easily, then added:

"Come on, Bob; let's go home."

"You're afraid to drink. I dare you to take a drink, just one to show you know how," and the tone was so taunting that Mr. Graham fully expected to see Tom turn with his friend into the cafe; but that young man only laughed again, and throwing his arm about the shoulder of his tempter, said quietly:

"You're coming with me," and managed to get him away from the convivial crowd.

Mr. Graham jammed his hat down on his head and went home. For a full hour he studied over the matter, with the result that the next evening he sent for Tom. When that astonished but delighted young man arrived, he told him briefly:

"Take my girl. I'm satisfied. A man who can control himself can always control others. I need you in my business."

"I need him too, father," Majorie whispered delightedly.

With his arm about Majorie, Tom shook Mr. Graham by the hand. "I guess we all need each other," he said happily.

STUDENTS WORK SIDE BY SIDE WITH NAVVIES

In the Evening They Teach and Write Letters for the Frontier Toilers —All University Men

Interesting, indeed, are the experiences of the students sent out by the Reading Camp Association from various Universities in Canada who spent the summer working shoulder to shoulder with the frontier labourer in the van of civilization—the railway construction camp, rugged mining region of the distant timber limit, devoting their evenings to educational work among those denied the advantages for which they blaze the way. Many and varied, humorous and tragic are the stories told by these men, who for a season substitute overalls for college gowns. Some are employed as axe men, others as graders, brakemen on "gravel pit limiteds," nurses in the camp hospitals, clerks, "cookees," blacksmiths, timekeepers, teamsters or "skinners," lumberjacks, and in other capacities.

The Association's work is to send an instructor into a camp, provide him with a car or tent, fitted as a combined reading room and night school, and keep him supplied with reading matter, books, (which are furnished in travelling libraries by the Provincial Governments) and current newspapers and magazines for the use of the men without charge. The instructor works with the gang in the day time, in any capacity upon which the camp boss may decide. He wins the confidence and respect of the labourers, following the exhortation of Froebel, "Come, let us live with our students." The evenings are devoted to work in the reading room, teaching classes of foreigners or illiterate and ignorant English-speaking workmen, informal lecturing, letter-writing for the men, and assisting in many other practical ways. Years ago a ministerial student, Alfred Fitzpatrick, a Nova Scotian by birth, graduated from Queen's University. Instead of settling permanently in the pastorate he devoted some time to a personal study of actual conditions in the lumbering and railroad construction camps of the frontier. The young student secured some financial backing and commenced to give his idea practical form. At first operations were necessarily conducted on a small scale. Many difficulties were encountered. Foremen were apathetic or openly hostile. But the lusty youth who had conceived the plan was not discouraged. In 1900, three instructors were employed and stationed in lumber camps during the day as actual [illegible], teaching in the evenings, and [illegible] and when the [illegible] would [illegible] work. In the spring of 1901, the Reading Camp Association was born.

Since that time the work of the Reading Camp Association has greatly expanded, until it now carries on its operations in six provinces, between Quebec and British Columbia inclusive. The men stationed in Ontario on construction lines, clear between $300.00 and $350.00 each for their summer's work, while those in the West [illegible] $350.00 to $500.00. In some cases the manual labor was [illegible] with [illegible] and many hardships were endured.

EXTRACTING A SLIVER

None of the small accidents to which everyone is liable, is more annoying than to have a splinter of wood stuck into the hand. However, it is very painful if not promptly removed. If the wood of the splinter is soft, its removal is not easy, if attempting with a needle or other sharp instrument. Means may, however, be employed without inconvenience or pain, and is very effective. A wide-mouthed bottle, such as a salt bottle, should be filled nearly full of water as hot as the person will stand, and the injured part pressed over the mouth of the bottle, pressing down slightly and preventing any water from escaping. This will cause the flesh to be drawn down, and in a minute or so the steam will extract the splinter, at the same time relieving the [illegible].

CARE OF FEATHERS

Use Only a Blunt Silver Knife to Curl Them

Feathers are not difficult to keep in condition; all that is required is patience; though this is the one quality that most women who adore feathers do not possess.

In the first place, if you are possessed of an expensively garnished feather hat, do not start out on a damp evening without a large chiffon veil. The veil may save you a substantial bill at a cleaning and renovating establishment. If the kitchen stove is alight when you return home sprinkle salt over it and shake the feathers over the heat. This will often restore them to condition with no further effort, but if they have become really lank and limp, they must be recurled. Take plenty of time and a thin, rather blunt silver knife—a small butter knife is a good instrument. Never under any circumstances attack a feather with a steel knife or the edge of a scissor blade. Each flume must be lifted separately and drawn slowly between the edge of the knife and the thumb. It should not take more than an hour to curl a long feather after one becomed expert, and short tips may be done in much less time. Do not, however, attempt to hurry the process by curling more than two flumes at a time. The result will be a stringy looking feather with ends all a different length and some of them straight and spiky. White feathers may be cleaned by dipping in a lather of white soap, rinsing well and then shaking well over a hot stove till dry. Afterwards proceed to curl the feather as above described.

WHY YOUNGSTERS HIDE

Hide and Seek Is Always a Popular Game

Not only in the home of the duke, but in the home of the dustman and in the home of every intermediate place you will fail to find a more popular game with the children than hide-and-seek.

Two of the first words baby lips learn to lisp are "peep bo." Then when the kiddies can toddle one of the earliest games they play is hide-and-seek. And don't they just love it! The little brain in its excitement is working at its highest pressure. And the shouts of wild glee when the quarry is found! To hear them makes your own heart beat faster—particularly if the playmates are your own little ones.

Scientists and doctors explain the popularity of hide-and-seek by the theory that hiding and seeking are two of the inborn characteristics of every human being. We got the habit from our savage ancestors. Then, the predatory habits of the people led women and children to hide from strangers in fear of their lives.

Hide-and-seek is minute war. Scouting for boys has developed it on scientific lines. So the next time you see your kiddies playing hide-and-seek reflect that it is the outward and visible sign of an instinct which has lived for countless centuries in human beings.

Scorch Stains

Scorch stains can be removed if they are immediately rubbed with dry starch and then sponged off. Repeat the process until the stain disappears.

SOUTH POLAR EXPEDITIONS

Expeditions to the South Polar regions may thus be tabulated:—

Captain Scott	1902	82°	16 min.
Sir E. Shackleton	1909	88°	23 min.
Captain Cook	1773	66°	5 min.
Captain Cook	1774	71°	15 min.
James Weddell	1823	74°	15 min.
Sir James Ross	1842	78°	11 min.
C. E. Borchgrevink	1900	78°	50 min.
Capt. Amundsen	1911	The Pole
Captain Scott	1912	The Pole

The Pole is 90°, and each degree of sixty minutes is nearly seventy miles. It will be seen, therefore, that, while Captain Cook attained a distance of within about 1,130 miles of the Pole, and Weddell in 1824 reduced the distance to less than a thousand miles, Captain Scott in 1902 succeeded in getting 300 miles further south than any of his predecessors.

A TINY REPUBLIC

No Woman Has Set Foot in It For Five Centuries

The newest of all European countries is far and away the tiniest. Its name is Mount Athos, and it came into existence when the Ambassadors of the Powers decided that, however else the Balkan question was settled, Mount Athos was to be an independent holy republic.

It is a mountain twice as high as Ben Nevis, near Salonika, and is certainly unique among the countries of Europe in the fact that no woman has set foot in it for five centuries. When, some years ago, the Queen of Roumania announced her intention of visiting it, the rulers of the holy mountain threatened to commit suicide if she persisted. The new republic, which has a little sea-coast of its own, holds another record. It is the only State in Europe whose national income is obtained solely by selling crucifixes, rosaries, amulets, and similar holy objects. As Mount Athos contains twenty-one monasteries, the export is quite a large one. The least-known of the other pocket countries of Europe is San Marino, in the heart of Italy. It also is a mountain, surrounded on three sides by perpendicular cliffs. It possesses nearly a hundred castles with an army of about one man to each castle. The last time San Marino was at war was when one General and twenty-three men solemnly marched out to assist Napoleon, who received them with full military honors. A little principality in Austria, Liechtenstein, has nominally been at war with Prussia ever since 1866. At any rate, peace has never been made.

STORY OF STRANGE DRUG

Lady's Sudden Death After an Eccentric Life

Evidence was given at a Manchester inquest regarding the eccentric life of a woman of independent means named Helen Bruce, aged thirty-seven. A brother-in-law stated that none of her family had lately known where she was living. She had been in Australia for about twenty years, and came back recently. Members of the family tried to communicate with her by sending registered letters to the last address they knew of, but without success. They presumed that she had returned to Australia. About ten years ago, when she was in Japan, she suffered from a very severe attack of sunstroke, and about eight years later in Australia she was very ill from blood-poisoning, and her left thumb had to be amputated. She had travelled almost continuously for the last twenty years. Mrs. Dinevin, at whose house Bruce had lodged, said that during four months she had only been three times out of the house. She had complained of about her health, and a doctor was called in. She always seemed to be in a stupor, but witness had no definite knowledge of her taking drugs. When she complained of her troubles she went in hysterics. Witness did not think she was quite "right in her head." Dr. Magian said that when he was called to see her her [illegible] twelve months before when she [illegible] in another house in Moss Side. She was then in a drowsy state and her condition was very puzzling. He could not decide whether she was suffering from disease or from taking drugs. He considered all the poisons he knew, but could not think of one that would produce all the symptoms she had. On one occasion he noticed on a piece of paper the name of a poison, an Indian arrow poison, curari, which might produce a number of the symptoms. She found out that he had seen the paper and she did not call again. Dr. Leech, who made the post-mortem examination, said he found nothing to make him suspect that death was due to anything but natural causes. The appearances were quite consistent with heart failure. A verdict of "Death from natural causes" was returned.

Curler at Ninety

Captain David Dalgliesh died at his residence, Braemesfield, Rutherglen. He was one of the most popular bowlers and curlers in the West of Scotland, and although entering upon his ninety-second year, up to within eighteen months of his demise had engaged in important matches both on the ice and the bowling green.

A COAL MINER'S LUCK

He Won the $230,000 Prize in Hungarian State Lottery.

Albert Billingham, a miner, of Old Hill, Staffordshire, says he will go down the mine no more. He has no occasion to, for he was lucky enough to win $230,000 in a Hungarian State lottery.

Billingham left Old Hill about three years ago to take up the position of assistant foreman in the Namdang Mine, Margherita, Upper Assam, and while there he was persuaded to enter a Government lottery under the auspices of the Banka Bank, Buda-Pest. At the time he hardly understood the regulations, and, though he took the ticket, he thought no more about the lottery.

Three days before Mr. Billingham left India for home he received a letter from the promoters of the lottery giving a list of the prize-winners, from which he found that his number, 106,861, was the winner of prize money and a bonus which is roughly estimated at $230,000. While on his way home, Billingham communicated with the Banka Bank, requesting that the money should be forwarded to him at Old Hill.

Before leaving for India Billingham was employed as a miner at No. 30 Colliery, Cradley Heath. He is very reluctant to answer questions as to what he intends to do with the money, but on one point he is very emphatic: that he will not again risk his life in a coal mine.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at the office of any Local Agent of Dominion Lands (not sub-agency), on certain conditions.

Duties.—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required in every case, except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside of his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Six months residence in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and 50 acres extra cultivation. The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land after report by Homestead Inspector on application for patent.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price, $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

Proposed Government Buildings, Ottawa, Ont.

ARCHITECTS are invited to submit sketch designs in a preliminary competition for the erection of Departmental and Courts Buildings.

From the designs submitted in this preliminary competition, six will be chosen by the Assessors, the authors of which will be invited to submit more matured designs in a final competition, for which the five unsuccessful competitors shall each receive an honorarium of Three Thousand Dollars (3,000.00).

The author of the design placed first by the Assessors will be entrusted with the work which the Government intends carrying out at once.

The competition is limited to British Subjects practising in the British Empire.

The Government has appointed Mr. T. E. Collcutt, Mr. J. H. G. Russell and Mr. J. O. Marchand, as Assessors to act in its behalf.

The designs in the first competition must be delivered in Ottawa (carriage paid) not later than 12 o'clock noon, 2nd January, 1914, addressed to the undersigned.

Conditions for both competitions may be had on application to the undersigned, and at the office of the High Commissioner for Canada, 17 Victoria Street, London, England.

Peril of Neglected Teeth

Septic pneumonia, caused by abscess in the sockets of his teeth, was described at a Westminster inquest as the cause of death of Arthur John Cheesman, a butcher. The coroner commented on the danger of neglecting teeth, and said disease of the tooth sockets had been found to account for many hitherto mysterious blood complaints.

Poachers Fire at Magistrate

Mr. John Shiel, justice of the peace, was fired at by poachers, whom he found shooting at Caralough, on the borders of the counties of Roscommon and Galway, Ireland. Mr. Shiel discovered four men with guns and bags. He called on them to stop, but they ran off, and he gave chase. Four shots were fired, some of the shot piercing the magistrate's clothes.

THE KAISER'S HABITS

When the Kaiser is away on his yacht he gets up at six, takes a cold bath, drinks a cup of coffee, and works till nine, when there is a general breakfast. Lunch is at one, and dinner, the chief meal of the day, at night. The evening is passed with cards or conversation, and at 11.30 everyone retires. If there is a light in one of the cabins, it is in that of the Kaiser, who sometimes spends the midnight hour at his writing-table.

The Dangerous Ages

There are certain ages wherein death is very imminent, and of all these ages the most perilous is the age of an hour or two. It is just after birth that we are in most danger of death; and the next most perilous age to this is 71 years.

The age of three is the next most dangerous age. Almost one-fourth of all the babies born die during the third year.

From three on to the age of 45 is comparatively safe; but 45, especially for women is a trying time, and many are carried off.

After passing 45 in safety men and women may reasonably hope to reach 71. Here again they are in great danger—the greatest save for the first few hours after birth.

Longevity is an hereditary quality. It passes from father to son and from mother to daughter. He who had an octogenarian father may hope to become an octogenarian himself, and she who had an octogenarian mother may hope to become an octogenarian herself. But a father's longevity does not pass down to a daughter, nor does a mother's pass down to a son.

WONDERFUL CHARM OF THE FAR NORTH

Hudson Bay Factor Glad to Get Home After a Year Spent in Civilization's Hurly-burly

To spend thirteen years in the far north of Canada, completely isolated from civilization and its wonders, then to be granted a year's furlough and visit the world's largest city, seeing the automobile, the aeroplane, the submarine, wireless telegraph and other creations of science, undreamed of or in their infancy when last he mingled with civilization—such was the unique experience of Christopher Harding, of Fort McPherson, Hudson Bay Co. factor of the Great Slave Lake and Mackenzie River district. Mr. Harding was given a year's holiday as a guest of the big company in recognition of his valuable services.

Fort McPherson is near the mouth of the great Mackenzie river, within the Arctic circle. A journey of more than a thousand miles by canoe and portage, up the Mackenzie river, Great Slave Lake, Slave River, and Athabasca River brought him and his wife, a former Winnipeg girl, to Athabasca Landing, whence they proceeded overland to Edmonton, Alberta. Edmonton was the first city they had seen in thirteen years.

Mr. and Mrs. Harding were accompanied by Fred Gaudet, an employe of the company who had not been "outside" in 28 years. Gaudet travelled only as far as Quebec, his boyhood home.

The March of Science

At Edmonton the experiences of the party began in earnest. Gaudet saw his first [illegible] and the Hardings their first automobile. Neither knows which was the more awe-stricken, but perhaps it was Gaudet, who stared wide-eyed at the iron horse. "Well that beats a dog train, doesn't it?" he gasped. The Hardings chartered an automobile and spent a whole day in it. Electric bells, elevators and telephones Gaudet gave a wide berth.

At Winnipeg the two men visited the Hudson Bay offices and drew their savings of years, or what portion they wanted. Money is a curious commodity in the far northern fur country; indeed it is rarely seen there, the Indians being paid in supplies for the furs they turn in. Some Hudson Bay officials have small fortunes awaiting them when they get out where money is useful.

The Hardings then took the train for the east and sailed for England, where they crowded into less than four months the delights of a civilization from which they had been cut off for more than a dozen years. Mr. Harding is of middle age and save for his bronzed face bears more the appearance of a comfortable, contented man of business than one accustomed to Arctic rigors. He was, strangely enough, born in India and reared in England, at the village of Wimbledon, near London. He is well educated and kept in touch with the world's doing through the medium of newspapers six months to a year old when delivered at his post by the northern mail couriers.

Glad to Get Back

"Is it lonesome 'way up there? Well, perhaps you would think so, but the north is home to me now and I am glad to be getting back to it. I have had enough of civilization to satisfy me for many more years. Speaking of loneliness, in all my life I never felt so lonely as when I stood for an hour on London Bridge and watched perhaps hundreds of thousands of people hurrying past. Never in the depths of the wilderness did I feel so much alone as when in that vast throng I realized that there was not a soul who knew or cared about me. That was real loneliness.

"London's millions, its traffic, the 'tubes,' the suffragettes and the aeroplane are wonderful sights to a man from the solitudes of the far country but the call of the north was always strong within me and I shall not pine for them."

Temperatures in the far country run to extremes known perhaps nowhere else in the world. Summer is very brief, but 100 degrees of heat in some districts not quite as far north as Fort McPherson is not unknown. Fifty below is quite common during the long winter; 68 below is the lowest Mr. Harding ever saw it recorded.

Mr. Harding and his wife, a few missionaries, an aged missionary and some mounted police are the only white people in the district. But the Indian trappers are a peaceful people and return the kindness of their pale-face brothers.

SAVED THIRTY-SIX LIVES

Tay Bridge Hero Won Admiration of Mr. Carnegie

The man of whom Andrew Carnegie said "You are the bravest man I have ever met," died at Sunderland, England. Mr. Harry Watt was a fearless diver, and one of the most unassuming of heroes.

Born at Sunderland in 1836, "Harry" took a leading part in diving operations throughout the kingdom for over half a century. He was summoned to Tay Bridge after the great disaster, and his services were frequently requisitioned abroad.

Altogether he saved thirty-six persons from drowning. On eight occasions he was presented with medals—three by the Board of Trade for exceptional gallantry in saving life.

His fellow-townsmen gave "Harry" a gold watch and other gifts at various times. Some three years ago, when Mr. Andrew Carnegie was spending a few days in Sunderland, he specially sent for "Harry," and confessed himself honored at meeting with the hardy old veteran.

Learning that the diver and his wife were in none too prosperous circumstances, Mr. Carnegie, the same day, directed the trustees of the Carnegie Hero Fund to allow Mr. Watt $50 per month for life, and to continue the allowance to his widow until her death.

The late General Booth and Watt were great friends, and "Harry" never tired of talking about the "great general."

Kaiser's Night Sign

The Kaiser has adopted a novel style of displaying the Royal Standard on his motor cars. A flag, on which is emblazoned the words, "God with us," is painted on transparent glass, which is electrically illuminated at night when he is in the car so that it will be recognized from a long way off.

Noiseless Shooting Gallery

Because residents living near by objected to the noise, the proprietor of a Hamilton, Ont., shooting gallery promised the City Council that he would equip his rifles with silencers, making an innovation in the form of a noiseless shooting gallery.

COBB A WONDER

No Man in Baseball is His Equal, According to Veteran Pitcher

"Ty Cobb is the greatest of them all. In my baseball experience, covering almost a quarter of a century, I have never seen an all-around player the equal of the Detroit star." These are the words of Cy Young, once probably the best pitcher in the game, now a farmer—and rich.

"There may be other players almost if not quite as fast as Cobb; Lajoie has an edge on the "Georgia Peach" for straightaway hitting; other outfielders may throw a trifle better, but for work, day in and day out, Cobb hasn't an equal. At bat he hasn't a weakness. It has been my experience that you can fool him, possibly, one day, on a certain kind of ball and the next time you face him he will knock the cover off the ball. On the bases he is wonderful. He uses both his head and his feet and I sometimes wonder if the former isn't more responsible for his records than the latter. Cobb can size up a baseball situation like a flash and the way he divines plays is uncanny. On the paths he doesn't know the meaning of the word fear and this lack of timidity helps him. In the field, too, he is a wonder. He uses splendid judgment in playing for batters and his marvelous speed enables him to gobble batters on balls that others would play safe.

Able to hit, to field, to throw, to run bases and to do each in phenomenal fashion, coupled with his nerve and confidence. Cobb is the greatest player that ever wore a spiked shoe."

Found a Simple Remedy That Has Kept Him Well Ever Since

The experience of Mr. Larose is one very common to-day:

"I suffered from dyspepsia and indigestion for five years. I suffered so much that I could hardly attend to my work. I was weak and lost all courage. I enjoyed no rest until I decided to follow your treatment. To my great surprise I [illegible] began to feel better. I am now completely cured, by use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and I feel so well that I want to tell you that I owe this great change to your famous pills. I recommend Dr. Hamilton's Pills to every person who is suffering from dyspepsia. Your grateful servant, D. R. Larose, 238 Joliette Street, Montreal, P.Q."

All who have weak stomachs, and those who suffer with indigestion, headaches, biliousness, can be perfectly cured by Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c per box, at druggists and storekeepers, or the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont., and Buffalo, N.Y.

New Kawartha Park Wharf.

Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., received word yesterday morning that the wharf at Kawartha Park [illegible] by him would be constructed. This wharf will be Government property at the end of a right of way to the Burleigh Road and it will be a great convenience to the public generally frequenting Stoney Lake. The work will cost $1,00[illegible] and the stones of the old wharf will be used.

Journalistic Enterprise

The Times must congratulate a George street contemporary on its enterprise. The E.E.C. yesterday contains a long account of a discovery made by Mr. A. McDonald, regarding paper he proposes to make of Florida grass. It is interesting to see such journalistic push. Of course, the Times had a full description of this new process eleven months ago, but still our E.E.C. is keeping up with the Times, or possibly 11 months behind us.

Mr. Carlisle's Horse.

Mr. John Carlisle, the local contractor, yesterday was threatened with a runaway. His horse took the bit in its mouth, when just east of the Market Square. The horse ran but was soon stopped. The harness was somewhat broken. However Mr. Carlisle got out his trusty jackknife and got busy on repairs. After an hour or two, Mr. Carlisle got the steed harnessed so that it was confined to the shafts. Then the rig moved on.

A Four Sided Fight.

Yesterday morning, at 11 o'clock, the gang of city laborers working near the Customs House had their attention distracted by an unusual style of dog fight. Four dogs, ranging in size from terrier to collie indulged in a free-for-all scrap. The dogs were of all colors known to the canine world. They sailed into one another impartially. It was a canine Donnybrook Fair. After they had held their argument for some minutes, the workmen broke up the scrap by hurling stones at the dogs.

"CASCARETS" CLEANSE LIVER AND BOWELS

Cure Sick Headache, Constipation, Biliousness, Sour Stomach, Bad Breath—Candy Cathartic.

Get a 10-cent box now.

Are you keeping your liver, stomach and bowels clean, pure and fresh with Cascarets—or merely forcing a passageway every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil? This is important.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry out the system the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels.

No odds how sick, headachy, bilious and constipated you feel, a Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from your druggist will keep your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a gentle cleansing, too.

THE SQUIRREL ESCAPED.

As Mr. R. Tivey, Peterborough's crack gunshot, was ascending the Otonabee River yesterday, near Rice Lake, a squirrel was swimming from one shore to the other. A gasoline launch followed after Mr. Tivey's canoe. Those in the launch cried out "shoot the squirrel." However, Mr. Tivey grabbed the little rodent by the tail and took it into his boat. The squirrel had evidently business across the river. It jumped into the stream again. Mr. Tivey thrust his paddle into the water ahead of the little swimming rodent. The squirrel ran up the handle of the paddle, up Mr. Tivey's arm and across his head. Its claws scratched Mr. Tivey's forehead. After making this bridge out of a man, the squirrel jumped once more into the water and swam for shore.

GIRLS! THICKEN AND BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR

Bring back its gloss, lustre, charm and get rid of dandruff—Try the moist cloth.

To be possessed of a head of heavy, beautiful hair; soft, lustrous, fluffy, wavy and free from dandruff is merely a matter of using a little Danderine.

It is easy and inexpensive to have nice, soft hair and lots of it. Just get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine now—all drug stores recommend it—apply a little as directed and within ten minutes there will be an appearance of abundance, freshness, fluffiness and an incomparable gloss and lustre, and try as you will you cannot find a trace of dandruff or falling hair; but your real surprise will be after about two weeks' use, when you will see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—sprouting out all over your scalp—Danderine is, we believe, the only sure hair grower; destroyer of dandruff and cure for itchy scalp and it never fails to stop falling hair at once.

If you want to prove how pretty and soft your hair really is, moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair—taking one small strand at a time. Your hair will be soft, glossy and beautiful in just a few moments—a delightful surprise awaits everyone who tries it.

MATRIMONIAL

McConkey—Moffatt

A pretty wedding took place on Wednesday evening last, at Knox Church, Winnipeg, at 7 o'clock, when Mary Rose, daughter of Mr. Alexander Moffat, of that city, was married to Mr. Allan Fitzgerald McConkey, of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, Nokomis, and son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. McConkey, of Lakefield, Ont. The Rev. Dr. DuVal officiated. The church was beautifully decorated, the guest pews being marked with bows and pink sweet peas. Miss Leslie presided at the organ.

The bride was given away by her father and wore a wedding gown of ivory duchesse satin, one side of the bodice and skirt draped with ninon caught with orange blossoms and white heather and edged with pearls; the other side was draped with rose point lace; a square train falling from the waist and a girdle of pearls finished the costume. Her veil of Brussels net bordered with pearls was worn over the face and held by a wreath of orange blossoms, heather and myrtle and she carried a bouquet of white roses and sweet peas. Her gift from the groom was a gold wrist watch.

Her bridesmaids were her sister, Miss Alice Moffat, and her cousin, Miss Isabel Fergie, of Pembroke, Ont. Miss Moffat's gown was of deep rose pink satin charmeuse, the draped skirt caught in front with an embroidered rose, the bodice finished with a coat effect of lace with a collar and Bayadere sash embroidered satin. She carried pink sweet peas. Miss Fergie's gown was carried out in the same design in delicate mauve and she carried mauve sweet peas. They both wore black velvet hats with Tango bows of black satin. Their gifts from the groom were silver card cases. The best man was Mr. T. R. Smith and the ushers Mr. W. W. Mitchell, Mr. F. W. Hudson and W. J. Moffat.

A reception was held at the bride's home, Glencoe apartments, Winnipeg, the house being decorated with pink and white asters and palms. The table was decked with pink and white sweet peas and broad satin ribbon, the wedding cake standing on a side table.

Mr. and Mrs. McConkey left on the 9.35 train for Montreal and other eastern cities, the bride travelling in a navy blue serge suit, over a waist of white satin with vest and collar of Maltese lace. Her hat of navy blue plush had a feather mount. On their return they will reside in Nokomis.

Miss Moffat, aunt of the bride, wore sapphire blue satin shot with old rose with a tunic and bodice drapery of hand embroidered net, the corsage finished with white ninon and [illegible] embroidery. Her hat of black plush was trimmed with white plumes.

Mrs. J. G. Fergie (Pembroke) wore [illegible] blue satin draped with black net embroidered in cut steel and black hat, with a Persian band edged with [illegible].

Mrs. William Moffat (Toronto) wore [illegible] satin draped with black net and a hat of black [illegible] with Numidie mount.

MAKES UGLY HAIRS VANISH FROM SKIN

(The Modern Beauty).

Effectively hair or fuzz is quickly banished by the use of a thick paste, made by mixing some water with a little powdered delatone. This is applied to the hairs not wanted and after 2 or 3 minutes removed and the skin washed, when it will be found to be smooth, firm and hairless. Rarely is more than one application necessary even for stubborn growth.

NAVY QUESTION NOT TO BE AN ISSUE AT NEXT SESSION

Redistribution Bill Will Likely be Storm Centre--Revise Trust Act

Ottawa, Sept. 19.—Premier Borden is expected from the Maritime Provinces Sunday. There will be a number of important Cabinet meetings held shortly, when the date of the opening of Parliament will be fixed, and the legislative programme will be discussed. It is almost certain now that the House will not assemble until January.

It is not likely that the Naval Bill will be re-introduced this coming session. The feeling is that it is hopeless to re-introduce the bill in the face of a hostile Liberal majority in the Senate. The Government will prepare its permanent policy, so that it will be ready to submit to the people at next election.

Important Bills.

The storm centre of the coming session is likely to be the Redistribution Bill. Another important measure which promises to result in a long discussion in the Banking and Commerce Committee is the proposed measure to revise the Loan and Trust Act. It is felt that the loan and trust companies should be subject to closer [illegible]. Another important measure is the consolidation of the Railway Act. A bill to revise the [illegible] Act, which has been fathered by Major Sam Sharpe is also likely to be re-introduced next session. Altogether this coming session promises to be an exceedingly important one especially to the banking and commercial interests.

British Train For Canada

London, Sept. 19.—An "Exhibition on Wheels" is the latest project for bringing the British Manufacturers before the people of Canada.

The idea is to buy a train, stock it with British products and send it on an almost continuous run, extending over four years from Atlantic to Pacific.

The Canadian Chamber of Commerce in London, which has taken the initiative in the matter, is now in negotiation with eighteen of the principal chambers throughout the United Kingdom.

SHOP LICENSE FOR $27,500.

Toronto, Sept. 19.—Martin Wade, licensee of the liquor store at King and Tecumseh streets, has sold his license and good will of the business to Frank Madigan for $27,500. Negotiations had been carried on by Smith Brothers for the purchase of the license, but the deal collapsed.

GOVERNMENT NOW STRIKES AT THE WHITE SLAVE TRAFFIC

Amendments to Criminal Code Passed Last Session Have Gone Into Operation

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Sept. 19.—The work of Hon. C. J. Doherty, Minister of Justice, in his framing of the amendments to the criminal code for the protection of women and for the suppression of white slavery is receiving the widespread approval of all moral reformers throughout the Dominion. The new amendments have just gone into force and the new sections dealing with the suppression of the white slave traffic are being commended. Such a well known moral reform worker as Rev. Dr. J. G. Shearer, secretary of the Dominion Social Moral Reform Council says that the amendments are the best that appear on the statute books of any country.

BEST FROM BOTH.

They were most stringent than the British law of 1912 or the United States Federal laws. "When the proposed amendments were drawn," said Dr. Shearer, "we had the Imperial law and the Mann Slave Act before us, and I am glad to say that the Government has incorporated in the revision the strongest features of [illegible].

IMPORTANT PROVISIONS.

A most sweeping change refers to men found in disorderly houses. Such men will be considered frequenters unless they can justify their presence there. Deserting husbands will be liable to criminal prosecution instead of civil action, and volunteer or amateur detective operations will be stopped. Another section will permit the punishment of men who have lived by white slave traffic and who have gone free when the women have been imprisoned.

SENATE BLOCKED THREE.

There might have been other amendments passed had it not been for the action of the Senate. An amendment making employers criminally liable for offences against their women employees was rejected by the Senate.

At present the law makes employers liable for offences against girls under 21 years "in any shop, work-shop, store, mill or factory." That amendment was rejected by the Senate. "We cannot understand the Senate's action," remarked Mr. Shearer, "and the Social Service Council is about ready to join the Government in a movement for the abolition of the Senate."

STOP WIFE DESERTION.

Wives will be better guarded from desertion by their husbands under the new amendments. It is now only necessary to prove that a wife and children are in necessitous circumstances to secure a conviction against the husband.

It is comforting to those deserving that a young nation should be built up on strong foundations, to see so many measures of moral reform pass into the statute books. It is a sign of a healthy minded government and people.

APPEALING FOR GERMAN VOTE

Liberals Putting Up the Naval Issue In Order to Carry Bye-Election.

Editor Morning Times.

Dear Sir:—Permit me to call attention to something that the people of this country will undoubtedly take note of. There is, as you know, a political contest on now in South Bruce. The candidates are very prominent men, and it is considered to be an excellent opportunity of trying out the chief issue at the next election, namely, the Navy question. The constituency has been both Liberal and Conservative by small majorities, but the point I wish to call your attention to is contained in a report made to The Toronto Star (Liberal) by one of its own staff reporters dated Sept. 16th. The extract from the report which I wish to bring to the attention of all your readers is as follows: "Mr. H. Weichel, member for Waterloo, Mr. George Clare, of Waterloo, and Mr. C. Rittinger, editor of the German Glocke of Berlin, visited South Bruce for a few days last week canvassing among the Germans. The township of Carrick is almost all German, while Brant township is also strongly German. Carrick and Brant have in late elections inclined towards Conservative majorities although the German vote divides on political lines as a rule. It is surmised that the visit of the three influential German citizens from below was for the purpose of setting the Conservative party right with their compatriots on the navy issue, for the navy is the issue of this election, and it is to the naval issue that both candidates are addressing themselves."

It is quite plain from the latter part of this extract that an attempt is being made to sympathize with the Germans as against the British, and that if Conservatives are to hold their share of the German vote they will have to bestir themselves. There is no evidence that the Liberal policy requires any such work on the part of its supporters. It appeals to the Germans. In fact the Liberal policy is a pro-German policy. It is an [illegible] and must [illegible] ed Liberals everywhere. This statement is from a Liberal newspaper that in order to save the German vote from going to the Liberals the advocates of British connection will have all that they can do.

Yours truly,
Reader.

THIS SKIN PEELER ALL THE RAGE IN SOCIETY

(From Society World.)

There is a growing tendency among women of culture and fashion to pay more attention to hygienic means of preserving their charms. The advent of mercolized wax doubtless has been largely responsible for this. This remarkable substance produces complexions so natural in appearance, so exquisitely beautiful, artificial complexions are no longer desired. Instead of "doctoring" an offensive skin, the skin is peeled off. The wax peels the skin so gradually in such fine particles, no discomfort is experienced. The fresher, younger skin beneath, wholly in evidence within a week or two, is lily white, satiny, soft and smooth. It's not a patch-all-over complexion, but a brand new one. That's why mercolized wax has become such a rage among society folk. The wax is put on nights like cold cream and washed off mornings. All druggists have it; one ounce will do.

Another hygienic treatment now much in favor is one to remove wrinkles, made by dissolving 1 oz. powdered saxolite in ½ pint witch hazel. Used as a wash lotion it "acts like magic."

BILINGUAL ISSUE CROSS OF THORNS

Strong Language From Kingston Standard, Which is Cordially Endorsed

Kingston, Sept. 19.—Under the heading "Time for Plain Speech," The Daily Standard (Ind. Con.) in a two-column editorial leader, comes out strongly against the bilingual policy of the Whitney government. It declares that Dr. Pyne, the minister of education, should be removed from office for his "spineless" administration, and warns Sir James Whitney that it will not be well for him "to let this colorless minister of education be the means of raising an issue in this province, the end of which no man can foresee, save this, that it will be a cross of thorns upon which eventually the Conservative party in Ontario will be crucified."

After pointing out that the reasonable people of Ontario were quite willing that in the first forms the use of French should be allowed in the bilingual schools, the editorial continues:

"We are absolutely at a loss to understand what the minister of education was thinking of bringing about this change, in contravention of the public report and the findings of the commission appointed by the government to investigate the matter. Probably the explanation is that the minister of education did not think at all, which, unfortunately seems to be one of his failings. An agreeable man, personally, not even his best friends will presume to say that he has made a success of the department of education. He seems to lack both administrative and executive ability. This is bad enough, but that he should lack backbone—this is absolutely inexcusable in a cabinet minister. Beyond the fact that Dr. Pyne, or the department of education, has given the province cheaper text books we know no actual progress that the department of education has made under his guidance. He has been a negative rather than a positive rule—a colorless administration, if you will. When there, added to this, is his crawl on this bilingual issue, it seems to us that the time has come when his most faithful crowd should be out of the Whitney cabinet. And if he is not willing to crawl, then his going should be expedited."

The Standard cites the course of the United States where the bilingual problem does not exist. Despite the presence there of many French, Germans and Italians, declares that in that country the foreign element must and do learn English in the schools, and gives it as its opinion that what the States can do the people of Ontario also can do.

Proceeding, it declares that if the people of Ontario are to be "manacled" so far as their language is concerned, it will prevent development of a truly national spirit, and deploring the apparent present tendency to truckle to a minority in Ontario as so often has been done in the Dominion. The Standard significantly concludes: "Ever since Sir James Whitney has been in power the Liberals in Ontario have been without a fighting policy. They have been hunting the highways and the byways for one, but up to date they have been unable to locate it. The workmen's compensation idea as a policy for them has petered out; tax reform is a farce, because Sir James Whitney himself is realizing that tax reform in some form or other must come; while the abolish-the-bar policy is a joke. But here in bilingualism is a policy for the Liberals that will be a real fighting policy if the government does not speedily get rid of the colorless minister of education and make English the sole language of instruction in the schools of this province."

BLACK HAND MESSAGE FOR LIBERAL M.P.

Sir John Henry Bethell Threatened With Death--Scotland Yard on Case

New York, Sept. 19.—A London cable says: A Black Hand message, signed "Painter" has been received by Sir John Henry Bethell, Bart., M.P., for the Romford division of Essex and a prominent director of the London and Southwestern Bank at his home, Park House, Wanstead road, Wanstead, demanding that a sum of £100 be placed under the steps of Wanstead old church at 6 a.m. on the morning of September 20th. The letter is written in a good firm hand, threatens death if the command is not obeyed and dire disaster if the communication is sent to Scotland Yard.

Sir John, nevertheless, turned the letter over to Scotland Yard, and detectives will be on hand to watch developments when a dummy package is placed in the hope of catching the blackmailer.

Sir John says he is not inclined to regard the letter seriously, but asks for police aid as the letter is signed "Painter," because lately he had some serious differences with the Painters' Union, about five thousand of whom are still on strike, the other half having returned to work.

PRINCE ARTHUR'S BRIDE TO BE GIVEN AWAY BY KING

Prince of Wales Will Attend, But Not as Best Man—Will Be No Street Processions

London, Sept. 19.—Arrangements for the marriage of Prince Arthur of Connaught and the Duchess of Fife on October 15 are now nearing completion. It has been decided that King George will give away the bride. The suggestion that the Prince of Wales would act as best man is incorrect. His Royal Highness intends to be present, but there never is a best man at a royal wedding.

Princess Mary, it is definitely stated, will be one of the bridesmaids. Various European courts will not be invited to send representatives, but all the members of the Royal Family in England are expected to attend. Foreign royalties or their representatives will be confined to the more immediate family connections.

No arrangements have so far been made for the wedding breakfast in the State Rooms at St. James' Palace, but there will be a large gathering of the Royal Family and of invited guests on some day prior to the ceremonial observed at the marriage.

The King and Queen will form a precedent to be followed on the festive occasion, but in a modified form. One of the chief modifications so far decided upon is that there will be no street procession. The city corporation decided to present Prince Arthur with an address of congratulation in a suitable gold case on the occasion of his marriage to the Duchess of Fife.

BELIEVE PRIEST PLANNED A HOST OF VICIOUS MURDERS

Detectives Delving Into Past of Hans Schmidt Find A Curious Chain

New York, Sept. 19.—Detectives delving further into the past of Hans Schmidt, the priest who murdered Anna Aumuller, sought to-day to fathom what was in his mind last April when he photographed the death certificate of Robert Smith, one of his parishioners.

Photographs of this certificate and of blank forms issued by the board of health were found in Schmidt's trunk. The find led the police to believe that the priest either was making preparations then to dispose of the Aumuller girl or planning other murders. They expected to question him about this certificate to-day, but feared his answers would give them few leads, as the priest has evinced a tendency lately to answer all questions with the declaration that he was directed in his acts "by God and Abraham."

Forged Burial Certificates.

To the belief that Schmidt planned other murders the police are more inclined than to the opinion that he was laying plans last April to be rid of the Aumuller girl. They say that a skilled forger like the prisoner would have been able to have the bodies of victims buried in any cemetery by filling out counterfeit burial certificates and forging the signatures. They believed that Schmidt caused the blanks to be photographed in order to obtain exact copies so that he might have duplicates struck off in blank. Inspector Faurot announced to-day that he was looking for another woman in the case. He gave no details of what her connection with the matter might be.

Dentist is Related.

"Dr." Ernest Muret is to be questioned to-day. The belief of the detectives that Muret and Schmidt are related, became stronger to-day following the receipt of a word from Aschaffenburg that persons acquainted with the family insisted that Muret was probably Adolph Muller, a cousin of Schmidt. It has been ascertained that Muret was wanted in London for illegal practice of medicine.

Parishioners of St. Joseph's and St. Boniface's churches showed such concern to-day as to the validity of the offices performed by Father Schmidt while connected with the two churches that many hurried to Father Huntmann and Father Braun with inquiries. All were told, it is said, that it had been established that Schmidt was a regular ordained priest and any functions he had performed were valid.

BRITAIN HOPES YET TO ESCAPE THE NATIONAL RAILWAY STRIKE

London, Sept. 19.—Although the National Union of the Railwaymen's Executive Committee has decided against a national strike, trouble is by no means over. Birmingham and Liverpool local strike leaders resent the decision, and denounce what they term a weak and procrastinating policy. Late last night the Birmingham men repudiated their executive's decision, repeating their demand for a national strike.

In this they have the support of large numbers of Provincial railway men, who are burning for a fight. The executive knows, however, that the popular feeling throughout England is solidly against railway disturbances, and a national strike commenced now would be inevitably defeated.

GIBSON'S FATE NOT DECIDED BY DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

Ottawa, Sept. 19.—The fate of Charles Gibson, who was reprieved until Oct. 9, is still undecided. It was not disposed of by the Cabinet at the meeting yesterday, and it is understood that the Justice Department is waiting for some further information, which it wants.

Chronology of Case.

Date of the murder—Good Friday night, April 5, 1912.

Charles Gibson arrested Thursday, April 11.

Appeared in Police Court Friday, April 12. Remanded one week.

Committed for trial in the Criminal Assizes, April 19.

Length of trial—From Monday morning till 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon. Verdict "Guilty."

Stated case on the admission of Dunkelmann's evidence granted and argued in February, 1913. Decision refusing appeal given last week in April.

Sentence of death passed by Sir William Mulock at May Assizes, the execution to take place June [illegible].

Appeal for new trial made early in July and a reprieve granted until October 9.

ALLURING ISLES

Queen Charlotte Islands Have Oil and Coal Possibilities

Neglected, yet alluring, is the Queen Charlotte group of islands, about eighty miles from the mainland of British Columbia. With a mild climate, a rainfall of less than 40 inches, and a fertile soil, Graham Island, the and the reservation of lands by the group, could become an agriculturist's paradise. Fortunately, or unfortunately, the island has large coal measures, and the reservation of lands by the coal-staking companies has greatly retarded settlement. On its west coast several companies are now engaged in boring for oil, a large district having been declared by the Dominion Geological Survey, and by numerous oil experts from California, to be oil lands. One bore, after reaching 1,200 feet depth, and bringing up oil with the core, had to be abandoned, as, in the haste to find out if they had great riches, the engineers had allowed the bore to get out of plumb, and the work had to be begun over again, if the 1,700-foot level—at which oil is prophesied—is to be reached. The north shore of Graham Island has a great, sandy beach twenty miles or more long, two miles broad and as level as a billiard table. Some day the mining millionaires of the north may use it as a race-track for their automobiles.

CHAIR A LIFE PRESERVER

It Also Can be Used for a Washstand or Mattress

An Englishman has shown the fertility of his imagination by inventing a steamer chair that is also a life preserver, a wash stand and a mattress. The framework of the chair is like that of other steamer chairs without the foot rest, but the seat of it is a roll of cork-filled canvas buoyant enough to give an aid [illegible] a comfortable reclining seat. By turning the chair upside down, the inventor claims, it can be transformed into a very handy washstand, while

THE HUMAN HAND A MAGNETIC POLE

Instrument Perfected Which Detects the Vital Magnetic Fluid

A French scientist, M. Fayol, asserts that he has made an important discovery in establishing the polarity of the human body.

The theory that man has positive and negative magnetic poles was advanced long ago, but no instrument had been invented capable of measuring the electric force satisfactorily.

M. Fayol perfected an instrument with which, he says, delicate observations of the vital magnetic fluid emitted by the human body can be made. He asserts that the positive pole centres in the right hand and the negative in the left, while with left-handed persons the reverse is the case.

The scientist's instrument consists of an adjustable oak board, whereon a delicate metal cylinder swings in a perpendicular position between ball bearings, in order to minimize the friction. The operator places his left hand on the board, the palm facing the cylinder and the thumb uppermost. In a moment the cylinder begins to revolve, slowly at first, and then faster, in the same direction as the hands of a watch.

If the right hand is placed behind the cylinder it will revolve in the opposite direction.

Let another person put his right hand on the shoulder of the first, and the cylinder will move even more rapidly.

Mr. Fayol states that he is able by this means to measure the vital magnetic force of subjects who put their hands before the instrument. No reaction is observable on the instrument in the case of infants, but between the ages of 25 and 45 years the magnetic force as recorded increases annually. After the latter age, it diminishes till it almost vanishes in the case of the very old.

This magnetism may pass from person to person, and the vital emanation of one may be received by another and stored up by him. The theory of sympathy is explained by the assumption that such persons have similar magnetic personalities.

THE SPIT BALL DOES NOT SPIN

Goes Straight on Pushes Air Cushion Ahead of It Causing Freakish Motion

What do you know about the spit ball?

You may have seen it pitched a thousand times and know how effective it is when the pitcher has control. You have seen catchers stop the elusive ball with their shins and knee cap and have watched batters strike at it in vain. But can you say why the spit ball acts as it does?

The following is part of what Will Irwin says on the subject:

Ed Walsh, greatest spit-baller, doesn't know why the ball acts so queerly. He practices and experiments and repeats the motions, which produce the effect. Princeton university scientists say it is a new phenomenon to them. The spit ball pitcher wets a small spot on the ball with saliva, carefully fitting two fingers over the wet spot. He throws the ball with all speed, straight toward the plate.

Christy Mathewson, Russell Ford, "Doc" White and other brainy pitchers have a theory, which Irwin believes, after months of investigation, deserves consideration, though it is not accepted by the scientists he consulted.

It is that the ball, because of the wet surface, does not spin.

A spinning ball bores into the air, edging the molecules aside. The spit ball, traveling "dead," accumulates an air-cushion ahead. When it "feels" this pressure it seeks the line of least resistance, jumping into free air, causing that curious break. The momentary pause lets gravitation draw the ball earthward.

The exact direction of the downward break is determined by the position of the seam at the instant of the break, the ball shooting from the greatest smooth surface it presents to the air cushion. So much for the spit ball of the ordinary pitcher who does not know how the ball will break.

Walsh and Ford are different from the ordinary spit ballers. They control the break, by giving the ball a very slight spin with the thumb, as the wet surface slides off the forefingers. The ball revolves perhaps six times in its course.

The comparatively insignificant spin does not make the ball bore through the air cushion, but it is enough to give it a very slight pressure on one side.

As the ball swerves, it is in a state of very unstable equilibrium. The breeze of a butterfly's wing would determine the direction of its slide off the air cushion. That pressure, infinitesimal as it is, controls the direction of the break; hence, by the position of the thumb and the spin, they send the ball to left, right or down and Walsh makes it break upward.

Facing the ball as it breaks. Area A is the greatest smooth surface. The air cushion slides off this surface and the ball breaks upward B-C.

The Hawk and the Crows

Day after day and week after week as I look through the big, open barn-door I see a marsh-hawk beating about low over the fields. He, or rather she (for I see by the greater size and browner color that it is the female), moves very slowly and deliberately on level, flexible wing, now over the meadow, now over the oat or millet field, then above the pasture and the swamp, tacking and turning, her eye bent upon the ground, and no doubt sending fear or panic through the heart of many a nibbling mouse or sitting bird. She occasionally hesitates or stops in her flight and drops upon the ground, as if seeking insects or frogs or snakes. I have never yet seen her swoop or strike after the manner of other hawks. It is a pleasure to watch her through the glass and see her make these circuits of the fields on effortless wing, day after day, and strike no bird or other living thing, be it in quest of something she never finds. I never see the male. She has perhaps assigned him other territory to hunt over. He is smaller, with more blue in his plumage. One day she had a [illegible] or a group of some kind with three or four crows on the side of a bushy hill. I think the crows [illegible] and annoyed her. I heard their cawing and saw them pursuing the hawk, and then saw her swoop upon them or turn over in the air beneath them, as if to show them what feats she could do on the wing that were beyond their powers. The crows always made a [illegible] [illegible] cawing and [illegible] as if they enjoyed the sport, but they were clumsy and awkward enough on the wing compared to the hawk. [illegible]

The new alien land law in California is to be tested in the law courts soon. A wealthy Japanese wishes to sell two hundred acres of land to his fellow countryman for agricultural purposes, and he is determined to find out whether the law forbidding aliens to hold land is or is not constitutional. We wonder what Japanese courts would say if the same question were raised in Japan or Korea!

PLANTING BRAINS IN THE SOIL

Now this is what we call worth while—the way Minnesota expects to encourage its farming. Have you heard about it?

Very soon an expert force of 125 teachers, the livest wires on modern farming that the State can find, together with as many volunteers as can be drawn in, will go through Minnesota's 1,600 townships organizing each one into an outdoor big school for grown-ups, with lectures, club meetings, demonstrations, prize contests and anything which will help to stimulate the interest in the right use of the soil.

Moreover, in each of Minnesota's more than 70 counties there is to be put into motion a systematic course of continuous instruction in the science and philosophy of farm life, with standard crop centres showing the logics how. The learning of the colleges isn't to be kept locked up in books, pamphlets and bulletins, but is to be shoved by human enthusiasts right down the throats of the entire rural population.

Minnesota is one of the States which is doing right well in its farming, as farming goes in that country. But the fact that in effete Europe three bushels are grown on an equal area to our one, and that we need the extra two bushels as [illegible] as any nation on [illegible] justifies the pressure? [illegible] you think?

Bronchitis Cured By Medicated Air

NO DRUGS TO TAKE — YOU SIMPLY BREATHE A HEALING BALSAMIC VAPOR

Every Breath Carries Healing Balsams to the Sick, Sore Places in the Nose and Throat.

Montreal this time gives splendid praise for the modern way of curing colds, catarrh and bronchitis.

Instead of taking sickening drugs into the stomach, or using an old-fashioned spray, the sensible man nowadays breathes the soothing vapors of Catarrhozone and gets well right away. This is exactly what Mr. Joseph Dunne did, and writing from his office at 57 St. Paul street, he says:—

"I suffered for years with the worst form of chronic bronchial throat and nasal catarrh. I tried all kinds of syrups, ointments, tablets and washes, but they proved ineffective. In fact I could get no relief. I read in the Montreal Witness of Catarrhozone and bought an outfit. In a few hours I got relief. The air passages of my nose were cleared out, and I was able to breathe freely. My throat was strengthened—my voice improved—and no longer gagged and coughed. The effect of Catarrhozone was wonderful. Now I am well—no bronchitis—no throat distress. I urge everyone with a weak throat, with a cough, a cold or a touch of catarrh to use Catarrhozone freely."

Get the Dollar outfit — lasts two months and is guaranteed. Smaller sizes 25c. and 50c. each, all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Company, Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

WHAT MAKES THINGS DEAR?

In The Contemporary for September Mr. Chiozza Money discusses "The New Dearness," and insists that the great increase in the cost of living is not due to increased production of gold, which he claims is not even an important factor in the matter. His theory is that the migration of great masses of population from old and poor lands to new and rich lands has raised the standard of living faster than the new lands can supply the demands which have been thus created, and he holds that in the end scientific effort will be equal to the task of producing permanent cheapness. In Canada the new dearness which Mr. Money discusses is no doubt very largely the resultant of our enormous expansion and the employment of great armies of men in constructing railways and waterways, building roads and cities, all of which, while increasing the national wealth, do not increase the production. But in the end production will meet the demand, either by the introduction of new labor-saving machinery, or the forcing of the workers back upon the land. In any event, if we live long enough we will see living become a little cheaper, i.e., unless some other factors intervene.

MACHINE, NOT A GIRL

Rosy Hears That Her Sweetheart Is Crazy About a Typewriter.

By MILDRED HOUSTON HEMINGWAY.

"Then you do love me," he whispered, as he held her in his arms and tried to reach her lips with his.

Rosy made no audible reply, but gave a little sigh of satisfaction and cuddled closer in the encircling arms.

"You'll never let anything come between us?" he pleaded, this time succeeding in turning the pretty face to his, and preventing any reply by covering the little mouth. At last, however, Hugh managed to gain from the bashful young girl her confession of love, and then the two began planning for an early marriage. This was Tuesday night.

Wednesday morning a cloud arose on the horizon of their love. Rosy was singing at her work around the house, when Kathryn Steward ran up the steps. Kathryn had been married three months, and Rosy was extremely anxious to confide her engagement to her friend, so she ran to open the door. Before their greetings were fairly over she began to pave the way for her confession.

"Hugh was here last night," she smiled.

"Hugh who?" Kathryn asked, although she knew as well as Rosy.

"Hugh Howard."

"Well, what of it?" Kathryn asked, going over to the mantel and arranging her hair before the glass.

"Why, I—well—he was here," Rosy faltered.

Kathryn turned. "You don't mean to say that you are interested in him?" she said. There was real concern in her voice.

"What makes you say that?" Rosy cried, her eyes filling with tears.

Kathryn forgot her hair, and took her friend in her arms. "I'll tell you," she said, softly.

"Rich knows Hugh very well indeed, and he told me the other night that he was crazy about a typewriter. Those were his very words. Said he could talk of nothing but that typewriter, and you aren't a typewriter, are you?" and Kathryn kissed her little friend.

Poor little Rosy began to cry. Perhaps, if left to herself, she might have sent for Hugh and asked for an explanation, but under Kathryn's persuasive direction she wrote him the following note:

"Well, What of It?" Kathryn Asked

"I am going to ask you to forget what happened last night, to treat it as though it never occurred. Do not try to see me, for I never want to meet you again. Rose Parsons."

"And now you are coming to our summer cottage with me," Kathryn said decidedly, and before Rosy recovered her breath, Kathryn had explained to Mrs. Parsons, packed Rosy's suit case, and borne her away.

As the cruel letter slipped from her fingers into the mail box Rosy gave a little sob, and might have written another to recall it, if she had not accidentally come across Hugh on the way to the depot. He did not see her as he was walking beside a remarkably pretty girl, and the two were laughing and talking in an animated manner, although there was nothing loverlike in their attitude. Still, to Rosy, this was proof positive of his perfidy.

Just as Hugh was thinking with joyful anticipation of the evening, he received Rosy's letter, and could scarcely believe his eyes as he read the few words her epistle contained.

"Well, of all things!" he said at last, drawing a deep breath.

If he had been like some men, he might have [illegible] into a sulky [illegible], and pride would have reared a wall as high as heaven between the two, but Hugh was made of different material. Instead of writing Rosy, he went out to see her mother, and after a little time convinced Mrs. Parsons that he really did want her daughter.

"I can't tell what the trouble was," Mrs. Parsons confessed, "but Kathryn was back of it, and took Rosy up to the lake with her."

"Why, I thought Kathryn was my friend," Hugh cried, more bewildered than ever.

"It was something she told Rosy," Mrs. Parsons insisted, and Hugh left the house trying to [illegible] out what the trouble could be.

Then he went to Richard Steward, and asked him if he knew anything about the matter.

"I haven't the remotest idea," that young gentleman returned, and then added:

"Come up with me Saturday, and ask Rosy for yourself. [illegible]"

In the meanwhile Rosy was anything but a pleasant companion to her hostess, for if the truth be told, she sulked and cried nearly all the time, and Kathryn began to wish she had left her friend in ignorance of what she had found out.

On Saturday the two went over to the station to meet Richard, and Rosy felt her rebellious heart give a throb of joy when she saw Hugh with her host, although she pretended to be very angry, and would not speak to him.

They all climbed into the boat which was to take them to the Steward cottage, and then Hugh asked quietly:

"What did you tell Rosy about me, Kathryn?"

Kathryn's face grew a little redder than it had been since she first saw Hugh with her husband, but she said stoutly:

"I just told her you were crazy about a typewriter. I think you ought to be ashamed of yourself, Hugh."

Hugh and Richard looked at each other, and then burst into a roar of laughter, while the two girls looked furious.

"So I am," Hugh said at last, "but it is a machine, not a girl. I'm going to have the agency for it, and that is one reason I can think of getting married at this time."

Richard and Kathryn effaced themselves as soon as their guests reached land, and Rosy made up for her willingness to believe evil, although she did ask meekly after a time:

"Who was that I saw you with the other day when we were coming to the depot?"

"Why, the girl who gives demonstrations on the typewriter. She taught me how to get a high rate of speed from the machines so I could show them to better advantage."

Rosy looked up at him with a little shame-faced smile, and then buried her face tearfully but happily on his shoulder.

NEW VEGETABLES

Potatoes and Grain 1500 Miles North of Edmonton

T. Stefansson, the Arctic explorer and discoverer of the white Eskimo, in a lecture at the University of North Dakota declared that various varieties of potatoes and several different kinds of grains are successfully grown by the Eskimos 1,500 miles north of Edmonton, Canada. The discovery of this vegetation, made by Stefansson on his last Arctic trip, has been a big revelation, as it has been popularly supposed that the vegetation line was far south of there. Mr. Stefansson also proved by his expedition that the Mackenzie river is one of the finest streams in the world for navigation. He travelled on this river for over 1,500 miles, even though he had been told that it was not navigable for any great distance. According to the speaker, the summer in the Arctic region is more feared than the cold weather on account of the mosquitoes. The thermometer goes as high as 100 degrees above zero in the summer and rarely falls lower than fifty degrees below in the winter.

WESTERN TRAVELLERS

Commercial Men in the West Number a Small Army

The growth of a country is well told in the growth of the commercial travellers within its confines. And the story that the knights of the grip tell in their annual report for the past year is but the story of the great and rapid strides that the northwest has made in the way of progress in this last year. Nearly thirteen hundred new drummers made the prairies their field of operation last year, and the total is now swollen to the high figure of 7,015. Trade continues to progress at a rapid rate, and the travellers say that their numbers will still continue to increase in similar fashion in the years to come. Where are these travellers located. Mostly in Winnipeg, but they have scattered their homes over the face of the west. Here are their locations: Winnipeg, 3,196; Brandon, 130; Regina, 700; Saskatoon, 463; Calgary, 977; Edmonton, 570; Lethbridge, 114; Vancouver, 620; Victoria, 61; Nelson, 165; Fort William, 36.

Blind Worker's Fortune

Although he never earned more than a workingman's wage, the late Thomas Schofield, manager of Preston workshops for the blind, left an estate of $20,000. Blind from birth he once walked from Farnworth to London in search of work, and besides being of frugal habits he was extremely fortunate in his speculations. He bequeathed $5,000 to the Preston Industrial Institution for the Blind and Homes for Blind Children for North and East Lancashire.

FASHION CORNER

Woman's clothes are almost as interesting as woman's psychology, and quite as subject to variation. During the spring and early summer fashion demanded the long, sinuous silhouette. Now the lines have changed. The outline is no longer continuous. It is broken in various ways. Tunics and wide girdles, double and triple flounces have stepped into the arena to break the slender lines. They encircle the figure in pleats and folds, floating and rippling about the form in fashion most unique and altogether fascinating. With them have come vests, draped skirts, low cut blouses, and coats of greater length than those worn during mid-summer. The season's wraps are worthy of much mention, as a well-cut coat or wrap covers much indifferent dressing and imparts an appearance of grace and style [illegible]

[illegible] coats will be long, reaching below the hips, and cutaway. Vests of white broadcloth will accompany broadcloth suits, while those of white satin will be worn with satin suits.

There is also another style quite distinctive in appearance, and which is distinctly becoming to the woman blessed with a tall, slender figure. It is the long, cutaway coat on severe lines fastened at the breast with a single ornamental buckle of jade, jet or braid. The most striking feature of this garment is the vest, which reaches from the collarline to four inches below the belt, where it terminates in two points. The vest is single-breasted, and fastened with ball buttons covered with material like the vest. A girdle of velvet similar in tone to the coat is brought over the vest at the waistline. It has one end, which hangs free extending below the coat.

For street and serviceable wear Balkan and Russian coat styles remain smart, particularly for the woman of youthful lines, and for the young girl who has adopted it with enthusiasm. There are also, for the youthful figure, smart little coatees, some on Eton, others on square hip lines; some with set-in sleeves and body in one. A military collar and deep turned-back cuffs of fur add just the proper smart touch to these charming little garments. The use of fur wherever possible is one of the season's whims. [illegible]

WE ALL LOOK ALIKE

Impressions of Missionary Back After Many Years

Mr. Dan Crawford, who returned after twenty-three years' missionary work in Central Africa, found a great change in the dress of Londoners.

"In the old days," he said, "I could distinguish between the different sections of society by the clothes they wore. I could tell at once the mistress, her housemaid, her cook, and her scullerymaid. If all these were seated together in a 'bus to-day I could not distinguish between them. I find that all are hobble-skirted, all wear the same designs in hats, and all the same show of jewellery. Perhaps, if I looked carefully into material, or the quality of the jewels, one might notice a difference. But otherwise they appear to me exactly the same. This applies as well to the modern young man, the shop assistant, the clerk, the office boy, and the young peer. Twenty years ago the clerk could easily be recognised by his modest and sober attire. The office boy was distinct with his abnormally high collar, which added a touch of polish to his rather shabby clothes. I do not know if this is the result of a tendency on the part of tailors to standardise the clothes or of a reduction in prices, or of there being more money to spend among young men of the middle and lower classes."

REGARDING INSANITY

A London Physician Makes Observations on the Topic

"Half the great poets were insane. Genius and insanity are closely related," said Dr. F. W. Mott, F.R.C.P., F.R.S., who has charge of 30,000 lunatics in the London hospitals. "The poets were in many cases the sons of erratic, nervous parents. There is not much difference between the highly imaginative thought of the poet or of the genius on one hand, and insanity on the other.

"Heredity plays a great part in insanity, a much larger part than is generally realized," he said. [illegible] Under proper care they make a success of life. Of course, some of them are beyond hope. You cannot make good out of bad material, but you can prevent a great deal of good from being spoiled. In cases that I have traced I have found that insanity appears earlier in each succeeding generation until it reaches the stage where the child is born insane or becomes insane so early in youth that there is no marriage. In other cases marriage with strong strains wipes out the insanity in the following generations."

Projectile's Gain of Speed

Experiments with improved instruments for measuring the velocity of projectiles have shown that the speed goes on increasing after the missile has left the mouth of the cannon. Leaving the muzzle with a velocity of 1,676 feet a second, a projectile has been observed to increase its speed to [illegible] feet a second within the first six feet. It is only after having travelled twenty-five yards that the projectile's velocity becomes reduced to the speed it had on leaving the muzzle. This is ascribed to the impulse of the expanding gas being felt for some distance beyond the cannon's mouth.

Diabetes

TORTURED WITH AN UNQUENCHABLE THIRST FOR YEARS; TRIED EVERYTHING THAT MEDICAL AID COULD DO FOR ME, BUT GRADUALLY GOT WORSE. TRIED SANOL'S ANTI-DIABETES AND WAS CURED.

Ashville, Man.

Dear Sirs:—

During the month of March I was informed that I had a well developed case of Diabetes. I immediately placed myself upon a rigid diet after a week of which the first urinalysis disclosed a sugar content of [illegible] p.c. After several months of dieting during which time I was taking a so-called cure, the sugar content was reduced to [illegible] p.c. I began taking SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES with the result that within a short time the urinalysis made by competent [illegible], and at different periods, disclosed no sugar, whatever. This condition is, indeed, very gratifying and I have every reason to believe that I am quite cured. For some time past my diet has been a liberal one, consisting largely in some foods high in carbohydrates, but I still avoid all sugars and syrups. This is in accordance with the directions which I can well afford to follow. I am gaining in weight and strength, and once more feel that it is good to be alive.

There is no question in my mind regarding the virtues of SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES, and I feel that a great blessing has been conferred upon suffering humanity by this discovery and use of this medicine.

Yours truly,
W. J. FOX.

JAN'S PRESENTIMENT

It Was of Disaster, but Everything Eventually Came Out All Right.

By MARGARET MANNING.

From the first moment of his opening the door Jan Olsen felt a presentiment of disaster. There was something in the atmosphere of the boarding house, with its stuffy hall, its gilt mirrors, its glaring plush ornamentation, that sickened him, so that when the little maid came forward and asked whom he wished to see he could hardly utter [illegible] name.

Jan Olsen, fresh from the west, where he had established himself as a prosperous farmer within three years after his arrival from Sweden, a penniless youth, looked in surprise at the little servant's troubled face.

"You are from my country?" he asked in his native tongue, and at the sound of the words the little fair-haired maid-of-all-work broke down and cried.

"I—I haven't heard the old speech for so long," she said, and then began smiling through her tears as the sun smiles out of a blue sky. And the twinkling eyes that she turned upon him were very blue, and her smile as sunny as a Swedish girl's smile can be.

Jan Olsen looked at her in grave compassion.

"Do they treat you well here, child?" he asked.

She shrugged her shoulders. "Some of the boarders do," she answered. "Theatrical folks are mostly kind. But Miss Dalrymple—she's a terror. She's leading lady in the 'Red Slipper' chorus, you know—and, say," she added, breaking into the easily acquired slang of America, "what do you think? She's Swedish, too, for all her American airs and English name."

Olsen clutched at the wall to save himself from falling. [illegible] back to the day when he, renting a [illegible] hall bedroom [illegible] in the next city block, had met Mina Jensen. She was just such a little maid as this, newly arrived from the old country. He remembered her shy smile, her engaging frankness. And they had become engaged, and he had gone west to make his fortune. Now after three years he had returned—to what?

Through the mist broke a scent of patchouli. Out of it he saw a woman approach, with fashionably done hair and gaudy dress; and through the floating clouds he saw a slim hand, much bejewelled, stretched forth to him.

"I'm to Be Sent Away," She Said.

"Why, if it isn't Jan!" exclaimed Mina. "I guess you didn't know me, Jan. Well, what are you staring at?" she continued to the girl. "Get busy with your work, whatever it is! Ain't she the impudent thing! Just a greenhorn, you know! Come right in, Jan, and tell me about your self and [illegible]

[illegible] could not have changed so. Perhaps it was he who had changed. Perhaps he was too slow, had remained a "greenhorn," for all his success, while she had progressed beyond him.

He resolved to tell her everything on the following night; all his aims and aspirations; to beg her to come back with him to Minnesota. There, on their lonely farm, they would settle, as the old folks had done in Sweden, they would be happy. . . .

He fell asleep at last, happy in his dreams.

But on the next night the old feeling came over him again at the sight of the hall, the scent of perfume, the faded tawdriness of it. He hesitated upon the threshold; he could not enter.

And the little maid's eyes were red from tears.

"You have been crying, my dear," said Olsen, using the Swedish word of endearment. "What is the matter? You won't tell me? Yes, you'll tell a fellow countryman. Come, tell me!"

"I'm to be sent away," she said, her voice quavering.

"Away? Well, but there are better places."

"O, yes. I'm not afraid. But she [illegible]—"

"She? Who?"

"Miss Dalrymple. She said—I can't tell you—well, that I didn't behave—that I talked to the men here—that I talked to you yesterday. And she pays twenty a week, so Mrs. Simmons is afraid to offend her. And she said that if I didn't go she would. She hates me because I'm from the same country, and—and she doesn't want people to know that she was once a working girl like me."

Olsen heard a door open softly above. Down the stairs, horrible in their glaring carpeting, floated the faint odor of patchouli. For an instant he pondered; then, taking the girl by the arm, he led her to the door.

"My dear," he said, "in the state I come from there are broad acres of land—land like we have at home, with [illegible] and [illegible]. And there are no Dalrymples there, and [illegible] are treated differently. Would you like to come with me to see the place I'm speaking of?" He spoke in Swedish now. "There, don't let those tears come. No, never mind your hat; there's a department store round the corner where you can get all you need. But hurry, for it closes at five, and we've got to get to the city hall first and take out our marriage license."

LET WOMEN WOO THE MEN

Old Custom, Declares English Writer, Is the Cause of Much Marital Unhappiness.

Surely the most foolish of all the many foolish conventions that rule human joy is the decree that women must wait passively to be wooed, declares a writer in the London Chronicle. Now, why should they? Why can't they be natural and honest and show their feelings? Why must they be compelled to act an indifference quite foreign to them? Perhaps some of you hold with Shaw and Shakespeare that they don't wait to be wooed. Some of them certainly don't. Generally speaking, however, few women even nowadays have the pluck to go dead against a convention of this sort, which has such a tremendously strong hold on the masculine sense of fitness.

If woman's charm is to depend on this idiotic convention that men have created around her—namely, that she is a perfectly cold, passive, negative creature who waits in a state of suspended animation, as it were, until the man condescends to make her come alive—the sooner the modern feminists invent some more reasonable tradition of charm the better for us all.

Now, let us suppose a couple that has overcome all the initial obstacles. They have managed the difficult task of finding each other, have got their [illegible] over, and are safely engaged. What happens next? Every possible thing that can be done to make an illusion around them is done. They are encouraged to meet often, but the conditions under which they meet are as different as can be from the conditions of their future married life. [illegible]

WOMEN GET FULL PAY

No Discrimination in Case of Norway's Postal Employes.

For fifty years Norwegian women in the postal service have been paid the same salaries as men for the same work. Five years ago a Conservative Administration proposed lower wages for the women postal employes as a good way to reduce Government expenses. The measure was lost, and the question was allowed to rest in peace until last year, when another Conservative Administration again proposed to discriminate against women by making their rises in salary, after certain periods of service, lower than those of the men holding the same positions and with the same claim to advancement. The majority report of the committee that had the bill under consideration was in favor of its acceptance. But an election resulted in the return of a majority of Liberals to the Storthing, and the formation of a Liberal Cabinet. The new Postmaster-General sided with the minority report on the proposition, and a great many of the Storthing members also espoused the women's case. The final vote stood 64 against the bill to 30 for, and the women employes will continue to receive equal pay for equal work as heretofore.

A FEW DON'TS

Don't be a spoil-sport.

Don't court indigestion.

Don't make too big a splash.

Don't forget your poor relations.

Don't grumble, whatever you do.

Don't leave everything for "mother" to do.

Don't press wine where water or lemonade is preferred.

Don't, if you get up on your wrong side, make everybody else miserable.

Don't let the children sit up too late—they only get tired out and fretful.

Don't be made miserable. Misery loves company—but is seldom an agreeable hostess.

Don't, if you give your children a party, keep nagging them as to what they must and must not do.

Don't envy another's happiness and enjoyment. Make the most of what you have, and be grateful for having that much.

The Hot Water Bottle

When no rubber hot water bottle is available a good substitute can be made of a glass bottle or jar covered with paper or cloth to protect the patient from burning. Be careful that the bottles are not too hot, especially when using them about an unconscious patient.

A rubber hot water bottle filled with ice chipped so small that it can be put into the mouth of the bottle makes a good substitute for an ice cap.

Eskimo Inventors

A collection of Esquimaux inventions exhibited at San Francisco, substantiated the claim that the Esquimaux is the most able inventor and skilled engineer among uncivilized people. In support of this, the collection included the first form of the oil burner and cook stove, water-tight boat, cryolite used for building purposes, and water-proof overcoats, as well as the most perfect types ever developed of the sling, spear thrower and harpoon. The smoking pipes form a link with Asia, and their carvings with prehistoric Europe.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at the office of any Local Agent of Dominion Lands (not sub-agent), on certain conditions.

Duties.—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required in every case, except when residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside of his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Six months residence in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and 50 acres extra cultivation. The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land after report by Homestead Inspector on application for patent.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price, $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

He Offered Her No Explanation.

a white handkerchief so that he would be taken for a member of the other side, and not be killed?"

"Of course."

"And you know what was under it? Something about loving her less if he did not love honor more?"

Helen nodded.

"Well, that's my case, girlie—honest. I can't tell you because I promised not to, and I can't go back on my honor, for if I did I'd not be worthy of you. See?" And there was a strength of purpose in his dark eyes that appealed to her and made her eyes dim, although, woman like, she asked softly:

"Would you rather give me up than go back on your promise?"

Ted swallowed hard. "If you'd want me to, Nell, I don't believe I could care for you as much as I do. You see, I'd feel that something was wrong. Now kiss me, dear, and just wait till tonight, and I'll prove to you that I'm just what I've said I am, not so awfully bad after all," and without waiting for permission, he drew her into his arms, kissed her not once but several times, then ran away, leaving her gasping, but happier than she had been for several days.

ILLOGICAL COSTUMES CURSE TO WOMEN

So Says Dr. Mary Walker Who For Over Half a Century Has Worn Male Attire

The physical weakness of nearly all women and the blindness, curvature of the spine, club-feet, tuberculosis, infantile paralysis and other ills from which so many children suffer are all directly traceable to one thing—the unhealthful and ridiculous style of women's dress, according to Dr. Mary Walker, the most famous advocate of dress reform for women.

It is no new theory with her. She's been advocating it for a little matter of 55 years, having donned trousers herself at the age of 16, worn them constantly and preached for male attire for women ever since. Now, at the age of 72, still going about the world in men's trousers, frock coat, silk hat, standing linen collar, cravat and men's shoes, she is more positive than ever that the solution of nine-tenths of the world's troubles is for women to dress like men.

"No man can know the agony of the ordinary costume worn by woman," said Dr. Walker. "Every woman knows, and most of them will admit, that I am right at least as to the unhealthfulness of women's dress. And men are coming to know it, for men find that their wives are weak and sickly, that their children are not strong and robust and that they themselves sometimes suffer from [illegible] due to the tight, cumbersome clothing of their mothers.

DR. MARY WALKER

"I have spent my life since girlhood preaching women's dress reform, and I am still unalterably convinced that it will have to come.

"I was the only woman surgeon in the army during the American civil war. I talked dress reform while I treated wounded soldiers then. I have been arrested scores of times, but I have never faltered and I never shall."

Dr. Walker was born in Oswego, N. Y., and after a lifetime of activity as a lecturer and physician, returned to her birthplace to spend the rest of her days. Still as vigorous and as keen intellectually as a person [illegible] years her junior, she spends about half of her time on the lecture platform, having resolved to "die in the harness."

She is a little woman, not over 5 feet 3 inches, and so slender as to weigh probably not over 100 pounds. She is wiry, vigorous, quick and nervy in her movements and as straight as a young [illegible]. Her well poised head is covered with wavy, [illegible] hair, parted on one side and falling just to the edge of her collar.

SPLENDID SETTLERS

Gaelic Speaking Scottish Americans Locating in Canadian West

Among the recent arrivals into Western Canada was a most unique party composed of 25 Scotchmen, a portion of the Mackenzie clan, who migrated from Oklahoma. They all bear the name of Mackenzie, and are descendants of those members of their clan who came to the American continent with Lord Baltimore 300 years ago.

At that time they settled in the state of Maryland, and remained there and prospered as farmers for 175 years. Twenty-five years ago a portion of them attracted by the new territory which had been opened up in Western Oklahoma went into that State.

Norman Mackenzie, the leader of the party, states that they left Oklahoma owing to the failure of their crops for the past five years. They are fine looking men, all being typical Highlanders, tall and agile.

The peculiar thing about them is that they speak Gaelic perfectly but with a strong American accent which makes it difficult for their fellow countrymen, who come into contact with them, to understand.

KINDS OF BULLETS

Projectiles Have Changed From the Ancient Leaden Sphere

For more than three centuries, counting from the invention of gunpowder and the use of firearms, the bullets used in army weapons remained similar in form and composition to those used for shooting game; that is, they were round, and formed entirely of lead. Although the old spherical leaden bullet was the most ill-conceived and defective that could be imagined, it was only toward the second half of the last century that efforts were made to change the form. At first the diameter of the bullets was reduced, owing to the fact that the resistance of the air increases in proportion to the diameter of the projectile, but as it was necessary, nevertheless, to retain a sufficient weight, the power of wounding being in proportion to the projectile's mass, they were lengthened at the same time. Then, instead of a sphere, the bullet took the form of a cylinder, except the anterior portion, which gradually was made [illegible] pointed.

Another Charge.

Another charge has been laid against Hovey, that of obtaining $1.65 under false pretences, the false pretence being that it was advertised that the rings in connection with the Hoop-la game would surround the wooden blocks. The case will be heard to-day. Mr. G. N. Gordon put in an appearance for defendant.

Will Have New Station.

The contract for a new station at Havelock has been awarded, the price being $20,000. The new building which will be modern in every respect, will be of brick and two stories. The site is directly east of the present station. A cement platform 800 feet in length will be constructed. It is said the contract calls for the completion of the station by the 1st of December. Havelock is to be the headquarters of department heads.

Suing for Damages.

James Dusk, of Campbellford, has entered suit at Osgoode Hall against the Dominion Construction Company claiming $10,000 damages for the death of the late Frederick Dusk, of whose estate the plaintiff is administrator. The deceased was killed while travelling on a construction train as an employee of the defendants. The parties to the suit are well known in Peterborough.

Bobcaygeon Fire Losses.

The fire insurance inspectors have adjusted the losses at Bobcaygeon in connection with the recent fire in that village. All claims have been settled satisfactorily. The merchants have ordered new goods, and business will soon be booming in the same old way. Mr. Capstick's two buildings which went up in smoke, were valued at $3,000, partly covered by insurance. Mr. Walker's loss on his bakery was about $500.

River Bed at Fault.

The claims on account of spring floods on the Otonabee river, in which people residing in Otonabee and North and South Monaghan are concerned, will be investigated by Mr. Wilkins, Government Commissioner. He is at present engaged in special work in connection with a re-survey of the government property in Stoney and Lovesick Lakes. This being an urgent matter in connection with the canal, it had to be completed before freezing up time. This has delayed the investigation of the claims above mentioned. It is urged that the bed of the river is at fault.

School Children to Participate.

The pupils of the Separate Schools will take part in the reception to the Papal Delegate, Mgr. P. F. Stagni, D.D., next Tuesday evening. They will take a position on the lawn at the side of St. Peter's Cathedral and as the procession draws near the pupils, numbering between six and seven hundred, will sing. The procession itself is expected to be very large. The public reception is to be held on the church lawn the following night.

A Workman Buried.

Jos. Miniocio, 459 Donegal street, was buried with earth yesterday afternoon, as the result of a cave-in at an excavation on Hunter street. Assistance was quickly given and Miniocio was rescued. He was able to resume work after a short rest. Only a couple of days ago, a horse fell into one of the excavations in the same street. The authorities should see that the holes should be covered and lighted at night.

Passed the Century Mark.

An inmate of the House of Providence, in the person of Miss Rachel Bell, passed away yesterday at the ripe old age of 102 years. She was born in Ireland and lived in her native land during many a perilous epoch, of which she liked dearly her years to tell. She moved to Canada when about middle age, and settled in Port Hope. She resided there for a number of years coming to the House of Providence about four years ago.

Shot A Bear.

On Friday a monster bear was shot four miles from Bobcaygeon by Matthew McElmoyle. During the day Mr. McElmoyle's young son asked his father to take down his gun and go for a hunt. The boy accompanied him with a dog attached to a rope, and when about 500 yards from the house they spotted bruin up a cherry tree helping himself to the fruit. When the hunting party approached the tree the bear started to come down, and Mr. McElmoyle lost no time in getting his gun into play. He planted five shots into bruin before he gave up the ghost. The animal was a big one and had a great hide.

SUNLIGHT AND SHADOW ON THE DIAL OF A CITY LIFE.

Work on the new C.P.R. freight sheds on the river bank near the market, is progressing.

John Middleton was fined $3 at the police court yesterday for being drunk in a public place.

It is said that Peterborough has in the neighborhood of 250 automobiles.

The total receipts of the Peterborough Industrial Fair amounted to $6,300, over 15,000 people having visited the exhibition.

The last few nights the country round has been visited by heavy frosts, which is rapidly turning the foliage to a bright crimson color.

John D. Smith, a prominent citizen of Port Hope, and well known in this city, and formerly of Lindsay and Fenelon Falls, died suddenly at his brother's residence.

INDIGESTION, GAS OR SICK, SOUR STOMACH

Time It! — "Pape's Diapepsin" makes your upset, bloated stomach feel fine in five minutes

"Really does" put bad stomachs in order—"really does" overcome indigestion, dyspepsia, gas, heartburn and sourness in five minutes—that—just that—makes Pape's Diapepsin the largest selling stomach regulator in the world. If what you eat ferments into stubborn lumps, you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food and acid; head is dizzy and aches; breath foul; tongue coated; your insides filled with bile and indigestible waste, remember the moment "Pape's Diapepsin" comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. It's truly astonishing—almost marvelous, and the joy is its harmlessness.

A large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin will give you a hundred dollars' worth of satisfaction or your druggist hands you your money back.

It's worth its weight in gold to men and women who can't get their stomachs regulated. It belongs in your home—should always be kept handy in case of a sick, sour, upset stomach during the day or at night. It's the quickest, surest and most harmless stomach doctor in the world.

MUSIC and DRAMA

"PETER PAN."

A large and brilliant audience greeted Miss Maude Adams at the Grand Opera House Thursday night, when J. M. Barrie's masterpiece, "Peter Pan," or "The Boy Who Would Not Grow Up," was presented for the first time in this city. The piece is a fascinating comic fantasy, replete with whimsicality, quaintness, humor and satire, and irresistibly holds its audience from curtain rise to finish. It is staged regardless of expense, and never before, perhaps, has our opera house presented to an audience such realism as was in evidence in the beautiful and artistic scenic offerings Thursday night, when every smallest detail even to atmospheric effects and [illegible] [illegible]

Demonstrator Claims Bodies Will Become Petrified After Six Weeks

New Orleans, Sept. 19.—Rameses of Egypt must come across with the championship mummy belt.

When that famous old Pharaoh cashed in his crown for a halo about 3,000 years B. C. they took out his clockworks and tuned him for a terrible struggle to succeeding dynasties.

Since that time he has been the chief drawing card in whatever museum they have catched him, the despair of the undertakers and embalmers. From kinging it over mortals he entered into a long reign as the boss mummy. That reign has just ended.

In the parlors of the Greenlaw Undertaking Company C. H. Campbell demonstrated a wonderful new fluid for the preservation of bodies. A number of prominent physicians, business men and newspaper reporters saw the operation, and were surprised with the results. About two gallons of the fluid was injected into the right arm of the subject, which immediately took on a color almost life like, and became plastic as one asleep.

Mr. Campbell says that this condition will last for six weeks or more, when petrifaction will set in. He intends to organize a company immediately and place the fluid on the market. He believes that it will eventually supplant all known methods of embalming and come into universal use.

FRANKNESS

Frankness is the art of saying things you honestly think exactly as you think them. To be frank is to be naturally straightforward. Look the other fellow in the eye. In the same manner as a straight line is the shortest distance between two points, so is frankness the only direct course between all people. Because nothing is wanted. The frank man is the man best to be trusted. Look the other fellow in the eye.

Profits in Cherries

Cherries, according to J. T. Bealby, owner of a commercial orchard on Kootenay Lake, are coming to be the most profitable fruit in the fruit growing industry, although involving possibly the most labor. Mr. Bealby's cherry orchards show a gross production of from $1,300 to $1,500 per acre. He states that one tree on his ranch has given an average of $70 worth of fruit every year for several years, and that $35 is a fair average for the entire acreage. After the first four years merely ordinary care is required with a little spraying and [illegible]. Apples, he says, give an average return of $350 per acre gross. Mr. Bealby purchased his ranch of 25 acres about six years ago, and has made a marked success from the start.

CIVIL WAR WILL GRIP BRITAIN IF THE PREMIER PERSISTS

Lord Northcliffe Declares the Ulster Situation to be Really Alarming—Labor Trouble Magnified

Montreal, Sept. 20.—Lord Northcliffe arrived here this morning, having returned from his inspection of his pulp mills in Newfoundland.

In an interview immediately after his arrival, he said: "Civil war is inevitable if the government persists in its plan of overruling the people of Ulster. I am very glad, however, to see that the Canadian papers, unlike those of the United States, which in this matter, see only one side of the question, are alive to the very serious struggle impending."

Asked regarding the labor troubles in England, he stated he considered that they were only ordinary domestic difficulties, which look worse over the cable than they really do at close range. "The Ulster situation" he added, "is really an alarming one."

"Lord Haldane spoke on this subject when in Canada as a Liberal statesman and with the Liberal government, but he is obviously at variance with at least one of his colleagues. Personally I have no doubt that any form of government such as they contemplate will be found quite impossible."

When asked for an expression of opinion on the stand Canada should take in imperial defence, he excused himself, stating that he could not make any statement on this matter, as he was in a way, a guest here.

Lord Northcliffe is accompanied by Lady Northcliffe, Mrs. A. Douglas Pennant, a daughter-in-law of Baron Penrys; Mr. Harold Child one of the most distinguished journalists of Great Britain; Mr. Newton Horle and Mr. N. H. Russell Wakefield.

Anniversary of Reciprocity Defeat

Yesterday, Sept. 21, was the second anniversary of the Conservative victory and the defeat of reciprocity. It goes without saying that the prayers in the various churches were a trifle mixed.

ROME AND ITALY

The Capture of Eternal City From Pope Celebrated.

Rome, Italy, Sept. 20.—An imposing demonstration, in which about 30,000 people, including many red-shirted Garibaldians and other veterans took part, was held to-day in celebration of the anniversary of the capture of Rome from Popish rule by the Italian troops in 1870. A procession was formed and marched to the breach in the wall by which the Italians entered.

There the manifestants were met by the Mayor of Rome, Ernest Nathan, who read a message from King Victor Emmanuel in reply to the loyal greetings sent by the municipality.

DIRIGIBLE FLIES AT FIFTY MILES AN HOUR

The trip had been considerably postponed owing to the disaster which overtook the dirigible's sister ship, which was destroyed in a gale off Heligoland on Sept. 9, when 14 of her crew lost their lives

CONFESSED CRIME TO SHIELD WOMAN

Winnipeg, Man., Sept. 21.—Victor Pople, sentenced to hang here next Thursday for self confessed murder of the Willis child and entirely ignorant that papers granting his reprieve were on the way from Ottawa, today made a startling statement in the death house, where he is confined. He said that the evidence he gave at the trial and which convicted him, was false and intended to shield the mother of the dead baby, Mrs. Willis. He says he can prove an alibi at the time of the murder, and it was after the crime that he met Mrs. Willis, taking her that night to a local hotel where she broke down and confessed to the murder, and that the dead child was lying across the river. Pople will be a material witness when Mrs. Willis comes up for trial.

LAURIER'S POSITION

Sir Wilfrid Says the Manitoba School Case is Not Settled

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—With your permission I will follow up still farther in reply to Mr. Livingstone the exposure of Sir Wilfrid's attempt to foist separate schools on both New and Old Manitoba. He demanded, as we have seen, the rights of the religious minority, or that there should be no extension of boundaries. Of course this is not coercion—certainly not. But if it isn't, it must be the great "What is it?" This is what Sir Wilfrid said as the debate in the House of Commons proceeded: "I now come to the question of the existing condition of things in the territory to be annexed under this bill to Manitoba. There is no doubt whatever that the law of 1875 is in operation to-day in those territories. . . .

This law, he claims a little farther on, to be "the law of 1875 . . . which would give full separate rights to that part of the country."

He then takes a fling at the French-Canadian traitors in the Cabinet, who have accepted the Borden bill for the extension of Manitoba's boundaries without qualification. He wants another "settlement." Here is what he says: "This would have been a case for compromise, a case for conciliation, but my honorable friends who sit on the treasury benches from the Province of Quebec despise conciliation and have contempt for compromise. Their policy was everything or nothing, and the result is nothing."

How different it would have been if Sir Wilfrid had had his way. How determinedly he pleads the cause of separate schools in Manitoba even to the point of opposing extension altogether, unless the law of 1875 regarding separate schools went with the extension. It was at this juncture that Sir Wilfrid made use of his famous metaphor: "But though peace now reigns above, peace is not yet restored to the waters below."

He means, if he means anything, that he will agitate for another "settlement" at the first opportunity. Well! The storm is over whether Sir Wilfrid likes it or not. His attempts to balk the extension of Manitoba's boundaries have failed. He stands forth, however, as the champion of papal reaction—the man who would force separate schools on Manitoba. But Mr. Borden did more than beat out Sir Wilfrid in Manitoba. It was on the cards to extend the boundaries of Quebec. We can see how they would have been extended by Sir Wilfrid. How different it was under Mr. Borden! They have been extended and without any religious or separate school conditions whatsoever. That is the sort of "settlement," the sort of "conciliation" this country wants, and I am persuaded will have.

Who was it also that betrayed the

CROP IS FINE IN THE WEST

Says Dr. Roche—Refuses Statement on Alienation of the Public Domain

Ottawa, Sept. 21.—Hon. Dr. Roche Minister of the Interior, returned this morning to Ottawa and action will be taken very shortly on the Ferguson interim report into the alienation of the public domain under the Liberal Administration which is said to implicate two well-known Government officials. Dr. Roche would make no comment on the report but intimated that he thought it was a mistake, that there had been a premature announcement.

Dr. Roche stated that the crop was excellent in the West. It was the finest crop both in quantity and quality for years. The harvest was early and the movement was early, so that there was not likely to be serious grain blockade. The new grazing regulations will likely be promulgated shortly. The doctor also stated that he expected this coming session to amend the homestead regulations with a view to encouraging the cattle industry.

PRESENTATION TO REV. MR. J. O'BRIEN D. D.

A very interesting event was witnessed last night at 7 o'clock in St. Peter's Cathedral, when the Rev. M. J. O'Brien, D.D., Bishop designate of St. Peter's Cathedral, was presented with an address. This was read by Mr. Michael O'Brien, Inspector of Separate Schools, and signed by the following: Mr. Joseph Stickley, Dr. P. P. McNulty, Dr. J. V. Gallivan, and Mr. Daniel O'Connell.

The contents were all referring to Dr. O'Brien's future designation and congratulatory to him on his work with the Total Abstinence Society, and his interest untiring in matters educational. The Doctor in his reply thanked the people for the kind sentiments that had been expressed towards him, thanks not only to the people of his own parish and church, but to the citizens of Peterborough generally.

A similar presentation was made in the afternoon at 3 o'clock by the parishioners of the Church of the Sacred Heart.

This evening at 8 o'clock at the hall of the Knights of Columbus, a similar presentation will be made and to-morrow evening at 7.30 His Excellency Monseigneur P. F. Stagni, D.D., Papal Delegate, will arrive in the city per C.P.R. and a procession will be formed at St. Peter's Cathedral, where he will be presented with an address by the Laity.

THOUSAND CARS OF WHEAT PASS THROUGH WINNIPEG DAILY

Number Will be Up to Fifteen Hundred in a Very Few Days—Railways Are Now Rushed

Winnipeg, Sept. 21.—The sluice gates of the Gateway City are now flung wide and the bumper crop of 1913 is pouring in a continuously widening stream of golden grain, where a lavishing hand is scattering bread to feed the world. A thousand cars of wheat a day are now passing the Winnipeg inspectors and next week it is expected will average 1500 cars a day. Western lines are bringing in the grain as fast as the threshers can separate it from the chaff. At every siding cars are ready and waiting to be loaded and rushed to

The Saskatoon district has shipped Winnipeg and the great lakes 1,400,865 bushels since the first of the month. On the Moose Jaw division of the Canadian Pacific 2,310,000 bushels have been shipped. Small divisional points report rushing freights.

The weather generally has been so favorable that there is no talk now except shipping. The threshers have been busy, with scarcely a day's break. The only wail heard is for more men, although 50,000 workmen thronged from the east and south, the demand is still heard. Considerable trouble has been experienced through men demanding exorbitant wages, and in some cases they have struck for extravagant pay. In one small Southern Saskatchewan town 75 men were threatened with jail because they refused to work and harassed the farmers.

FARMER DOES BETTER.

A noteworthy feature of the 1913 farming operations will be heavier net returns for the agrarian. With the experience of previous years and financial stringency pressing upon them the farmer has been conservative in his outlay and generous with work. This year two or three farmers have been clubbing together, purchasing their own outfit and threshing their own crop while prices are still high. Threshing is over much earlier and the farmer has released his men, boys and horses from the threshing field and enabled the whole family to get busy on the fall plowing.

RAILWAY STRIKE IN BRITISH ISLES BROUGHT TO FINISH

London, Sept. 20.—The strike of railroad men in the British Isles was practically brought to an end late to-day. Officials of the companies reached an agreement with the representatives of the men's unions today on the basis of the reinstatement of all strikers who undertake to handle all the traffic which the railroads are bound to carry, under the laws.

The trades union officials strongly recommend the men to assent to this and it is expected confidently that they will do so at their meeting to be held in the various centres tonight.

Indications also point to a settlement of the motor omnibus trouble, when the famous strike-breaker Sir George Askwith of the board of trade brings his persuasive powers to bear on both sides. A conference is to be held on Monday at the board of trade offices.

The executive committee of the National Union of Railwaymen sent a manifesto this evening to all the branches of the union requesting the members to resume work immediately.

ANOTHER FATAL ACCIDENT AT CANADIAN GENERAL ELECTRIC

Mr. Fred W. Smith, Victim of a Former Accident, is Crushed Beneath Iron Castings—Cranes' Cable Broke Through Reported Over-Running—The Inquest

Yet another accident, which had a fatal termination, occurred at the Canadian General Electric Co.'s Works on Saturday morning.

The unfortunate victim was Mr. Fred W. A. Smith, who resides in North Monaghan. The deceased man was employed as a hitcher-on to one of the large cranes in the machine shop. No correct version of how the accident happened seems to be in circulation, but it is supposed that the crane was overrun by the driver. A casting, weighing considerably over a ton, had been attached to the hook. Immediately above the hook is a stout chain, and beyond that the ordinary cable. It is supposed that the driver of the crane over ran the length of the cable, and when the chain came into contact with the drum it broke, letting the hook, pulley and casting, all fall onto the man beneath. Workmen, who witnessed the accident say, that this particular casting was one of many others in that vicinity, and consequently when the whole of the weight fell on the deceased he was wedged in between several iron castings. From this position according to reports, it took fully five minutes to extricate him. First aid was immediately applied and he was at once removed to the Nicholls Hospital, where his injuries which consisted of several bad breaks in his left leg and several broken ribs were attended to by Dr. Cameron, who is now filling Dr. Young's duties at the C.G.E. Despite all available efforts to save his life, he expired shortly before two o'clock on Saturday afternoon.

The acute cause of death was shock. A formal opening of the inquest was held Saturday evening, at Bellingham's Undertaking Parlors, when the following jury was empanelled, and evidence of identification taken from Detective Newhall. The inquest was then adjourned until Wednesday evening next at 7.30 in the Police Court Chamber. The jury: Morley Lyle, foreman; John O. File, J. W. Stewart, Dickson Best, Baptiste O'Disto, Arthur Simms, John McCann, Patrick McGrath, John A. Armstrong, John Clancy, William Gibbs, Wm. Clancy.

The late Mr. Smith was born in the south of England, and was 38 years of age. He in company with his wife came to Canada seven years ago and since then has made Peterborough his home. His mother and father both predeceased him, and he has now one sister to mourn his loss. He had no children.

Deceased was a member of Court Chemong, I.O.F. and has made many acquaintances through that and other circles, all of whom will doubtless regret his demise.

It is reported that the deceased formerly worked in the Punch Press, where in an accident he lost a finger, and then asked to be moved, when he was given his last position.

The funeral will be held on Tuesday afternoon. Service will be held at the house on High street, Brownton, at 2 o'clock, and afterwards the cortege will proceed to the Little Lake cemetery. The Rev. [illegible] Keith of Knox Presbyterian Church will officiate.

AWFUL STORIES OF ADRIANOPLE

French Writer Tells of Terrible Atrocities Committed By Bulgarians

Paris, Sept. 20.—How the Bulgarians have committed atrocities on the helpless citizens of Thrace such as would have aroused the thunder of Gladstone, had he been with us, is depicted in glowing language by Pierre Loti, the French writer. Loti has made a tour of the devastated districts and sent from Constantinople a word-picture of the barbarisms practised by the Bulgarians.

I wish simply to tell in all sincerity, says M. Loti, "what I have seen with my own eyes in the desert which the Bulgarians have made of Thrace. It surpasses in abomination everything that I have been told, and all that I imagined! With what fury have these Christian liberators worked in order to accomplish so much destruction in a few months. If one approaches sometimes a timorous face, contracted with pain, rises from the debris; it is that of someone who has escaped the great massacres, and is sheltering himself under a roof of branches in what was a house.

Of these phantom villages I will describe one, Haouza, for example, where I stopped for half an hour. But there are hundreds and thousands of others where the horror is the same. Haouza contains nothing but broken walls, ruins, debris.

Here is the mosque! From a distance it seemed to be less destroyed than many others; doubtless there was enough time for sacking it properly. Inside a few sick and wounded, with cadaverous faces, are stretched on heaps of rags. The fine sculptures in white marble at the windows and the Mihrab had been smashed with sledge hammers. The Turkish prisoners and wounded were condemned to carry out this sacrilegious task, while the Bulgarians harassed them with their bayonets.

Here is the well of the village, a sinister odor arises from it. Into it had been thrown the bodies of women and children foully treated by the soldiers, and on top of them to make them sink, have been heaped the stones torn from the graves.

Along the road which traverses these infinite and desolate solitudes is a continual stream of soldiers, baggage wagons, artillery, guns on carts, Kurdish or Bedouin cavalry, and camels loaded with provisions. From all parts, even from the depths of Asia, people are coming by forced marches to the succour of the beautiful Adrianople, which has escaped by a miracle but which Europe, against all sentiments of humanity, obstinately desires to give back to the savage assassins who will not leave there one stone upon another, and who will turn it into a charnel-house.

It is known by what a miracle Adrianople was saved. The Bulgarians had everything ready for the final slaughter as soon as the Turks returned. They were to murder the Mussulmans, while the Armenians, armed by the Bulgarians were to be summoned to massacre the Greeks. Each man had been assigned his task. Moreover, guns had been trained on the beautiful chief mosque to destroy it.

And this last night of the Bulgarian occupation was particularly terrible, it was when Greeks, tied foot and hand, were thrown into the river. The only survivor of this massacre by drowning described it to me in details which made me shiver.

Men also occupied themselves with piling their loot into carts which were to leave at daybreak. It included even the furniture and mattresses of the poorest people—everything that fell into their furious hands. A shout of deliverance was spread throughout the city, "The Turks, the Turks are coming!" They were only expected the following morning.

The Bulgarians had thought themselves to be so sure of the coming night for bathing everything in blood! What a prodigy! Had these disturbers of the feast been able to march fifty miles in 24 hours? But there they were, and Adrianople felt that she was saved, at least, for a time.

Tore Out His Eyes.

Mussulmans, Greeks and Jews trembled and wept for joy. The Bulgarians took the time to throw into the well a few last prisoners of war, then they fled in disorder. They returned to capture a young Turkish officer, Bedid Bey, son of the great Fuad, who approached too close to their rear. They tore his eyes from their orbits, cut off both ears and then disappeared. That was their last crime, at least, for the time being.

Finally, I have just received from a little town in Thrace the following telegram signed by a hundred Greeks: "We beg you to do everything in the world so that we shall not fall into the jaws of the Bulgarian monsters."

KILLED BY FALL DOWN THE CELLAR

Brockville, Sept. 20.—Mrs. A. A. Polly, an elderly woman residing on Apple street, met death with tragic suddenness to-day. At the head of the cellar stairs she either tripped or was seized with a fainting spell, falling headlong to the bottom where her head came in contact with the wall. From a fracture at the base of the skull she died in a few minutes. Mrs. Polly was a widow and is survived by four children.

SLEEP

During sleep the necessary body-repairs are carried on in the "human workshop."

Anything that prevents sound sleep at the proper time (at night) will sooner or later prevent "smooth running" during the day.

That "drowsy feeling" in the forenoon (when every-one should feel bright and fit) is often caused by want of sound, refreshed sleep the night before.

Very often the habitual use of tea and coffee is back of sleepless nights.

Drowsiness during the day
May be overcome

Quit tea and coffee absolutely and use well-made

POSTUM

It contains the vital phosphates from wheat required by Nature for REBUILDING the tissue cells in muscle, brain and nerves.

It is pure and free from the insomnia-producing drug caffeine, found in coffee.

Postum comes in two forms:

Regular Postum — must be well boiled.

Instant Postum is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with the addition of cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage INSTANTLY.

"Postum insures restful nights and unclouded days"

PEANUT CANDY

Cook together in the shallow pan of the chafing dish two cupfuls of molasses, one of brown sugar, one cupful of butter, one tablespoon of lemon juice and one-half teaspoonful of salt. While this is simmering in an interesting fashion, the fair cook helps the children to open the peanuts, of which there is a pint when shelled. These nuts, divested of their skins, are laid thickly over buttered pans. The boiling candy is tested in water every few seconds by the eager children, and when it cools and grows hard and crisp it is removed from the lamp instantly and poured over the nuts. Just before it becomes perfectly hardened, so that it breaks crisply and evenly when quite cool, it is cut into small blocks or sticks.

ADVERTISING PAYS!

ORIGIN OF GYPSIES

The first official recognition of the presence of Gypsies in England is contained in an act prohibiting their itinerancy, dated 1540. Bands of Gypsies appeared in Germany, Italy and France early in the fifteenth century, but it is to be supposed that they did not reach England in considerable numbers until the early part of the sixteenth century. The law referred to commanded Englishmen to refrain from all intercourse with the dark-skinned tourists, and during the reign of Charles I. thirteen persons were executed at one assize for having associated with Gypsies. In both England and America, up to comparatively recent times, Gypsies were treated as vagrants, and often persecuted. There are many theories in regard to the origin of Gypsies, but the one most generally accepted is that they are the descendants of low-caste Hindus expelled by Timour about 1398. Despite their association with other peoples, the manners, customs, superstitions, visage and appearance of the Gypsies remain practically the same as when they made their first appearance in Europe five centuries ago, and they continue to make the same pretence of a knowledge of futurity.

AUTOMATIC LIGHTER

Press Down Lever and Flame Appears in an Instant

An automatic cigar lighter that is designed for home as well as store use has been patented by a Western man. With it comes an ornamental ash tray with four cigar rests around the edge. The lighter stands in the center of the tray and consists of a reservoir for gasoline, a small tube at the top with a friction cap and a lever that operates the cap. MARVELOUS BATTER WAS WEE WILLIE

Now He Only Has to Watch His Bank Account Not His Batting Average

Will baseball ever see another Willie Keeler?

"Wee Willie," the batting marvel of the game; one of the few to get into the .400 class and the only batter that ever played an entire season without fanning is now a real estate broker and apartment house owner in Brooklyn, and his heaviest work is collecting his rents and banking the money. Keeler vies with Fielder Jones, Cy Young and Bill Lang as the richest retired ball player. Any of the four can write his check for more than $100,000—and have it honored, too.

Willie Keeler was one of that wonderful Baltimore outfield of 1894, '95 and '96, with Walter Brodie and Kelly. Brilliant fielders, hard hitters and great base runners were they, and

WILLIE KEELER

Keeler was the mightiest of the tribe. His last appearance in the big leagues was with the Giants, in 1910, as emergency hitter.

Keeler played 20 years, starting with Binghampton, in the Eastern league, in 1892, and winding up with Toronto in 1911.

Keeler holds the world's record for the greatest number of hits in a season. In 1897 he accumulated 243 singles for an average of .432. He was the most scientific batter that ever played ball. He invented "choking" the bat. Small and light, he realized he could do more effective hitting by merely tapping the ball "where they ain't" than by "swinging his head off" in an effort for long hits.

"Choking the Bat"

Always crowding the plate, Keeler grasped his bat near the middle and hit to any field at will; the fielders never knew where to play for him. Right or left-handed pitchers [illegible] alike, and, no matter how they pitched to him, "Wee Willie" placed the ball where he wanted to.

MAHER'S ENGLISH HOME

Spends a Good Deal of His Time In the Saddle, Fox-hunting.

"Danny" Maher, the jockey, has settled more or less permanently in England. A few years ago he rented a house near his friend, [illegible] the famous [illegible] jockey, and was so charmed with the district that he bought about a hundred acres of land. He now spends the greater part of the winter season there keeping himself in condition by hunting with the Earl of [illegible] hounds. Maher, whose parents came from Tipperary, did at one time think of buying a place in that county in order to settle down, when he retired from riding, but gave up the idea.

OUR POINT OF VIEW.

It is not necessary to read the commercial news to learn that the wild oats crop is one that never fails.

A Michigan man is said to feel all cut up because the newspapers have published the news that he has been operated on twenty-four times.

When the girl baby of Greenwich, Conn., who was born with two heads grows up she will be sure to reject the idea that two heads are better than one.

Any doctor who prescribes good whiskey, in a local option town, as a tonic for a run-down constitution will build up a fine practice.

According to the old proverb, all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy, but according to Professor Patrick, of the State University of Iowai, it drives Jack to drink. We are inclined to believe that the professor is nearer right than the proverb.

LOOKING FORWARD.

British journalists gathered in annual convention have just revelled in a forecast of what the newspaper will be twenty years from now. They might have been still better entertained had their president harked back to the time when literature consisted of rock-paintings or brick tablets, and when news-getting was an operation which each had to perform for himself with [illegible] ears. Even in the manuscript age, and up to the invention of printing, the oral method continued to keep man apart from man. The east could not be linked up with the present, for there were nothing save [illegible] traditions to preserve it; the present was so localized [illegible] for progressive [illegible] at large [illegible]. [illegible] wisdom as one generation could acquire was [illegible] for lack of record before it could be transmitted to the next. To-day the searchlights of the press illuminate every [illegible], and its swift shuttles weave together the ends of both [illegible]. An agent [illegible] at work to make common property of the [illegible] of mankind. Millions of people daily and hourly read the same things at the same instant. No Greek in the days of Pericles or Roman in the time of [illegible] could have imagined in his wildest dreams the miracle which we take as a matter of course!

And now e hear that the art of enabling the one to live and share in life of the many is to be further expanded. Happenings far and near are to be reported with the aid of "portable telephones" in the wireless manner; by a new alliance between electricity and mechanics the "story" will reach the newspaper office not as written "copy" but in solid columns of type ready for the machines. There are not to be more newspapers, but larger circulations and more frequent editions, with delivery of them by aeroplanes to distant subscribers, and to local readers by pneumatic tubes.

All of which, of course, partakes of the "speculation in futures." But its realization in kind, if not in detail, is more than probable. The demand for news grows apace, and the supplying of it is an increasingly important factor in our complex modern civilization. Out of demand and supply come surer foundations for public opinion, saner individual judgments, and more efficient co-operation. It is impossible to foresee an age in which the newspaper at its best will not function as a great illuminator of the common life, a great feeder of the common purpose, a great instrument of the common will.

Every Weak Throat Quickly Strengthened And Bronchitis Cured

Grand Results Follow the Direct Breathing Remedy, Which Cures Without Drugging.

The country is fairly wild over the wonderful recovery that throat sufferers are making every day with Catarrhozone. From ocean to ocean come letters telling of rapid success and cures when the complaint was chronic and long standing. It's a brand new principle upon which Catarrhozone works—not a single dose of medicine to take—nothing to upset the stomach or spoil digestion.

You can breathe through the Catarrhozone Inhaler medicated air that is full of healing, soothing balsams, full of piney antiseptic essences that resemble the air of the pine woods in the Adirondacks. The piney vapor has a truly marvelous action on weak throats. It brings strength and health to the bronchitic, stops that hacking, irritating cough, prevents hoarseness and difficult breathing. You can't find anything for weak-throated people on earth more beneficial than Catarrhozone. It means heaven on earth to the man that has had bronchitis, catarrh or throat irritation. You will realize this the first time you use Catarrhozone, which is a scientific preparation specially designed for diseases of the nose, throat and bronchial tubes. Get the large size, it lasts two months, costs $1.00; medium size, 50c.; sample size, 25c. All storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

SCHOOL LUNCHES

When They Are Necessary They Should be Appetizing

"Mercy, I haven't anything in the house for John's lunch!" says John's mother. "I'll just boil him an egg and butter some of those biscuits we had last night and give him some money for ice cream cones."

Johnnie goes off not very happy because his lunch is awkward to carry in his pocket. Mother has forgotten to buy him a box; poor child, he does not realise that it will harder to carry it home in his little "tummy" after he has eaten it.

There should always be something for the school lunch in the house as long as there are children going to school from it. To leave this important matter until school time may make all the difference between a fine healthy child and a nervous dyspeptic. Many children are loggy and unable to concentrate their minds after eating their lunches because the badly balanced and badly arranged food does not agree with them.

A great statesman as well a great gormet said: "Food must appeal to three of the senses: seeing, smelling and tasting." There is nothing pleasing to the eye in four biscuits not too carefully spread with butter, and certainly the odor of hard boiled egg is not pleasant. A torn paper that lets the salt drift all over everything does not conduce to making a lunch more palatable.

Where there are short session schools, children do not need big lunches; three or four sandwiches a relish and a sweet is all that is necessary. Do not make them monotonous. Try and have a little surprise every day. You know how much children like surprises.

Have plenty of oiled paper as white tissue paper napkins in the house. They are very inexpensive and very necessary to a successful school luncheon, which to be altogether successful must give the child a feeling of pride as well as satisfaction when he opens it.

Mothers should pay a great deal of attention to these school lunches as they will often make a great difference in the child's standing in his school grades.

It is a good idea to have more than one kind of sandwich in the lunch box; but when using peanut butter, cheese, or beans as filling do not add meat sandwiches, as there are enough carbonates in the cheese, beans and nuts without this addition.

Above all, see that the luncheon is put up daintily without any "messy" bits of food about it. If you have relishes that must be eaten with salt and pepper, put these condiments in different colored tissue paper, and if you have pickles be sure that they are wrapped up securely in oiled paper so that they will not spoil other food near which they are placed.

A tin lunch box should be provided; as it is not only more convenient but the mere fact of having to remember to take it to and from school teaches responsibility.

The lunch box should contain a relish, a heavy sandwich, a sweet of some kind, and fruit if possible. This will not be expensive if a mother puts her mind to it. The expenditure of mind is always greater than of money in the making of a successful home keeper, and the children's lunches are a very important part of home keeping.

To Launder Silk Underwear

To wash silk mesh and crepe de chine underwear satisfactorily prepare a suds of pure soap and soft water, warm but not hot. If the water is naturally hard dissolve a little borax in it. Then knead the silk garments about in the suds with the hands until all the dirt is loosened. Put them in one piece at a time, as they must be thoroughly kneaded if they are to be thoroughly cleaned.

If they are badly soiled they will need to be immersed in a second suds bath.

After they are clean rinse them in two changes of clear lukewarm water and wring them gently dry. Hang them out of doors in the shade, or else in the house in an open window, where there is no sun. When they are almost dry iron them. If possible iron them with a piece of thin muslin between them and the iron. This method prevents a shiny gloss from coming to the silk.

Caring for Knives

To prevent knives not in daily use getting rusty rub them over after cleaning with a little sweet oil. Then wrap in tissue paper and afterwards in thick brown paper, folding the parcel tightly up, so that as little air as possible may get to the knives. Keep them in the driest storing place you have. If wanted for use put them in hot soapy water, dry, and give a slight rub on the knifeboard to restore the polish.

cause of liberty and sacrificed his own good faith on the altar of papal reaction in Alberta and Saskatchewan by means of the celebrated Autonomy bills? Conservatives have made mistakes and have been most properly punished for them, but what Conservative leader, nay, what Conservative leaders, taken all together from the beginning to the end in the history of Canada, have strewn the shores of time with such a list of wrecks and wrongdoings as Sir Wilfrid? I am persuaded that when Mr. Livingstone thinks over Sir Wilfrid Laurier's conduct with regard to Manitoba, Quebec, the Autonomy bills and Ne Temere, he will agree that it is enough to overwhelm any man. The single attempt to plaster this country with Ne Temere, and to keep it plastered with that badge of serfdom, is enough surely without the others, to make us pause and ask ourselves if we are lovers of freedom or merely slaves of party.

And let me ask Mr. Livingstone, in parting, what he thinks of the Liberal Government of Saskatchewan, which altered its recent School Act at the last moment in order to compel every Roman Catholic to support separate schools whether he wanted to or not. I saw the bill in original drafted form. The clause I refer to was written over the original printed clause in red ink. It was written over and in substitution for the original printed clause which allowed Catholics the usual liberty of human beings. When I saw what had been done—saw it as approved and as it went to the printer for final reprinting, I could not forbear to exclaim: "It is written in red—it is well written so, for that is the color of blood."

All parties require watching, and the very existence of a nation depends upon our love for it as against our love for self or party, but who can deny that Sir Wilfrid Laurier has been more faithful to the church of which he boasts that he is such a lie fervent fervent member, than to the people? That he has failed to put his Catholic principles into full effect in Canada is not his fault. To the 300,000 Orangemen of this country belongs the credit of preserving our liberty from his insidious attacks.

MR. BORDEN'S STATEMENT.

Mr. Borden said in the debate on the Marriage Question in 1911-12, vol. 1, page 1636: "Now, my honorable friend, in the very able address which he has delivered, has spoken of the relation of Church and State in this country with regard to this matter. So far as that is concerned every one of us knows that under the laws of Canada and under the laws of every Province in Canada the decree of any church cannot invalidate the civil law." Is this vindication of the people's rights not in great contrast to the history of Sir Wilfrid's ideals? And I think most people will agree that, so far, Mr. Borden has been true to his words. Such a sentiment as that uttered by Mr. Borden, quoted above, would be impossible to Sir Wilfrid Laurier or to any other man in good standing, as he is, with the Roman Catholic Church, which now, more than ever, in the course of its existence, is seeking by almost unbelievable decrees and policy, to crush Liberty and Democracy once and for all. Its policy of waiting for the world to reform has failed. It proposes to wait no longer. Its very last decree, no longer ago than 1907, actually condemns freedom and free knowledge. For the first time in history the church requires an oath of fidelity. When a Pope requires an oath of submission to his orders it is going a very long way indeed. At one blow the whole church has become a Society of Jesuits. As I sit in the House of Commons, and hear and see Sir Wilfrid, I marvel more and more that he can look Freedom in the face when he says dramatically: "I am a loyal, aye, a fervent Catholic." For Catholicism is not only a religion against which as such I have not a word to say: it is chiefly a system, into whose hands it believes the world is given and from which it demands the most abject submission. Its latest weapon is education, which is the most dangerous of all. The great world-conflict is at hand. It will be as interesting as it is important.

Yours, etc.

Acorns as Human Food

Very little attention has been given to the utilization of acorns. It is well known that they are used as food for cattle, horses, swine, turkeys, and those of several species of white oaks also form the food of man. The acorns of white oaks are mostly large and the trees in general produce fruit very abundantly. The Indians in California always gathered the acorns of the Californian oak and years of great scarcity often caused much misery. Even the early white settlers of California relied on the crop of acorns as a part of their food supply.

Infant's Amazing Breakfast

A curious case has been investigated by the Cambridgeshire county coroner. Daisy Howard, aged 21 months, of Chittering, had breakfast of pork, cheese, bread, and an orange from which the pips had been removed. About three hours later she was found dead in bed. A doctor stated that a post-mortem examination showed the baby died of suffocation, but there was nothing to account for it. The throat and lungs were quite clear, and there were no external marks or injury. The jury found that the child was accidentally suffocated whilst in bed probably, through food recently eaten.

A Sign of Sobriety

At Llanrwst a Rhyl man was sentenced to a month's imprisonment for stealing a coat and a bunch of keys from the Hand Inn, Eglwysbach. Mrs. Jones, the licensee's wife, when asked whether the prisoner was sober at the time, replied, "Certainly; he ordered bread and cheese."

Hanged in a Church

William Jackson, aged sixty-seven years, was found inside Bowburn Wesleyan Church near Goshen, hanging by a rope fastened to the rails above the basement. Jackson, a widower, resided with his daughter, who is caretaker of the church. He was a retired railway policeman and keeper of the Goshen Golf Links.

CHOSE OWN SWIMMING HOLES

John Muir Relates How, by Their Own Method, Bathing Was Made a Delight to Boys.

It appears natural for children to be fond of water, although the Scotch method of making every duty dismal contrived to make necessary bathing for health terrible to us. I well remember among the awful experiences of childhood being taken by the servant to the seashore when I was between two and three years old, stripped at the side of a deep pool in the rocks, plunged into it among crawling crawfish and slippery wriggling snake-like eels, and drawn up gasping and shrieking only to be plunged down again and again. As the time approached for this terrible bathing I used to hide in the darkest corners of the house, and oftentimes a long search was required to find me. But after we were a few years older we enjoyed bathing with other boys as we wandered along the shore, careful however not to get into a pool that had an invisible boy-devouring monster at the bottom of it. Such pools, miniature maelstroms, were called "Sookin-in-goats," and were well known to most of us. Nevertheless we never ventured into any pool on strange parts of the coast before we had thrust a stick into it. If the stick were not pulled out of our hands we boldly entered and enjoyed plashing and ducking long ere we had learned to swim.—John Muir, in Atlantic.

Diabetes

TORTURED WITH AN UNQUENCHABLE THIRST FOR YEARS; TRIED EVERYTHING THAT MEDICAL AID COULD DO FOR ME, BUT GRADUALLY GOT WORSE TRIED SANOL'S ANTI-DIABETES AND WAS CURED.

Ashville, Man.

Dear Sirs:—

During the month of March I was informed that I had a well developed case of Diabetes. I immediately placed myself upon a rigid diet after a week of which the first urinalysis disclosed a sugar content of 8 p.c. After several months of dieting during which time I was taking a so-called cure the sugar content was reduced to 3 p.c. I began taking SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES with the result that within a short time the urinalysis made by competent persons, and at different periods, disclosed no sugar whatever. This condition, is indeed, very gratifying and I have every reason to believe that I am quite cured. For some time past my diet has been a liberal one, consisting largely in some foods high in carbo-hydrates, but I still avoid all sugars and syrups. This is in accordance with the directions which I can well afford to follow. I am gaining in weight and strength, and once more feel that it is good to be alive.

There is no question in my mind regarding the virtues of SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES, and I feel that a great blessing has been conferred upon suffering humanity by this discovery, and use of this medicine."

Yours truly,
W. A. FOX.

ABOUT THE HOUSE

When kitchen towels wear thin stitch two of them together around the edges and diagonally across the centre.

When furniture does not actually need polishing it is a good idea to wipe it off thoroughly with a cloth dipped in linseed oil.

A good furniture polish may be made of one-half pint each of linseed oil and turpentine and a quarter pint each of vinegar and methylated spirits. Shake together thoroughly in a bottle.

Round centrepieces may be dried by laying them while wet on a sheet of clean glass, kept for the purpose. See that the linen is placed smoothly, and then set the glass in the sun.

A most convenient little steamer to fit the top of a teakettle may be made from a five-pound lard pail with a tightly fitted cover. Punch holes through the bottom with a large nail.

To remove discolorations from enamel pans boil a little chloride of lime in the water with which they are filled.

When polishing the stove add a little sugar or syrup to the polish and it will not burn off so quickly.

"Futurist" Evening Coat

This white evening coat is a "futurist" design by Mme. Ripley and is of white satin stenciled in red and green tulips. It has broad revers and cuffs of black satin.

Securing a Veil

A good way to keep a veil tidy under the chin, and so that it may be easily lifted when required, is to get a piece of the finest round elastic, about an inch and a half in length, thread through the foot of the veil in the middle, about a quarter of a yard, then draw in to the size of elastic and secure both sides. This is a much better way than twisting the veil round, which, if "spotted," generally catches and tears.

Removing Jar Labels

To remove the label from a jar or bottle is often rather difficult. This method is always successful: Wet the label thoroughly and then hold it near a fire for a moment. The steam thus generated immediately acts on the paste or gum.

Good Piano Polish

The following is an excellent polish for the piano: Take equal parts of vinegar and paraffin oil, and put together in a bottle. Shake well before using. It will be found to give a more brilliant polish, and has not the sticky appearance of furniture creams.

Boiling Rice

A dash of lemon juice added to the water in which rice is boiled will keep the grains separate and will whiten the cereal.

Gasoline for Moths

If moths get in upholstered furniture, cushions, hat trimmings, etc., saturate with gasoline. It will not injure any fabric, will soon evaporate and leave no odor.

MILITANT WOMEN IN ANCIENT TIMES

They Made as Great a Stir in Old Rome as the Suffragettes in Modern London

Militant women marching the streets of London and attempting to enter the sacred precincts of the House of Commons, using bombs, burning houses and holding stormy public meetings—this has been generally accepted as a new development brought forth by the twentieth century.

But this phase of feminine activity is not modern. The men of ancient Rome had to face their aroused womankind; who, agitating practically the same cause, adopted identical methods, displayed similar persistence and tenacity of purpose, and in their day created equal turmoil and disturbance.

The crisis was brought about at the beginning of the third century through the efforts to abrogate the so-called Oppian law, which had been passed twenty years before during the terror caused by Hannibal's invasion and had attempted to curb the growing luxury of women. "The area about the Capitol," says the historian Livy, "was filled with crowds who favored or opposed the law. Nor could the matrons be kept at home, either by advice or shame, not even by the express commands of their husbands; but beset every street and avenue in the city, beseeching the men as they went down to the Forum to suffer the women to have their former rights to wear ornaments restored to them."

Quite a Modern Flavor

The debate became most heated, and speedily shifted from the narrow question of what the women should wear to the real point at issue—the question of whether or not the women had any right publicly to interfere with or to urge legislation. How modern sound the arguments of Cato the Censor, that strong-minded man, whose ringing voice must find an echo in many a present-day legislator's breast, when in referring to the behavior of the women, he said:

"It was not without painful emotions of shame that I just now made my way into the Forum through a band of women. Had I not been restrained by respect for the modesty and dignity of some individuals among them, rather than of the whole number, and been unwilling that they should be seen rebuked by a Consul, I should not have refrained from saying to them, 'What sort of practice is this, running into public, besetting the streets, and addressing other women's husbands? Could not each have made the same request to her husband at home? Although if matrons would let their modesty confine them within the limits of their own rights, it did not become you, even at home, to concern yourselves about any laws that might be passed or repealed here.'"

Equals or Superiors

After relating how the elder Romans had confined their women to their homes, under the strict guidance and surveillance of their parents, brothers, or husbands, and then pointing to the weakness of the husband as the primary cause of the state of affairs at that time existing, the worthy Consul went on to say:

"If every individual had made it a rule with respect to his wife to maintain the prerogative and authority of a husband, we should have less trouble with the whole sex. Will you give rein to their intractable nature, and then expect that they themselves set bounds to their licentiousness, and without your interference? They long for liberty—or, rather, to speak the truth, for unbounded freedom in every particular. For what will they not attempt if they now come off victorious? The moment that they become your equals they will become your superiors. So soon as the law shall cease to limit the expenses of your wife, you yourself will never be able to do so."

Two Sides to Story

In reply to Cato, Valerius the Tribune, said: "It is no new thing for the women to come out in public in a body on occasions so closely concerning themselves. In the time of Romulus they, by their interposition between the two armies, stopped a fight in the Forum; later they turned away the army of Coriolanus, which would have overwhelmed the city. When Rome was taken by the Gauls it was the matrons who brought their gold into the public treasury and ransomed the city."

The women next day, continues Livy, poured out into the public streets in much greater numbers, and in a body beset the doors of M. and P. Brutus the Tribunes, who had protested against the repeal of the law, and did not withdraw until the Tribunes, worn out by their importunity, promised not to oppose it further.

For many years thereafter the Roman legislators studiously avoided interference with feminine rights.

AN EVENTFUL RIDE

Dr. Bentley Never Talked Much About Himself, but It Was Not Necessary.

By COURTNEY SPENCER.

"Yes, Miss, that's the way to the village. So you're the new principal of the Free school! I hope you'll like the place, Miss, and stay with us a while; the last principal, she founded the school—Miss Brown, from Boston, you know—she just bided here for seven and twenty years until Doc Bentley sent her home to die. Couldn't do nothing for her, he said, and that's saying a heap, for we all thinks a good deal of Doc Bentley down this way.

"Of course, when they first started this scheme for teaching the poor whites reading and writing, there was some feeling against it in this section. A cracker ought to keep his place, I say, and not to go apeing the learning of us quality folks. But Miss Brown—well, she was a fine lady and I reckon she got us all converted long before Doc Bentley sent her home.

"Doc Bentley, did you ask? Yes, he's been our doctor for nigh upon five years now. That's his house on the hill. But you won't get nothing out of him, Miss, except a civil word when he passes you, maybe, for he isn't a man to talk about himself. So seeing as I know his story and all the other folks in the place have got it wrong, I'll tell it to you.

"Five years ago Doc Bentley was practicing in Nortonville, a hundred miles across the mountains yonder. He'd passed out of college some three or four years then, and already he'd made quite a reputation among people there. You know Nortonville, you say, Miss? Yes, I've heard it's a fine city and has a whole lot of rich people there. Doc Bentley was considered the best doctor there, and he used to be thick with all the society folks in the place. He wasn't reserved then, like he is now, but jolly and lively, they tell me—a kind of overgrown boy. He isn't so very old today, except in soul.

"But for all his big practice Bentley wasn't the man to sacrifice the poor to get a bigger fee. Many and many a case he treated for nothing, I'm told; he'd keep the biggest folks in Nortonville waiting in his receiving room while he was giving free treatment to some poor colored woman who'd got in to see him first. And that's how he came to grief.

"You see, Miss, Doc Bentley was engaged to be married to Miss Edith Somers, the only daughter of old Jim Somers, who built the railroad from Claflin clear over these mountains. The day was set for their marriage at the Presbyterian church. And you'd have thought that he'd have let up a little on his practicing, with his wedding day only a few hours off. But he didn't. He worked harder than ever, and people said that, likely as not, he'd forget which was the day and remember only which wasn't.

"Doc Bentley, Did You Ask?"

"The night before his marriage a call came over the long distance telephone from Carters, which lies eighteen miles south from Nortonville, in the midst of the mountains. A negro man had been crushed by a wagon and he was the nearest doctor. Would he come at once? If he didn't there'd be one life to set against the many he'd saved when they came to audit his book of life on judgment day.

"Doc Bentley dropped the telephone receiver and called to his man, 'Saddle my horse, Jim,' he said. 'I'm going to ride to Carters.' And, seeing that nothing he could say would stop him, Jim saddled the horse, and Doc Bentley reached Carters at midnight and saved a life.

"It had been downhill to Carters, but it was uphill going back, and eighteen miles upon a tired horse may mean [illegible] hours or twenty-four, when the mountain roads have become rushing streams, and especially when your horse falls and breaks his leg in two places. Doc Bentley rose up from the muddy ground, looked at the animal, and drew his revolver from his pocket to put it out of its pain. Then he reflected. 'If I can cure a man's broken leg I reckon I can cure a horse's,' he said to himself. So he pulled the beast into a thicket, and, two days later, he was back there with plaster of Paris and a load of corn—and the end of it is that Doc Bentley rides that same nag today, up and around Grangers. See, there he comes over that rise. He'll be here in five minutes. Watch him when he passes; the horse has a limp, and though he can go when he wants to, Doc Bentley won't push him on these made roads.

"Where was I at? O, yes. Well, when he was six miles out of Nortonville, and walking into town, Miss Edith Somers was waiting at the Presbyterian church. That was at noon, and you might think Doc Bentley could have covered the distance on foot by then. But the fact is—which I forgot to tell you—that he had been stunned by his fall and lay like a log in the road from two in the morning until half past eight. Also, he had a broken shoulder. So you see people were somewhat harsh when they said he oughtn't to have gone, or, if he had gone, he ought to have been back on time.

"Miss Somers waited with the bridal party from noon until a quarter past one. Then her father took her home, and an hour later they were speeding in their car out of Nortonville. She never went back—I guess she was too proud. Her father took her to Palm Beach and after that to Paris and London, and they say she broke a score of hearts during the next few years; but she never married. Of course you know Jim Somers lost his fortune in the panic year. They sold their empty house at Nortonville, and that was the last anybody heard of them. Just faded out of people's minds. I heard Miss Somers took up missionary work or something of that sort afterwards. And to think that an old negro man with a crushed chest was at the bottom of it all!

"Doc Bentley had to leave Nortonville, of course. We learned his story soon after he got here, but I reckon nobody holds it against him. Anyway, he's a powerful good doctor. But don't you believe what other folks say, for, as I told you, they've got it wrong, Miss.

"Well, I must leave you here, for I've got some shopping to do. But walk straight ahead to the turn and you'll see the school on top of that rise. Good-morning, doctor! This is the new principal of—You know her?

"Carry Myers, come here! Come here! There, you're too slow! You've missed it! What did I see? Why, Doc Bentley kissing the new principal of the Free school in the middle of the street, as bold as brass, and—look! Why, they're carrying on as if there wasn't another human being in the world but just themselves!"

TALE OF THE SMOKING PINE

Indian Legend That Accounts for the Tree That Is Found in Maine.

When the chief, Assaimo, who presided over the tribe of Indians that dwelt on the banks of the Bombahook, was struck dead by a thunderbolt, the people of the tribe buried him near the banks of that stream. And there today, near Hallowell, Me., over the spot of his grave stands the smoking pine. This is the story the Indians tell of the origin of this tree.

When the first white men came to inhabit this land they found the Indians a strong and sturdy race inhabiting this new country. To them the white man brought vice and disease, and soon the Indians' native strength and vitality began to ebb. They grew feeble, lost their former hardihood and vigor, and were soon unable to cope with the more powerful stranger in the land.

Chief Assaimo saw this and warned his people that the Great Spirit had spoken their fate, which was to be that of destruction. He counseled them not to join in strife with the white man, but to call him into council and to smoke with him the pipe of peace.

"I am soon to die," added the old chief, "and where my body lies there shall arise a great pine which shall forever smoke as a token of eternal peace between the red and the white people."

The prophecy of the old chieftain was fulfilled. The compact of peace between the Indians and the English was made and soon thereafter Chief Assaimo died struck down by a thunderbolt. Then it was that his tribesmen decided to leave the land and move on westward.

On visiting their beloved Chief Assaimo's grave to bid him a last farewell, they beheld with awe and wonder the complete fulfillment of his prophecy. There stood a beautiful tall pine from whose leaves and branches a haze of smoky mist was constantly rising. Hence it is that from that day on this tree has been called the smoking pine.—Celia K. Hunt.

Strange Guests at St. Bernard

An enormous flock of swallows was overtaken by a heavy snowstorm near the famous hospice of St. Bernard in the Alps last winter, Ave Maria states. When the good monks saw the birds they opened the doors and windows of their building that the little feathered strangers might have shelter.

All the rooms were crowded with them, thousands remaining until sunrise. The next day proved fine and the guests pursued their way toward Italy. This is very pleasant to learn but it saddens one to know that a vast number of less fortunate birds failed to reach the hospice and were found dead in the snow by the tender hearted brothers.

CHEVALIER'S START

The Beginning Is Not Always a Good Index

Mr. Albert Chevalier, the famous interpreter of "coster" life, had a somewhat disturbing experience in the early days of his career. He was giving a performance at a West End theatre in London but the audience failed to appreciate or respond to his humor. Just as he was nearing the end of his performance there was a terrific round of applause, and he thanked his stars that success was his at last. He was about to take an encore, when the manager seized him by the arm and pulled him into the wings.

"Done well, haven't I?" asked Mr. Chevalier. "Hear the applause."

"You silly ass, they're not clapping you," replied the manager. "It's the Prince of Wales who's just come in."

On another occasion when a stage door keeper at one of the theatres approached Mr. Chevalier's brother with a request for a couple of seats.

"With pleasure," was the reply.

"But I don't want 'em for myself," the man explained. "I've seed 'im. It's the missus that wants 'em. Like all the women, she just wants to say she's seed 'im."

"That will be all right," replied Mr. Chevalier's brother. "You send her along, and I'll see that she has good seats."

"Thank you, sir," replied the man. He drew a step nearer and whispered confidentially, "Don't worry about the places. Put 'er anywhere, but put 'er near the door, so that she can get out easy in case she don't like 'im."

Mr. Chevalier's most famous song is undoubtedly "My Old Dutch." The inspiration came to him one day when lost in a London fog, and he wrote out the verses under a lamp-post. Strange to relate, when he first tried the song at Manchester he was hissed off.

Electrocuted Fish

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at the office of any Local Agent of Dominion Lands (not Sub-agency), on certain conditions.

Duties.—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required in every case, except when residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside of his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Six months residence in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and 50 acres extra cultivation. The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land after report by Homestead Inspector on application for patent.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price, $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

Yellow Piano Keys

The foundation of a piano key is made from pine wood, which always contains a certain amount of resin that would yellow the ivories if it were not for the rather modern method of placing a thin layer of basswood between the pine foundation and the ivory. This method accounts for the fact that our modern keys do not discolor so much as the keys of the old-fashioned piano of our grandmother's time.

TRUE IN MISFORTUNE

Human nature is vilely selfish and rather enjoys the failure of other people. "Don't expect help or sympathy from others," advised a notorious millionaire. "You won't get it if you do. Keep your failures to yourself. If you tell them to other people, don't expect them to enjoy them, that's all. It's human nature, and cannot be altered." It is wonderful how many people accept that miserable view. It does not do them good. I believe it is as false a view as anyone can hold, and one which leads unerringly to the failure of those who hold it. The man or woman who believes that human beings are no better than that, won't make the best of them, or of himself or herself either. "Don't expect too much, but don't expect too little of men or women," advised Lord Palmerston. "People are always running to one extreme or the other in too much or too little confidence in them. I have seen a good deal of gratitude and much ingratitude. I think I may assure you of this, that desert inevitably gathers to it some who remain true to it in every misfortune."—The Penny Magazine.

THE PLAIN GIRL'S DAY

Beauty is an Asset But Not an Indispensible One

Beauty always has been, and always will be, one of the biggest assets woman possesses.

To-day, however, is the opportunity of the "plain" girl. Beauty is no longer the "open sesame" for woman to the different spere of life, or, indeed, to the marriage market.

Take the stage, for instance—where beauty always congregates—good looks alone do not ensure success today. Some of the most famous actresses are far from beautiful. Personality, intelligence, charm of manner, more than compensate for all insipid prettiness which, alone, is apt to pall.

Once you have realized that you are outside the pale of beauty, don't despair and let your prettier sisters take all the plums of life, just reckon up your good points. It cannot be called conceit to take yourself to task in this matter, for every woman owes it to herself to present a pleasing exterior.

The beauty of your teeth, hair, complexion, and hands—four potent points—lies in your own power. A Frenchwoman once remarked, "Give me a good pair of eyes and I will do the rest myself." And it is possible, with a little care and thought, to transform utterly a plain girl into an attractive personality.

Take your clothes, for instance, starting with hats. You can't expect a hat—of the style turned out in thousands—to suit every class of face that comes under it. Bend it or trim it to suit your own particular type.

Then your dress—think for a moment of the shade most likely to enhance the color of your hair and eyes. It is not wise to follow the fashionable coloring; for a woman of [illegible] complexion and beautiful face it is another matter.

Deep down we all want to be beautiful—it has been woman's desire from the earliest ages, and none can deny its power—but the plain woman of to-day need not despair, personality and charm go further.

LARGEST ANIMAL

A Description of the Huge Skeleton Found in East Africa

The Gigantosaurus whose bones were discovered recently in German East Africa, and has been reconstructed in the University of Berlin is believed to be the largest animal that ever trod the earth. It is one hundred and sixty feet long, twenty-five feet high, and weighs one hundred tons. The discovery was made by a German expedition sent out by the University of Berlin, which had been digging for [illegible] years in search of [illegible] skeleton. [illegible] The "Gigantosaurus" is estimated to have been just double the length of the American Diplodocus [illegible], whose [illegible] was [illegible] several years ago.

KNACK OF SWIMMING

Necessary to Relax the Muscles and Avoid Sense of Fear

Lew Sarett explains the difficulty which the non-swimmer has in [illegible] in an interesting article, "The Knack of Learning to Swim," as follows: "The non-swimmer, fearing the water, very naturally tenses his muscles as he struggles to keep his head above the water, until he is as hard as a rock, and, like a rock, he sinks; whereas the swimmer, having no fear, relaxes his muscles, and hence becomes buoyant. The explanation is a simple physical one. Tense, taut muscles increase the specific gravity of the body and make it sink in water; loose, relaxed muscles (given an ordinary supply of air in the lungs) will make the body float."

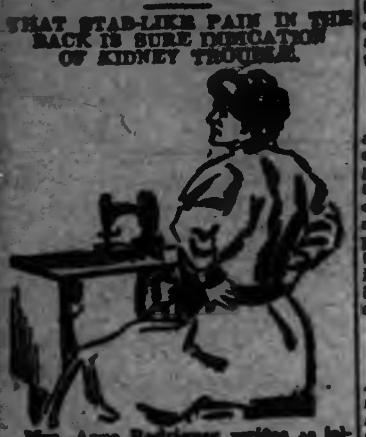
Is Your Back Full of Aches All Day Long

THAT STAB-LIKE PAIN IN THE BACK IS SURE INDICATION OF KIDNEY TROUBLE.



Mrs. Anna Rodriguez writes as follows from her home in Valencia:— "For a long time I suffered with failing strength and nagging headaches. My condition grew steadily worse, my limbs became bloated and shaky. I was sallow and thin, felt rheumatic pains, dizziness and chills. I unfortunately didn't suspect my kidneys and was nearly dead when I discovered the true cause of my sufferings. I read so much about the wonderful health and strength that comes to all who use Dr. Hamilton's Pills that I felt sure they would help me. Such a [illegible] of health and comfort I got from Dr. Hamilton's Pills I can't describe. They speedily put me right, and their steady use keeps me active, energetic, strong and happy. I earnestly urge others to regulate and tone their system with Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut."

No greater medicine exists than Dr. Hamilton's Pills for the cure of indigestion, constipation, flatulence, liver, bladder and kidney trouble. Refuse substitutes. 25c. per box or five boxes for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers, or postpaid by the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Third Operation in Warsaw.

Mr. Matthews' store in Warsaw, was broken into Friday night by thieves and 14 pairs of boots stolen, sizes ranging from 7s to 9s. Two pairs were long topped river boots. No trace of the thief could be found, but Constable Clements is working on the case. No doubt, whoever got away with the haul, made good tracks with such a supply of boots.

Police After Swindler.

A man named M. Ross, described as about 30 years old, 5 feet 5 inches tall, and weighing about 155 pounds, dark complexion, clean stubby moustache, has been working the country, taking orders for spectacles, and getting cash deposits on orders, promising early shipment. After obtaining the money, the parties ordering hear no more from him. He has been operating in the adjoining townships.

Saturday Market Prices.

Saturday's market was largely attended, both buyers and sellers being out in force. The following prices prevailed: Butter 30c lb.; eggs, 24c to 28c per doz.; chickens, $1.25 to $1.75 a pair; [illegible], $1.25 a bag; $1.75 a pair, potatoes, $1.25 a bag; apples, (hand picked) 60 a bag. All meats were the same. Hides, butcher's 11c, farmers' 10c lb. Live hogs, $9.25 cwt.

At St. Paul's.

The Rev. Stanley Russel, M.A., of St. Anne-on-Sea, England, occupied the pulpit in St. Paul's church yesterday at both services, preaching eloquent and impressive sermons to large congregations. Mr. Russel is a brother of Mrs. Allan, wife of the organist, Mr. John Allan. He is among the foremost preachers in the Nonconformist Church in the Old Land.

Lindsay Cheese Board.

At the Lindsay Cheese Board last week five hundred and sixty eight cheese were offered, as follows: Star 88, N. Ops 80, Dunsford 100; N. Verulam 60; N. Harvey 32; Bobcaygeon 120, Maple Leaf 40, Red Rock 54. Mr. Flavelle led off with a bid of 13 cents, followed by 13 1-16 cents raised by Mr. Flavelle himself to 13 3-16 on a special order. Mr. Gillespie did not bid. No sales were made, the factories holding out for 13½. The Board adjourned for two weeks till Monday, October 6th, but will sell in the meantime if the quarter can be realized.

KING'S WHARF BURGLARY.

High County Constable Thornbury, of Lindsay, Post Office Inspector Thompson, of Toronto, and Postmaster Palen, of Lindsay, were at King's Wharf, Emily, where they made an investigation in connection with the burglarizing of the post office. The officials made a thorough investigation, and obtained all the information possible, bearing on the theft. It is expected that some clue will be furnished of the perpetrators before long.

A Monster Lunge.

Mr. Harry Thompson, who lives near Jubilee Point, while trawling in the river near Rice Lake, caught a monster muskilonge. The fish weighed 30½ pounds, was 4 feet and half an inch in length, measures 7 inches across when lying on its side, and 5 inches across the back. It was brought to the city by Capt. Pearson of the steamer Manita and was placed on exhibition in the window of Mr. Banks, in the Market Block, who gave $3 worth of fishing tackle for the privilege of displaying it for a short time. This is probably the largest fish caught in these waters for many years.

Street Car Time Tables.

A suggestion was made to The Times on Saturday that might be worth considering. It is that the street railway company have time cards printed and posted giving the arrival and departure of cars at certain points, say at Auburn, Central Park, corner Charlotte and George Streets, Agricultural grounds, corner Charlotte and Park streets and the Electric Works. What would be still more useful would be a standing advertisement in the local papers covering the above. We commend this to the favorable consideration of Mr. Munro, the capable manager of the company.

RURAL MAIL ROUTES.

Thanks to the efforts of Messrs. J. H. Burnham, M.P., and Mr. J. A. Sexsmith, M.P., Peterborough is well served with rural mail routes. There are, however, a few isolated districts unsatisfied. A service on these routes will also come in a short time. When a daily service is once established, it becomes a fixture, as it enables the farmer to get The Times as well as his letters and other mail matter every day that [illegible] the features of the city day. The Times is the only paper [illegible] rural mail routes the day of publication.

An Important Decision.

An important decision in a liquor case of interest in Peterborough, was rendered in Cobourg last week. The County Judge dismissed the appeal brought by Broderick, the hotelkeeper, against his conviction for [illegible] bottled goods sold over the bar [illegible] taken from the premises. The Broderick case was one of those which led to the private detectives of the department being assaulted while on the way to give evidence. Broderick was prosecuted under the amendment to the act last session [illegible] the sale of bottled goods for consumption off the premises [illegible] the [illegible] of [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Is It True?

Some few days ago an employee of the Carpenter Shop at the C.G.E. had his hand almost severed from the arm, by a circular saw. It is reported that since then the machine has been safeguarded. Had this been done previously, the accident might never have happened. A citizen was heard to remark yesterday that when the Workman's Compensation Act is enforced, the accidents in this particular factory would be less frequent.

10 CENT "CASCARETS" STRAIGHTEN YOU UP

No Sick Headache, Bilious Stomach Coated Tongue or Constipated Bowels by Morning.

Get a 10-cent box now.

Turn the rascals out—the headache, biliousness, indigestion, the sick, sour stomach and foul gases—turn them out to-night and keep them out with Cascarets.

Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never know the misery caused by a lazy liver, clogged bowels or an upset stomach.

Don't put in another day of distress. Let Cascarets cleanse your stomach; remove the sour, fermenting food; take the excess bile from your liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels. Then you will feel great.

A Cascaret to-night straightens you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from any drug store means a clear head, sweet stomach and clean, healthy liver and bowel action for months. Children love Cascarets because they never gripe or sicken.

DEATHS AND FUNERALS

Rev. Thomas B. Brown, of Edmonton, is the guest of Rev. J. R. Webb and Mrs. Webb.

Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Fowler and family have returned to the city from a two and a half month's residence in Miamisburg, Ohio, where Mr. Fowler represented the interests of the International Harvester Co.

The engagement is announced of Miss Mary Watt, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Watt, Brantford to Mr. Fred Allen Popplewell, son of Mr. A. A. Popplewell, Brantford. Marriage, Oct. 8th.

Mr. Millard J. Brooks, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Brooks, of this city, has entered Syracuse University, where he has taken up science, fitting himself for electric engineer.

The many friends of Miss Myra Moore, nurse in training, Grace Hospital, will be pleased to learn that her operation for appendicitis on Wednesday was very successful. Everything is favorable for a speedy recovery.

HARVEST SERVICES AT S. A. TEMPLE

The local corps of the Salvation Army are now in the midst of their annual World-Wide Harvest Festival effort, and are calling on all their friends for some expression of their practical sympathy with the work. Gifts to assist in aiding the needy will be acceptable. Knowing the sympathetic attitude generally of the Peterborough citizens, Adjutant and Mrs. McGillivray and their workers are very confident of the result.

Special services were held last week and yesterday special music and addresses were given. To-night, the Band of the Temple Corps will give a musical festival, and are inviting all their friends who make application to [illegible] tickets.

Do You Realize What This Means to You, Mr. Business Man?

How to Make Small Roses

For trimming children's hats the tiny flowers made of silk are extremely pretty, and the home milliner may therefore be glad of the following hints.

Small roses are made of two or three shades of silk or satin, or in all one shade, as preferred.

To make each flower: Cut a crossway strip of silk 1½ inches wide and sixteen inches long, which cut again into four-inch lengths. Take one length, fold cut edges together, twist round to form a tube, cut a six-inch length of green mounting wire, and bind one end round base of silk tube. Fold the cut edges of each remaining length of silk to meet, and gather. Draw up the thread to 1½ inches to form a leaf-shaped piece; fold round the centre tube, and bind round at base with mounting wire. Fold the two remaining leaves round the centre and bind firmly together at the base with the mounting wire, then neaten base with a twist of green silk or a calyx. This completes one rose. The bunch can be made as large or small as desired, and either mounted together, with a surround of foliage, or used singly.

AFTER THE FAKES

Mails of Canada Closed to Questionable Enterprises

The Postmasters-General of Canada and the United States are uniting in a crusade against mail order sharks who have been using the mails of both countries for fraudulent purposes.

Get-rich-quick men are, according to the post-office authorities, increasing in Canada at a disturbing rate, many of those who were driven out of New York, Chicago, and other cities across the line by the activities of the United States officials having turned their attention to Canada as a [illegible] field for their line of [illegible].

Commission Governed City

St. John, N.B., is a progressive Canadian city where the commission form of government has been tried with success, so it is said. The civic administration is in the hands of a mayor and four commissioners, the mayor elected for two years and the commissioners for four years, two retiring at the end of each biennial period. Any official may be removed from office by the people, and popular government is further assured by the initiative and referendum.

Punishment to Fit Crime

Among Chinese coolies a favored method of stealing rice is to hang up against a pile of sacks and stick a thin tube through the sacking, the rice, which is dry, naturally flowing through the tube into the thief's clothing. [illegible] is also caught in this manner, with a common punishment in this case is to set the thief [illegible] a large quantity and then pour water into his clothing, which makes matters rather uncomfortable for him.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES

The Canary's Health

Never let a birdcage hang in a room where the gas is alight, unless it is exceptionally well-ventilated. The air near the ceiling is always the most impure at night. Set the cage on the table, or, better still, on the floor (presuming you have no cat), and you will find the bird's health improve.

Cleaning Game

To remove feathers from game of any kind dip in boiling water, then wrap in a thick cloth. The feathers are steamed loose in a very few minutes and the "pins" will give very little or no trouble.

Anti-Ants

To keep away ants, sprinkle a little powdered borax and sugar on pantry shelves or anywhere that the ants are troublesome and they will leave immediately.

Flavors Jelly

Apple jelly can be given a delicious and new flavor by putting a leaf of rose geranium in the bottom of the glasses in which you pour it.

DEFIANCE NOT A BLUFF ULSTER FULLY PREPARED

General Richardson and Sir Edward Carson Review 100,000 Volunteers--Drills of Mounted Men and Infantry in Charge of Retired Officers Who Have Seen Service--Peers Sons and Farm Hands Shoulder to Shoulder

London, Sept. 22.—Ulster's defiance is no bluff. Inspection trips by Sir Edward Carson and General Richardson around the circle of Counties Down and Antrim, ended Saturday, and revealed a perfect military organization of one hundred thousand volunteers.

Peers' sons and sturdy yeomen are shoulder to shoulder with retired officers who have seen active service.

A wireless heliograph flashed the progress of the leaders. Lancers and infantry drill like veterans.

Reviews are held on private grounds in each village; rifle range, unquestionably, also secret arsenals are visited.

Men interviewed declared they expected a fight. A quarter of a million women have signed the pledge to assist each troop as nurses. Uniformed corps march every evening.

The crisis has moulded Ulster in democracy.

Countesses, girl operatives in mills, peers, clerks, gardeners, rank forget their rank in the deadly seriousness of preparations.

GOVERNMENT IS READY FOR THE COMING BYE-ELECTION

The Dates Likely to be Fixed by the Cabinet This Week--Four Vacancies

Ottawa, Sept. 22.—It is expected that the date for the opening of Parliament as well as the dates for the four Federal bye-elections will be settled by the Cabinet this week. Senator Lougheed, leader of the Government in the Upper Chamber, is here to attend the Cabinet meetings and the only absentees this week will be Hon. T. W. Crothers, Hon. C. J. Doherty and Hon. L. P. Pelletier.

The bye-elections will likely be fixed for the end of October or early in November. There are four vacancies, East Middlesex, South Bruce, South Lanark and Chateauguay. Conservative candidates have now been nominated in all the four seats and Liberals in only South Bruce and East Middlesex. Reports from Chateauguay, which was previously held by the Liberals, are that the Conservatives have a splendid chance of carrying the seat. Chateauguay has been Liberal since Confederation, but in 1911 the majority of the late member, Mr. J. P. Brown, dropped to 62. The Conservative candidate is Mr. W. Morris, who gave Mr. Brown such a hard fight in 1911.

Liberal Troubles.

The Liberals are having a great deal of difficulty in securing candidates. Chateauguay is a seat half French and half English and according to local custom the Provincial member is always French and the Dominion member English. Several French Liberals want the nomination which has caused a wide split in the party. There was talk of Mr. Bourassa entering the field, but this has been denied.

In South Lanark there is a Conservative and Independent Conservative in the field, but it is possible a new convention will be called and one of two men selected. In that case the seat will likely go Conservative by acclamation.

Acclamation.

East Middlesex is regarded at Ottawa as good as an acclamation and the Liberal candidate is not regarded seriously.

South Bruce is admittedly close. It has always been a close riding and the Liberals are making special efforts to carry the seat. However, the Conservatives have a strong candidate in a son of a former member, Mr. Henry Cargill, and there is no fear in Government circles, but that the seat will again return a supporter of the Borden Administration.

As soon as these dates are fixed, several of the Cabinet ministers will go on the stump.

Protestant Greeting

The Roman Catholic Bishop Designate, Mgr. O'Brien, D.D. has gone out of his way to address non-Catholics on the eve of his consecration. According to The Examiner, he has asked for peace and co-operation. Let it be said that Protestants desire to marry Catholics, but Catholics are restrained by the ban of the Church; Protestants would be educated with Catholics, but they are not accounted worthy; Protestants are free to enter R. C. churches, but Catholics are prohibited from returning the compliment. Protestants are under the ban of the Church as heretics who may be tortured and slain where possible. The Church's statutes still declare it. Is it not a mockery then for his lordship to ask for peace when he despises, rejects and curses us? Nevertheless, Protestants are polite enough, and charitable enough and strong enough to congratulate him on his advancement, and to wish him well—nay, even better.

DISTRIBUTION OF LIVE STOCK

Announced early in the season, the Dominion Live Stock Branch has this year undertaken a distribution of pure bred male animals throughout Canada on a somewhat extensive scale. In supporting this policy the aim has been to aid districts where pure bred sires were lacking and to encourage new communities in following an intelligent system in breeding. This form of assistance has proven very popular and during the past few months a large number of bulls and several stallions have been placed in various parts of the country in the hands of local associations formed specially for the purpose of handling and maintaining them. All animals placed remain the property of the Department, [illegible]

MAYOR OF ROME ATTACKS PAPACY

Delivers Bitter Anti-Catholic Speech at Celebration of Anniversary of City's Capture.

Rome, Sept. 22.—Signor Ernest Nathan, Mayor of Rome, in connection with the exercises commemorating the forty-third anniversary of the fall of the temporal power delivered a bitter anti-Catholic speech. It was his first speech antagonistic of the Papacy since that delivered at the same exercises in 1910. In part, the Mayor said:

"The political reactionists, deaf to the voice of the national will, wrapped in their vestments of religion and flattered by the hope that they will regain lost prestige, are insinuating themselves among the masses of the people called to the ballot in an endeavor to secure their support."

Referring to the recent games of the International Catholic League, held under the patronage of the Vatican, the Mayor said:

"This athletic squadron marched the streets of Rome and with impunity affirmed in various languages their impotent desire to restore it to the Papacy."

ORANGEMEN STRONGLY OPPOSED TO CHANGES

Peterborough Brethren Practically a Unit Against French Attitude on Bi-Lingualism.

There is a strong feeling amongst the Orangemen of this city and district against the concession made by the Ontario Government with respect to teaching of French in Ontario Schools. Nor is this confined to Orangemen, but Protestants generally, who feel that Sir James Whitney has acted very unwisely. Some of them go so far as to say that they believe, if this policy is persisted in, that it will ruin the Conservative party so far as the Ontario Legislature is concerned.

The Peterborough Protestant Federation with its thousand members, are practically unanimous in upholding Dr. Pyne, and propose to give expression to their feelings at the earliest opportunity.

Mr. F. W. Fords, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Ontario East, is reported to have said, in referring to this matter: "The legislative committee of the Grand Orange Lodge of Ontario East, will take this up and object to what the Government has done. We will have a meeting of the committee before long, probably at Toronto. My attitude is well known. I have been opposed to any special concessions being granted to French-Canadians and shall continue to oppose such."

SPEND $75,000 A YEAR ON CLOTHES

Several Chicago Women Reach That Amount—Dressmakers Give Out Figures.

Chicago, Sept. 22.—There are a few women in Chicago who spend $75,000 a year in personal adornment, according to an estimate submitted at the semi-annual convention of the Chicago Dressmakers' Club. The dressmakers figured that the average factory girl spends $2.84 a week for clothing.

These figures were arrived at by averaging the estimates made by the various delegates. The table reads:

"A few $75,000.
"One hundred social leaders, $60,000.
"Ten thousand others, $5000.
"Well dressed club women, $1,500.
"The suffragette, $[illegible].
"The church worker, $600.
"The social worker, $600.
"The stenographer, $375.
"The [illegible]
"The factory girl, $[illegible]."

Madame C. E. [illegible], president of the club, declared that many working girls lose money because they do not know how to make their own clothing.

ELECTRIC TRAINS SPEEDING MET ON CURVE; 3 DEAD

New York, Sept. 22.—Three persons were killed and more than twenty injured early to-day in a head-on crash of two Long Island railroad electric trains at College Point, Long Island. Of the injured one it is thought, would die. The dead are Conductor George Burdick, Motorman Fred Lodor, and Motorman Charles Haskin.

Most of the injured were mill employes on their way to work. The crash occurred on a curve not far from the station. The trains, running nearly 40 miles an hour, rounded the curve from opposite directions almost simultaneously and the crash was inevitable. The steel cars buckled, but did not telescope. This fact doubtless saved many lives.

A hotel near the scene and a number of residences nearby were thrown open for use as emergency hospitals. Many ambulances and a corps of physicians were summoned to the scene.

ENGLISH CONSERVATIVES WILL STAND BY ULSTER EXTREMISTS

Will Hold Themselves Absolved From All Allegiances to The Government--Fiery Speeches by Members

London, Sept. 22.—The Government so far can give no encouragement to a considerable body of Liberals who urge that Sir Edward Carson be arrested before his fiery words inflame Belfast hooliganism to bloody deeds, but alternatives are being considered. Clever lawyers though Carson and Smith are, many believe they have made themselves amenable to the criminal law under Clause 3 of the Treason and Felony Act.

Ministers, however, are anxious to avoid a step which would add fuel to the already dangerous flame; they are more inclined to recommend the King to dismiss Carson from the Privy Council. When this course was discussed a year ago a hint was given to Mr. Bonar Law, Mr. Chamberlain and other ex-Ministers also immediately to resign their places on the Council of the King's advisers.

Hesitate to Divorce Ulster.

Mr. Smith's speeches in Antrim strengthen the belief that the greatest obstacle to settlement by consent, which the King earnestly desires, is the hesitancy of Mr. Bonar Law and Lord Lansdowne to seem to abandon Carson and the Ulster extremists.

Mr. Smith said Saturday, he refused to believe in this corrupt and guilty Government would dare to march and mobilize an English army march on Ulster.

"If they did, I said on behalf of the Unionist party of Great Britain that we hold ourselves absolved from all allegiance to this Government from that moment; we say to our English followers, 'to your tents, O Israel.'

Refuse to Recognize Law.

"We stand side by side with you, refusing to recognize any law, prepared to risk the collapse of the whole body politic to prevent this monstrous crime. This message I bring you from England and from Liverpool."

history to find a parallel to such

One must go back far in English words from the lips of a Privy Councillor. At the same time Sir Edward Carson is assuring the world that many distinguished British soldiers are awaiting the word to follow the example of General Richardson and help turn Northeast Ulster into an armed camp.

POSSIBLE CONFLICT BETWEEN THE ALLIED BALKAN NATIONS

Turkey and Bulgaria May Co-Operate Against Greece if Peace Terms are Not Accepted

Cologne, Germany, Sept. 22.—The correspondent of The Cologne Gazette at Constantinople telegraphs today that he has gained the impression during conversations with several foreign Ambassadors to Turkey that they believe it quite possible for the Turkish and Bulgarian armies to come to an agreement to operate jointly against Greece, if that nation refuses the conditions of peace proposed by Turkey.

The responsible Turkish Government newspaper, Tasfiri-I-Kahitat, advances the same idea.

General Michael Savoff, Commander in Chief of the Bulgarian army, who is in Constantinople, declined to discuss the matter for the present.

Servians May See New War.

Belgrade, Sept. 22.—The situation is grave along the Albanian frontier, where Albanians, armed with modern rifles, are assembling for the purpose of attacking Servia. Albanian agents have entered Servian territory and are endeavoring to stir to rebellion those Albanians who heretofore have been at peace.

It is believed here that the hostile preparations are due to foreign intrigues against Servia and Montenegro. As a consequence, Servia feels bound to re-occupy the strategic positions in Albania which the action of the powers compelled her to abandon, as it is necessary to repulse the attacks on Servian territory.

HOW WRINKLES ARE CAUSED—AND REMOVED

(From American Home).

"Why did no one think of this before" writes a clear-thinking reader. "Wrinkles are caused by the skin becoming loose. Obviously the remedy is to tighten the skin. Equally it is obvious that the only thing which will tighten the skin is a powerful astringent.

"Now, it is well known that the only powerful astringent which is absolutely harmless and beneficial as well, is pure powdered saxolite, obtainable from any druggist. Dissolve one ounce in a half pint of witch hazel. Bathe the face in it daily and—behold! The result is almost magical. The skin becomes firm and smooth, the face feels easy, comfortable and solid, instead of loose and flabby. Simple, isn't it? As I asked—why did no one think of it before?

"One should be careful, however, to use no other astringents than pure saxolite, as the former do no good and are really injurious more often than not."

REGRFTS THAT ALD. BULLER DID NOT STAND BY HIS GUNS

In Regard to Sidewalk on Macdonnel Street--Aldermen Gordon and Buller Measure Swords in City Hall--Permits For Buildings Contrary to Fire Limit ByLaw Criticized

The City Fathers met in special session last night. There were present Mayor Bradburn, Aldermen McIntyre, Langford, Johnston, Green, Duffus, Gordon, Gillespie, Duncan, Buller.

J. J. Turner, Sr., wrote, objecting to the Fire, Water and Light Committee's action in granting J. G. Graham permission to erect two houses with nine inch brick walls on Dublin street, between George and Water. These houses, Mr. Turner said, are within the fire limits, and the by-law calls for nothing but buildings with 14 in. walls being erected in such limits. Others had been refused permission to erect in the fire limits similar buildings to those Mr. Graham proposed to build on Dublin street, and Mr. Turner could not see why the former should be privileged. Mr. Turner wished the Council would see that the city's by-laws are lived up to. If the building by-law in question is not correct Council had better make it so, and not permit of intermittent action contravening same.

SWING OR DRAW BRIDGE.

The Mayor reported that the Minister of Public Works had written him that the C.P.R. Co. had been notified that they must put either a swing or a draw in their new bridge over the river east of the station.

METHODIST CHURCH SIDEWALK

Ald. Buller in presenting the Board of Works' report, recommended the following: That the sidewalk on the north side of McDonnell street from George to Water streets be laid on the outside of the trees in line with the sidewalk east of Water street.

Ald. Gordon here took the floor and objected to the foregoing on the ground of principle. He quoted from the press Ald. Buller's expressed reason for, when in committee, casting his deciding ballot in favor of this walk going outside the trees, even in contradistinction to his own admitted conviction that the walk ought to be laid inside the tree line. Ald. Gordon here regretted that Ald. Buller should not have had the courage of his conviction in the Board of Works meeting, when a deputation from the Methodist church waited upon the Board in regard to the sidewalk in question. He (Ald. Gordon) then carried Council back to a Board of Works meeting when with Ald. Buller's insistance and his worship's indorsation, the policy of adhering to the City Engineer's recommendation in such cases was adopted as a means of avoiding trouble and discord in future. And, continued Ald. Gordon, it is a pity that the Chairman of the Board of Works should have come out of that meeting (at which the Methodist deputation attended) with his old-time reputation for standing by his guns shattered all to pieces. He (Ald. Gordon) is a member of George St. Methodist church, and without offering any opinion as to where the new walk should go—outside or inside the trees—he would say that waiving aside the city engineer's recommendation in connection therewith would be establishing a dangerous precedent which he could not endorse. Such a policy had led to abuses in the past and adverse criticism of preceding engineer, and now the Board of Works is recommending the very same trouble-breeding procedure. Incidentally, Ald. Gordon contended that not all of the George street church members are agreed that outside the trees is the best position for the walk in question.

Ald. Gordon and Gillespie here moved that the Board of Works' report be amended by providing that the sidewalk on McDonnell street, south of the George street church be laid according to the Engineer's recommendation—inside the trees.

Ald. Buller here characterized his learned friend—Ald. Gordon—as quite an artist on the job; "but at the same time he's the man who did the flopping. When the location of the crossing on Murray street was in question, Ald. Gordon agreed with me and the committee that it should be laid in a line with the walk in front of the Armouries. But influenced by opposition from Rev. Mr. Webb, when I submitted to Council my committee's report, recommending the laying of the crossing from the Armouries as agreed upon, my honorable friend (Ald. Gordon) flopped and voted against the Committee and I. And now my learned friend is trying to make capital out of this Methodist church sidewalk. He's a weak man—so weak that he would not stay on the Board of Works, but resigned."

Ald. Langford—"This seems to me a case of conversion. The Methodist church has converted the Chairman (Ald. Buller) from his old-time policy. Ald. Langford argued that the walk should go inside the tree line, and said that almost every resident in the locality so agrees.

Ald. Gordon's amendment was here lost and the Board of Works recommendation adopted on the following division:

Ayes for the Amendment—Ald. Gordon, Duncan, Gillespie and Duffus.

Nays—Ald. McIntyre, Langford, Johnston, Green and Buller.

The walk will go outside the tree line.

FIRE LIMIT BY-LAW.

Referring to Mr. J. J. Turner's (Sr.) letter in the press in regard to Mr. Graham's permit to erect [illegible] street, within the fire limits, the Mayor said that he had no voice in the not granting by Council to Mr. J. J. Turner Jr. permission to erect his house on Water street with nine inch walls from the second storey up. "And, added Mr. Turner, Sr., have made himself acquainted with Council's action as to the Eastwood building on Hunter street before writing as he did. Mr. Eastwood and his contractor deliberately ignored Council's instructions as to construction of building and erected veneer walls.

Ald. Gordon here contended that no exception should be made in regard to the rule in the by-law governing erection of buildings within the fire limits. "If exceptions are made abuse of the by-law, trouble and annoyance will follow. If the by-law is not right, then make it so."

Ald. Gordon and Duffus here moved that the Fire, Water and Light Committee's recommendation that Mr. Graham be permitted to erect two buildings on Dublin street with nine inch walls be struck out of their report.

Ald. Duncan said that he could name a dozen or more buildings within the fire limits, that are not in accordance with the bylaw. In Mr. Graham's case, he thought a nine inch wall quite safe. Mr. Turner thinks so too, but is annoyed that his son was forced to comply with the strict letter of the law, entailing several hundred dollars unnecessary expenditure.

Ald. Gordon's amendment was here lost on the following division:

Ayes—Ald. Gordon, Duffus and McIntyre.

Nays—Ald. Buller, Duncan, Gillespie, Green, Johnston, Langford and the Mayor.

The committee's recommendation was then adopted as read.

Ald. Johnston said that nine inch walls for residential buildings are quite safe enough, and agreed that with the appointment of a building inspector the building by-law ought to be revised and amended generally.

$600 FOR EXHIBITION.

A by-law granting the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition $600 passed its several readings.

$500 FOR REGIMENTAL BAND.

A by-law granting the 57th Regimental Band $500, passed Council.

STREET REPAIRS.

Ald. Duffus offered that the loose stones on Boswell and Pearl avenues should be cleared away. Also that the sidewalk on Reid street from McDonnell street to the railway track previously promised be laid. Ald. Buller promised to attend to these matters.

Ald. Green wanted road work done on Weller street which is in bad shape, given serious attention at an early date. This street will be rolled when opportunity permits.

Council here adjourned.

WEDDING RING LORE

They Have Been Used For Ages and in Many Countries

Although the custom of being married with a ring is an ancient one it is by no means compulsory. The Quakers and Swiss Protestants never use rings at their marriage ceremonies.

In Germany and some other countries it is customary for bride and bridegroom to exchange wedding rings, and the same practice is occasionally carried out by Anglo-Saxons.

In Greece the ceremony of betrothal is as important as that of marriage and is conducted by a priest. Two rings are used on the former occasion, one being of silver and the other of gold. Both are consecrated on the altar, after which the gold ring is placed upon the man's finger and the silver one upon the woman's. But after the wedding service the best man reverses them.

In St. Kilda wedding rings are made of worsted.

Most of the women of the Upper Bayansi, in the Congo, wear wedding rings of brass around their necks. The wealthier the husband the heavier is the wife's ring, and in some cases it weighs as much as twenty-five or thirty pounds.

Hebrews in the past used some of the most wonderful wedding rings ever made, but plain rings are now generally worn by the married women of that race. According to their law it is necessary that the ring be of a certain value, and therefore it has to be examined and valued by the rabbi and other officers of the synagogue. On no account may it be a gift or obtained on credit.

It is hard to say where or when the association of rings with marriage began, but it may have come down to us from the Romans, who regarded the bridal ring as a pledge for the fulfillment of a contract.

It is on record that in England the earliest wedding rings were made of grass or rushes, and at one time, during the time of Cromwell, it was forbidden to use wedding rings at all, on account of the heathenish origin of the custom.

The plain gold ring is of fairly modern origin. When Queen Mary, who succeeded her brother, Edward VI., was married, the London City Council requested her to wear a magnificent creation inset with gems, but she refused and wore instead the first plain ring that ever adorned the finger of an English monarch.

Not a great while ago it was the custom that at every important wedding a number of rings similar to that worn by the bride should be distributed among the guests. At Queen Victoria's marriage rings decorated with the Queen's profile were [illegible] to the favored few.

ADVERTISING PAYS!

WHAT WRINKLES MEAN

They Afford a Good Clue to Character and Disposition

Two sharp, vertical indents on the forehead, just at the top of the nose are a sign that the wearer is given to deep and serious thought.

A wrinkle each side of the nose and extending from thence to the corner of the mouth, is indicative of a sarcastic and sneering disposition whilst those who show one or more "cuts" at the corners of the mouth are usually of a cheerful disposition amiable, and anxious to please.

Wrinkles at the corners of the eyes denote the jovial nature of an easy-going, careless person, fond of good things and of getting their own way, and sometimes rather indifferent to the feelings of others in attaining their own comfort.

Crowsfeet—the name given to those small wrinkles under the eyes—are almost invariably a sign of worry, trouble, dissipation, or ill-health, and are often accompanied by lack-lustre eyes and a tired and worn expression of the countenance in general.

A number of horizontal wrinkles on the forehead denote a fretful, petulant, worrying disposition, but one given to consideration for the feelings or sufferings of others. People whose brows are marked in this manner are usually good parents and staunch friends, though somewhat hasty and trying to the tempers of others.

FAT AND PNEUMONIA

Reasons Why a Cold is Dangerous For Stout Persons

Fat people and people who drink alcoholic stimulants are afraid of colds and pneumonia. There are two reasons why they should be so. First, they are more susceptible. Second, these ailments go much harder with them. When a person is fat an excess of fat is tucked away anywhere it can be; under the skin, around the heart or anywhere else to get rid of it. It isn't needed. It is a burden. When a person takes alcohol and food together, the alcohol is burned and the food is left to clog the tissues.

In case of a cold or pneumonia there is more or less strain on the vital organs. If these are clogged up with unnecessary fat or weakened by alcohol, the chance of recovery is that much less.

Steeplejack Falls 130 Feet

Leonard Wilkinson, a Sheffield steeplejack, aged twenty-seven and unmarried, fell a distance of 130 feet while fixing ladders on a chimney stack and crashed, head first, into an iron door in the ground. Death was instantaneous.

Colony of Fenland Vipers

A colony of vipers has been discovered in the Ramsey Fen and Ravenley district of Huntingdonshire. The viper, which was at one time plentiful in England, is the only poisonous snake now found in the country. Its bite is often very severe, but rarely fatal to man.

Two Deer Stalkers' Big Bag

A deer-stalking record was set up by two guests of Mr. Jersey de Knoop, the lessee of Kinlochewe, Sir Kenneth McKenzie's Ross-shire forest, which covers about 32,000 acres. The two sportsmen killed ninety-eight hinds in six days. On their best day they accounted for twenty-seven.

A Big Schoolboy

The village of Banton, Kilsyth parish, Scotland, has a schoolboy who, though only thirteen years of age, weighs 130 pounds, and is 5 feet 8 inches in height. According to results disclosed by the medical inspection of school children he is the biggest schoolboy in Stirlingshire.

Moving Wood Near Cardiff

Rain caused a landslide in the neighborhood of Llanvorian, near Cardiff, a large wood having moved such a distance as to make traffic between Lydmoor and Aberdare impossible. Mr. Holder, surveyor to the Llandaff and Dinas Powis Council, stated that the wood moved fully 8 feet and the roadway was lifted 3 feet owing to the pressure.

Bell Ringing at the Arsenal

In place of the ten minutes' ringing of the bells at Woolwich Arsenal twice and sometimes three times a day to call the men to work, there will be substituted for each ten minutes two periods of one minute each with an eight minutes' interval.

This is a concession to residents and patients at the Royal Arsenal Hospital.

In Church in Disguise

A man named James Reid was sentenced at Sligo, Ireland, to three months' hard labor for loitering in Sligo Cathedral with intent to steal. The sacristan saw Reid in the gallery disguised by a false moustache, whiskers, and spectacles. Canon Doorly said Reid told him he was starving and the canon offered him money, which he, however, refused.

Peer's Grateful Employes

Lord Ashton, at Lancaster, on his seventieth birthday, received an ornate casket and an illuminated address from 5,000 employes at his linoleum and cotton mills and paint works in recognition of his undertaking to pay their Insurance Act contributions and to supplement the benefits. Lady Ashton was presented with a diamond and pearl bracelet.

It was announced that each employe would receive three days' pay as a memento of his lordship's seventieth birthday.

Death of an Aged Admiral

Among the numbers of telegrams of condolence received by Lady Dowell on the death of Admiral Sir William Dowell, one from the King said:

"The King is so grieved to hear of the death of dear Sir William Dowell, whom he had known for so long, and he offers you and family his heartfelt sympathy in your great loss."

The late admiral was born in 1825, entered the Navy in 1839, and was in the fighting in Chinese, Japanese, and Egyptian waters from 1842 to 1882.

IS JAPAN GETTING RESTIVE AGAIN?

That the issue growing out of California alien land law is regarded far more seriously in Japan than it is in this country is shown by the unusual demand made by Viscount Chinda, the Japanese Ambassador, for a personal conference with President Wilson.

The people of neither country has been taken into their government's confidence concerning the character of the status of the controversy that has been pending since Japan first entered protest against the alien land bill, then before the California Legislature. Perhaps if they had been there would have been less criticism by Japanese of the Yamamoto Ministry for its alleged weakness in dealing with the United States, and less misunderstanding by Americans of the seriousness of racial discrimination as this is viewed by the Japanese people.

As is told in a special despatch from Washington, the Japanese government complains that the Department of State has been dilatory in its handling of the negotiations.

A GREEK EMPIRE?

When news from Athens comes by way of Vienna it may have a touch of the nature of decorative art, and therefore we must beware of assuming too hastily the accuracy of the Byzantine coronation story. Its descriptive points seem rather bizarre than Byzantine. King Constantine is to be formally crowned crowned next May and the ceremony is to be magnificent in special celebration of his recent victorious campaigns. The story goes that there will be placed on his head the imperial Byzantine crown, and on his shoulders the imperial purple robe, which have been preserved in one of monasteries on Mount Athos; and that he will assume the title of Augustus, and the Queen that of Augusta. It is added that his historical remembrance of the Eastern Roman Empire may not please the other Balkan states.

The crown and robe may excite such remembrance—if "Holy Russia" will permit the monks to lend them;—but the title Augustus is pre-Byzantine, having had nearly four centuries of Roman use before the original empire was definitely split into East and West. His people might as fitly confer upon the King of Greece the title of Pontifex Maximus because it was assumed by the first Emperor Constantine, though afterward appropriated by the popes. Augustus would be a misleading designation if intended to imply historical succession. It may be said for it that, after all, it means no more than sacred or consecrated; but there is no getting away from the fact that in ancient use it was inseparable from vast and mighty sovereignty.

Its assumption might in hypercritical quarters be treated as a ground for ridicule. Cavilers might repeat the fable of the frog and the ox. For Greece, though much enlarged by her conquests from Turkey, is small in comparison with the old Roman empire. It is hardly likely that her people think of suggesting a comparison. For the present it will be prudent to believe that they do not wish to call the King Augustus, that Premier Venizelos would oppose the alleged project, and that the King himself would push it from him with a smile. It is true that his name is a temptation, for, if the first Emperor of that name be counted, the Byzantine throne was filled by eleven Constantines—the last of them crowning the name with the glory of a hero's death in the final defence of Constantinople. But King Constantine and his country will be all the more respected if they achieve greatness without imperial pretence.

Old Folks' Coughs Permanently Cured

The Public is Loud in Its Praise of the Modern Direct Breathing Cure.

Elderly people take cold easily. Unlike young folks, they recover slowly, if ever. That is why so many people past middle life die of pneumonia. Even though pneumonia does not develop, colds certainly weaken all elderly people.

Cough Syrups seldom do much good because they upset digestion. Any druggist or doctor knows that a much more effective treatment is "CATARRHOZONE," which heals and soothes the irritated surfaces of the throat.

In using Catarrhozone you do not take medicine into the stomach—you simply breathe into the throat, nose and lungs rich piney balsamic vapor, so full of healing power that colds, catarrh and bronchitis disappear almost instantly.

"At sixty-eight years of age I can testify that I am never troubled with coughs or colds," writes J. E. Pilgrim, of Kingston. "They used to be the bane of my life, and that was before I used Catarrhozone, which was recommended to me by C. L. Prouse, druggist. To use Catarrhozone is just like being in an immense pine woods. The balsamic vapor of Catarrhozone is like a tonic, it is so stimulating to the breathing organs, so soothing to sore spots, so full of power to drive out colds and congestion. I will always use and recommend Catarrhozone as a preventive and cure for coughs, colds, bronchitis, throat irritation and catarrh.

(Signed) "J. E. PILGRIM."

A Catarrhozone Inhaler in your pocket or purse enables you to stop a cold with the first sneeze. Large size costs $1.00 and supplies treatment for two months; small size, 50c.; trial size, 25c.; all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

PUBLIC OPINION.

The Times does not hold itself responsible for the opinions of its correspondents.

That Woman Pankhurst.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I see that efforts are being made to have Mrs. Pankhurst visit Canada when she comes to the States. I think our people should go a little slow in dealing with people of this kind. According to the cable despatches, among other insane schemes of Mrs. Pankhurst's followers was the plot recently to damage the lights in various lighthouses on the English coast. Two important lights on the Channel were temporarily disabled before the plot was discovered.

Had this diabolical plot succeeded and a steamship filled with American and Canadian tourists been lost would this have constituted moral turpitude?

Felix G. Roberts.

ROMAN OATHS.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Referring to a letter which appeared a short time ago in your valuable and widely-read paper it is unhappily true that the spirit of individual devotion and self-sacrifice is not always incomparable with a corporate or institutional system of severe intolerance.

History clearly shows that all religions, as they become powerful, resorted to oppression in its worst form, and even among modern sects I do not know of one, except the Quakers, that has not persecuted its fellow-Christians of other beliefs. So that it may not be extraordinary, although deplorable, that adherents of a certain church should solemnly bind themselves to suppress, if possible, all other faiths.

I have seen in various publications copies of the oaths quoted by the [illegible]. The early Jesuit oath, the priest's oath and the Papal excommunication contain expressions and threatenings so shocking that I do not wonder the Roman authorities hesitate to publish the same. I have heard that these oaths have been modified in reference to modern standards of Christian courtesy.

Time it! In five minutes all stomach distress will go. No indigestion, heartburn, sourness or belching of gas, acid, or eructations of undigested food, no dizziness, bloating, foul breath or headache.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in regulating upset stomachs. It is the surest, quickest and most certain indigestion remedy in the whole world and besides it is harmless.

Millions of men and women now eat their favorite foods without fear—they know Pape's Diapepsin will save them from any stomach misery.

Please, for your sake, get a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store and put your stomach right. Don't keep on being miserable—life is too short—you are not here long, so make your stay agreeable. Eat what you like and digest it; enjoy it, without dread of rebellion in the stomach.

Pape's Diapepsin belongs in your home anyway. Should one of the family eat something which don't agree with them, or in case of an attack of indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis or stomach derangement at daytime or during the night, it is handy to give the quickest, surest relief known.

MUSIC and DRAMA

"THE ROSARY."

Rowland and Clifford's play, "The Rosary" is repeating this season with remarkable success. This play, as everybody remembers, was the hit of last season, when it broke many house records. The play was written by Edward E. Rose, author of "The Prisoner of Zenda," and many other successes, and has become as much of a favorite with theatregoers throughout the country as any of Mr. Rose's former dramas. The play from the start tells how Bruce Wilton has amassed a fortune which he lavishes upon his wife, Vera. Their home is a happy one until there creeps into it a note of discord. No one hears of it at first except Father Kelly, a priest, the former tutor of Bruce. Quietly he goes to work to find the person who is causing the adverse influence in the household. Almost on the verge of discovering the cause, calamity descends upon the Wilton home. Bruce's fortune is swept away, and in such a way that he believes his wife the cause of his ruin. Husband and wife are separated, the home is destroyed, and yet the cause of all the disaster is unknown. Father Kelly, however, with [illegible] zeal, perseveres in his work to fathom the mystery and finally succeeds in his undertaking. He finds the one who has caused all the misery, and [illegible] restores the home. The scenic environments of the play are extremely attractive, and [illegible] credit on Rowland and Clifford's efforts. The play will be seen at the Grand Opera House, next Saturday, September 27th, matinee and night, with the cast consisting of Father Kelly, Wesley Brinkley, Helen Rose, Ethel Barth, Harry O'Lynn and Claude Boone.

"SYRUP OF FIGS" FOR CONSTIPATED CHILD

Delicious "Fruit Laxative" can't harm tender little stomach, liver and bowels.

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Syrup of Figs," that this is their ideal laxative, because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless "fruit laxative," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When its little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, indigestion, colic—remember, a good "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of mothers keep "California Syrup of Figs" handy; they know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child to-morrow. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here, so don't be fooled. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company."

FRATERNAL SOCIETY MAKES PRESENTATION

To Dr. O'Brien, Bishop Designate—[illegible] of Apostolic Delegate.

The Rev. Dr. O'Brien, Bishop Designate of Peterborough is just now finding his time fully occupied attending different functions, which have been instituted on his behalf. The Rev. O'Brien has indeed been a popular figure among the citizens who congratulate him generally on the distinction which it will shortly be his honor to receive. In reply to the addresses which have been presented to him, he has made but kind feeling and non-party replies, thanking everyone, Catholic and Protestant, for the kind sentiments expressed towards him. The hour of his consecration is drawing near, and doubtless, Dr. O'Brien feels keenly the weight of responsibility which will soon be brought to rest upon his shoulders.

Last evening at the Knights of Columbus Hall, the members of that fraternal society presented him with an address, to which [illegible] a feeling reply.

To-night, what will doubtless be a most [illegible] function, will be held, when Monseigneur P. F. Stagni, Apostolic Delegate will arrive at the [illegible] The procession will be held to the St. Peter's Cathedral where a presentation and address will be offered to him.

To-morrow morning at 9 o'clock, the ceremony of consecration will begin and this will be a sight gorgeous and full of splendor to the eye, one that will linger long in the minds of those, whose privilege it will be to watch this solemn service. Other receptions and ceremonies have been arranged and combined will constitute a centre of attraction. The report of all proceedings in connection with the ceremonies will appear in The Times.

There is the promise of a good Rugby team in Peterborough, as was shown at a practice held on Saturday last at [illegible]'s Oval, when some 25 players took the field.

After the practice the executive met in the Y.M.C.A. and decided to ask that the club be grouped with a couple of Toronto teams in the Junior series of the O.R.F.U.

A goodly number of the players met at the Y last evening again, at 7.15 and made a run of about an hour's duration. Further on in the week there will be other work outs.

HIS WILFUL MILLY

A Perverse Maiden Thought She Was Teaching Her Lover a Lesson.

By ALVAH JORDON GARTH.

"Don't be too hard on me, Milly."

"I'm not. You are hard on yourself, Harold. Just think of it: when we were getting along so nicely, and everything was going so well! I can't bear to think of it," and pretty Milly Wells burst into tears.

"I am sorry," began the young man in a contrite tone meant to be soothing. He placed a gentle hand on Milly's own. She switched it away, wilful and petulant.

"You never would have done it if I had known," declared the young girl between sobs. "I never want you to show me the bank book again. I've lost all interest in it forever, and I'm glad I'm going to visit Aunt Margaret. People may have some consideration for me there."

Harold's brow drew into a wrinkle of pain. He was deeply in love with Milly, but he felt that she was pretty far away from his influence just now.

"Milly," he said quite gravely, "we must not quarrel over a trifle."

"A trifle!" cried his companion indignantly. "Do you call my wishes, my happiness, nothing?"

"Listen to me, dear," said Harold tenderly. "You and I would never have met, and I might still be a drudge in a poor country store, if it were not for John Gregory."

"Oh, that's an old story," replied Milly impatiently.

"Yes, it is an old story," pursued Harold, "and a good old story—how he gave me, a penniless lad, enough money to reach the city, and a recommendation that enabled me to win my present position. There is a new part to the story now, Milly. His son, a prodigate, came to me today. He was in trouble—something worse than trouble, dear, almost disgrace. A hundred and fifty dollars might save him. I remembered what his kind old father, now dead, had done for me, and—"

"You let him have the money—our money!" said Milly. "All that great sum earned so hard and saved so slowly. Oh, dear! oh, dear! it is almost heartbreaking!"

"I feel that I did right," declared Harold. "It would have been base ingratitude to deny young Gregory what may be his last safety line to hope and home."

Harold walked slowly home in the moonlight, serious and wretched. After the first golden glamour of their early love-making, this engaged couple had begun hoping and planning in a practical business way. Every Saturday night they had walked down to the savings bank, where Harold had proudly deposited a regular amount out of his salary.

Like a snowball the little savings of love had grown, until it represented over three hundred dollars. A few more months, and the height of their strivings would have been reached—six hundred dollars. Then June, the month of brides and roses—and Milly's eyes had danced, and her bright cheeks glowed over anticipations of selecting their first housekeeping outfit.

Harold Brown called at the Wells home as had been planned the next afternoon at three o'clock. It had been arranged that he was to see Milly off on the train. All the way to her home he longed and hoped for a few minutes of her quiet company to smooth over the little quarrel of the evening previous.

To his disappointment, he found that the aunt whom Milly was going to visit had stopped over from a train to take her home with her. Amid the bustle of baggage and parting with half a dozen total girl friends, poor Harold had barely a chance to hurriedly kiss his fiancee goodby at the depot platform. Then Milly was whisked away, leaving a rueful knight errant staring gloomily after the speeding train.

Two letters came to Harold that first week. Only one the second week. At the beginning of the third week, a fairly affectionate note told how Milly's aunt had invited her to spend a fall month with her.

Harold winced over the careless tone of the missive. It was still harder to bear when succeeding letters told of gay times at her aunt's home—plenty of company, a merry round of parties, picnics and pleasures. In some of the letters to her sisters Milly referred especially to one or two of her male escorts who had been particularly attentive to her.

Then there was a week and no letter at all. It was Saturday afternoon, and the anxious lover went up to the Wells home, hopeful of some news. As he neared it he heard the voices of Milly's sisters and some friends on the side porch of the house. He was about to join them, when his eye caught sight of a figure gliding in among the shrubbery towards the little arbor in the garden.

"Milly! Milly!" cried Harold. His eager steps overtaking her as she sank to a seat in the arbor and covered her face with her hands.

He sat down beside her, trembling with his emotion. She did not shrink from him. In fact she swayed towards him, but like a suppliant, a penitent. He caught a sight of her face, woeful and pale, as she drew closer to him.

"Oh, Harold," she cried—"take me back!"

"To my heart!" cried Harold tenderly. "Why, you have never been out of it—not even for one moment. What is the trouble, dear?"

Amid sobs and tears she confessed it all: a perverse maiden, piqued and unstable, feeding her silly little heart with the thought that she was "teaching her lover a lesson," cheating herself with the delusion of new faces.

"Oh, Harold! when I realized the hollowness of it all, away from you and among those not worth your little finger—"

He closed her lips with a kiss.

"You are back home again—that is all I want to know," he said, and half an hour later, when they joined the family group, he was the happiest man in Christendom and Milly was radiant.

"I will never complain again," promised Milly when they were alone again. "We will have to wait to make up what—what we gave to help your poor friend, but I will be patient—and happy, Harold."

"Why, that doesn't count, Milly," cried Harold brightly. "Young Gregory paid me back that money last week."

"Paid you back, Harold?"

"Yes, dear. The timely help I gave him bridged a crisis in his career. He went back home a humble prodigal. His mother after a while is going to start him in business, and if he holds out she has asked me to become his partner in an arrangement that means double what I am getting now. It will be June, Milly, after all."

"Oh, Harold, I am so happy," murmured the fair penitent; "foolish, wicked girl that I have been, never realizing that your dear, kind heart was casting bread upon the waters."

HE NEVER SUSPECTS TRICK

Old Club Man Easily Inveigled Into Telling Favorite Story and Signing Check.

There is a prominent club here, of which the greater number of members are young men; but there is one exception who is noteworthy.

He is well into the 70s, and all his notions, like his personal appearance, point to the past generation. He wears a snowy white mustache of incredible length and his head is crowned with a tangle of white locks.

People who wish to flatter him tell him he resembles Mark Twain.

Like all old men, he has his favorite stories, and never tires of telling them. There are some members of the club who know every story in his repertory. When they see the old man coming they suddenly remember appointments down town.

A group of the most youthful members, whose lack of years and thoughtfulness partly redeems the iniquity of their performance, often play a trick on the old man.

He loves to tell a certain story, of a very rambling character and no particular point. To illustrate the climax of the story the old man must have a bell at his elbow, which at the proper moment, with a dramatic gesture, he strikes forcibly.

He never notices that it is always at a certain psychological moment that this gay young group lead him to their table and insist on the story.

He is flattered and tells the story with great gusto to the applause of his listeners.

Crash! His hand falls upon the little call bell on the table. The story is told.

Just then the waiter summoned by the bell comes. He gravely presents the bill for the drinks to the old man.

Still smiling heartily, he signs the bill and rises with his old-fashioned stateliness.

"Good-night, gentlemen," he says. "I've enjoyed myself immensely!"

And he never suspects the young rogues.—New York Telegram.

Japanese Admire America.

In Japanese hearts America is by far the most favored nation on earth. They regard it as their mother country, even as we are at last coming to regard England. It is in truth the mother of their modern life. Commodore Perry today is enrolled among their national saints, the Fourth of July is observed as one of the chief festivals of the year, and the name of George Washington appeals to the youth of the land as does no other name in all history.—Atlantic Monthly.

VOICE IN THE STORM

"Rock of Ages" Heard Amid Screams on Battered Liner

While the liner Waimate was being tossed and battered by a cyclonic storm between Cape Town and Hobart the terrified passengers, huddled on the deck, heard the voice of one stout-hearted woman, Miss Howe, singing "Rock of Ages."

The liner was swept by the heavy seas, the steerage quarters were flooded, woodwork was smashed to splinters, and iron beams and derrick heads were tossed about the decks.

The door of the chief officer's cabin on the deck was forced open by a heavy wave, and the officer was carried on to the hatchway. The carpenter was washed about the deck and badly injured, and the battle for life had to be carried on in the dark as the electric light plant was swamped.

The screams of women and children added to the horror of the awful din caused by the crashing waves. An officer with a little girl in his arms had to swarm up the rigging to save himself and his charge, and an 80-year-old man was flung from the deck to the cabin.

Through all the crew worked with desperate bravery and the liner eventually reached Hobart in a dismantled condition. For two days the seamen contented themselves with one biscuit each.

Captain Perdon, the commander, was presented by the passengers with an address appreciative of his remarkable seamanship on arrival at Hobart.

"A GIGANTIC EEL"

Olympic Swimming Champion Attacked While Training

A cable from Honolulu states that Kahanamoku, the famous Sandwich Islands swimmer and the winner of the 100 metres swim at the Olympic Games, had a narrow escape from death while training. Kahanamoku was dragged under water by what is described as a gigantic eel, and did not reappear for three minutes. In his struggles to escape Kahanamoku lost some of his fingers.

Diabetes

TORTURED WITH AN UNQUENCHABLE THIRST FOR YEARS; TRIED EVERYTHING THAT MEDICAL AID COULD DO FOR ME, BUT GRADUALLY GOT WORSE. TRIED SANOL'S ANTI-DIABETES AND WAS CURED.

Asiville, Man.

Dear Sirs:—

During the month of March I was informed that I had a well developed case of Diabetes. I immediately placed myself upon a rigid diet after a week of which the first urinalysis disclosed a sugar content of 6 p.c. After several months of dieting during which time I was taking a so-called cure, the sugar content was reduced to 3 p.c. I began taking SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES with the result that within a short time the urinalysis made by competent persons, and at different periods, disclosed no sugar whatever. This condition is indeed very gratifying and I have every reason to believe that I am quite cured. For some time past my diet has been a liberal one, consisting largely in some foods high in carbo-hydrates, but I still avoid all sugars and syrups. This is in accordance with the directions which I can well afford to follow. I am gaining in weight and strength, and once more feel that it is good to be alive.

There is no question in my mind regarding the virtues of SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES, and I feel that a great blessing has been conferred upon suffering humanity by this discovery and use of this medicine.

Yours truly,
W. A. FOX.

Infant's Amazing Breakfast

A curious case has been investigated by the Cambridgeshire county coroner. Daisy Howard, aged 21 months, of Chittering, had breakfast of pork, cheese, bread, and an orange from which the pips had been removed. About three hours later she was found dead in bed. A doctor stated that a post-mortem examination showed the baby died of suffocation, but there was nothing to account for it. The throat and lungs were quite clear, and there were no external marks of injury. The jury found that the child was accidentally suffocated whilst in bed probably, through food recently eaten.

A Sign of Sobriety

At Llanrwst a Rhyl man was sentenced to a month's imprisonment for stealing a coat and a bunch of keys from the Eagles Inn, Ysbytycheck. Mrs. Jones, the licensee's wife, when asked whether the prisoner was sober at the time, replied, "Certainly; he ordered bread and cheese."

Hanged in a Church

William Jackson, aged sixty-seven years, was found inside Dowbern Wesleyan Church, near Cumbe, hanging by a rope fastened to the rails above the basement. Jackson, a widower, resided with his daughter, who is caretaker of the church. He was a retired railway policeman and keeper of the Cothee Golf Links.

Of Course He Knew.

"Willie, can you tell me what a vegetarian is?"

"A vegetarian is a person who lives on vegetables," replied Willie.

"That is correct. Now, I wonder who can tell what an octogenarian is?"

"I know," replied Eddie.

"Well, what is an octogenarian?"

"A octogenarian is a person that knocks the other generation."—Chicago Record-Herald.

The objection to armor plate composed of alternate layers of hard and soft steel, which separate under hammering, has been overcome by the insertion of sheets of copper between the plates before they are rolled together to bind them.

SALUTE BY WOMEN

French Ladies Want to Recognize Regimental Colors

The latest feminist movement is from France, where women are demanding, and in most cases taking, the right to salute the colors of a regiment as men salute them.

Of course, a civilian or other person in plain clothes should not salute the colors, but take off his hat to them, the salute being for those who wear official uniform. Obviously, however, a woman cannot be expected to take off her hat. A mere bow, say the leaders of the movement, is not sufficiently noticeable as a mark of respect, while a curtsey, though correct, is not always to be performed conveniently in a crowd.

Therefore, say the ladies of France, we will salute whenever men do. And why not?

Britain's Royal ladies always make a pronounced bow when driving past the colors of troops lining the streets, but a salute might be more convenient and prettier.

Fever Blisters

What causes fever blisters? is often asked.

Digestive disturbances cause them, but they are often an accompaniment of various ills. Fever blisters may occur on any part of the body. They are found most frequently around the mouth. Some blisters are found on the pneumonia patient; during bad colds; in typhoid; in malaria and in several other diseases.

Sometimes a person gets a fever blister with apparently no accompanying ill. In that case it is most probably due to a disordered stomach. Too much food is probably eaten or the food is not wisely chosen. The cure in the last case is an adjustment of food, a change of diet and more exercise.

Singe Frayed Linen

Instead of cutting the frayed edges of cuffs and collars, as many people are accustomed to do, take a lighted taper and just singe the frayed parts. It will be seen that the linen will last much longer. Cutting the edges has a tendency to loosen the parts, and singeing had taken the frayed edges off without injury.

Softening Water

The easiest way to soften hard water is to boil it. During this process the free carbonic-acid gas in the water is driven off, and the carbonate of lime is then insoluble and shows as a white deposit. It is possible to add a little baking soda or borax to hard water, which will make the water feel soft, but, as they are alkalies, they dry and thin the skin, taking away its fat.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at the office of any Local Agent of Dominion Lands (not Sub-agent), on certain conditions.

Duties.—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required in every case, except when residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside of his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Six months residence in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and 50 acres extra cultivation. The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land after report by Homestead Inspector on application for patent.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price, $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

THE MONTENEGRINS

The Montenegrins are still an armed nation, and many of their proverbs illustrate their love of weapons. One says, "A man without arms is a man without freedom;" and another, "Thou mayest as well take away my brother as my rifle." The famous traveller Kohn likened the Montenegrins to the Greeks of Homeric times, and the comparison still holds good. "Love of freedom and love of weapons, simplicity of life—remember the love of mutton and wine as described by Homer—hospitality, the superiority of man over women; all these features, together with the fact that the heroes are themselves the singers of their deeds, are to be found in the Montenegrins, as well as in the Greeks of Homer."—London Chronicle.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Repairs to Eastern Pier at Newcastle, Ont.," will be received at this office until 4.00 p.m., on Wednesday, October 15, 1913, for the Repairs to Eastern Pier at Newcastle, Durham County, Ontario.

Plans, specification and form of contract can be seen and forms of tender obtained at this Department and at the offices of J. G. Sing, Esq., District Engineer, Confederation Life Building, Toronto, Ont., and on application to the Postmasters at Kingston, Ont., and Newcastle, Ont.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed forms supplied, and signed with their actual signatures, stating their occupations and places of residence. In the case of firms, the actual signature, the nature of the occupation and place of residence of each member of the firm must be given.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, equal to ten per cent. (10 p.c.) of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,
R. C. DESROCHERS,
Secretary.

STRANGE MARKET FOR ODD ARTICLES

One-Legged Men Can Buy a Pair of Shoes or One Sock in London

The things that can be purchased in London for two cents are beyond belief, and no matter what the article, it can be bought more cheaply than in the place where it was grown or made. Everything under the sun is on sale; even the rarest of commodities, the odd article that usually is sold in pairs—an odd glove, an odd sock or stocking, an odd boot, or slipper—and new at that. The thing is not a cast-off; it has never been worn.

To enjoy this advantage to the full it is necessary to go to Old street, in the Parish of St. Luke's. There, under the very shadow of that church, lies the Market of the Odd. Numbers of its dealers sell stockings and gloves singly, and within its borders lies the Mecca of the one-legged, to which cripples make pilgrimages from near and far in quest of a single boot, shoe, or slipper. Externally only an ordinary commonplace shoe store, it is actually the national clearing house for odd boots and shoes, and as such is known to many of the one-legged not only of Great Britain, but of the dominions overseas.

In its basements are bins heaped with "singles" in strange juxtaposition. Slippers of all kinds—satin ball slippers, babies' slippers, nurses' slippers, carpet and leather slippers—are lumped together by the hundred. In another section is a multitude of shoes of the most diverse kinds, from the cheap canvas article to the dress variety, and mixed up with these specimens of every-day footwear may be seen surgical boots, mountaineering boots, sea boots, even boots to which none save the expert dare give a name. And of these strangely assorted articles, numbering in all some thousands, no two ever met before, or [illegible], once they leave the dealer's, ever meet again.

Where Do They Come From

By what channels have they drifted here? Some have journeyed from shops where their fellows having been lost or destroyed they had lain undisturbed for years. Others represent salvage—portions of stock saved from fire. But the majority have arrived circuitously from commercial travellers' bags after undergoing critical inspection by many pairs of eyes, because they were alone in the world. Though samples are made in pairs, a "drummer" carries only one shoe or boot to show retailers, and consequently a "right" may be in one end of the country, while the companion "left" is travelling in the other. One of the two is liable to go astray, and when this happens the other is ultimately consigned to Old street.

They go—where do they not go? Since a single shoe can be bought at this place for about thirty-six cents, cripples living in all parts of England and the colonies come or send to this establishment for their footwear. They somehow discover the place, and then they stick to it year after year, many remaining loyal to the end of the chapter.

Not Cripples Only

But it is not only cripples who make pilgrimages to the Mecca of the one-legged. Londoners with the normal number of nether limbs frequently wend their way thither with a shoe, "right" or "left," divorced from its fellow by one of those numerous mishaps that agitate the family circle. Sometimes a mother reaches the establishment, and becoming confidential on the smallest provocation, [illegible] the way the babies have of kicking off their shoes, or explains that Tommy, after achieving the proud feat of coming home from school without missing a single puddle on the way, [illegible] put his shoes close to the stove to dry, with disastrous results to one of them. In general the mate of a shoe can be found among the dealer's stock, but [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Once a "pair," [illegible] there is a [illegible] of "odds" [illegible] are made up and sold for [illegible] [illegible] "no trying on."

THE SANJACK

There's an ear-haunting phrase that's attracted my gaze
In the daily reports of the press.
Though I'm hanged if I see what its purport may be,
I fancy I'm right when I guess
That it means warlike work for the Serb and the Turk
As they fight in the Balkans afar,
For, by all that one hears, it's not them by the ears—
The Sanjak of Novi-Bazar.

I don't wonder at all if the Sanjak's a Caliph
In costume piratic and splendid,
Who swanks it through life with a multiple wife,
By a solemn Grand Vizier attended;
With a National Debt and [illegible] aigrette
That gleams in his fez like a star—
If it really means that, then I take off my hat
To the Sanjak of Novi-Bazar.

Or it may be a beast that resides in the East,
A monster with murderous claw,
With a sinister eye and a tail half-mast high,
And teeth like a circular saw;
That roosts in a cave and makes meals of the brave
Mountaineer—how I'd love from afar
To watch D. Lloyd George in some grim Balkan gorge
With the Sanjak of Novi-Bazar.

But I really don't care though the pundits declare
That the meaning I've failed to elicit.
There's a magic that plays round that mystical phrase
Whatever its value explicit;
There's a breadth and a tone, there's a lilt of its own,
From the S to the ultimate R,
Of all names the queerest that hail from the Near East—
The Sanjak of Novi-Bazar.

DOES THIS SOLVE JOHN ORTH MYETERY?

A curious story reached London from Buenos Ayres of a traveller who thinks he has discovered alive John Orth, otherwise the Archduke John Salvator of Austria.

M. Conne, a Frenchman, travelling in the country, knocked at a farmhouse door to ask for a drink, and a farm hand brought him water in a silver goblet. As the cup was emblazoned, and the crest on it was a double-headed eagle with an Imperial Crown, M. Conne asked to whom it belonged. To his master, Don [illegible], said the man.

The Frenchman asked to see Don [illegible], who proved to be a tall, military looking, distinguished, elderly man. After thanking him, the Frenchman suddenly asked Don [illegible], "Did you never know John Orth?" Don [illegible] smiled, laughed, and [illegible] with hesitation, "Why should I have known John Orth? And, supposing I did know him, what then? He is dead, isn't he?" "And you might go about telling everybody that the brother Archduke John Salvator of Austria, who renounced all his titles and his name, is still alive, but nobody would believe you. Dead men don't come to life again." M. Conne is convinced that Don [illegible] is John Orth.

Board of Education.

A regular meeting of the Board of Education will be held this evening in the Board Room, George street.

Moving Days.

Furniture vans are [illegible] seen about the outskirts of the city these days as they are in early summer, the annual exodus of persons from the city fringe to the more sheltered downtown section having commenced.

Scarcity of Houses.

There appears to be a great scarcity of the cheaper classes of houses in Peterborough at present—houses that rent at from $10 to $12 per month. Would this not be a good investment for capitalists?

Two Seconds.

Mr. Frank Montgomery's 7-year-old hackney, "Archie," won two second prizes at the Lindsay exhibition, a very creditable performance, as the competition was very keen. Mr. Harry Thompson was the driver.

Card of Thanks.

Mr. Geo. Bathgate, blacksmith, Hunter street, who was injured by an explosion at his shop four weeks ago, desires to thank all those who did him kindness during the time he was laid up. He is now able to take up his work as usual.

Books Must Be Closed.

Mr. F. J. A. Hall, secretary of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition Board, is desirous of settling all outstanding accounts connected with the recent exhibition in the shortest possible time. Persons having accounts with the exhibition Board are asked to send the secretary in this [illegible] and thereby facilitate the closing of the books of the year.

Cigars and Bars.

Some Toronto hotelkeepers are cutting out cigars from the offerings of their bars, it being claimed that cigars do not carry enough profit to pay Mr. Hanna's large fee of five per cent. on bar receipts. The patron of the bar who wants to keep sober by switching between drinks to cigars, has a new difficulty to contend against. We understand that Peterborough hotelkeepers propose to do likewise.

St. George's Harvest Festival.

Canon Plumptre, of St. James Cathedral, Toronto, one of the ablest preachers in the Anglican Church, in this country, will preach at the Harvest Festival to be held in the St. George's church, South Peterborough, this evening. The [illegible] the service, which will be held at 8 p.m., will be fully choral. This event is creating a large amount of interest among the congregation of St. George's, this being the first Harvest Festival [illegible] ecclesiastical parish. It will be remembered that this, the youngest of our Anglican churches, was only opened for service in November last.

The Street Paving.

The work on Hunter street between George and Aylmer streets, is progressing satisfactorily. The concrete mixer has arrived, and will be stationed on the bridge over the creek, for a time. The foreman on the local contract states that he has little difficulty in securing sufficient men. The principal trouble, he says, is to secure the right kind of men. The contractors propose to grade Hunter street right through to Water street, after which they will commence to lay the concrete.

One Month in Jail.

At the Police Court yesterday, Harold McDonald was charged with assaulting his wife, and was sentenced to jail for one month. Mrs. McDonald is the mother of two children. She works at the Oriental and the children are in the Shelter. Her husband, she said could get lots of work. On Saturday night he was drunk and he called her at the back door of the Oriental Hotel. He held her and struck her on the back with his fist, and tore off her blouse.

Will Visit Peterborough.

The Wanderers' Motor Cycle Club, of Toronto, are to hold a three-day endurance run on October 18, 19 and 20, which includes Thanksgiving Day. The route will be to Lindsay, Peterborough, Port Hope and Toronto, and the distance 250 miles. The control system and all other details for the trip has been very carefully planned and as the distance is not great the run will be made in easy stages for both machines and riders. This event should bring out a good bunch for the enjoyment of a good endurance run is very great.

An Industrial City.

Mr. E. S. Logan, vice-president of the G.T.R., Montreal, with his wife and daughter, Miss [illegible], spent the week-end with W. A. Logan and family, Murray street. Mr. Logan, who has never before visited Peterborough, expressed himself as delighted with the city's thrifty appearance as evidenced by the public buildings and parks. The manifest interest taken on every hand of industrial activity, surprised him yet more, and in his opinion, the city would become in the near future a great industrial centre.

Mixer Has Arrived.

The cement mixer for use in connection with the new pavement on Hunter street has arrived in the city, and will be pressed into service during the course of the next few days. It is the intention of the contractors to lay a foundation of concrete to the depth of five inches prior to the laying of the wearing surface, which will be of asphalt. The street will be thrown open for traffic two or three days after the construction of the concrete foundation. This is necessary as the contractors propose to finish up the Lindsay contract before moving the plant.

Wanted for Rape.

Chief Rose of Cobourg, has received a request from the police of this city to look out for Chas. Stevens, described as about 24 years of age, 5 ft. 4 in. high, and dark brown hair. He is wanted here for attempted rape and was seen on Tuesday last at Belleville, where he bought a ticket for Trenton and boarded the International Limited. As this train does not stop at Trenton it was expected he went through to Cobourg. Stevens when he found an information against him, evidently thought he would fall a victim to Detective Newhall's watchful eye, and made good his escape. He did wisely.

After the Pot Hunters.

Ontario game law wardens have been instructed to keep a sharp look out for the presence of all sports, known as the "pot hunters," whose mode of hunting is with bag and ferret. The ferret is put down a rabbit hole at one end, and the "potter" stands over the other exit with a bag covering the hole. The ferret [illegible] the ferret, it runs [illegible] to get away. The animal lands in the bag, and is caught over the head and killed. An all-round good sport will use his ferret to route a rabbit and give him a chance for his life in the open, and if Mr. Bunnie escapes the lead pellets from the breech-loader he is a free bunny.

Deer Hunting Spoiled.

Deer hunters are becoming anxious lest the bush fires have spoiled their hunting grounds and scattered the deer from their old haunts. The Long [illegible] Hunt Club, at Orillia, has received word that their quarters and equipment were destroyed, although at first reported safe. The Red Tam Club has sent men into their camp to ascertain whether the fire did any damage and see if the deer are still feeding in that neighborhood. The bush fires this summer have driven many wild animals into the open country and settlers are coming across them in parts they do not usually frequent. In Peterborough and Haliburton counties similar conditions exist.

We Told You So.

Many of the readers of The Times will doubtless remember when the present steam road roller was purchased some years ago. The Times [illegible] that the roller was too light for the work it was intended to do. The cost of a heavier roller [illegible] [illegible] extra price would have cut no figure. While the other night Ald. Buller stated to the Works Committee, of the Council, that the roller was not heavy enough to use in connection with the street paving. Not only is the roller too light for this class of work, but it is also too light for ordinary street work, it having to pass over the road many times in order to have the packing properly done.

Judgment Reserved.

Magistrate Dumble reserved judgment yesterday, in the case of Mr. Isaac Eastwood, who was charged with an infringement of the Building By-law, No. 632. The building in question is situated on the south side of Hunter street, between George and Aylmer streets—No. 201 Hunter street. The non-compliance complained of is, that the walls are not built to the requirement of the By-law in regard to thickness. The wall of the first storey was in accordance with the regulations, but the wall of the second storey was but a little over half the thickness required. It was explained that this was an addition to an old building, and projected over the creek, and was erected on stout iron girders. The difficulty of building a 14 in. wall was that the old and new could not be joined together properly along the first storey. Evidence was given that the wall complained of, was [illegible] built [illegible] [illegible] magistrate, however, held that the building should be examined, and accordingly reserved judgment.

To Purify Streams.

It will be interesting to the citizens of Peterborough and elsewhere to learn that the important question of the pollution of navigable streams and their tributaries will in all probability be the subject of a conference between the provincial and federal authorities this autumn. It will be recalled that a special committee of the House of Commons of which Dr. George Bradbury, member for Selkirk, was chairman, last [illegible] heard a good deal of evidence and made a report. [illegible] [illegible] It is understood that this recommendation will be acted upon, and that Hon. J. D. Hazen has decided to ask all the provincial governments to name delegates to attend a gathering of experts to be held in Ottawa in November. It is expected that all the provincial governments will comply with the request and that as a result of the gathering some practical forward step in the direction of purifying Canadian streams will be taken within the next few months.

Social Evening.

This evening a congregational social will be held in the lecture hall of Knox Presbyterian church, from 8 o'clock until 10. A program consisting of Scotch, Irish, English and Italian selections will be rendered, and a most enjoyable evening is looked for. The gathering is open to all.

An Inspection.

Sanitary Inspector Spence a few days ago made an inspection of several slaughter houses just outside the city limits. The conditions were of a more satisfactory nature than they were when he last made an official visitation, and Mr. Spence desires to mention particularly Messrs. Perrin and Lumley. The meat they kill, he says, is of standard quality, and their efforts to supply the public with clean and wholesome food, is, it is needless to mention, greatly appreciated.

WEDDING BELLS.

Childs—Jacobs.

The marriage took place on Saturday of Miss Alice Jacobs to Mr. Andrew Edward Childs. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. E. H. [illegible], of All Saints' church, at 479 [illegible] street.

The couple will take up residence at 159 [illegible] street.

Mrs. E. Payne, of Pontypool, is the guest of friends in the city for a few days.

Miss Gertrude McClellan, who has been spending a few days the guest [illegible] McClellan, returned to her home in [illegible] McClellan, returned to her home in Toronto on Sunday.

The Rev. Stanley and Mrs. Roebuck, who have been visiting Mrs. [illegible]'s sister, Mrs. John Allen, left yesterday for Montreal, en route for their home in England.

The engagement is announced of Emily Elizabeth Maisie, eldest daughter of Mrs. C. Webb, of London street, to Jack Moore, youngest son of Mr. J. H. Moore, of Park street. The wedding will take place quietly this month.

CITY IN PARAGRAPH

Two young men were each fined $5 at the police court for being drunk in a public place.

Mr. A. Moore, roofing contractor, left for Campbellford yesterday, where he will supervise the completion of a number of important roofing contracts.

James Thorley, a blacksmith, was charged at the police court yesterday, with being found under the influence of liquor on Saturday last. At the request of Chief Thompson, the case was enlarged until this morning.

Commencing on Sunday next, at 3 p.m., Dr. [illegible] will commence a Young Ladies' Bible Class in St. Paul's church schoolroom. The Dr. is a well-known speaker and all young ladies of the city are invited to attend.

CLEARANCE MILLINERY WINGS 39c. Odd wings, sprays, mounts, etc. from regular stock and formerly worth as much as $1 to $1.75. Big variety of colorings and about sixty pieces in all. To clear 39c

CORSET COVER EMBROIDERY, 10c. Made of Swiss Cambric in the right width for Corset Covers. It has a deeply worked edge with beading and is very good value. Per yard 10c

FORTY INCH FACTORY COTTON 9½c. Here is a Cotton for which the Annex is famous. It is well and closely woven, the texture being firm and even. We doubt if 14c can purchase anything to compare well with this Cotton that is marked 9½c, per yard 9½c

ROCK RIVER COTTON BATTING 10½c. This special "Soft" brand is as light as down and as clean and pure as a snow drift. For the [illegible] to which Cotton batting can be applied this brand will be found most satisfactory and certainly most cheap. Per bunch 10½c

TAILORED BLACK SATEEN BLOUSES 69c. These smart Blouses are trimmed with self covered buttons, and a row of ten half-inch pleats extending lengthwise over the front. They are of mercerized English sateen, button down the front and really worth a dollar. All sizes at the Annex price 69c

SILURIAN LINEN WRITING PADS 19c. A fine note paper, cut in Empress size and expressing perfect taste in one's correspondence. Moreover, the quality is such that our name is on the cover, as a silent witness of our confidence in the satisfaction that the use of this paper will bring. Introductory price per pad 19c

WASHABLE BLOUSES 45c. Some are made with high collar, some with the attractive turn down Dutch collar; Scotch Chambrays and Percales being the materials, in neat patterns that are mostly of stripe design. All sizes can be secured, the value being really remarkable for the price 45c

TWO O'CLOCK SALE. Women's Fall and Winter Underwear, 19c per Garment. THERE IS JUST THE RIGHT WEIGHT in this white, close ribbed underwear that is made as separate drawers and vests. Moreover the price is remarkably low, and only holds sway after two o'clock on Wednesday. Per Garment 19c

Women's White Flannelette Night Gowns 69c. HERE IS A COMFORTABLE GOWN for fall and winter, made of white Saxony Flannelette in generous sizes, 56 to 60 in. length. Yoke is deep, is made Mother Hubbard style and has rows of pleats finished in hemstitched effect. The neck is completed with dainty frill. We doubt if 90c could purchase a gown in the usual way to favorably compare with this one at 69c

Autumn Model Corsets 43c. THESE CORSETS THAT ARE MADE BY THE D. & A. people are in the medium long model style and are fitted with four hose supporters. A good quality French coutil is used in their make up, thus forming a very satisfactory Corset at a price assuredly within the reach of all. Wednesday... 43c

$1.00 Nottingham Lace Curtains 69c per Pair. THREE AND A QUARTER YARDS LONG by fifty inches wide is the generous size of these curtains. They have colbert finished edges the patterns being popular and of good taste. A dollar is the usual selling price but they are specially reduced for the Annex. 69c

"LITTLE DARLING" HOSE. This is the Stocking essentially for Children's Wear. They are made of all wool cashmere with silk heels and toes, the colors being pink, sky, tan, red, cream and black. Wednesday's prices are as follows ... SIZES 4 to 5½ REG. 25c FOR... 19c SIZES 6 and 7 REG. 30c FOR... 24c

5 YARD ENDS OF WHITE FLANNELETTE, 54c. These ends are fully a yard wide, and are of soft Saxony finish. A timely purchase at the mill enables us to quote a very low price that is really much less than one would pay in the usual way for such quality as this is. Every end 5 yards long. Annex price, per End 54c

WOMEN'S NEW CASHMERE GLOVES 19c. They are perfect fitting, are procurable in all sizes, and have two dome fasteners at the wrist. The colors are tan, navy, brown and black in a cashmere of such quality that usually sells for 25c. Annex price, per pair 19c

HEMSTITCHED PILLOW CASES 13c. A good quality English cotton is used in the making of these Pillow Cases. They are neatly hemstitched, and may be obtained in sizes 40, 42 and 44, being unquestionably excellent value at Wednesday's price. Each 13c

FLANNELETTE BLANKETS $1.09 PAIR. Those who prefer Blankets of this material will find in these something serviceable and satisfactory. Their size is 58 by 72 inches and they are the "Dragon" Brand, a kind that sells purely upon its own merits. The price is placed very low for Wednesday. Per pair $1.09

A CLEARANCE OF BOYS' COAT SWEATERS 59c. There are hardly enough to last through a whole Annex day's business, but what there are of them were originally sold at $1.00 to $1.25. Grey, cardinal, navy and fawn are the colors, some having high buttoned collars, others V-shaped neck. They are splendid value and as long as they last will be sold for 59c

WOOL BLANKETS $2.49 PAIR. These are "Cressman's Annex Special," a brand that enjoyed such a tremendous sale last season. They are of heavy white wool in double bed size, 60 by 80 inches, and really worth $3.25 a pair anywhere. Wednesday $2.49

SHETLAND FLOSS 6c SKEIN. A cheaper way to buy it is to get the box of 16 Skeins which costs only 89c. The shadings are cardinal, pink, mauve, grey, black and white, while the quality being good is an assurance of its long service. Per Skein .... 6c. BOX OF 16 SKEINS 89c

Moreen Underskirts 48c. AS FAR AS GOOD WEARING QUALITY and general utility are concerned, the Moreen underskirt is hard to equal. And this Annex line is to be obtained in shades of navy, brown, tan and black, made with deep pleated flounce, in a good range of sizes. The material is of substantial quality, and we doubt if it could be secured alone for the Annex price of 48c

GOVERNMENT IS DEVELOPING THE GREAT PORTS OF CANADA

Work is Now Proceeding in Carrying Out This Settled Policy on the Atlantic, the Pacific and the Great Lakes

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Sept. 23.—The Government is energetically carrying out its policy of developing the national ports of Canada so that the harbors of the Dominion will be in a position to handle successfully the growing trade of Canada. This past week the tender for the Toronto harbor work involving an expenditure of some six million dollars was let to the Canadian Stewart Co. The work for the development of Victoria harbor will also be let shortly.

At Halifax, St. John, Montreal, Vancouver, and Victoria the government is giving evidence of its intention to equip thoroughly and adequately the great trade portals of Canada and thus to place the country in a position to compete effectively and successfully for its legitimate share of the world's trade. On the Great Lakes at Toronto, Hamilton, Port Arthur, Fort William and other ports large sums are also being spent for necessary harbor improvements.

Settled Policy.

Premier Borden in his Halifax speech this week dealt with the policy of the government to develop the great national ports.

"The increasing production and requirements of the Dominion," said Mr. Borden, "and the opportunities afforded not only upon the Atlantic and the Pacific but on our great inland seas for a great and expanding flow of commerce are sufficient evidence that moneys expended for such purposes are wisely appropriated. In these Maritime Provinces we have hitherto lacked something of the progress and development which have been so marked in other portions of the Dominion. There is strong ground for the conclusion that these Provinces are now about to enter and, indeed already entered upon a which is justly their due. For many years this port has suffered from lack of adequate terminal facilities. The splendid terminals which will be advanced with every possible expedition cannot fail to be attended with marked advantage not only to this city and province, but to the whole Dominion. They will give you the opportunity of availing yourself of the advantages afforded by this magnificent harbour and by the great national highway under the energetic management of Mr. Cochrane will afford unrivalled railway facilities to Quebec and Maritime provinces.

The Late Bishop O'Connor, Bishop O'Brien's predecessor, a one time popular figure among the public.

GETS FOUR YEARS

Kingston Ont. Sept. 22.—Four years in penitentiary was the sentence handed out this morning by Judge Price to Jack O'Brien, a Kingstonian, when he pleaded guilty to robbing the mail bag at Kingston Junction in January last. The bag contained about $1,000, and was taken during the night while it was waiting to be put on the train for Montreal.

THOUSANDS OF COAL WORKERS OUT ON IMMENSE STRIKE

Trinidad, Colo., Sept. 23.—Several thousand miners in the southern coal fields of District 15, Colorado, United Mine Workers of America, to-day entered upon a strike which has for its chief purpose the recognition of the Union. Labor leaders declared a great majority of the men now working the coal mines would obey the strike call, issued a week ago, while operators are as unanimous in their statement that not enough workers will leave their employment to seriously cripple mine operations.

At the beginning of the strike the operators take a positive stand that there will be no compromise with the miners on the demand of Union recognition. The other demands of the miners—for their own check weighmen, privileges to live where they please, trade where they please and employ such physicians as they please—are not receiving much discussion either from operators or from miners.

Opposed to the operators' position are the Union leaders who declare the strike will be continued until recognition is secured.

Reports from various mining camps in the district tend to show that the walk-out will be general. In spite of the strike votes taken at the various mines last night, operators declare that work will progress there as usual to-day.

No violence has occurred, except in Colorado Springs, where a negro miner was said to have been attacked by miners last night. While conditions in mining camps give little evidence of any excitement State officials in Denver fear the strike may assume proportions as large and as serious as any which ever occurred in Colorado.

To Evangelize the Whole World

A clarion call to battle, to enter the field in a whirlwind campaign that will be conducted simultaneously throughout the Dominion—a campaign that has for its goal the evangelization of the world in this generation, and to press home the charge at a time when the non-Christian religions are in decadence—was sounded at a meeting in Montreal last week. Representatives of two provinces were present, numbering about thirty, and representing the intelligence and leadership that has conducted what is known as the laymen's missionary movement so successfully during the seven years of its existence.

SULZER MUST QUIT JOB.

Albany, N.Y. Sept. 23.—D. Cady Herrick, counsel for Governor Sulzer announced at the outset of to-day's session of the High Court of Impeachment that the Governor would cease henceforth to exercise the functions of the Executive office until the termination of his trial.

WILL CONSULT THE VOTERS BEFORE PASSING HOME RULE

Rumor Gains Ground That Great Britain Will Be given Chance to Pass Its Opinion On Stormy Issue

London, Sept. 23.—Many reports are circulated here concerning the outcome of the present informal Home Rule negotiations between the party leaders. Yesterday the Liverpool Courier declared on the authority of an anonymous very eminent politician that the country will be consulted before Home Rule receives the royal assent, although whether such consultation will be by referendum or a general election is yet undecided.

The insurance market, in consequence of the rumor, began to do business at a twenty-five per cent. premium against the holding of a general election before June. This, and similar reports must be accepted with considerable reserve, as the leaders are closely keeping their own counsel over both Home Rule negotiations and the land reform campaign.

SIR EDWARD CARSON PUSHING MILITARY PREPARATIONS

People Beginning to Realize That a Great Crisis is Now At Hand

London, Sept. 23.—The prospects of the attempt to bring about a compromise on the Irish Home Rule question have not improved, although important communications or conversations have passed informally between the British Cabinet Ministers and the leaders of the Opposition.

In the meantime, Sir Edward Carson, the leader of the Irish Unionist party, has started on the second week of his Ulster campaign by delivering speeches which have led the Liberal newspapers to ask whether he should not be prosecuted for sedition or be deprived of his membership of the Privy Council.

The business part of the Ulster campaign was entered upon to-day when the Ulster Unionist member of Parliament were informed of the civil and military plan to be pursued when the Home Rule Bill for Ireland becomes law, and were also admitted to knowledge of the leading features of the proposed Provisional Government for the North of Ireland.

A labor leader in a letter to the press to-day warns the public that the chiefs of the Labor Party are finding it harder to control their followers, who favor physical violence in face of the threats being made in Ulster of forcible resistance to Home Rule.

THE WEATHER.

To-day: Fair and cool, with local frosts at night.

HERE YOU ARE DAN, WE DON'T WANT HIM.

MR. T. H. HOOPER HAS CHANGED PREMISES

As is known to practically all the citizens of Peterborough, Mr. T. H. Hooper, the popular confectioner, has vacated the premises formerly occupied by him at 414 George street, and has removed one door south.

This was occasioned by the expiration of the lease which through some misunderstanding could not be renewed.

Mr. Hooper's capabilities as a business man have always been fully recognized and a change in premises certainly means no change in morals.

Mr. Hooper will in future give special attention to catering department of his business and guarantees complete and full satisfaction. This special department has taken years of study and economy to develop and at present the highest standard of catering is being produced.

The well known Hooper quality for cakes, pastry and bread will be maintained at all times.

Although, perhaps, Mr. Hooper's new premises are not quite so commodious as his former, his efforts will all be directed to the satisfaction of his old and new customers.

HARVEST FESTIVAL AT ST. GEORGE'S CHURCH

The first Harvest Thanksgiving service in the annals of St. Georges Anglican Church, was held last evening. The small structure had been beautifully decorated, and the general scheme of displaying the fruits of the earth was a most tasteful one.

The scheme was fully choral and most enthusiastically entered into by the congregation.

Rev. Canon Davidson recited the "office", and Rev. Canon Plumptre, Rector of St. James Cathedral Toronto, read the lessons, and was also the special preacher for the evening.

He took for his text Luke 12, 21, and gave a most lucid and interesting discourse on the duties of thankfulness, and the elimination of selfishness.

After the service, an adjournment was made to the basement, where refreshments were served.

The Harvest Festival Services will be continued on Sunday.

SPORTS

It was the intention of the Peterborough Rugby Club to hold a practice in front of the Armories last night, but their hopes were dashed to the ground, when Col. Clegg of the 57th Regt. announced that it would be impossible for them to use the lights on the green, as these are now Government property, and the light regulated through the Armories' meter. The Y.M.C.A. authorities are taking an active interest in the club and have volunteered the use of their rooms for dressing purposes.

When the 15 or 16 members found that they could not use the grounds, they decided to take another run, and this doubtless added to their physical capabilities.

THIS REMOVES HAIRS AND FUZZY GROWTHS

(Helps to Beauty)

Unsightly growths of hair or fuzz vanish with a single application of a delatone paste. Just mix enough powdered delatone with water to cover the hairs not wanted, apply and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and it will be free from hair or blemish. No harm results from this treatment and rarely is more than one application required.

Thick, glossy eyebrows result from using pyroxin, and if applied at lash-roots with thumb and forefinger, the eyelashes will come in thick and curly. Be careful and don't get pyroxin where hair is not wanted.

REV. MR. J. O'BRIEN D. D. WILL BE CONSECRATED BISHOP TO-DAY

Apostolic Delegate Arrived in the City Last Night and Was Accorded a Hearty Welcome

The consecration of the Rev. Dr. O'Brien will take place this morning at 9 o'clock at St. Peter's Cathedral The doors will be opened to ticket-holders at 8 a.m. and to the general public at 9 o'clock.

The tickets have been well circulated, but it is expected there will be room for many of those who have not received tickets, and who desire to witness the ceremony.

Rev. M. J. O'Brien, D.D., who will this morning be consecrated Bishop of Peterborough.

His Excellency Monseigneur Stagni, who will be the consecrator, assisted by Archbishop Bruchesi of Montreal, and Archbishop Spratt of Kingston, arrived in the city last evening at 7.30, per special coach, and was accorded a hearty welcome. It was formerly known that a procession would escort him to the Cathedral, but what must have exceeded the expectations of all was witnessed when at least 3000 Catholics, from the small lad to the old man, took the opportunity to respect one of their Holy Fathers, by joining in. First came six mounted escorts, then the band of the 57th Regt., and lastly the boys and men. Standing at a point, if one had noticed the time, it took something over twenty minutes for the procession to pass. Monseigneur Stagni was seated in a hack drawn by four white horses, and then followed in 15 more hacks, other priests and dignitaries. The route of the procession was originally to have been up George to Simcoe street, west on Simcoe to Rubidge, and north on Rubidge to the Cathedral, but this was changed and the procession made its way up George to Brock, west on Brock to Rubidge and down Rubidge to the Cathedral.

Between seven and eight hundred children, upon the arrival of His Excellency, sang a number of welcome songs, which were greatly appreciated.

At the Cathedral addresses of welcome were read by the clergy and the laity, to which the Apostolic Delegate made suitable and feeling replies. At the conclusion of the service His Excellency gave the Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament.

Venerable Archdeacon Casey, Father Fergus O'Brien, and Mr. Harry Phelan, chairman of the reception committee went to Norwood yesterday on the noon train to meet the Papal Delegate, who came east on the 4 o'clock train as far as Norwood but delayed his journey to Peterborough for a few hours to suit the convenience of the citizens.

The ceremony this morning, will be a scene, which, it is probable, will not be witnessed in Peterborough for many years to come, and the emotional taking of the solemn vows, according to ritual will be observed with all impressive solemnity.

Rev. Dr. O'Brien, who is 38 years of age was born in Peterborough. He received his early education in the Separate Schools, and Collegiate Institute, and he then went to St. Michael's College, Toronto, and later to the Seminary at Montreal. He completed his education at Rome, in the Canadian College there, where he was successful in securing his degree of Doctor of Divinity.

Congratulations will be extended to him on every hand, and in public opinion he is worthy of all praise which has been bestowed upon him.

A report of the consecration will appear in to-morrow's Times.

INDUSTRIAL NIGHT SCHOOL PROPOSED FOR PETERBOROUGH

Work will Probably Start in October and Continue Till Xmas—Committee Appointed

The Board of Education met in special session last night. There were present Messrs. Dr. Morrison, chairman; Dr. Middleton, J. Crane, B. F. Ackerman, J. J. Turner, Jr., V. Eastwood, Dr. Barnham, Col. Miller, H. Hill, and J. Thompson, secretary.

The object was to receive the report of the Industrial Committee.

Mr. V. Eastwood, chairman of the Committee, said that this step was being taken to secure an Industrial night school for Peterborough.

The Committee had met on Monday evening last and canvassed the situation. It was proposed to commence the classes early in October, and continue them until Christmas, and then, if found successful, continue them in 1914. Mr. Eastwood remarked that already Peterborough was behind other cities in this respect.

The following is the report submitted:

To the Chairman and members of the Board of Education,—

Gentlemen,—At a meeting of the sub-Committee of the Industrial Board held on Monday, September 15th, the following resolution was passed on motion of J. J. Turner, Esq., Jr., seconded by E. Anson, Esq.:

That the Committee recommend the establishment of evening industrial classes in Dressmaking, Millinery, Domestic Science, Mechanical Drawing, Shop Mathematics and Electricity, to commence the first week in October and to continue until Christmas, when if found successful they are to be continued in 1914, and that the Board of Education be requested to appropriate the sum of $[illegible] for the purpose of defraying the necessary expenses as given in the following estimates for three months:

Dressmaking, Millinery, Domestic Science	$[illegible]
Salaries	[illegible]
Mechanical Drawing, Shop Mathematics	75.00
Salaries	[illegible]
Electricity, salary	[illegible]
Supervising Principal	[illegible]
Janitor's salary	[illegible]
Advertising	[illegible]
Heat, light and Gas	[illegible]
Supplies—Domestic Science, Dressmaking, Millinery	100.00
	[illegible]

The estimated grants to be received from the Government are as follows:

[illegible] p.c. of the Equipment	[illegible]
[illegible] p.c. of the Salaries	[illegible]
	[illegible]

It is therefore requested that the Board of Education appropriate the sum of $[illegible] to defray the necessary expenses.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

V. EASTWOOD,
Chairman Industrial Committee.

After reading the report, Mr. Eastwood, in answer to a question, said that there was a supervisor in view.

In connection, with the work it might be possible to obtain the Collegiate Institute. Industrial Night Schools are now in progress at Hamilton, Brantford, London, Galt, Berlin and other cities, where they have proved very successful.

The report was adopted on the motion of Mr. Eastwood, seconded by Col. Miller.

Mr. W. H. Hill, said that not long ago, he had heard young fellows speak of it, and they were greatly interested in the work. To make the thing a success, the classes must be made attractive. The staff would

A Suggestion for Digestion

Many persons suffer more or less from headache, dizziness, biliousness, and symptoms common to indigestion. There are various causes, such as over-starchy or greasy foods, improper mastication, or bad cooking.

Grape-Nuts
Solves the digestion problem

This food, made from prime whole wheat and barley is perfectly baked until the starch cells are either converted into easily digested grape-sugar, or thoroughly broken down for quick digestion—generally in about one hour.

There is no animal fat in Grape-Nuts.

The tiny granules of Grape-Nuts come to your table ready-to-eat direct from package—invite thorough mastication and have a peculiarly sweet, nut-like flavor.

Grape-Nuts, containing all the rich elements of wheat and barley, including the vital mineral salts, is a perfectly balanced food for building muscle, bone, brain, and nerve.

FARMING ON SHARES

The following paragraph is taken from the Birmingham Post:

"There is in vogue in Ontario a system of land tenure, which is practically unknown in England, that of renting on a share basis. This arises mainly from the labor scarcity, and in some cases, from the fact that young men leave their fathers' farms and go into cities to enter the professions. Consequently it is that many a farmer is prepared to make an arrangement whereby the new comer, if he is competent, is able to settle at once upon a thriving farm; have the use of implements and stock, and share alike in the profits, he, of course, doing the work. Many excellent opportunities are open for experienced men there from England and Scotland in this way. They can, by close application in a very short time, be able either to rent a place, and pay the money as rent, or, if they prefer, buy a small place to start on their own. The arrangements are varied in different cases. At the present time, a farmer in Lambton County is looking for an experienced man to run his farm. He will pay a wage of $30 per month; provide a suitable dwelling-place, and if the dairy work can be performed by the wife, she will receive 25 per cent. of the profits. That is for the first year. For the second year the wage arrangement is to be the same, but the profit-sharing is to be extended to 25 per cent. of the profits of the whole farm."

CANADA MENTIONED IN IMMIGRANT CASES

Unfortunate Wives Before a London Police Court Tell of Their Harrowing Experience

Canada as a refuge was mentioned in two cases in a London, England court. In the first a woman asked the magistrate if he could assist her to get into communication with her husband. She said in 1907 they were sent to Canada by an East End Emigration Committee, and after about sixteen months her husband went on West with two other men, leaving her destitute with the children. When they learned this, the Canadian authorities shipped them home. Next time she heard of him, he was an inmate of the City and County Hospital, St. Paul, Minn. He then asked for her address and promised to write to her. Two letters had been received from him since, but he had not written to her, although he continually inquired about her. In one of his letters he said he might shortly return. He had not contributed anything to the maintenance of herself and children for over four years. Mr. Chester Jones remarked that he could do nothing, but the case was certainly a peculiar one. During the hearing of a summons for assault issued against James Burrows, the complainant, Laura Gunn, stated that he had offered to go to Canada if she would pay his fare. This she was quite willing to do, provided he would leave the country at once.

The magistrate said that, even provided he could agree to such a course, defendant would only be sent back if he became unable to follow his employment. In any event, he (the magistrate) must hear the evidence.

Mr. Frowde Phelps said Mrs. Gunn's was a pitiful story. She was deserted by her husband some years ago, and Burrows saw him off to Canada. He then posed as the wife's friend, and later induced her to go through a form of marriage with him, although he knew she was a married woman. Owing to his continued ill-treatment she surrendered herself to the police, and eventually was sentenced to imprisonment for one day at the Central Criminal Court.

On the following day Burrows left her, taking $160 of her money, but returned after a few days' absence. He had threatened to shoot her, and [illegible]

CRUELTY TO HORSES

Military Man Makes a Plea Against the Docking Habit

Lieut. R. S. Timmis of the Royal Canadian Dragoons made a slashing attack upon the practice of docking horses' tails, in the course of an interesting address upon "The Horse," at Toronto. Docking, he said, was due mainly to "horse show mania."

The contrast between horses with long, silky-looking tails and what the lecturer termed the "hat-peg variety," was exemplified by lantern pictures. In California and some of the States to the south the man who docks a horse's tail is sentenced to two years' imprisonment. A list of the docked horses in the State is kept in a book, and when a horse is found with its tail docked the owner has to explain the circumstances.

Lieut. Timmis said that the Society had photographs of horses in the city of Toronto which had been docked recently and they were going to make examples of some of the offenders.

The lecturer gave some valuable hints as to the care of the horse, stating that each animal should have at least 1,500 cubic feet of space, and the stable should not be too hot.

Nature's Cure-all

Lemon juice will:
Prevent diphtheria.
Cure sore throat or cough.
Cure a felon.
Drive away a sick headache.
Cure malaria.
Beautify the complexion.
Make the hair fluffy.

For sore throat, gargle with pure, undiluted, unsweetened lemon juice.

For a cough or cold, mix equal parts of lemon juice and strained honey, and take a tablespoonful every hour.

For sick headache, mix one part lemon juice and two parts boiling water, and sip a teacupful as hot as possible every two hours.

For malaria mix the juice of half a lemon with two tablespoonfuls of water and a little sugar, and drink three times a day.

For a felon, cut off the end of a lemon, stick the finger into the hole and bind it on. Let it stay for a day or two, when it will be ready to lance.

For the complexion, mix equal parts of rose water and glycerine and dip a cut lemon into this and rub the face with it. After it dries, rub with cold cream.

For the hair, add the juice of a lemon to the last rinsing of water of a shampoo.

OUR POINT OF VIEW

Hon. Dr. Pyne is probably wondering who threw that brick.

This is the autumn season when the leaves begin to fall, and the prices of things to go up.

With a bumper harvest throughout the Dominion, the partisan preachers of hard times find their occupation gone.

We fear if the Ontario Government does not behave itself over the bi-lingual matter, Dr. Pyne will pack up his toys, go home, and never play in its back yard again.

In order to be sure of fresh eggs, Mr. Schwab, the steel baron, will invest $20,000 in a henhouse. Let us hope that he will grant us the privilege of buying eggs from him at armor plate prices.

CHEAP AUTOMOBILES COMING

Last year an American company manufacturing the cheaper automobile declared a dividend of $10,000,000. This year the American Locomotive Company, manufacturing the Alco car, an expensive automobile containing the famous Berliet engine, announced its discontinuance of the business because of an annual loss of $600,000.

While a number of concerns manufacturing costly automobiles have been successful, the contrast of these two events is significant. The vogue of the cheaper car is now tremendous and the corporation which has enjoyed such great success in making inexpensive automobiles plans to manufacture 300,000 during the year 1912. From all accounts its product has become an "American peril" to the manufacturers of automobiles in England and Germany and in the former country an unsuccessful effort was made to induce Parliament to pass laws which would have had the effect of discrimination against the American car in the English market.

The history of the automobile is that of every other vehicle. Its gradual decrease in cost has made it pass from the category of a luxury to that of a convenience. "Automobilist" is no longer a synonym of "plutocrat," and today instead of hurling imprecations as he [illegible] the head of the frightened horse, the farmer now blows his automobile horn to announce to city-folks that he is entitled to the right of the road.

CONSERVING FARM LIFE

If, as a boy, you had been shown by an enthusiastic teacher what fun there is in harnessing science to farm chores and how the mysteries and beauties of nature can be studied at close range with infinite satisfaction to your soul, while meantime you were fitting to earn a comfortable livelihood, do you suppose that you would have been so eager to desert the old homestead for the noisy, smoky, nerve-straining city?

Wisconsin has just created an office known as "county representative of agriculture." His duties are to advise with farmers regarding methods, aid in improving country life conditions, help to form co-operative societies, promote better business methods, and assist in promoting agricultural teaching. If the county will pay $1,000 a year towards his salary, the State will match it with another $1,000. Selection will be made by the board of regents, on recommendation of the dean of the agricultural college.

"Assist in promoting agricultural teaching." There you have the key to whether this new job will become worth while. It isn't hard for a bright chap who has had the right training to be worth $2000 a year to a county as a leader toward better farming; for unless he's worth that he won't be worth anything, and if he is worth that he can't help being worth many times that.

But the folks must see that he is worth it if his usefulness is to grow; and that is primarily a matter of education.

First off, the boys and girls on the farm will have to be taught how life there can be made so interesting they won't feel the prompting to rush into town. This can be done because in spots it has been done. But it can't be done without overturning most of the teaching now done in the country schools, which is foolishly aimed to exalt the city life at the expense of the rural life; and which has largely measured success by the dollar standard instead of in terms of health, usefulness and independence.

It is good to see a great State like Wisconsin start, even though modestly, to conserve its greatest resource, farm life.

Headache Over the Eyes? Look for Nasal Catarrh

Catarrh Never Stops in One Place—It Spreads Rapidly—Often Ruins Health Completely.

In this changeable climate it is the little colds that drift into Catarrh. Unless the inflammation is checked it soon rapidly from the throat or nose to the bronchial tubes and then to the lungs. You can't make new lungs any more than you can make new fingers or toes, but you can cure catarrh.

The surest cure consists of breathing in the healing balsamic essences of CATARRHOZONE, which is simply a medicated vapor so full of rich curative properties that every trace of Catarrh vanishes before it.

"The soothing piney vapor of Catarrhozone is the most powerful medicine I ever used," writes Mrs. Edmund J. Christine, of Saskatoon. "Every breath drawn through the Inhaler sends a grateful feeling through the air passages of the nose and throat. Catarrhozone cured me of frightful headaches over the eyes, relieved me of a stuffy feeling in the nose, and an irritable hacking cough that had been the bane of my life for a year. My general health is greatly improved, my appetite and digestion are considerably better than before. Catarrhozone has been the means of giving me such health as I always desired, but never possessed."

Even though catarrh has a firm hold on you, and affects your throat, nose or ears, you can thoroughly cure it with Catarrhozone. Large size, guaranteed, costs $1.00; smaller size 50c.; sample size 25c. All storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

TWO PROSPEROUS YEARS FOR THE BORDEN GOVERNMENT

Great Development in all Departments of Public Service

(Special to The Times)

Ottawa, Sept. 23.—The work which the Borden Government has accomplished since coming into office less than twenty-four months ago would do credit to an administration in power for a full Parliamentary term. First in the matter of promoting the basic industry of the country, Mr. Burrell, as Minister of Agriculture, has developed and put into operation a policy that, through the co-operation of the Provincial Governments which has been freely given, promises to produce a notable improvement in the quality and quantity of farm production, in the East as well as in the West.

Mr. Cochrane's Good Work.

Under Mr. Cochrane, the line of railway to connect the prairies with Hudson Bay, which Parliament sanctioned years ago, has been undertaken with a vigor that means accomplishment. Under his direction also, the work of completing the National Transcontinental Railway has been taken out of the hands of a political commission and put under the charge of a capable and experienced man who is carrying it through as a business enterprise. So with other works.

New Waterway.

The Welland Canal is to be supplemented by the construction of a new waterway which will enable the large steam carriers that make transportation so cheap on the upper lakes to pass from Erie at [illegible] the distance which has to be covered by the more costly barge service between the head of the lakes and the ship's side at Montreal.

In Earnest.

Other works in the same line begun in earnest since the Borden Government came into power include the provision of efficient and sufficient terminal equipment for the Intercolonial Railway at St. John and Halifax, and works in aid of navigation at Quebec, Montreal and other points where expenditure on business lines for business services was justified by known and established conditions. As part of this policy is to be mentioned the enlargement of the elevator capacity where it is found to be needed and the provision of new storage facilities where they will be of greatest service to the grain trade of the western provinces.

Parcel Post.

Under Mr. Pelletier parcels post has been established, which will give to all places the advantages now only obtained through the express company or main lines of communication only. The Postmaster-General has succeeded also in getting cheaper cable rates and in extending the rural mail service.

Mr. Foster Boosts Trade.

Under Hon. George E. Foster, Minister of Trade and Commerce, there has been consummated a reciprocity treaty with British West Indies and South American colonies. This treaty will be developed by the service of an improved line of steamships.

Mr. White's Bank Act.

Under Mr. White's guidance in the House of Commons the Bank Act has been extended and improved on carefully considered lines, that will give to the community all the practical security that an organization law can afford and leave the banks at liberty to serve the trade of the country in all safe ways, existing or that may be developed.

Only a Few of Them.

These are but a few of our outstanding accomplishments of a young government. The people generally recognize that the men, who have planned and brought these schemes to a successful issue have shown vision and capability.

INDUSTRIAL NIGHT SCHOOL

have to do their share of the work or otherwise it would be no good attempting the scheme. There will be two sessions a week, each lasting two hours, and it is thought that the subjects proposed would be most suitable for a start. Others could be taken up later.

Mr. V. Eastwood—There is a likelihood that this may be a real disappointment. This is an additional undertaking that we are initiating, and it calls for real work from the members, who will have to give time for thought to make it a success. The only thing is, to get conversant with it. We can see what other cities have done and there is no reason why we should not do the same. Publicity will have a great deal to do with it and manufacturers have promised to help.

Dr. Morrison—I think Mr. Eastwood has gone into this thoroughly, and it is now up to the Board to back the Committee. It is a great opportunity for every young man and woman, an opportunity for the advancement of their education, which perhaps, lots did not have in their younger days. This opportunity presents itself and many will doubtless take the chance to equip themselves for the better services of life.

The motion was then put to the meeting and carried unanimously.

A special meeting of the Industrial Committee will be held in the Board of Education offices at 8 o'clock, Friday evening, when every member is asked to be present.

YOU'RE BILIOUS AND COSTIVE!—CASCARETS

Sick Headache, Bad Breath, Sour Stomach, Lazy Liver and Bowels Clogged—Clean up tonight.

Get a 10-cent box now.

Furred Tongue, Bad Taste, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret to-night will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then to keep their stomach, liver and bowels regulated, and never know a miserable moment. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good, gentle cleansing, too.

PUBLIC OPINION.

The Times does not hold itself responsible for the opinions of its correspondents.

WHY TORONTO MORNING PAPERS?

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I note in the Toronto papers of a day or two ago some subscriber complains of the late delivery of their Toronto papers, the following is an extract from the article referred to.

"Peterborough people declare the tardy arrival of the morning papers makes them feel as if they were living in the backwoods. It is bad enough, they say, not to have the news to read at the breakfast table, but now their papers are not received even in time to be read at luncheon; the state of affairs is unendurable."

Now, Mr. Editor, it is hard to believe that the above statement was made by a resident of our fair city. It is considered by business men that The Times is one of the most live and aggressive morning papers published in any small city in Canada, and compares most favorably with papers published in much larger centres. If the people who feel the loss of their big city daily would support their own aggressive paper, they would have no reason to complain of lack of the world's doings, and best of all, they would become familiar with our local conditions, and in many cases would become more alert and aggressive and be better posted.

FISKE O'HARA IN "OLD DUBLIN."

A great international yacht race furnishes the exciting setting for a tender love theme in Augustus Pitou's "In Old Dublin," which Fiske O'Hara and his excellent company will present at Grand Opera House, Monday, Sept. 29th. The story revolves around a young marine architect, Neil Powett, whose great ambition has been to build a vessel that would show a clean pair of heels to the fast English yachts that were entered for the Queen's Cup race on Dublin Bay. Neil has found a patron in Martin Ferguson, a wealthy banker, whose daughter, Irene, has fallen in love with the young designer. Some members of the Dublin Castle set have been watching Neil, whose smaller yachts have been wonderfully successful and determine to keep Neil's boat out of the race, if possible. Martin Ferguson must be induced to withdraw his entry and to stop the building of it. In the banker's wife they find a ready instrument for their purpose. Mrs. Ferguson was a farmer's daughter, whom the banker married for her beauty. With the possession of wealth came the natural desire for social advancement and Mrs. Ferguson now aspires to be a member of Dublin Castle society. The schemers demonstrate to Mrs. Ferguson how fatal to her chances would be the entry of a boat in the race against the favorite yacht owned by the Lord Lieutenant. Thoroughly alarmed she demands of her husband that he cease all ideas of completing and racing the vessel designed by Neil. He complies with her wishes and orders work stopped on it. Neil is crushed momentarily but Rose Stratton, through Farley, purchases the yacht from Ferguson and places the requisite funds at the disposal of Neil for the boat's completion. The race day arrives and the schemers again endeavor to put the Irish yacht out of the race by drugging the sailing master at the last moment. Neil, equal to the occasion, sails the boat himself, and wins not only the royal trophy, but also the fair hand of Rose Stratton.

Mr. O'Hara has a number of delightful songs, the music of which was written by David J. Sullivan, and will also introduce some fine old Irish melodies by Thomas Moore and others. A feature of the performance will be the introduction of the [illegible] [illegible] Gilbert West, Byron Russell, Jefferson Hall, P. J. Foy and William Lowman. There is a wealth of handsome scenery and costumes, as one may expect in a Pitou production.

Another Large House Last Night.

Another packed house greeted the Ernie Marks Stock Company at the Grand Opera House last night. The play presented was the four act rural drama, "Sweet Clover." That a company playing at popular prices is able to gather a company of artists who were able to present this production in such a finished manner, is something the people cannot understand. The different members of the cast last night displayed rare dramatic ability in the parts assigned them and the grand old play was interpreted in such a faithful manner as to arouse the emotions of the audience at frequent intervals. Ernie Marks, as usual, scored a hit; while Kitty Marks was all that was sweet; and shared the honors with him by her brilliant work which would be hard to improve. The offering for tonight will "One Girl in a thousand." Pleasing specialities were introduced between the acts last night and added to the enjoyment of the evening.

GIRLS! DRAW A MOIST CLOTH THROUGH HAIR

Try this! Hair gets thick, glossy, wavy and beautiful at once—Stops falling out.

Immediate?—Yes! Certain?—that's the joy of it. Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a Danderine hair cleanse. Just try this—moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or excessive oil, and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair. A delightful surprise awaits those whose hair has been neglected or is scraggy, faded, dry, brittle or thin. Besides beautifying the hair, Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair, but what will please you most will be after a few week's use, when you see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty, soft hair, and lots of it, surely get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and just try it.

RING DOWN THE CURTAIN

Realism on the Stage That Has Not Been Part of the Play

The tragic end of the famous 'cello player and actor, Mr. Auguste Van Biene thrilled all the playgoing world. Appearing in "The Master Musician," at a Brighton music-hall, he had just finished playing "Home, Sweet Home." At its conclusion the curtain rings down as the musician collapses in his chair. It did; but it never rose again that evening. The world-famous player was dead.

Perhaps the most notable of all stage deaths was that of the famous actor, Sir Henry Irving. The last words he uttered on the stage were the words that end "Becket," the play in which he was then appearing at Bradford. Though he did not actually die on the stage, he barely left the theatre when he was suddenly stricken with syncope, and died a few minutes later.

Very sudden was the death of a famous dancer at a Dusseldorf theatre, six years ago.

Mlle. la Papinstada was executing the last stage of her dance, and when she sank on the stage with a low cry of pain, her death, which occurred almost instantaneously, was watched by the crowded audience, who had no idea that a tragedy had been enacted before their eyes.

One of the most dramatic of all stage deaths was that of the great Edmund Kean. He was playing Othello to the Iago of his son Charles, at a time when his health was so frail that his weakness and incapacity could hardly be hidden from the audience. After the words "Othello's occupation's gone," he fell into his son's arms muttering, "God, I am dying. Speak to them, Charles!" He was at once carried home, and died seven weeks later.

A grim accidental tragedy occurred in 1891 at Manchester, during a school performance of "Romeo and Juliet." In the quarrel scene, the youngster playing Tybalt killed Romeo.

The famous Peg Woffington met on the stage a fate almost as sad, when playing Rosalind. She had gone almost through the entire play, with a life and spirit that gave no sign of the weakening powers plainly evident to her companions on the stage, when suddenly she staggered and fell, apparently lifeless, but in reality paralysed. She recovered, only to live three years in solitary retirement.

It is seldom that a deliberate murder takes place on the stage; but one that took place in Paris a few years ago caused a great sensation in the French capital. A clown named Hougrood had taken a liking to the voice of a child of nine, and had her trained for six years. After her debut he discovered that he loved her. She refused to marry him, however, saying she loved Pippo, a singer who had recently joined the company in which she was singing. While the girl and her lover were singing a duet together at rehearsal, Hougrood drew a revolver, and fired four shots at them.

Buttons in Church Collection

The Rev. Douglas Morgan, curate of Coventry Parish Church, said in far-off lands like Australia and Canada the Churches were not sheltered by endowments, but because they loved their religion the people made tremendous sacrifices in almsgiving for the support of that religion. The veriest ploughboy among these people in far-off lands would scorn to misdemean himself by offering pieces of metal and buttons and other rubbish which some members of that congregation—as the churchwardens could prove—were accustomed to place in the collection at that church.

Twice Married After Seventy

Mr. Richard Northcott, of Brixham, has just been married for the second time since he attained the age of seventy, and on each occasion his bride was a septuagenarian. At the first marriage there was a crowded congregation, and the old couple were toured through the town in a wagonette. Last year Northcott was left a widower, and his new bride is his deceased wife's sister. Both Mr. and Mrs. Northcott are in receipt of old age pensions.

Platelayer's Amazing Escape

A middle-aged platelayer named John Donaghan had a remarkable escape from death at Stirling Station. He was working on the line when he failed to observe the approach of the four o'clock passenger train to Edinburgh. He was knocked down and run over, and when extricated it was found that no limbs had been severed, his injuries consisting of severe cuts and bruises to the head and face and crushing of the ribs.

A 40 Pound Salmon

One of the finest specimens of salmon ever caught in the blackwater has been captured by Mr. Fitz [illegible] at Kilbarry, near Fermoy. The fish measured 4 feet from nose to tail and 2 feet 2 inches around the girth, and scaled exactly 40 pounds.

WELLAND SHIP CANAL.
Section No. 2.
NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

SEALED TENDERS, addressed to the undersigned and marked "Tender for Section No. 2 Welland Ship Canal," will be received at this office until 12 o'clock noon on Wednesday, October 15th, 1913.

Plans, specification and form of contract to be entered into can be seen on or after this date at the office of the Chief Engineer of the Department of Railways and Canals, Ottawa, and at the office of the Engineer in charge, St. Catharines, Ontario.

Copies of plans and specifications may be obtained from the Department on the payment of the sum of fifty dollars. To bona fide tenderers this amount will be refunded upon the return of the above in good condition.

Parties tendering will be required to accept the fair wages schedule prepared or to be prepared by the Department of Labour, which schedule will form part of the contract.

Contractors are requested to bear in mind that tenders will not be considered unless made strictly in accordance with the printed forms, and in the case of firms, unless there are attached the actual signatures, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm.

An accepted bank cheque on a chartered bank of Canada for the sum of $150,000.00 made payable to the order of the Minister of Railways and Canals, must accompany each tender, which sum will be forfeited if the party tendering declines entering into contract for the work, at the rates stated in the offer submitted.

The cheques thus sent in will be returned to the respective contractors whose tenders are not accepted.

The cheque of the successful tenderer will be held as security, or part security, for the due fulfilment of the contract to be entered into.

The lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

AN OLD SCHOOLHOUSE

Took Nearly a Century For Toronto to Grow Out to It

The oldest landmark on the banks of the Don River, which flows through Toronto, disappeared when the one-roomed log schoolhouse which stood in Todmorden for well on to a century was torn down in order to make way for modern homes.

All the Todmorden children of several generations were educated in its solitary room, which accommodated about seventy pupils. There was a bell tower, but no bell was ever installed. The building was abandoned when it became too small, in 1890, and after that it was occupied by market gardeners. The last teacher was Mr. Tom Gould of the Customs Department at the Toronto Postoffice.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Wharf Extension and Warehouse at Bracebridge, Ont.," will be received at this office until 4.00 p.m. on Tuesday, October 21, 1913, for the construction of a Wharf Extension and Warehouse at Bracebridge, District of Muskoka, Ontario.

Plans, specification and form of contract can be seen and forms of tender obtained at this Department and at the offices of J. H. Armstrong, Esq., District Engineer, Midland, Ont.; J. G. Sing, Esq., District Engineer, Confederation Life Building, Toronto, Ont., and on application to the Postmaster, at Bracebridge, Ont.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed form supplied, and signed with their actual signatures, stating their occupations and places of residence. In the case of firms, the actual signature, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm must be given.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, equal to ten per cent (10 p.c.) of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

Poteen Manufacture

The Poteen "industry" in Donegal, which it was thought had been stamped out, would seem to be revived. Two captures of stills have been made by the Inishowen police. The last was discovered in the mountain district of Glengad. All engaged in the "industry" made good their escape.

Diabetes

TORTURED WITH AN UNQUENCHABLE THIRST FOR YEARS TRIED EVERYTHING THAT MEDICAL AID COULD DO FOR ME, BUT GRADUALLY GOT WORSE TRIED SANOL'S ANTI-DIABETES AND WAS CURED.

Ashville, Man.

Dear Sirs:—

During the month of March I was informed that I had a well developed case of Diabetes. I immediately placed myself upon a rigid diet after a week of which the first urinalysis disclosed a sugar content of 5 p.c. After several months of dieting during which time I was taking a so-called cure, the sugar content was reduced to 3 p.c. I began taking SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES with the result that within a short time the urinalysis made by competent persons, and at different periods, disclosed no sugar, whatever. This condition, is indeed, very gratifying and I have every reason to believe that I am quite cured. For some time past my diet has been a liberal one, consisting largely in some foods high in carbo-hydrates, but I still avoid all sugars and syrups. This is in accordance with the directions which I can well afford to follow. I am gaining in weight and strength, and even more feel that it is good to be alive.

There is no question in my mind regarding the virtues of SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES, and I feel that a great blessing has been conferred upon suffering humanity by this discovery, and use of this medicine."

Yours truly,
W. A. FOX.

PRINCESS' NOVEL TEAM

Lion and Leopard in Harness at a Ball

At a ball at the Skating Club, which was attended by nearly all the Roman aristocracy, Princess Radziwill made her appearance in a chariot drawn by a lion and a leopard. During the fetes the beasts became unruly, and created such an uproar that they had to be taken away.

Infant's Long Voyage

With the aid of the Allan Line officials a happy domestic union has just taken place. Recently the mother of John Duncan M'Donald, aged six months, died in Detroit, Mich., and the relatives in Scotland were keenly desirous that the infant should be brought to them. Circumstances prevented anyone connected with the family from undertaking the journey but the Allan Line undertook to send a special stewardess the 3,500 miles to bring the child to Glasgow. Both arrived a few days ago by the Scandinavian.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned and endorsed "Tender for Alterations to Warehouse, Fort William, Ontario," will be received at this office until 4 p.m., on Tuesday, October 14, 1913, for the construction of the building mentioned.

Plans, specification and form of contract can be seen and forms of tender obtained at the offices of Mr. R. H. Matthews, Superintending Architect of the Dominion Public Buildings, in the Province of Manitoba, Winnipeg, Man.; W. P. Morton, District Engineer, Fort William, Ont., at the office of the clerk, Fort William, Ont., and at this Department.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed forms supplied, and signed with their actual signatures, stating their occupations and places of residence. In the case of firms, the actual signature, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm must be given.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, equal to ten per cent (10 p.c.) of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted, the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

QUICK-WITTED BOB

There Were Two Robert Stewards, but This One Was First to Arrive.

By GEORGE ELMER COBB.

Robert Stewart, young, athletic, bronzed, and in outing costume, walked up the steps of the Empire Hotel with boldness and defiance. It took cutting nerve to assume a happy, independent air, in his situation. His condition was desperate.

"Just one dollar in my pocket," he soliloquized, "and this is a two dollar a day house. Well, I spent my last change sending a telegram to my brother in Chicago. If he is home he will wire a remittance promptly. I'll risk it," and the young man entered the lobby, registered in a free flowing hand and the bell boy took him up in the elevator.

It was not a very elaborate apartment, that into which Robert was shown, but it was good enough till the funds came, he told himself philosophically. Scarcely, however, had he turned on the gas and prepared for a refreshing wash, when there was a timid yet imperative tap on the door.

"Come in," sang out Robert, and, fat and consequential, yet with a marked servility in his manner, the proprietor of the hotel whom Robert had noted in the lobby entered.

"Oh, Mr. Stewart, sir," almost gasped the pompous landlord, "a dreadful mistake has been made."

"He has found out that I've got only a dollar," mused Robert darkly.

"New bellhop, sir," proceeded the landlord. "Clerk just noticed your name. This way, if you please, sir—if you please," and graciously and solicitously the speaker waved Robert to the elevator, bowed and scraped all the way down three flights, and ushered him into a magnificent apartment on the parlor floor.

"See here," blurted out the mystified Robert, "this expense—"

"Ordered, paid for, Mr. Stewart, I assure you," interrupted the landlord. "Expected you, sir. A guest, Mr. Stewart, an honored guest. The best in the house is at your command, sir. Indeed, the whole city. Judge Slattery says so. I shall telephone him and he will be here at once to welcome you, sir. Ah, by the way," continued the voluble speaker, pointing to a suit case lying on the bed, "that arrived this morning. It was only strapped, and we took the liberty of airing your apparel. Ring for what you wish, sir. Delighted to fill all commands—indeed, sir."

"A Dreadful Mistake Has Been Made."

"Well!" exploded Bob, as he was familiarly known to a host of friends back at his home in the east, and he flopped into an easy chair and stared as his visitor obsequiously bowed himself out of the room.

It took quick-witted Bob only a brief thinking spell to understand that Robert Stewart was a common name.

"Two Robert Stewarts, eh?" he ruminated, "and I've arrived first. Wonder where the other Bob is at the other end of the line? Why not!"

What Bob asked himself was, if he dared to carry out the assumption thrust upon him. He had just gone through an experience where frolic and danger were daily concomitants of a rude frontier life. He had been out with a surveying crew, blocking off the great Tanigah Valley. The government had encouraged an irrigation project, and land in the valley had gone up on a boom.

There was not a foot of land in the Tanigah district Bob had not gone over. In fact, struck with the future possibilities in view, he had got the owner of a ten thousand acre tract, the choicest property in the section, to give him a ninety days' option on his holdings. The engineering company had [illegible]. Bob had thus far arrived at the outposts of civilization, on his way to collect from the company at Denver, to find himself stranded.

"I am supposed to be the Robert Stewart who owns that suit case," he soliloquized. "All right. I'll occupy till he comes, and trust to luck to get out of the scrape."

Adventurous Bob found two suits and the accessories to a perfect outfit. Inside the dressing case he spotted a photograph. Ardent Bob thought he had never seen so lovely a face. He admired this wife, or fiancee, of the other Robert Stewart.

"Lucky fellow!" mused Bob. "Lots of money, too, I suppose. Well, he can't grudge me a good bed and some fine meals. I'll play the game to the limit."

One hour later Bob sat at a banquet table, surrounded, as his [illegible], by "the leading citizens of the town." Bob had donned one of the suits at the hotel. Judge Slattery had called for him. He was whisked away in an automobile in the city, [illegible] Bob [illegible] by those [illegible] friends who [illegible] him.

Then the Judge and some others led him into a private room. And then [illegible]. Bob opened his eyes [illegible] that balloon. He was [illegible] but uncommunicative. When he got back to the hotel he winked at himself in the mirror and chuckled.

When the train from the east arrived the next morning, a well-dressed young man was conveyed to the Empire Hotel. He approached the clerk's desk with the simple words:

"Robert Stewart."

"Ah, yes, show the gentleman up, boy."

Thus it was that Robert Stewart No. 2 intruded on Robert Stewart No. 1.

The first Bob was tactful. Inside of ten minutes he had explained, and had his double in some laughing.

"You see," he said, "it's lucky I let them take me for you. As I get it, you are out here to buy up a lot of land for an eastern firm. The speculators in this town got options on five thousand acres of Tanigah at rock bottom prices, and expected to put it over on you at a five hundred per cent. advance. Besides that, the land is the poorest you could pick up. If you wish to invest, give my option a show."

Which Robert Stewart No. 2 did, which Judge Slattery found out and slunk into obscurity with his confederates. The belated Bob saved his firm fifty thousand dollars, our Bob made ten, and the original of the photograph turned out to be a sister.

Then the friends learned that somehow they were distantly related. They returned east together, and there was an introduction for Bob to charming Edith Stewart.

"I can't ask you to change your name," observed Bob one evening, after he and Edith had got pretty well acquainted, "but I can ask you to change your home. It was a lucky thing, my coming across your brother. He and I are going into business together. Won't you join the firm as a silent partner?"

Edith was shyly mute for a moment or two. Then she frankly placed her hands in Bob's glad clasp.

"It would be pretty difficult to resist the best friend my brother ever had," she said, "only as to being a silent partner—"

"Yes?" interrogated Bob eagerly.

"If you truly love me as much as you say you do, I can't promise silence in the new home you talk about, Bob, for I should be singing all day long."

Ducked and Drowned

An extraordinary practical joke was recalled at Peterborough by the recovery from the River Nene, near the Town Bridge, of the body of a man named William Burrows, aged about thirty, who had been missing. The body was found by a lighterman who recognized it as that of a man whom he rescued from drowning at the same spot in startling circumstances two years before. On that occasion Burrows was going home at "closing time," when he expressed a wish to die, as he had no money. One of his mates said, "I will give anybody sixpence who will drop him over the bridge." "Give me that sixpence," said a comrade, and having got it, he forthwith picked Burrows up and held him over the parapet. "I can't swim," the victim gasped. "Then you'll be able to learn," said his tormentor, and dropped him in the middle of the stream afterwards plunging in and bringing him safe to the bank.

Big Oyster Beds

In Long Island Sound, Chesapeake Bay, and many of the large open bays and sounds of the Atlantic coast, oyster farming is carried on on a vast scale under from forty to sixty feet of water. Some of these farms are over 20,000 acres in extent. Here the spat (or spawn) is brought from the natural beds and planted, matured, and harvested by steam power, the immense steamers used being capable of catching 200 bushels of oysters per hour from these grounds.

It takes an oyster about three years to grow up, and some do not reach their full growth before the fifth or sixth year. The spawning season is in May, June, July and August, during which months they are not so good to eat as at other times, hence the saying that Oysters are unwholesome in all months that have not an "r" in their names.

CHURCH STATISTICS

Nearly 13,000,000 Roman Catholics in the Empire

The Catholic Directory compiled by Cardinal Bourne's authority says in England and Wales there are twenty archbishops and bishops, 3,836 priests, and 1,797 churches, chapels and stations. For Great Britain there are 27 archbishops and bishops, 4,401 priests, and 2,182 stations.

For the first time the directory attempts to state the number of Catholics in the British Empire, the figures wherever possible being given from [illegible] sources. In England and Wales there are 1,[illegible] Catholics; Scotland 547,336; total for Great Britain, 2,[illegible]. In Ireland there are 3,[illegible] Catholics.

British America has 3,1[illegible] Catholics, including 2,[illegible] in Canada. Australia has 1,1[illegible].

The total number of Catholics in the British Empire is 12,[illegible], an increase in twelve months of [illegible]. The Catholic population of the world is estimated at [illegible],787,[illegible].

Dwindling Vaccination

At a meeting of the Bedwas and Machen District Council Dr. R. O. [illegible], the medical officer of health, said vaccination was gradually dwindling to vanishing point in the district. In the event of an outbreak of smallpox the position would be critical.

Prices May Increase.

The barbers of Brantford, Guelph, St. Catharines, Hamilton and other places charge 15c for shaving. Local shops are also thinking of charging to this figure and may do so soon. The proposal, however, is by no means unanimous, but may carry by a close shave by the barbers' association.

Mary and George.

A lady writes to a contemporary to say that she wants to marry a perfect, well-behaved man. For the benefit of such we may relate a tale: Mary and George resolved they would not marry until George had saved $10,000. After three months, Mary asked George how much he had accumulated and he said $2.50. And Mary said: "I guess, George, that is near enough." Perhaps the lase above referred to might be more earnest than Mary.

Have Found Them.

The Police Department have succeeded in locating a number of the culprits responsible for the breaking of the lights on the Smith street bridge and a police court case may result. The matter was brought up at the Council meeting on Monday night by Ald. Gordon, who suggested that the city offer a reward of $25 for information leading to the apprehension of the parties responsible. In view of recent developments this was considered unnecessary.

To Stand Trial.

Elber Ross Powers, the 19-year-old boy who was charged with assault on Alma Wright, 60 years old, on August 17th, near Pontypool, was taken up there from Cobourg gaol for preliminary hearing. He was committed for trial at the next session of the High Court in November, and was returned to the county gaol. This case will likely create some sensation, due to the seriousness of the charge, and the good standing of the families.

Normal School Opens.

The Normal School re-opened yesterday morning with a total enrollment of 154. Of these 21 are in the Model School Department and the remaining 133 are in the Normal. Since the advent of the "Normalites," Peterborough's standing on the beauty stock market has gone up 10 points. The new students are welcome to Peterborough, and it is hoped that they will not only make the most of their course of studies, but that they will receive a fitting welcome and develop a lasting regard for the city which they will look back upon as the home of their Normal training.

From Inside Trunk.

A well known local lady was preparing to pay a visit to friends in Toronto the other day, and left her trunk packed ready to be taken away the following morning. The lid was left open, however, during the night, and securely locked a few moments before the expressman arrived. In the morning her pet dog missing, and a search was made without result. In the meantime the trunk was left standing on its end on the verandah. A few minutes later a singular noise was heard proceeding from the trunk, which was hastily unstrapped and opened. When the canine jumped out, and gleefully wagged its tiny tail, uttering yelps of joy. It was a close call for the dog.

44th BARGAIN ANNEX EVENT.

The CRESSMAN Company Limited

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 24th, 1913.

3 CASES OF MILL ENDS

Fall Coatings, Suitings and Dress Goods at $1.25 an end.

THE ANNEX—EVER RENOWNED FOR THE EXCELLENT VALUE OF ITS OCCASIONAL SALES OF "MILL ENDS"—has never before quite equalled the extraordinary saving that it offers for next Wednesday. The assortment is the mill's accumulation of Ends for the past two months, and comprises heavy fall coatings, suitings, and dress fabrics in practically every possible color, while the lengths run all the way up to 4 yards. A number of exceptionally fine heavy wool reversible coatings are 2 yards long, and several 3 and 4 yard ends are of tweed suitings and dress materials of sound worth. Many pieces there are that in the ordinary way would easily cost $4.00, while there is not a single end but what means a tremendous saving to those in need of this class of goods. The window display of these ends will carry the conviction to many that here is an opportunity worth grasping. There are over 200 ends in all, thus presenting an unusual selection of fabrics and colors at the astonishing low price of .... Per End $1.25

CHORAL SOCIETY MEET.

The St. George's Choral Society met for practice in the Collegiate Institute Assembly Hall last night at 8 o'clock. Each member was asked to bring another singer along, and in a good many instances this was done. Those who intend to become members of the Society are asked to make an appearance before the end of the month, as it is most important that a complete registration be obtained before that time. The music for the Oratorio that will be produced early next year, "Judas Maccabeus," was on hand, and a preliminary study made. The following part songs were also given recognition: "Choral Fantasia on British Airs," "The Unseen Choir," "The Village Blacksmith," and "Admiral Tom." It is hoped that the production of Handel's Oratorio will be made by nearly twice the number that gave the distinguished production of the "Messiah" last year. Mr. R. J. Devey whose musical capabilities are everywhere recognized is musical director.

NEW SIDING HAS BEEN COMPLETED

Mr. George Allen has completed his contract with the Canada Cement Co. at Drummond Station, in Otonabee, for the new railway siding, which has been in course of construction for the past four months. The siding is a mile in length, and reaches through a clay bed of 100 acres, and the material has to be taken to the Lakefield Cement Works, thus occasioning work for a considerable number of men. The first train passed through yesterday, and in future about 20 cars per day will pass over the siding.

Mr. Allen has also been awarded the contract for digging a trench about 1½ miles in length to allow the water to run away from the clay bed beds. This work will require the services of about 20 men and 8 teams of horses for several months. It may be mentioned that this district is composed of considerable amount of clay suitable for cement.

MILLIONS OF DOLLARS TO BE AVAILABLE FOR ULSTER'S DEFENCE

Should Fighting Break Out Volunteers are to be Paid by Ulster

Belfast, Sept. 24.—The Ulster Parliamentary conference to-day agreed to raise a fund of $5,000,000 to indemnify the members of the Ulster volunteers, the militia men now being drilled. From this fund it is proposed to pay the volunteers and their families for property loss, injury and death, if fighting occurs.

Sir Edward Carson, leader of the Ulster Unionists, all the Irish Unionist members of the House of Commons, the Duke of Abercorn, and many other peers and representatives from all parts of the Province of Ulster attended.

Full details of the provisional constitution of the Province were communicated to the meeting for formal ratification.

The earnestness with which the parliaments regarded the procedure was exemplified in reports of the meeting, which declared:

"This nucleus of an Ulster Parliament will put its hand to a document no less remarkable than the Declaration of Independence, and as pregnant with possibilities of change in the political history of the country."

The Belfast Telegram says the Ulster Unionist Council to-day confirmed the scheme of the provisional government, also inaugurated a fund to indemnify members of the volunteer forces against injury or loss of life.

How is This, Dr. Pyne?

Ottawa, Sept. 24.—The Sudbury School Board has just decided to give separate courses to pupils of the French tongue, and to those of the English tongue, according to a despatch in a French paper credited to Le Devoir. The scheme has been contemplated for a long time, but there have always been obstacles met with to prevent its realization. This will be a great advantage for French-Canadians. The courses are under the direction of a French-Canadian, Sister Superior Aldegonde.

GOOD HIGHWAYS VITAL LINK IN TRANSPORTATION SYSTEM

Liberals Never Spent a Dollar for Good Roads and Prevented Expenditure of Two and a Half Millions by Present Administration

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Sept. 24.—The movement for good roads in Canada keeps persistently growing and it can be taken for granted that the Highways Bill twice introduced by the Borden Government and twice killed by a partisan Liberal majority in the Senate will be re-introduced this coming session. Judging by the strong sentiment from coast to coast in favor of the Government's measure which provides for the expenditure of a million dollars annually it is hard to see how the Senate can much longer refuse to pass the bill.

Premier Borden in his speech at Halifax last week vigorously dealt with the Highways Bill and scored the Liberals for their action in killing the measure. Mr. Borden pointed out that the contention of the Liberals that the bill infringed on provincial autonomy was absurd.

Complete Safeguard

Mr. Borden spoke on the question as follows:

"There was the most complete safeguard of provincial rights and of provincial autonomy. Not one dollar would be expended without the consent of the Provincial Government and the authority of the Provincial Legislature. The expenditure which we proposed under this bill in 1911-12 was one million dollars and in 1912-13 a million and a half, or a total of two and a half million dollars during the two years. The estimates brought down allotted the sums to each of the provinces in exact proportion to its population. Thus taking the total amount of the votes for the two years, you will observe that:

Nova Scotia would have received	171,447
New Brunswick	122,844
Prince Edward Island	32,844
Quebec	697,414
Ontario	878,665
Manitoba	156,656
Saskatchewan	171,462
Alberta	130,472
British Columbia	138,675

Vital Link

"We have hardly begun to realize the importance of good roads in Canada or to grasp thoroughly the truth that they are a necessary and vital link in any scheme of transportation. In some cases the cost to the farmer or other producer of transporting his products to the railway station is considerably greater than the freight thence by rail to the nearest available market. The amount of loss and waste through bad and inferior roads in this country is almost incalculable. The late Government never lifted a finger to remedy this condition. Not one dollar of their boasted surpluses was ever devoted to this all important purpose. One would not suppose, however, that they would undertake to block or destroy a measure so obviously in the interest of the whole people. Therefore we might confidently have expected the cordial support of the Opposition. But to the astonishment of the country and to the dismay of many of his friends Sir Wilfrid Laurier attacked our Bill on the second reading by a motion which, if carried, would have removed it from the Order Paper.

Liberals Opposed Bill.

He and his friends opposed the Bill with great vigour and everyone of them voted against it upon the third reading. Through his control of a partisan majority in the Senate the leader of the minority in the Commons was able to secure the defeat of the Bill by the insertion of amendments which he knew we could not accept. Realizing in the fact that although defeated by the people he could nevertheless defeat them and their elected representatives through his appointed partisans in the Upper Chamber, he took full responsibility for destroying our efforts to improve the public highways of Canada.

People Will Judge.

The people in due course will pronounce their judgment upon his action. He may urge that the three and a half million dollars which he and his followers poured out upon a [illegible] [illegible] during the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] compensation for the loss of two and a half million dollars which otherwise would have been expended in the improvement of [illegible] roads. THE SPANISH STANDING ARMY TO BE INCREASED BY 71,000

New York, Sept. 24.—A cable from Madrid says: The government having decided to open Parliament next month, the Cabinet met yesterday to frame the legislative programme to be submitted. A measure is to be presented calling for an increase of 71,000 men in the number of recruits for the coming years. Reform of the school system will also occupy legislators.

The opening of Parliament is looked upon with some apprehension in Government circles, as last session was marked by strong opposition to the Ministerial policies. Premier Romanones declared in an interview that he will submit his programme as a question of confidence, and that if he fails to obtain a working majority he will resign.

In such case his successor will probably be Senor Prieto Secretary of State, and the present leader of the dissenting faction of the Liberal party.

THIS CANNON HAS A LONG HISTORY

Last night, through the influence of the Daughters of the Empire, an historic old gun was placed outside the Armouries, Colonel Young, the officer commanding the 24th Field Battery, having given the necessary permission.

This particular gun has a history. It was built by Cornelius King in 1802, and bears the monograms of King George III., and William IV. It was in use at the time of the North West Rebellion, and Captain Jim Snider of the 14th Durham Field Battery had his hand partly blown off with it, when he was making a salute at some function. It was brought to Peterborough in 1884 and has since been standing in the gun shed. The Daughters of the Empire have obtained permission for it to be placed outside the Armouries and from now on it will be stationed on the green in front of the main entrance for decorative purposes.

Embryo Parliament Under Lord Londonderry Met To-day in Belfast

Belfast, Ireland, Sept. 24.—The embryo "Parliament of Ulster," at present known under the title of the Ulster Unionist Council, assembled to-day to the number of 600 in Ulster Hall in this city to discuss the plans for the provisional government of the Province in the event of Home Rule for Ireland becoming law. The Marquis of Londonderry took the chair. He was formerly Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland under the Conservative Government.

The Ulster Constitution.

"All the steps have been taken for repudiating the decrees of a Nationalist parliament and for taking over the Province of Ulster in trust for the British nation."

The articles of the Ulster constitution were approved by the delegates. The details of them, however, are not to be published until the date when the Home Rule Bill is placed on the statute book.

CONTROLLER WAS CAUSE OF DEATH OF C. G. E. VICTIM

Conflicting Evidence Given by Electrical Engineer and Crane Driver—The Decision

We, the jury, empanelled to enquire into the death of Frederick W. A. Smith, find that deceased came to his death on Saturday, Sept. 20th, at the works of the Canadian General Electric Co., by accident, which, in our opinion was caused by the circuit breaker being thrown in by the operator while the controller was still in driving position.

The above was the verdict returned last night after the jury had been into retirement for one hour and twenty minutes, when the inquest was resumed last night at the Police Court Chambers into the death of Mr. Frederick W. A. Smith, who met his death as result of injuries received while working in the C.G.E.

The enquiry was conducted by Coroner Dr. Greer, assisted by Crown [illegible] the C.G.E. Mr. Goodwill acted for the family.

The first witness called was Mr. Dobie, mechanical engineer at the C.G.E. He was asked to describe the machinery that caused the man's death.

Dr. Cameron was called and said he attended the deceased. The man died from shock. His injuries consisted of a compound fracture of the lower left leg, a triple fracture of the upper part, and the fracture of a rib, which had pierced the lung.

John Tremley, in charge of the cranes in the C.G.E., and James Neary, in charge of the crane which caused the man's death, also gave evidence as to the accident.

In summing up the evidence, the coroner said it seemed that the operator was raising one and lowering the other. Mr. Neary who operated the machine has given evidence, conflicts with Mr. Ritchie's. He did do what an operator should do to avert an accident.

MAN OVERBOARD SHARKS GOT HIM

New York, Sept. 24.—A London cable says: A tragic scene was witnessed by the passengers of the Campania, which arrived at Queenstown yesterday. On the third day out a third class passenger, John Fagan, belonging to County Mayo jumped or fell overboard from the top deck. All the passengers were on deck at the time when a cry of "man overboard" was raised.

The Campania's engines were at once stopped and a boat rowed quickly to aid the drowning man. The passengers however, were horrified to see a number of sharks in the vicinity, and the fear is entertained that the unfortunate man was devoured.

PLANS COMPLETED ULSTER'S NEW GOVERNMENT

New York, Sept. 24.—A cable to The Tribune from London this morning says:

By to-night plans for setting up a provisional Government for Ulster in the event of the Home Rule Bill being passed into law will have been considered in all their completeness.

The Ulster Unionist member of Parliament went over parts of the plan at Craigavon with Sir Edward Carson last night, and all is now in readiness for unfolding the whole scheme to-day at a private conference in Ulster Hall, when 500 delegates from all over Ulster will confer with Sir Edward Carson. The machinery will be formed so as to put into effect without panic, but by an organized plan.

The fervent avowal announced by the Ulster Protestants in December, 1910, was to pay no taxes to and to obey none of the decrees of a Home Rule Government in Dublin.

SPORTS

Secretary Thompson has received word that the application of the Peterborough Rugby Club to enter the Junior Series of the O.R.F.U., has been accepted and the team has been grouped with two Toronto teams, Parkdale and Capitols.

These two teams will play the first scheduled games next Saturday and Capitols will meet the locals here on October 4th.

Hilliard Drafted.

Auburn, N.Y., Sept. 24.—Drafts by class A.A. teams of players in a local league were announced by Secretary Farrell last night, and include the following: By Toledo, Neale from London; Hilliard, from Peterborough by Providence; Wright from St. Thomas, by Buffalo; McIlvoy from Berlin by Toronto, and Bradshaw from Berlin.

Final Match.

The final match for the Stratton trophy will be played at the golf links, Saturday afternoon, between Messrs. G. Bennett and R. Neill.

The championship draw will be published to-morrow.

IMPRESSIVE SERVICES AT THE CONSECRATION OF DR. J. O'BRIEN

Dr. O'Brien, a Native of Peterborough, Exalted to Position of High Honour by His Excellency Monseigneur Stagni—Eloquent Sermon by Calgary Bishop

The consecration of the Rt. Rev. Dr. M. J. O'Brien, took place yesterday morning in St. Peter's Cathedral, with all ecclesiastical pomp and magnificence that attends such functions of the Catholic church.

The occasion gained in significance from the fact of the presence of the representative of the Holy See, His Excellency Monsignor Stagni, Apostolic Delegate, an honour accorded to only one other episcopal postulant for consecration previous to Rt. Rev. Bishop O'Brien; and from the added fact that he was assisted by three archbishops, representing almost all the chief dioceses of the Dominion. The minor dignitaries from Toronto, Montreal, Ottawa and almost every province in the Dominion and many from the States were also present. The entire clergy of the diocese of Peterborough were also present. The great Cathedral auditorium was crowded with Catholics, and a great number of citizens representing other communions. The occasion in all ways, was a most memorable one, and the scene during the elaborate ceremony was a striking and brilliant one, the sanctuary a moving blaze of gorgeous vestments, blending decorously grand with the solemn intonation of the Mass, and the magnificent music of the full-voiced choir.

The Decorations.

The interior of the Cathedral was beautifully decorated for the occasion with an abundance of Papal colors. Over the main entrance the Union Jack and the Papal flag of yellow and white hung side by side. The altar was also profusely decorated.

Monseigneur Stagni, the consecrator, invested in full pontificals of white and gold, the assistant bishops in amice, stole and cape of the same color, and white linen mitres; the bishop elect in amice, alb, cincture, white stole crossed on the breast, cape and biretta, sat and knelt while Rev. Father Gallivan read the Papal bulls which stated that Rev. Michael Joseph O'Brien had been appointed Bishop of Peterborough Diocese.

Crowd Gathered Early.

At 7.45 o'clock there were large clusters of ticket holders at all the doors of the Cathedral, and those who arrived early secured the seats affording the best prospect of the proceedings. Very shortly after the doors were opened nearly all the seats excepting those that had been reserved, were taken up.

The visiting clergy in procession accompanied the Consecrator and Bishop-elect from the Bishop's Palace to the sanctuary of the Cathedral, the priests afterwards occupying the front pews, and the bishops taking seats within the sanctuary.

City Was Represented.

The city was represented by a deputation from the Council who occupied the front seats on the east side of the body of the church. It was composed of Mayor Bradburn, Aldermen Duffus, Gillespie, Bolger, Johnston, Gordon, Duncan and G. W. Green, City Solicitor E. H. D. Hall and Mr. W. J. Henry, assessor, were also present.

The Choir.

The mass was sung by a male choir composed of Mr. A. Bow, director, Rev. Father McCauley, Messrs. Ed. Hourihan, Ed. Burley, Jas. Sharpe, Jos. Picard, Jr., Wm. Collins, constituting the bass section, and Messrs. Jos. Miniciola, F. Mayshaw, Chas. Manion, Jos. Wilson, E. Corkindale, C. Wells and ten school boys composing the soprano section. Mr. John Armstrong presided at the organ.

The special singing incidental to the ceremony was taken by Father Lafontaine and Father Martin of Montreal.

The Ceremony.

After the consecration, His Excellency Monseigneur Stagni, O.D. had prayed before the main altar, he ascended to his throne and was vested in his robes. The bishop-elect with his assisting archbishops, retired to his chapel at one side of the sanctuary, and there put on the necessary vestments. The ceremony was begun after the celebrants had taken their places before the altar by the reading of the Papal bulls by Rev. Father Gallivan.

The Bishop-elect then took the oath and then began his examination, responding to the prescribed questions.

The mass was commenced and continued to the conclusion of the ritual.

Then the consecrator seated on the highest grade of the altar and the candidate before him, prayed [illegible] [illegible] of state and intoned the litany, during which the candidate prostrated himself, and all the rest knelt. Then the book of the Gospels was put upon his shoulders, and the consecrator and assistant bishops touched with both hands the head of the bishop-elect, saying: "Receive the Holy Ghost."

The psalms was chanted and after the hymn, "Come Holy Ghost," was intoned. After the first verse, the consecrator seated himself and anointed the new Bishop's head, and

A BRIDGE SWUNG ACROSS THE ST. LAWRENCE RIVER

Weight of 2,600,000 Pounds Handled With Great Quickness at Lachine

Montreal, Sept. 24.—The feat of swinging out a made-to-order steel bridge, weighing 2,000,000 pounds, across a gap of 270 feet was accomplished by the Dominion Bridge Co. In the space of one hour and twenty-five minutes the end of the gaunt arm of steel rested in its appointed place on the stone upright of the Lachine Bridge. Many prominent officials of the C.P.R. and Dominion Bridge Co. were present at 9.20 when the steel cable drew taut and the 400-foot long steel cantilever resting upon a truss at one end and a scow at the other, started to recede and push out its length over the green torrent below. The sliding table hung upon a disk truss, the other end of the bridge rested upon false work which reached down to the scow on the river. The scow moved with the moving bridge. Behind the sliding table upon the north end of the bridge was the locomotive which supplied the power to the revolving drum. For two minutes the cable answered to the draw and 1,500 tons of deadweight had accomplished 20 feet of its journey. There was no noise beyond the humming of the drum.

LIVED HIGH FOR A WHILE

New York, Sept. 24.—John C. Schildknecht, $20 a week clerk of the Washburn-Crosby Milling Co., who kept two autos and a retinue of servants and disappeared two weeks ago when a shortage of more than $20,000 was found in his accounts, is under arrest at Montreal. He lived in regal style for about four months.

A SKIN TIGHTENER TO REDUCE WRINKLES

(From Popular Medicine)

In beauty culture, as in the treatment of disease, the tendency nowadays is to seek the removal of causes, rather than to treat symptoms or effects. In the matter of wrinkles, for instance, we know that the lines or furrows are caused by the skin becoming loose in places, as it does not perfectly fit the flesh beneath. The skin then "wrinkles" or sags. Naturally the proper thing to do is to tighten the skin—make it fit—then there's no room for these wrinkles and folds, and no surplus skin to sag or bag.

The best known formula for the purpose is: Saxolite, 1 oz., in ½ pint witch hazel. Use as a wash lotion. The effect is truly remarkable, especially as results are immediate. Ask the druggist for the powdered saxolite, which dissolves more readily than any other form.

Beauty of the Tail

It looks as if the docking of horses' tails might become unpopular. The Duke of Connaught is against the practice, and all the King's horses are undocked.

Mr. Winans, one of the best known horsemen in London, says: "For a lady's carriage or phaeton a long-tailed or undocked horse is infinitely handsomer. It always looks vulgar to see a pair of docked and hog-maned horses in a smart carriage."

Sir John Rolleston, M.P., favors legislation to stop docking.

Mr. Butcher, K.C., Lord Henry Cavendish-Bentinck, Mr. Philip Snowden, Sir William Bull, Mr. H. G. Chancellor, Mr. George Greenwood and the Hon. Walter Guinness support him in his views.

Mr. F. A. Cox, of the National Equine Defence League, prophesies that the docking of horses' tails will go the same way as the old fashion of clipping dogs' ears, which was done simply for the same stupid reason—ornament.

Paper and Ink For Money

To manufacture and print the paper money of Canada it is necessary to import materials from various parts of the world. A part of the paper fiber, for instance, is linen rag from the Orient. The silk that furnishes the strands that are run through the paper as a safeguard against counterfeiting comes from China or from Italy. The blue ink contains cobalt from Canada or Germany. The black ink is said to be made at Niagara Falls from acetylene gas smoke; and the greater part of the green ink is made with white zinc sulphate, the product of German industry. The red is derived from a pigment imported from Central America.

Berlin has 12 power-propelled cars in its mail service.

Gas is being extracted from the cottonwood trees of Kansas.

NEEDLE THREADER

Acts Automatically as Needle is Drawn Through Slot

A little device which will save many women time and eye strain has been patented by an Indiana woman. It is a needle threader, and its action is practically automatic. In connection with it a thimble is used or to be more exact, the threading device is mounted on the thimble. It consists of a flat, narrow strip of metal with a central transverse eye and inwardly inclined end walls. The head of the needle passes through this eye and the thread is brought around the end walls and wrapped once around it. As the needle is drawn through the eye the thread is hooked into its own eye through the lower end, which is open. The free part of the eye, however, is resilient and opens only at the pressure from without that is exerted by the thread sliding through it.

THE SAPPHIRE

Beautiful Gems of Many Colors Found in Many Climes

Blue corundum, ranging in color from the lightest blue to deep, blackish blue, is the same stone as the ruby, the only difference being in the color. It is also found somewhat more frequently than the ruby, and is consequently less expensive.

The choicest color is the soft, velvety blue, approaching the cornflower in shade, and exhibiting that color vividly by artificial as well as by natural light. The deeper-colored stones are known as male, and the light-colored ones as female sapphires.

Mineralogically, all sapphires are practically alike, but different localities produce distinctive colored stones, which are known as Cashmere, Burma, Ceylon, Montana or Australian sapphires.

The Cashmere, or Kashmir, sapphire occurs in India, in the State of Kashmir, in the noted Himalaya mountains, and is noted for its clear, corn-flower blue. These stones are full of imperfections, however, and flawless ones are rarely obtainable in any great size.

The Burma, or Oriental, sapphire usually comes in reality, not from Burma, but from the neighboring country of Siam. These are of a very dark blue.

The island of Ceylon produces sapphires ranging in color from a delicate, pale, grey blue to a purplish blue, and of a larger size than are found in most localities.

Beautiful, electric blue sapphires, are found in Montana, but most of these stones are cut in Europe. The color is very uniform in all stones found in these mines.

Greenish and blackish blue stones are found in Australia, and the distinctly blue sapphire is rare, but when found is quite as valuable commercially as gems of a like color coming from Siam or Burma.

Among the fancy sapphires are the Oriental emerald or green sapphire, which does not approach the true emerald in depth of color, but outclasses it in hardness and brilliancy; the purple sapphire or Oriental amethyst, which shows up better in artificial light than does the common amethyst and several other "Oriental" stones which are given this name to distinguish the corundums from the less valuable minerals of the same colors, which they resemble, but which they greatly surpass in beauty and value because of their superior brilliancy and hardness. The star sapphire, a wonderful mineral production, and very valuable, is of greyish or dark blue. The stone is cut convex and when exposed to one candle or other artificial light, shows a beautiful, six-pointed star produced by foreign substances in the corundum. The bright lines of the star following the light move over the surface of the stone and cause a remarkable effect.

Vinegar and Plaster of Paris

When mixing plaster of Paris for mending cracks in plaster use vinegar instead of water. It should be of the consistency of putty, and when the cracks are filled with it the top should be smoothed over with a knife. The mixture will not harden for about half an hour.

In Toronto the public school curriculum now includes nose-blowing. This is commendable. To teach a small boy how, and when to blow his nose is an important part of his training. As a rule, his education in this respect has been sadly neglected, and the result is he uses his coat sleeve instead of a handkerchief.

The Best Time of Life

Every little while there comes to the surface an enthusiast with a dream like that which lured the Spaniards when America was young — the dream of perpetual youth. The latest was a [illegible] who promised himself, by reason of a certain regime of diet and exercise, a life span of at least 200 years with a smacking hope of eternity.

Far be it from us to belittle the importance of living carefully and long. But why put so much emphasis on youth, as if only the morning of life were worth living?

Don't you suppose that white-bearded grandpa, [illegible] on the porch in the shade, or watching the [illegible] play, has as much fun out of life as the giddiest lad or maiden?

To be sure it is a different kind, which happily is one of nature's ways of insuring interesting variety. But, his rough work done, as the sun slowly goes to meet the far horizon, he lives anew in the young life about him, and out of passion's ashes, builds a ripe philosophy.

Every time in life is a good time to be alive, for always you can feel, see and learn. We are not at all convinced that ripe old age isn't the best estate of all; for then the heart is mellowed, the mind matured, and the spirit seasoned, while in the treasury of memory are stored innumerable joys, the better for the enchantment which distance lends.

Many Reasons Why Liquid Cough Mixtures Can't Cure Bronchitis

But the Healing [illegible] of Catarrhozone, Which Are Breathed to the Furthest Recesses of the Bronchial Tubes, Bring Quick Relief and Sure Cure.

Every sufferer from coughs, colds, bronchitis and all throat and chest ailments needs a soothing, healing medicine which goes direct to the breathing organs in the chest and lungs attacks the trouble at its source, disperses the germs of disease, and cures the ailments thoroughly. And this medicine is "Catarrhozone."

The germ-killing balsamic vapor mixes with the breath, descends through the throat, down the bronchial tubes, and finally reaches the deepest air cells in the lungs. All parts are soothed with rich, pure medicinal essences, whereas with a syrup the affected parts could not be reached, and harm would result through benumbing the stomach with drugs.

"I have been a chronic sufferer from catarrh in the nose and throat for over eight years. I think I have spent four hundred dollars trying to get relief. I have spent but six dollars on Catarrhozone, and have been completely cured, and in fact have been well for some time. Catarrhozone is the only medicine I have been able to find that would not only give temporary relief but will always cure permanently. Yours sincerely, (Signed) WILLIAM HAGAN, Brockville, Ont.

For absolutely permanent cure use Catarrhozone. Two months' outfit costs $1.00, smaller size, 50c. at all storekeepers and druggists or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y. and Kingston, Canada.

THE RECIPROCI-TEA.

(Written for The Times.)

Sir Wilfrid Laurier held a "tea,"
And the country folk invited;
Then smiled to himself in very glee,
Quite sure they'd be delighted.

They willing came, but what do you think:
Those friends from the country free
Just steadily refused one drop to drink
Of his Reciproci-Tea.

He saw at last his rash mistake
And in future he'll understand,
If of tea he's have the people partake
It must be a better brand.

Though famous brand have been increased
With "Green," "Hyson" and "Bohea,"
The tea that Canadians like the least,
Is the Reciproci-Tea.

PUBLIC OPINION.

RELIGIOUS TEACHERS

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I have been much interested in a letter which appeared in The Times a short time ago concerning the oath taken by members of the Jesuit order. Of course a glance at any reputable encyclopedia will convince the most sceptical person that statements of an oath treacherous to any government are absolutely false—provided, of course, that he is not surrounded by his egotism as by an impenetrable and insurmountable wall.

One of the very gravest menaces to our advancement in civilization is the teacher who will not learn, but teaches what he himself would like to believe. And nowhere is this tendency so developed as in the average clergyman. A pastor who misleads his congregation, either because he is prejudiced or because he is too indifferent to overcome his ignorance, is guilty of a grave sin.

One Who Looks Things Up.

HOW TO REDUCE HIGH COST OF LIVING.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I have been much interested in the newspaper controversy over the high cost of living. I have recently been on a visit to Detroit, and I found that many families there got wise to what to do in order to reduce it. In that city the papers urged all families to make use of their back yards, however small, as vegetable gardens. The city authorities carried the idea farther and gave, on request, permission for use of lots owned by the city to families as vegetable plots. That year the potato trust in Detroit was busted. The poorest families had an abundance of fresh vegetables at practically no cost.

The value of the lesson taught was even greater than the money saved that year to the poor of Detroit, for it solved a problem in household economics. I happen to be one of those chaps with old-fashioned notions about a garden. I want a little patch for flowers and a bigger patch for vegetables. I profit twofold—the pleasure of working the earth, and saving the price of the food produced. It makes no difference whether you know anything about soil culture and cultivation. One or two families produce all the knowledge required, and you still get the pleasure of delving in the soil and that is worth while to the office man.

My vegetable garden is in my back yard, and measures exactly forty by seventy feet. The soil is quite ordinary, but the sunshine and the climate of Ontario will produce abundance on any kind of ground. From this bit of garden I estimated that I saved $100 this season. Besides, two neighbors have taken all they required for their families. I have produced lettuce, radishes, onions, beets, turnips, garden cress, cucumbers, parsnips, carrots, beans, peas, potatoes and corn. Of each we have had all we required except corn, and have had a considerable quantity of that. I do not believe the seed cost more than $3.50. This represents the entire investment. Our supplies have the virtue of being always fresh and close at hand for use.

I want to emphasize the fact that no particular skill and very little labor is required to produce a profitable garden. I began gardening as a pastime after business hours eight years ago. The first season I got my garden in too late. The next season I was too early, but each time I had some return for my labor and investment. Since then my garden has always proven satisfactory. Neighbors can give you all the information you require—you who have never known the charm of gardening.

The average back yard is an eyesore. Less effort is required to turn it into a profitable vegetable garden than to beautify it as a yard. In the corners you can have your flowers and along the outside lines your sweet peas. Any seed house in the city will be glad to hand you free of expense a catalogue full of useful information about all the vegetables I have mentioned and then some. The children will catch the enthusiasm of the home garden with no urging. The example and the opportunity is what counts with them.

I want to impress upon the average Peterborough man that this is the best and, in fact, ONLY, solution of the summer market proposition in Peterborough. You can master the market once in this way, and this only. In doing so, no skill is required and very little actual labor. The attention to the garden becomes a pleasure and the exercise is valuable. The comic pictures always depict the city man perspiring and [illegible] in his garden, but, in fact, the reverse of the picture is true. Anyway, the central market is all right, but if the man who is dissatisfied with the prices and treatment he finds there will utilize his back yard, he can become independent of this source of supply with slight expense and little effort.

SERVICES AT CONSECRATION

after the end of the resumed preface the hands were anointed, the consecrator saying:

"May these hands be anointed with the sanctified oil and the chrism of sanctification, as Samuel anointed David to be King and Prophet, so may they be anointed and consecrated."

Then the consecrator took the book of Gospels from the shoulders of the Bishop-elect and said: "Receive the Gospel and go preach to the people committed to thee, etc." The kiss of peace was then given by the consecrator and assistants.

The sermon was preached by Archbishop McNally, of Calgary, while apropos to the occasion, was at the same time, a happy combination of spirituality and intellectuality, insisting upon the immanence of Divine revelation, especially as represented by the physical presence of the Son of Earth, and the Apostolic bishops, He instituted.

After the sermon the offertory having been said the consecrator resumed his position in the episcopal chair. The bishop-elect knelt before him and received two lighted candles, two loaves of bread and two small barrels of wine and kissed the consecrator's hand upon receiving these symbolic gifts. The mass was then continued and just previous to the communion, the kiss of peace was given by the consecrator to the Bishop-elect, and to the assistants. It was also imparted to the other clergy within the sanctuary. The blessing and conferring of the Mitre followed the "Ite Missa est." The consecrator then blessed the gloves and ring to be worn by the new Bishop. He then placed the gloves on the hands of the new bishop-elect and invested him with the Episcopal ring. Bishop O'Brien was then enthroned by the consecrator and the Te Deum rolled through the church.

During the singing of the hymn Bishop O'Brien encircled the church imparting his blessing on the congregation.

The ceremony was concluded by the presentation of an address to His Lordship by the clergy of the diocese. The diocesan priests encircled the throne and the address was read by Ven. Archdeacon Casey.

ZAM-BUK PROVED BEST

Ambulance Brigades Adopt It.

Zam-Buk has now been selected as the balm to be carried by the members of the St. John Ambulance Brigade. This is further proof of its superiority.

Mr. G. W. Pyatt, of 15 Southview Avenue, Toronto, Superintendent of the Riverdale Division of the St. John Ambulance Brigade, writes: "Both in personal use and in first-aid work I have proved Zam-Buk to be of great value. I have used it for the past five years, and do not believe there is any other balm to come up to it."

Mr. Geo. H. Westmore, of 127 Yonge Street, Toronto, Divisional Superintendent of the St. John Ambulance Brigade, also writes: "I am pleased to report that the members of this Brigade use Zam-Buk when on public duty, and find it very useful. It is a wonderful healer. Personally, I constantly use Zam-Buk in my calling as a chiropodist, and find it very helpful in healing sore feet and as a dressing for corns and bunions after treatment and extraction."

Surely a balm that is worthy of a place in the wallet of an ambulance officer should find a place in your home! You may not require it to-day or next week, but as accidents don't give warning, be prepared. Zam-Buk is compounded on the latest scientific lines. It is at the same time soothing, healing and antiseptic; keeps good. Zam-Buk is a sure cure for skin diseases, eczema, piles, old sores, cuts, burns, poisoned wounds, ringworm, abscesses, sprains, scalds, boils, ulcers, blood-poison, etc.

THE PARADISE OF OLD LADIES

Memories of Dickens From an Old World Village

The old-world [illegible] of Lindfield, Sussex, is regarded as an old ladies paradise. Within 200 yards of each other there are living three ladies whose ages are 97, 94 and 90. Mrs. Anna Anscombe, who is 90, was very friendly with Charles Dickens, who in the forties frequently visited Lindfield to see his cousin Albert Smith, celebrated as an entertainer. In those days Mrs. Anscombe lived at the house of the village doctor, and in the surgery Dickens often used to joke with her. "He was a kind-hearted man and so sympathetic, and I received from him one morning, as a token of his regard, a copy of 'A Christmas Carol.' Little did I think when I took it that I should live to see his memory revered as it is to-day." [illegible]

TWO MEN FELL HUNDRED FEET MEETING DEATH

Others May be Buried in Debris of Annex to Fort William Elevator

Fort William, Ont., Sept. 24.—Two men are known to-day to have fallen one hundred feet to their death and others may be buried in the debris of a portion of the annex to the Canadian Pacific elevator which collapsed here early to-day.

The bodies of K. McLeod and of an unidentified foreigner have been recovered.

The ruins are being searched for two more men said to be missing on the work.

McLeod was 22 and unmarried.

It is said unprovided for weight of concrete, being poured, caused the forms of the elevator to collapse.

Sentenced to death for murder in London in 1899, James Harris, who had his sentence commuted to penal servitude for life, has been released from Parkhurst Prison.

Chorister's Record

Mr. F. Holmes, of Lavendon, Bucks, who is seventy-three years old, has sung bass in the local chapel choir for fifty-four years. He has also worked for over forty years on one farm.

After Seventy-seven Years

Under the bankruptcy which occurred in 1836 of Charles Sutton, formerly a printer in London, a dividend was ordered in the London Bankruptcy Court. Funds which have come to hand will allow of payment of between 3½c and 5c the dollar.

Starving a Dog

John Faringdon, a laborer, was sentenced at Chertsey to a month's hard labor for cruelty to a dog. Mr. James Darling, a veterinary surgeon, described the animal as a "fine skeleton covered with skin." It must have been half starved for a month to have got into such a condition.

Picture Palace Proviso

At the Licensing sessions at Scarborough Mr. S North Smith, the chairman, said the magistrates had decided that all new cinematograph licenses would be granted on condition that no child under twelve be admitted alone nor unless accompanied by someone over sixteen.

Scramble for Coppers

Some street arabs in Waterloo road had a fine haul. A street car stopped outside the George Tavern a woman who was coming down the stairs knocked the conductor's bag in the air and the money was scattered over the road. A crowd of boys scrambled for the coins and secured a considerable number of them.

Undertaker Dies at Funeral

There was a sudden death at the funeral of the late Mr. William Francis, Milford Haven. The mourners had followed the hearse to Rehoboth Calvinistic Methodist Chapel, where a service was proceeding, when the undertaker, Mr. James Lloyd, who was standing near the door, fell to the floor and expired. Mr. Lloyd was forty-seven years of age.

Fight With a Mongoose

What is believed to be a mongoose has been killed by a party of sportsmen who were rabbiting with three dogs at Brooklands Farm, Balney, Sussex. The animal was found by the dogs in a small wood, and when attacked it defended itself vigorously. The three dogs—a fox terrier, a sheep-dog, and a retriever—were badly bitten, but the terrier finally got a grip, and the animal was killed. It was about 2½ feet in length from nose to tail.

Woman's Remarkable Experience

"Found drowned" was the verdict at the inquest on William Mountain, a pit sinker, at Dover. Mrs. Rowbotham, wife of a driver in the Army Service Corps, said that on the night previous to discovery of the body a man whom she alleged to be Mountain called at her house and told her to go with him, as her husband had been hurt. He took her towards Shakespeare Cliff, and in a lonely spot attacked her and tore practically all her clothes off. A soldier found her in a collapsed condition.

Unable to Read at Thirteen

At Paisley two boys, John Cooper and Edward Cooper, thirteen and seven years respectively, were charged with having been found wandering. It was stated that they frequented fair grounds in various towns, and within the last year had resided at many places. The elder boy was absolutely uneducated and could neither read nor write, while the younger boy had never been at school. They were committed to Paisley Industrial School.

Antiquated Tall Hats

During the hearing of an action at Longford Quarter Sessions by a draper's assistant for a year's salary against a draper who failed and was evicted, Mr. Daisy (for defendant) said the assistant stayed on when there was no business being done, and when there was nothing to sell in the place. For months before the eviction the shop stock consisted of hundreds of bandboxes and some antiquated tall hats that nobody would buy. His honor gave a decree for salary for portion of the time claimed for.

EX-LION TAMER'S DEATH

Curious Story at an Acton Inquest—An Enlarged Heart

"An Acton man's varied and adventurous career was referred to at an inquest held in England on the body of John Bertram Douglas.

Evidence was given that the man went into the bar at the public-house at 10 p.m. and at ten minutes to eleven got up off the stool on which he had been sitting to go out, having expressed the intention of going to meet his wife, who was engaged as a dresser at Acton Hippodrome. He had only taken a step towards the door when he fell and died immediately. Formerly he was a lion tamer, and he had been mauled and bitten by wild animals. Later he was employed as a baggage man at the Acton Hippodrome, and latterly had worked at the Dunlop Rubber Works. About a fortnight ago he complained that a piece of iron, weighing half a hundredweight had fallen on his head, and since then he had suffered from headache. A post mortem examination revealed the fact that the organs were all healthy except the heart which was very much enlarged, weighing 17½ oz. as compared with the normal weight of 11 oz. The brain was normal and there was no injury to the head. Death was due to the enlarged condition of the heart, which the doctor attributed to overstrain which the man had probably sustained in the course of his muscular exertions. The doctor added that there were extensive scars on the leg such as would be caused by the bites or scratches of wild animals. Douglas was formerly a lion tamer connected with Bostock's menagerie, and performed at the Glasgow Zoo and Hippodrome for many years. He had travelled all over the world. Shortly after his death a telegram was received offering him a position as lion tamer to another well known show.

PREMIER AND BABIES

New Spirit That is Changing the Face of the Community

The saving of babies was one of the topics dealt with by the Prime Minister in his speech at Dundee. He was told, he said, by Mr. John Burns that in the course of the last few years, owing to improvements in local administration, and owing to the new spirit that was coming over local administration particularly, there had been an actual saving of life when compared with the corresponding period before, of 546,000 human beings. In addition, nearly 2,000 infants who would have succumbed in the first or second year of their life had been saved. Half a million of human beings saved by the State on the total number in the British Isles! If that could be done in one sphere then with the same spirit and zeal in other spheres, it was no idle optimism to say that in the life of a generation the whole face of great communities like Dundee might be transformed.

CRUELTY TO HORSES

Military Man Makes a Plea Against the Docking Habit

Lieut. R. S. Timmis of the Royal Canadian Dragoons made a slashing attack upon the practice of docking horses' tails, in the course of an interesting address upon "The Horse," at Toronto. Docking, he said, was due mainly to "horse show maniacs."

The contrast between horses with long, silky-looking tails and what the lecturer termed the "hat-peg variety," was exemplified by lantern pictures. In California and some of the States to the south the man who docks a horse's tail is sentenced to two years' imprisonment. A list of the docked horses in the State is kept in a book, and when a horse is found with its tail docked the owner has to explain the circumstances.

Lieut. Timmis said that the Society had photographs of horses in the city of Toronto which had been docked recently and they were going to make examples of some of the offenders.

The lecturer gave some valuable hints as to the care of the horse, stating that each animal should have at least 1,500 cubic feet of space, and the stable should not be too hot.

Diabetes

TORTURED WITH AN UNQUENCHABLE THIRST FOR YEARS TRIED EVERYTHING THAT MEDICAL AID COULD DO FOR ME, BUT GRADUALLY GOT WORSE TRIED SANOL'S ANTI-DIABETES AND WAS CURED.

Ashville, Man.

Dear Sirs:—

During the month of March I was informed that I had a well developed case of Diabetes. I immediately placed myself upon a rigid diet after a week of which the first urinalysis disclosed a sugar content of 5 p.c. After several months of dieting during which time I was taking a so-called cure, the sugar content was reduced to 3 p.c. I began taking SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES with the result that within a short time the urinalysis made by competent persons, and at different periods, disclosed no sugar, whatever. This condition, is indeed, very gratifying and I have every reason to believe that I am quite cured. For some time past my diet has been a liberal one, consisting largely in some foods high in carbo-hydrates, but I still avoid all sugars and syrups. This is in accordance with the directions which I can well afford to follow. I am gaining in weight and strength, and once more feel that it is good to be alive.

"There is no question in my mind regarding the virtues of SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES, and I feel that a great blessing has been conferred upon suffering humanity by this discovery and use of this medicine."

Yours truly,
W. A. FOX.

WELLAND SHIP CANAL.

Section No. 2.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

SEALED TENDERS, addressed to the undersigned and marked "Tender for Section No. 2 Welland Ship Canal," will be received at this office until 12 o'clock noon on Wednesday, October 15th, 1913.

Plans, specification and form of contract to be entered into can be seen on or after this date at the office of the Chief Engineer of the Department of Railways and Canals, Ottawa, and at the office of the Engineer in charge, St. Catharines, Ontario.

Copies of plans and specifications may be obtained from the Department on the payment of the sum of fifty dollars. To bona fide tenderers this amount will be refunded upon the return of the above in good condition.

Parties tendering will be required to accept the fair wages schedule prepared or to be prepared by the Department of Labour, which schedule will form part of the contract.

Contractors are requested to bear in mind that tenders will not be considered unless made strictly in accordance with the printed forms, and in the case of firms, unless there are attached the actual signature, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm.

An accepted bank cheque on a chartered bank of Canada for the sum of $150,000.00 made payable to the order of the Minister of Railways and Canals, must accompany each tender, which sum will be forfeited if the party tendering declines entering into contract for the work, at the rates stated in the offer submitted.

The cheque thus sent in will be returned to the respective contractors whose tenders are not accepted.

The cheque of the successful tenderer will be held as security, or part security, for the due fulfilment of the contract to be entered into.

The lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

Tragedy of Snoring

John Westnutt, aged sixty-seven, an inmate of Caxton Workhouse, was found guilty at Cambridge Assizes of the manslaughter of John Knight, an other aged inmate. Knight snored during the night, and Westnutt, greatly annoyed, struck him on the knee with a bolt. Medical evidence showed that death resulted from septic absorption. The wound was not serious, and probably would not have been fatal had not Knight been a man of weak intellect and low vitality. Westnutt, who had been in custody for two days' imprisonment.

Dress Hints

When cutting a pattern from goods that pull, such as crepe de chine, crepe charmeuse, mousseline, chiffon, baste the material to newspaper or tissue paper and cut out by pattern through paper and material.

If you have not wire collar supporters with covered ends, work buttonhole stitches over them with coarse cotton. This protection saves the [illegible] of a collar and prevents the unsightly extension of wire over the edge.

BREAD UPON THE WATERS

Windfall of $125,000 as Sequel to an Act of Hospitality

A laborer's wife at Dunston-on-Tyne, near Gateshead, has come in for a windfall of $125,000.

Ten years ago Mrs. Longson, then of South Shields, befriended a seafaring youth of her acquaintance by taking him into her house and giving him food and shelter when he was in need of help. This action, he said at the time, he should never forget. He went to Australia, and was engaged in farming operations on a large scale. His father, mother, brother and sister, and a friend joined him a few years ago, but they have all died, and the young man himself some months ago met with a fatal accident, his thigh being fractured by a fall of stone.

After his death it was found that by his will he had left all his personal estate, the farm lands, cattle, and a quantity of jewellery to Mrs. Longson. Mrs. Longson intends to remove to Chili, of which country her husband is a native.

TESTED BY THE ROD

Quaint Ceremonial in Buddhist Temple Near Tokio

A five days' festival was held in Japan in celebration of the anniversary of the death of Keizan Daishi, the founder of the Soto sect, one of the most important offshoots of Buddhism in Japan. The sect, which claims to be the most profound of all sects, aims entirely at salvation by the elimination of self.

On the last day of the festival was performed the rare ceremony of "[illegible]." In the Sojiji Temple 700 priests assembled and the Lord Abbot, wearing a gorgeous dress and carrying a short thick stick, presided over the supreme ceremony.

Before him knelt 150 priests who desired promotion in the sect. The first priest approached and, bending his head before the Lord Abbot, submitted to him the question which had resulted from his period of meditation, "What would be the color of the maple leaves in the mountains?"

Up went the right arm of the Lord Abbot. Down came the stick on the shoulders of the candidate. "My son, their color would be redder than the tints of the flowers in May." Up again went the arm, down again came the stick and the candidate retired.

The second candidate then advanced and bowed before the Lord Abbot. "What," he said in a piping voice, "should we do to escape the heat of summer and the cold in winter?" Down came the stick with a smart crack. "Go where there is neither heat nor cold, neither summer nor winter."

In rapid succession the other candidates followed, the beating with the stick being regarded as a test whether candidates were capable of undergoing hardships in the cause of Buddha.

SUGAR FROM SAWDUST

Pit Ponies Fed on Product Thrived Under the Treatment

That it is possible to produce a valuable commercial sugar from sawdust was the declaration of a well-known scientific authority at London. He declared that though wood in its natural state contained no sugar, still it was possible, by a chemical process, to produce it from sawdust. He had succeeded in cleaning sawdust in retorts with a weak solution of sulphuric acid. A pressure being applied, twenty-five per cent. of sugar was produced. The production was a valuable feeding for horses, cattle, and sheep, and in a month's experiment with the food given to the Durham colliery ponies and horses, it had been found to keep the animals in a fine hardy condition.

Mutiny at Sea

The steamer [illegible] brought to Malta eighteen Malay firemen, who had been handed over to the master as prisoners by the British Consul at Algiers, to be tried on a charge of having mutinied and attempted to kill Mr [illegible], chief officer of the British oil-tank vessel [illegible], to which the prisoners belonged. The second officer, Arthur Floyd, acting in self-defence, shot and killed one of the mutineers.

A Flying Bicycle

A prize of $200 for the first winged [illegible] bicycle to cover a distance of 33 feet 4 inches at a [illegible] height of 4 inches was won by M. Paul Didier, the racing cyclist, at the Parc des Princes, Paris. The machine used by M. Didier was an ordinary bicycle, with one plane fixed to the front fork and another fixed at the back of the machine.

KITCHEN WRINKLES

Equal parts of linseed oil and lime water make a soothing mixture for burns.

Black stockings will always keep a good color if, after washing, they are rinsed through blue-water.

Coffee is a fairly good air-purifier, and a little burnt on hot coals will purify a sick room and abolish bad smells.

When driving a nail through a plaster wall, dip it in hot water first. This will prevent it from breaking away the wall.

Before laying oilcloth, put a layer of sawdust on the floor, and it will give a soft tread to the feet, as well as preserving the oilcloth.

To give potatoes a flavor add half a teaspoonful of sugar, as well as salt, when boiling. This does not make them too sweet, but gives a delicious flavor.

To keep bread boards a beautiful color, rub them well with half a lemon; then rinse them in cold water, and stand them in the wind or in the sun to dry.

Before using table oilcloth, paste at each corner on the wrong side a square of cotton. This prevents the corners from wearing out as soon as they otherwise would.

When cooking liver and bacon get a sour apple, slice it very finely, and add it to the gravy. This will impart a delicious flavor, which is a great improvement.

To remove smoke marks from ceilings, mix a thick paste of starch and water, and with a clean flannel spread it over the mark. Allow it to get thoroughly dry, then brush off with a soft brush, and the marks will have disappeared.

Flatirons become rusty if left in a damp place or if put away flat when warm. Rub them first with beeswax, then with dry, coarse salt, using a short hard brush. When heating irons it is wise to remove them from a lighted gas-ring after a few minutes have elapsed, and to wipe away the tiny specks of moisture which will be found to have formed.

Leather chairs often become greasy-looking where the arms and head rest on the leather. To remove these stains try linseed oil. Boil half a pint of oil and let it stand until nearly cold; then pour in half a pint of vinegar. Stir till it is well mixed, and bottle when it is ready for use. Put a few drops on a flannel and polish with soft dusters. This will thoroughly renovate all leather.

In cases of emergency a kettle or saucepan can be heated over a candle by the following means: Stand two chairs (with rungs) fairly near together. Place a lighted candle on the floor between the two. Then lay a pair of fire-tongs across the rungs of the two chairs, and on the tongs place a small kettle or saucepan immediately over the candle. The water does not take long to boil.

MISS RAY IN TEARS

Musical Comedy Actress Granted Decree of Restitution

For ten brief minutes the strangely-assorted crowd that thronged the London Divorce Court gazed on the spectacle of a musical comedy actress sobbing as if her heart would break.

The central figure of the pathetic scene was Miss Gabrielle Ray, the dainty dancer, who was granted a decree of restitution of conjugal rights against her husband, Mr. Eric Raymond Loder, who did not defend the suit.

Opening the case for Miss Ray, Mr. Barnard, K.C., said the parties were married at St. Edward's Roman Catholic Church, Windsor, and afterwards lived together in London.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Loder had a mutual friend, a lady, and at times Mrs. Loder objected to this lady. Mr. Loder finally left his wife. As he had not returned at the end of two months, she wrote him this letter:

"Dearest Eric—I am writing to you once more, because I want you to know I have given up —— for good. I am feeling desperately miserable, and want you, my husband, so badly. Jock misses his old master, and wonders if he will ever see him again. Thank you for the flowers you sent upon the anniversary of our wedding day. You cannot think how it all hurts—Your wife, Gab."

Mrs. Loder received no reply to that letter, continued counsel, and she wrote again. There was again no reply, and the wife then commenced proceedings.

Miss Ray then went into the box. After taking the oath she broke into tears.

She bore out the statement of her counsel relating to the marriage. It was, she said, a marriage of affection on her part, and she believed at the time it was so on her husband's part.

A floating couch for bathers or persons [illegible] in water [illegible] patented in England.

Men Who Don't Exercise

SUFFER FROM INDIGESTION, HEADACHES, POOR APPETITE, SLEEPLESSNESS.

Nothing so Sure to "Set Up" a Man and Make Him Feel Bright and Vigorous, as Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

Lack of exercise and overwork were the causes that combined to almost kill Samuel S. Stephens, Jr., one of the best known citizens of Woodstock.

In his convincing letter, Mr. Stephens says:

"A year ago I returned home after a long trip, completely worn out, was so badly affected by chronic biliousness, so much overcome by constant headache, dizziness that I despaired of ever getting well.

"It was a blessing that I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills. In one week I felt like a new man. The feeling of weight and nausea in my stomach disappeared. My eyes looked brighter, color grew better, and, best of all, I began to enjoy my meals. The dullness, languor and feeling of depression passed away, and I fast regained my old-time vigor and spirits. To-day I am well—thanks to Dr. Hamilton's Pills."

For health, strength, comfort and good spirits, there is no medicine like Dr. Hamilton's Pills. 25c. per box, five boxes for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers, or by mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

To Measure Coal

A reader has asked The Times how to "measure" a ton of coal. Size of ton of coal varies according to quality. Average space occupied by a ton is 38 cubic feet, that is, a bin fourfeet square and two feet high would just hold a ton.

Poor Apple Crop.

Fruit growers in this section report a poor apple crop, it being 30 per cent. below the average of former years. In the Niagara apple section, there is also a shortage. The price of the best apples will run from $3.75 to $4.00 per barrel.

Gates for Trent Canal.

It is stated here that Roger-Miller & Sons Co., have taken a contract for putting in forty pairs of gates between Trenton and Rice Lake on the Trent Canal. The time required to complete the work will be about one and a half years.

Heavier Rails.

Mr. Munro, the capable manager of the street railway, informed The Times yesterday that a portion of the new steel rails to be laid on George street, have come to hand. The Company does not propose to double track the George street line, but will put down heavier rails and improve the roadbed.

An Ulster Slogan.

The Times is in receipt of a postcard from Ireland. It was issued by the anti-home rulers. On the front is a picture of men marching, beating drums and blowing fifes, while the words, "We don't have home rule, Ulster will fight, Ulster will be right, no surrender," are around the card. In the inner portion of the card photos of the numerous leaders in the anti-home rule campaign are shown.

Mechanics Out of Work

Reports coming to the labor bureau of Ontario show a very large number of men out of work in all of the centres in the province. Tradesmen and mechanics are more numerous among the idle than for many years past. The condition for the coming winter is not regarded as promising in many places. In Peterborough, however, business is good, the factories being well filled up with orders and some working overtime.

Former Local Priest Ill

Kingston Standard: Father Brophy, who was stricken with paralysis, Saturday, is in a very precarious condition and no hopes are entertained for his recovery. Father Brophy, who was formerly of Peterborough diocese, is about 80 years of age, and has been an invalid for some time. He has been staying at St. Mary's-on-the-Lake.

The Bobcaygeon Fair On.

If you happen this morning to feel the earth tremble and vibrate, do not be alarmed. It is only the Bobcaygeon annual fall show getting into harness under the personal supervision of our old friend Mr. Sandi, of the Independent. The show will be on today and tomorrow.

Big Crop of Teachers.

Ontario is getting a big crop of teachers. The number of qualified applicants for admission to the seven provincial normal schools this year is twelve hundred, which is regarded as a promised outlook for the supply of teachers. A number had to be refused admission to Toronto, owing to crowdedness. Peterborough Normal school, we understand, has its full capacity.

Donations Wanted.

The directors of the Protestant Home would be very grateful if any one, having handirons or fire screens for open fire places, which they no longer require, would kindly donate them to the Home, as at this season especially, they would be most thoroughly appreciated.

Won Second Prize.

The second prize in the Gentleman's saddle class at the Peterborough Exhibition was won by Mr. J. T. O'Connell. His horse lost his ticket number and the entry was not recorded in the official list of prizes.

Receptacles for Loose Paper

They have a Civic Improvement Association in Lindsay which is doing good work and which is worthy of imitation. A few days ago Mr. J. G. Edwards, President of the Association, addressed the council, and suggested that something be done to provide receptacles for the loose paper and other refuse on the main thoroughfares. He suggested a bylaw be passed prohibiting the depositing of such refuse on the streets. The council thought the suggestion an excellent one, and action will be taken at an early date. Reeve Kyle said the baskets had been ordered but they had not been installed until action was taken regarding the removal of the poles.

SEE IF THE CHILD'S TONGUE IS COATED

Mother! Don't hesitate! If cross, feverish, constipated, give "California Syrup of Figs."

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When peevish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, doesn't eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has stomach-ache, sore throat, diarrhoea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless "fruit laxative;" they love its delicious taste, and it always makes them feel splendid.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. To be sure you get the genuine, ask to see that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

MATRIMONIAL

Gall—Hamilton.

A quiet wedding was solemnized at St. Paul's Manse yesterday, by Rev. Robert Pogue, when Mr. James Gall, of Emily, was united in marriage to Miss Nina Victoria Hamilton, of Blackstock.

Chaney—Hefferman.

A quiet, but pretty wedding was solemnized on Tuesday at St. Joseph's church, Douro, by the Rev. Fr. Fitzpatrick, when Miss Bessie Hefferman, of Douro, was united in marriage to Mr. Thos. Chaney, of this city. They were attended by Miss Jean Hefferman and Mr. Ed. Chaney. Mr. and Mrs. Chaney will take up residence in Peterborough.

Wood—Whithers.

Canon Davidson yesterday afternoon united Mr. V. A. Wood of the Dominion Express Co., in the bonds of holy matrimony, to Miss Ethel Whithers, formerly of England. The bride was assisted by Miss Alice Lucas, while Mr. Walter Whithers, brother of the bride, acted in the capacity of groomsman. Mr. and Mrs. Wood will reside in the city.

Barnes—Leech.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized in St. John's Anglican church on Wednesday, Sept. 24, at 3 p.m., when Miss Elsie Leech was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Samuel Barnes. The bridesmaid was Miss E. Nicholson and the groom was supported by Mr. John T. Leech his brother. The couple will reside in Peterborough on their return from a honeymoon.

Hagerman—Bray.

Christ Church, Cleveland, Ohio, was the scene of a quiet marriage on Wednesday, Sept. 17th, when John H. Hagerman, of Cleveland, Ohio, (formerly of Peterborough) and Daisy A. Bray, eldest daughter of Mrs. Thos. G. Bray, Main Cut, were united in marriage by Rev. Mr. Bryan. Mr. and Mrs. Hagerman will reside at [illegible] Olivet avenue, Cleveland, Ohio, U.S.A.

Codling—Crute.

At Broadway Tabernacle, Toronto, yesterday morning at 11.30, the marriage was solemnized of Miss Amy Crute and Rev. Ernest Codling, the Rev. Dr. Tovell officiating. The bridesmaid was Miss Ethel Curtis and the groom was supported by Rev. Wm. [illegible]. Rev. and Mrs. Codling left shortly after the ceremony for Sydenham, near Kingston, where Rev. Mr. Codling is the pastor of the Methodist church. Many Peterborough friends of the bride will extend congratulations and best wishes.

Do You Realize What This Means to You, Mr. Business Man?

HEALTH AND BEAUTY AIDS

Florence: Indeed, I do most certainly advise against the use of eggs for shampooing. Why should you cover your hair with sticky, slimy, animal matter which quickly decays, when it is already greasy with excess oil? It is an absurd practice which is rapidly dying out. To make the hair fluffy, beautiful and lustrous, there is nothing equal to this simple shampoo—just a level teaspoonful of canthrox in a cup of hot water. This is a favorite shampoo with actresses and all women who dress the hair elaborately and need to make the most of the "crowning glory" nature gave.

Mable: Objectionable hair or fuzz is easily and quickly banished by the following simple treatment: Make a stiff paste with powdered delatone and water, apply to hairy surface two or three minutes, then rub off, wash the skin and it will be free from hair or blemish. Rarely is more than one application of delatone necessary, excepting where the growth is very stubborn.

Maid: [illegible] brown [illegible] grow thick and glossy. The [illegible] treatment is equally effective for short [illegible] lashes. Apply it at [illegible] with thumb and forefinger and they will come in [illegible] and early. Be cautious and don't get any [illegible] where hair is not wanted.

Katie: You are mistaken when you think there is no cure for dandruff. I [illegible] you [illegible] simple hair tonic and the dandruff will disappear and the itching scalp is promptly relieved. To [illegible] ounce of quinzoin add [illegible] pint alcohol and [illegible] pint cold water. This should be applied twice a week, rubbing [illegible] well. This tonic will strengthen the hair [illegible] the scalp is [illegible]. For the right shampoo, read reply to Florence.

[illegible]

Augusta: Yes, dotted veils are bad for the eyes, but I hardly think that is your whole trouble. You need a tonic to rest and strengthen the eyes, which ache from overstrain. Here is a formula you can mix at home at slight cost: Dissolve an ounce of crystos in a pint of water and put 2 drops in each eye daily. It is soothing to inflamed lids, relieves eyes of redness and is a great help to those who wear glasses. If your lids are puffy and dark underneath, this daily treatment will be of immense benefit.

Marion: You are unduly alarmed about the coming coarseness of your complexion. The sun and wind are hard on delicate skins, and maybe you have used some injurious face powder. Here is a preparation which will serve the double purpose of cleansing your skin of the sallow, muddy look and whitening it in the way the best powder cannot. It is natural in effect and will cling and look like a part of your skin. Dissolve 4 ounces of spurmax in ½ pint hot water, adding 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine. This gives you a beautiful, velvet-like complexion, besides preventing skin defects.

Ethel: I do not know of any other system tonic and blood tonic which is as good as this simple, home-made one and none which so quickly clears the complexion and tones the nerves. Here is the prescription: Mix together ½ cup sugar, one ounce kardene and ½ pint alcohol. Then add enough hot water to make a quart. A tablespoonful before meals will invigorate you in every way. Your appetite will improve and the purified blood in your veins will give the beauty of fine skin, bright eyes and health restored.

Mrs. L.: You are right to want to stop those wrinkles before they grow deep. They come fast if you let them get a start. [illegible]

DEATHS AND FUNERALS

Mrs. John Ryan.

The death of Mrs. John Ryan, aged 75 years, occurred yesterday morning after a short illness. The deceased leaves to mourn her death a husband and three children. The remains will be sent to Wooler, Ont., to-day, where interment will take place.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. and Mrs. S. Steadman, left on an extended visit to England.

Dr. Coughlin, of Belleville, is in the city.

Mr. Chas. Murphy, of Ottawa, is in the city.

Mr. Ed. McConnell of Lindsay is the guest of his aunt, Mrs. Fred Drake, Bolivar street.

Miss Muriel McGregor, of Bobcaygeon, is the guest of friends in the city.

The condition of Adjutant McElhaney of the Salvation Army is somewhat better.

Mrs. Ingoldsby and Miss Overend, Orillia, are the guests of Mrs. Jas. Picard, Park street.

The Rev. W. C. Honey, B.A., Mrs. Honey and son, Melvin, are the guests of Mrs. George Turner, Gilmour street.

Reports received indicate that the potato crop promises to be a good one. The frosts are stated to have done some damage to the crops in some localities; but on the whole it is expected that potatoes in this district will turn out to be a good average crop.

It will be interesting to many of the readers of The Times to learn that two thousand telegraphers on the G.T.R. are demanding an increase in wages, with other concessions designed to improve the general working conditions, and a Conciliation Board will sit in Toronto this week.

Lindsay is installing a new lighting system similar to what we are to have in Peterborough.

PASSED AWAY IN A PEACEFUL SLEEP

Death came with tragic suddenness to a practical stranger to the city in the person of Mr. C. D. Hamilton, in the early hours of yesterday morning.

The circumstances of his death are somewhat peculiar. The late Mr. Hamilton came to this city from Port Rowan, but a week ago last Monday, and has since that time been employed at the Campbell Flour Mills, as a night operator. After finishing his duties on Tuesday midnight, he returned to his boarding house at 275 Sherbrooke street, the residence of Mrs. Wm. Shaw, and retired to his rest. When Mrs. Shaw went to call him yesterday morning, he was laying in a peaceful position, but life was extinct. Dr. Greer was called and stated that death was due to heart failure, adding that an inquest was unnecessary.

He leaves to mourn his loss a sorrowing wife, who is living in Ottawa and three children in Toronto.

The funeral arrangements have not yet been completed, and will be deferred until the arrival of relatives. Although the late Mr. Hamilton had not been long in Peterborough, he had earned the respect of those with whom he had come in contact.

The deceased was born in Ayr, Ont., and was about 50 years of age. Before coming to this city he was employed at Port Rowan.

ENTHUSIASM HAS DEVELOPED INTO GRIM DETERMINATION

Peers, Knights, Merchants, and Artisans Shoulder to Shoulder--Carson Considers Its Sad Condition

Belfast, Sept. 25.—Ulster's provisional government, settled into Wednesday, has an astounding list of Peers, Knights, Merchant Princes and of simple industries of Ulster.

Also the military, the church, the leading citizens and representatives law, medicine, art and artisans are bunched into the executive, prepared to govern should the necessity arise. Enthusiasm early to-day had developed into a grim determination.

Among the prominent names on the committee are: Lord Chas. Beresford, Col. Hickman, Lord Claude Hamilton, Sir Robert Kennedy, Lt.-Col. McCammon, Captain Ricardo, Col. Robert Wallace.

Large sums are already promised for the indemnity fund. It is expected there will be a response in Canada, and other Dominions.

The rank and file of Ulster is ready to fight the Redmond Government to the last ditch.

Sir Edward Carson's speech before the delegates had many striking phrases: "Let no man imagine we enter upon what we are doing with a light heart, not counting the cost or knowing the consequences.

"I can imagine nothing more disastrous, not merely to Ulster, but to the British Empire at large, than that brother be divided against brother in conflict and hostility. It will in addition to that, have a disastrous effect on the forces of the Crown.

"Never forget when they talk of our fighting against England that at this moment there is a majority of thirty two Englishmen in the Commons against the bill.

"It is with Great Britain as arbiter between two parties, and accepted by us as arbiter—it is in that way alone in my belief that you ever could during those years, or you ever can in the future, properly govern and develop this country. We may, perhaps we will, be coerced in the long run into submission. I say we may, because of course, they have got an army and navy.

"If England, with a majority against Home Rule, allows the army and navy to be used we may be coerced into submission, but if we are we will be a governed and conquered community, nothing else."

Petition to the King

London, Sept. 25.—The following is the text of the proposed national petition to King George in connection with the home rule bill:

"We respectfully ask your majesty to withhold your royal assent to the bill to amend the provision for the government of Ireland until after the electors of the United Kingdom have been consulted."

$30,000,000 CONTRACT LET FOR VANCOUVER HARBOR SCHEME

Twenty-Five Miles of Dockage at Lulu and Sea Islands Will be Provided

London, Sept. 25.—Messrs. [illegible] and G. White, eminent British harbor engineers, announce that they have secured a contract involving some six million pounds sterling for a scheme of harbor extension in Vancouver, B.C., where the Provincial Government recently granted foreshore rights to the Vancouver Harbor and Dock Extension Company, consisting of Messrs. Huddleston and Vigers and Mr. Hanley Hosner, a late British admiral. It is intended to provide 25 miles of dockage at Lulu Island and Sea Island, and many miles for industrie, sites and railway terminals. The company agrees to give the Government control over dockage rates that are to be charged and it also undertakes to allow all railways and steamship lines equal privileges. The agreement gives the Government the right to purchase at an arbitrated price the works which the company as a private promoter has placed at the disposal of industrial works.

THIS AEROPLANE MORE THAN HUMAN

Even in Stiffest Wind It Can Remain Upright With Two Men Aboard.

Paris, Sept. 25.—The French aviator, Moreau, yesterday won the Bonnet prize with his self-righting aeroplane. He flew for a half an hour without touching the levers. A military aviator, Lieut. Lafon, accompanied him as a passenger to verify the performance.

A strong wind was blowing and the monoplane rolled and pitched in an ugly manner, but never failed to return automatically to a level keel.

SUNDAY SCHOOL ARMY NUMBERS MILLIONS

Sunday School Army in Two Camps—28,700,000 Sunday School Enrollment of World.

In October, 1912, the session of the 47th Annual Convention of the Ontario Sunday School Association so seriously taxed the capacity of the City of Hamilton, that the plan of holding two Conventions, one east and one west, which has been considered for years, was adopted for the year 1913. The enrollment at Hamilton was 1001.

Arrangements are being made for these gatherings in Ottawa, October 22-24, and Owen Sound, October 28-30. The Programs are to be altogether equal in each place. The same foreign talent to be used at each place. The same two men, Professors E. O. Excell of Chicago, and Alvin W. Roper, of Winona Lake, Ind., who were so famous at Hamilton last year, are to lead the music at each convention. Besides these two, contracts have also been closed with Miss Hazel A. Lewis of Cincinnati, Ohio, an excellent leader in work on Elementary Grades (Children under 12), and Mrs. Zillah Foster Stevens, of Alton, Ill., who is Superintendent of the Temperance Department of the International Sunday School Association. Special effort will be made along Temperance [illegible] lines.

In Ottawa by special arrangement, Ontario extends privileges to 50 delegates from Quebec Province, leaving 450 spaces for eastern Ontario. Owen Sound will care for 350. Bulletin No. 1 has been mailed to all pastors and superintendents and may be had by addressing Ontario Sunday School Association, 32 Richmond St., W. Toronto.

Of the 141 Canadians, Ontario had 72 delegates enrolled at the World's Seventh Sunday School Convention in Zurich. North America had 1344. These delegates sailed on more than a dozen different ships. The total enrollment at Zurich was [illegible] from 70 countries. Verbal reports were rendered covering nearly all these. Two hundred foreign missionaries attended. The numerical strength of the World's Sunday School forces is—Sunday Schools, 300,000; enrollment [illegible].

BANKERS SURE OF EASY MONEY

Winnipeg, Sept. 625.—Confidence that great improvements in the financial situation would be noticed as soon as money started coming in for the crops was expressed to-day by leading bankers of the Dominion, who have arrived in the city to attend the fourteenth annual meeting of the Canadian Bankers' Association.

These men are in close touch with the situation in Western Canada, and feel sure that not only will the West soon feel easier money, but that the whole of Canada will also be relieved.

Canada, they pointed out, was not the only country affected and as the foreign money markets became settled Canada naturally would feel the benefit. Western Canada would, however, be in good shape as soon as returns from the great wheat crop started to come in. The movement of wheat has so far been enormous, but actual cash has not yet reached the producers. As soon as it does, the situation will be greatly relieved.

FAMOUS HOSTELRY AT COBOURG SOLD

Toronto, Sept. 25.—Mr. Eric Armour, of the legal firm of Bristol & Armour, acting for the trustees of the Armour estate, has just negotiated a large deal in Cobourg. The property sold was the Arlington Hotel, which was the popular hostelry with the American colony, and many Toronto patrons of the Cobourg horse show. The hotel for the last five years has been run by Mr. R. D. and Madame Albertini.

The property which sold for a price in the neighborhood of $30,000 or $40,000, was purchased by Mr. J. B. McColl and Mrs. Susan Smith, the latter being the proprietress of the Columbia Hotel.

The Arlington Hotel was built by the late Col. Chambliss in 1878, and was rented once to Mrs. Alexander, and later to Mrs. Doeg. For years it has been the scene of many of the big social functions of Cobourg.

THE PAVEMENT OF GEORGE ST. CHURCH

There seems to be at present a great deal of agitation among the public concerning the building of the pavement of the George street Methodist church outside the line of trees, as is at present the Council's proposal. This strong public sentiment seems determined and will not desist unless the Council in some way modifies their proposition. The public are eager to keep the appearance of this veritable beauty spot up to a standard, and many suggestions are to hand. Why not build it inside the trees, say some, or if they are not willing to do that, why not bring the walk from the south side outside the trees too, otherwise the appearance will be a decidedly odd one. At least the Council and the officials of George street church should compromise as they do in all things.

It is understood that unless these matters are rectified a petition, signed by a large number of citizens will be presented to council.

BRITAIN BELIEVES AT LAST THAT ULSTER IS IN DEADLY EARNEST

London, Sept. 25.—The deadly earnestness of Ulstermen's preparations are penetrating the customary English indifference. Even ardent radicals who follow Mr. Lloyd George in still crying, "No compromise," see the futility of continuing to apply the term bluff to so fully an organized resistance to the King's Government under Home Rule.

Rebellious Ulster, rifle in hand, plentifully supplied with funds, cannot be ignored and must be dealt with somehow. The special Belfast correspondent of the ministerialist Daily News says:—

Don't laugh at the grotesqueness of these Ulster developments; nobody is laughing here. We are not witnessing any new phenomenon, but merely the present crop of an old deeply-rooted orange tree, which has often borne a similar crop as far back as the thirteenth century.

"Government inquiry has found the British army ramified by the Orange organization.

"There is a strong reason to suspect there is a plot to put the Duke of Cumberland, head of the Orange Order, on the throne."

But Carsonism in Ulster, like Redmondism in Dublin has no ready reply to the question which threatens to dominate all others, namely, what are we to do with Larkin?

Carsonism may be leading Ireland straight for bloodshed which after all will be short lived, but Larkinism is a permanent ever-growing factor, Home Rule or no Home Rule. It feeds in Orange Belfast and Nationalist Dublin alike, upon the slums, and sweating under-paid men and women, toiling interminable hours.

To-day's news of the formations in the United Kingdom of the Employers' Defence Union, with fifty million sterling to be used to protect employers against aggressive labor, is accepted by The Times as an ominous sign. Two large manufacturers have already guaranteed £200,000 each, further sums of £10,000 and smaller amounts are received.

LARGE INCREASE IN TRADE FIGURES

Probably $200,000,000 More Than Last Year.

Ottawa, Sept. 25.—Official figures given out by Hon. J. R. Reid to-day shows that Canada's trade still keeps increasing by leaps and bounds. The total trade for the month of August was $97,742,881 as against $90,092,904. For the first five months of the fiscal year the total trade was $456,223,167 as against $418,[illegible],740 last year. The present outlook is that the grand total for the year will be well over a billion dollars and will probably be two hundred millions over last year's high water mark. During the month of August there was a large increase in agricultural exports. The exports for August were $13,176,343 as against $9,663,343. Canadian exports of manufactures are also increasing rapidly. For the month of August the exports of manufactures were $4,911,478 as against $3,170,362 last year. For the five months there was an increase in exports of manufactures of six million dollars from $21,000,000 to $15,000,000.

A FRESH MUSICAL COMPANY APPEARS

A brand new musical organization had its inception in the city on Wednesday in the form of a Fire Department Band. The origin is stolidly a mystery, but it is believed that the Wright—Jennings nuptials somewhat accounted for its institution. The band made its first appearance on Aylmer street on Wednesday evening, shortly after the hour fixed for the solemnization of the above matrimonial ties. Every member of the Brigade boasted an instrument, which by looks were the first that had ever emitted a note in Peterborough. Notwithstanding the antiquity of their instruments Chief Howard in a role as "Sousa" led forth his gallant organization, to serenade the two who were about to be made one. The "[illegible] Melody" was much in evidence and this and several other selections were given, and the programme concluded with a rendition of the wedding march, after which an impromptu concert was held in the fire hall.

Disorganization.

The permanency of the organization is not an assured one, as many people in that vicinity have threatened to take out an injunction to restrain the band from giving public performances. The crowd that gathered to watch this Chivarara was bigger as one "laddie" remarked, than had ever been seen at a fire in Peterborough.

Mr. Fred Roy, upon request, took a photograph of the band yesterday morning.

PRINCESS PATRICIA REFUSES TO OBEY ORDERS OF QUEEN

New York, Sept. 25.—A cable from London says. The most unmistakable indication yet published as to Queen Mary's views on suffragism is afforded by what has happened this week with regard to Lord and Lady Spencer's invitation to Princess Patricia to a house party at Althorp with the King and Queen.

Princess Patricia recently appointed Miss Glendell, a prominent suffragette, to be her lady-in waiting during the absence of Miss Adams, and the new appointee was to have gone to Althrop this week in attendance.

The Queen refused to meet Miss Glendell and the Princess would not go to Althrop without her.

The incident as far as the princess was concerned, was closed by the latter sending her regrets to Lady Spencer and going with her aunt, Princess Henry of Battenberg, to Abergeldie Castle, Scotland.

MONSEIGNEUR STAGNI, D. D. IS IMPRESSED WITH PETERBORO'

Trip Over the Lift Lock Was Greatly Appreciated by His Excellency--A Great Centre

All ceremonies and functions in connection with the consecration of Bishop O'Brien, are practically at an end.

A special dinner was served yesterday at the Bishop's Palace for a number of the clergy of the diocese, and for those of the visiting clergy who remained in the city. Mr. T. Hooper was the caterer and places were set for 25. Yesterday morning Monseigneur Stagni visited several of the Separate Schools and drove to a number of the principal points of interest in the city.

During the afternoon the visitors enjoyed automobile rides around the city.

Yesterday evening, the Apostolic Delegate, Monseigneur Stagni, D.D., Bishop O'Brien, D.D., Archdeacon Casey, and other diocesan clergy were taken over the Lift Lock in the Bessie Butler, and back again to the Peterborough dock before 6 o'clock.

When interviewed by The Times, His Excellency expressed his surprise and pleasure of having the opportunity of passing over the Lift Lock. Monseigneur Stagni is a man with extraordinary abilities, very communicative, is thoroughly conversant with the ordinary topics of the day, and enjoys to talk about things general, in fact, he is a thorough man of the world. He was greatly impressed with Peterborough and its future. He said the great natural water power, the city possessed would be the making of Peterborough, which, in his opinion is designated to become a great manufacturing centre. He is extremely pleased also with the receptions he has received here, and his visit has been one full of pleasure.

Last night at the Church of the Sacred Heart Monseigneur Stagni officiated at the Benediction.

The Apostolic Delegate left the city at midnight, after a visit of two days which will linger for a long time to come in memory.

A New Post Office

It is likely that Peterborough will have a new post office in the near future. Parcels post and increased mail will necessitate some such measures. The Times has heard the local federal member say that if the present lot will not be enough it will be up to the City Council to name the locality in which they want a new one purchased. The Council represents the people.

ANGRY OVER FAILING TO BE RESSURECTED

Shreveport, La., Sept. 25.—"I wanted to see if the Saviour was a man of His word," was the only explanation Abe Salchansky gave the police today for desecrating over twenty graves in Oakland Cemetery.

Walchansky visited the cemetery and laid himself at full length on one of the graves, expecting, he afterwards explained, to die peacefully and have the Saviour promptly resurrect him. Death did not arrive as per expectations, and, in a fit of rage Walchansky rose and began his work of destruction.

He devoted himself to tearing down headstones, and when the police arrived at the cemetery they found over twenty of these scattered over the walks and in the pathways between the graves.

MR. E. V. WINDOVER IS KILLED WHEN CAR TURNED TURTLE

Novice Allowed to Steer Car, and Came to Grief at Bend in the Road

As a result of a motor car, in which he was a passenger, turning turtle, and crushing him underneath, a man who has been identified as Ephraim V. Windover, of Buckhorn, about forty years of age, was instantly killed shortly after eight o'clock yesterday morning on Buckhorn road, about two miles from Lakefield.

Windover, with Roland Darcy, of Lakefield, left the latter village about eight o'clock yesterday morning, in Darcy's Ford car, bound for Buckhorn. It is stated that Windover wanted to try his hand at steering the car and was allowed by Darcy to take the wheel. They were going at a fast clip when they reached a short turn in the road and evidently tried to take the curve without slackening speed. At all events the car turned completely over with its occupants underneath. Windover was pinned fast, the car crushing in his chest, and death must have been instantaneous.

Darcy was badly shaken up, although not seriously injured. Two ladies who were driving passed telephoned to Lakefield, and Doctors Fraser and Dickson were quickly on the spot, but could do nothing for Windover.

An inquest was opened yesterday afternoon by Coroner Greer, who empanelled a jury. The inquest will be resumed at Lakefield on Thursday next at 2 p.m.

RUNAWAY HORSE CRASHED INTO AUTO

Considerable excitement was caused on George street yesterday morning about 11 o'clock, when one of the delivery horses of Matthews-Laing became frightened near Brock street and ran down George street. The driver seemed to have the animal under control until he got to Hunter street corner, when he jumped from the rig. The horse continued and crashed into Dr. Amys auto which was standing in front of Connal's grocery store, and was occupied by Dr. and Mrs. Amys and a small child. The animal was thrown to the ground and was soon released from its position. Fortunately the occupants of the auto escaped injury. The harness was badly damaged.

The horse was none the worse from its fall except a few small cuts.

WHEEL MISSING

Yesterday afternoon, after class had finished at the Collegiate Institute, one of the scholars who resides some distance out in the country, went to get his wheel, and found that some one had been taken in mistake or else stolen. The matter was placed in the hands of Mr. Kenner, the principal, but no traces of it were found. This is a serious matter and if any lad has since found he has made a mistake, it should be rectified at once.

DRUNKEN MEN'S JOKE COSTS LIFE

Hartford, Con., Sept. 25.—Stripped and thrown into a poison ivy patch near here by companions, James Doyle, 35, is dead in a hospital today.

Doyle, who said that he was form Providence, R. I., was found lying naked beside the railroad track at Windsor ten days ago. He was in a semi-conscious condition. He had gone to Thompsonville, Conn., with strangers. They had several drinks, and after that all that Doyle remembered was that they had robbed him of his money and beaten him.

The next morning, he awoke in an ivy patch, and found that all his clothing was gone. All day he lay in the tall grass calling for help, but those who passed only took one look at him and ran. After his second night in the frosty air he crawled out to the railroad track, where he was found.

SLEEP AND BEAUTY

"Forty Winks" During the Day of Incalculable Value

Sleep is one of the greatest aids to beauty; a woman's beauty nap is an absolute essential to her good looks. Lack of sleep will make her look old and sallow, while a sufficient amount will give her youth and beauty.

Many women think it is enough to sleep seven or eight hours at night; but if a beauty nap was indulged in during the day, the woman who claims she is ageing, despite the fact that she is exercising, dieting, and using many measures to preserve her youth, would find that the nap would do more for arresting the flight of youth and beauty than anything else.

Some women are so constituted that the average hours of wakefulness and activity are too long for them; their nerves become very tired, and in order to continue activity throughout the day a supreme effort must be exerted. This would be all right if it were only for one or two days, but to continue it daily will eventually not only rob the woman of one of her greatest assets—beauty—but it will also undermine her health.

However, the beauty nap is a thing that must be cultivated, but once one has learned to control the senses it will be an easy matter to drop into an unconscious state and remain so for a period.

It may be difficult for one who is actively engaged, to relax into a sleeping state during the day. To begin with, it is suggested that no effort be made to sleep—not even to lie down, but sitting with the elbows on table, head resting on hands, maintain an indifference to wakefulness. Confine the mind to thinking of light and simple things, gradually close the eyes, relax the muscles, and breathe rhythmically. Soon you will experience the desire to sleep, and you will then realize that you have gained control of your senses.

White Paper Glare

An electrical authority has attempted an analysis of glare from paper. It is well known, he says, that glare in any of its forms diminishes the effectiveness of an illumination. We are able to see printed letters because of the contrast between the dark letters and the bright back ground. The reflection from commercial papers is a combination of diffuse, or widely spread out, reflection and specular or mirrorlike, reflection. The greater the amount of diffusely reflected light compared with the specularly reflected, the less is the annoyance from glare. Those who have difficulty in forming an idea of these two kinds of reflection can construct a model of a semi-diffusing paper by placing a clear plain sheet of glass over a white mat surface, such as a blotting paper. The glass will reflect specularly, while the blotting paper reflects diffusely.

REDUCING FLESH

Jockeys Have to Take Particular Care of Themselves

During the winter, a jockey's holiday-time, a jockey has got to be as careful about putting on weight almost as during the days when he is actually riding.

However tempting food may appear, one of the first rules a jockey must learn is to say "No." Morningtonl Cannon, the famous English jockey, was once staying with a leading horse-owner. When Cannon came to breakfast, a formidable array of silver dishes met his eye. He lifted cover after cover, and saw kidneys and bacon, fishcakes, eggs and bacon and many other appetizing dishes. With a stern resolve to do his duty—and starve!—he rang the bell and asked the butler to bring him two small slices of toast and a glass of soda-water!

Turkish baths form a very general method of keeping down the superfluous flesh; walking, cycling, and golf are indulged in to keep a jockey fit. When a jockey sets out to walk, however, he dons a thick woollen jersey and literally sweats his weight off. Maher, when on one of his training walks, thinks nothing of putting on three or four jerseys in order to get in trim.

Sea-shell Windows

In the Philippine Islands sea-shells are used for window-panes in the same way that glass is used in other countries. The sunlight streaming through these shell-panes gives a beautiful, soft, glowing iridescence, which is particularly noticeable in the large windows of the grand old churches with which the islands abound.

The most magnificent sea-shell windows in the world, however, are those of the General Hospital at Manila. In Manila alone no fewer than 5,000,000 Kapas shells—the largest of which are about 3 inches square—are used each year for making windows. Windows made of sea-shells are much stronger than those made of glass.

Pigeons Tell of Fish

A carrier pigeon service is operated out of Prince Rupert to enable the Atlin Fisheries to know how the catch is going, and whether it is large or small. Fifteen pigeons were familiarized with their new quarters preparatory to being taken out to sea aboard the fishing boats and released from time to time with messages. This service is something entirely novel to the fishing industry, in North Pacific waters at least.

Pimpernel petals open in the morning during fine weather usually between 7 and 8 o'clock and close in the afternoon between two and three. Should they fail to open in the morning, or close earlier than usual, rain may be expected.

That Musty Smell

When coming from a vacation the house often seems close and musty. Try throwing some apple peelings on the stove or gas range. Leave until they have shrivelled up. They will give out a delicious fragrance of apple which will go through all the open rooms.

TIMBER AND LUMBER

Vancouver Has Great National Forest Wealth

Vancouver Island is endowed with a wealth of varied timber and diversified minerals. They have been the main source of the country's revenue for many years, and yet not a third of its area has been exploited, and what present and contemplated surveys may reveal, it is impossible to conjecture. It is perfectly certain, however, that the Island in these respects, as in many others, is only beginning to evolve a splendid future of internal greatness and commercial influence. That the potentials lie within herself is without doubt. Her timber resources surpass those of any other area of similar magnitude in the world. Her forest area is not only vast in extent, but it has a phenomenal growth of abnormally large and splendid merchantable timber. This represents an average, and is not by any means indicative of rare or isolated instances of enormity in size; for the Island's timber growth has aroused the wonder and admiration of travellers from all parts of the world. And still, it is certain, the unrevealed and unexploited interior, has in this, as in other respects, the mightiest and greatest fulfilment of unrevealed wealth and of commercial and industrial potentials preserved for the brilliant epoch of progress on which the Island has entered. The indigenous trees of the Island include Douglas fir, red and yellow cypress, western white pine and black pine, spruce of two classes, western hemlock and white oak, poplar, maple of various kinds, alder and many other species of deciduous but valuable trees.

AFTERNOON PERILS

Mistakes More Apt to Occur When Body and Brain Are Weary

Late in the afternoon is the perilous hour for all day workers. Not only do statistics prove it, but there is an easily understandable physiological explanation for it. For it is toward the end of a day's work that fatigue comes on, and tired bodies and brains inevitably lead to mistakes and accidents.

"Bank clerks," says the Medical Record, "make most of the errors in the late afternoon; wherefore there is now early closing of these institutions, since bankers have found their employes' mistakes too expensive for the maintenance of longer hours. Every one now knows what dreadful calamity must be feared when railway men work too many hours through many days. As to druggists, to err (with perhaps fatal consequences) in the filling of a prescription is indeed human and hardly blameworthy in a clerk who must be attentively at his post almost two-thirds of those twenty-four hours. Among industrial workers the desire for drink has often sprung from sheer physical exhaustion.

Conundrums

Why is it dangerous to take a walk in the woods in spring?—Because then the trees are shooting.

Why should a novel writer be an extraordinary looking animal?—Because of his tale coming out of his head.

What goes round a button?—A button-hole.

Why is candy like a racehorse?—The harder you lick it the faster it goes.

Why is an umbrella like a hot-cross bun?—Because it is very seldom seen after lent.

What is that which comes once in every minute, twice in a moment, and only once in a lifetime?—The letter M.

It is of no use to the wagon, yet the wagon cannot go without it. When the wagon goes, it goes, and when the wagon stops, it stops. What is it?—The noise.

KING OF THE BARBERS

Strange Judicial Position Existing Amongst Barbers of Madras

The sudden death of Chandri Lala Mosh, the head barber of Madras, at Mylapore, disclosed interesting details about the working of the barber fraternity of Madras.

The fraternity has been in existence for over 130 years. Chandri is commonly known in the North of India as barrister, but the post amongst the barbers of Madras carries a much higher position. He is their head and judge. He has eight councillors, or jurors, and he decides cases that come up before him with their aid.

The Chandri's post is a life appointment. When he dies, forty days after his death a mass meeting of barbers is held, and the vacancy filled.

The elected man from precedent should have been a juror, should be a man of good birth, education and character. The barber fraternity of Madras now consists of 150 Mohammedan barbers.

Shot in a Music Hall

"A Progressive Peterborough."

Our Point of View

Despite the autumnal showers and freshening weather the straw hat and the linen suit are still in our midst.

The Dominion Capital seems to have been suffering under a visitation of crime, beginning with the killing of the naval aid bill.

Hon. Wm. Pugsley was in Ottawa the other day conferring with the other Liberal leaders. Can it be that there is another blockade in prospect?

Startling disclosures are promised as a result of the investigation into the alienation of the public domain during the latter years of the Laurier regime. These disclosures may be startling but they won't be surprising.

The Review published an item the other day to the effect that a huge lobster had been on exhibition in a Toronto fish market. We might remark that there are some lobsters in Peterborough of much greater weight than the one referred to.

The friends of Bill Taft were alarmed and thought he was going into a decline when the newspapers reported that he had lost eighty pounds in weight, but their fears were quieted by the announcement that he has 240 pounds remaining.

If the fair Emmaline Pankhurst wishes to be sure of admission to the United States she will advertise the fact that she has learned the latest Parisian dance. New York will never put up the bars if she does that.

The cable brings the news that Ulster is ready with an army to fight when home rule is declared, and the history of Ulster leads us to believe that it is quite happy in the prospect.

From all accounts almost every prominent lawyer in the city of New York has his suitcase packed, expecting a hurry call from Harry Thaw.

We are informed that the young Prince of Wales likes to dress in Scotch kilts and play the bagpipes. Well, there ought to be no objections so long as he keeps his knees clean.

Already the tang of autumn is in the air and in a short time we will get a respite from the combination of Gibson girl, diaphanous gown and lattice waist. The fear of pneumonia will result in the use of more drapery.

Immigration Standards

Canada has not yet so many or so serious problems in immigration as have come to the United States, nor is it likely to have, even though the arrivals be multiplied, if it shall continue to force its immigration laws rigidly. It makes clear to inquirers and all interested that it is particular with regard to the quality of those seeking admission at its ports, and nothing short of loose or lax methods on the part of individual officials can permit a lowering of the standard.

Sir Wilfrid and the Admiralty

In view of the attitude of Sir Wilfrid Laurier towards the desirability of Canada taking a share of the burden of Empire naval defence—which attitude is one of absolute negation and indifference—it is well to recall the advice given by the British Admiralty, as to how Canada could help effectively and quickly. That advice was given in a state document placed before Parliament by Premier Borden when he introduced his naval proposals. It is as follows:—

"The Prime Minister of the Dominion having enquired in what form ANY IMMEDIATE AID that Canada might give would BE MOST EFFECTIVE, we HAVE NO HESITATION in answering, after a prolonged consideration of the circumstances, that it is desirable such aid should include the provision of a certain number OF THE LARGEST AND STRONGEST SHIPS OF WAR, which science can build or money supply."

There is the proposition in a nutshell. The Borden Government introduced a bill providing for three of the largest and strongest ships of war, which would give the immediate and effective aid desired by the British Admiralty. This bill was defeated by the Laurier majority in the Senate at the behest of a man himself defeated at the polls and thrust from the seat of power. Mr. Borden did his duty—the Conservative members of parliament did their duty. The man who leads the opposition and who is forever singing praises of the Empire when the time was ripe.

Another Alleged Cure

After the disappointing results of the experiments with the Friedmann so-called cure for tuberculosis it is regrettable to note the extent to which another remedy for that disease has gained publicity. The press dispatches from Rome bring the story that a young Sardinian chemist after years of study has produced a serum which has not failed in a single case in which it has been used. It is said that fifteen cases in a sanitorium at Rome were successfully treated, though all had been diagnosed as hopeless.

The warning that this piece of news carries with it justifies its publication. It will go broadcast through the world, and may bring a thrill of hope somewhere to be followed by black disappointment. Other cures and other stories will follow, and there seems to be no means of preventing either the experiments or the telling of them. But, at the same time, the experimenting all over the world is eminently proper and necessary and some of the results told in good faith.

It is well to say that there is a saving clause in the story from Rome. It is the statement that the discovery has not yet been pronounced upon "by any medical authority whose name would carry weight outside of Italy." This means at least that the announcement is premature. Medical authority is decidedly cold and severe when it sits in judgment upon "cures" of any kind. When specifics are in question in which the whole world is concerned, that judgment becomes very strict indeed.

Approval, however, cannot be withheld when the discovery deserves and commands it; but the safe plan for the public is to disregard all announcements of wonderful cures of any character until medical authority has made a thorough investigation, and pronounced upon them.

Offensive Breath Caused Usually by Catarrh

Simple Remedy Discovered That Cures Without Drugs.

The American people suffer more from Catarrh than from any other disease. It undermines more constitutions and creates more sickness than all other diseases combined. It is, therefore, very dangerous.

You can't successfully treat catarrh by internal dosing—you must in some way send a purifying, healing agent through the breathing organs so that the germs can be reached. This you do every time you inhale Catarrhozone. Its rich essences and healing balsams are breathed all through the nose, throat and lungs and effectively destroy every trace of Catarrh. This is a proven fact.

"I endorse Catarrhozone because I know of six bad cases of Catarrh, including my own, that it has cured. It is a complete remedy because it is capable of going where the disease is. I believe it cures quicker than other remedy because it gets nearer to the source of the disease than anything else I know of. I had headaches, bad breath and weak stomach trouble associated with my Catarrh, but they have disappeared since using Catarrhozone, which keeps me free from colds, headaches, catarrh and all winter ills." OTTO E. KRAMER, Belleville, Ont.

Catarrhozone is needed in every home. Large size lasts 2 months, price $1.00; small size 50c; trial size 25c. At all storekeepers and druggists or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y. and Kingston, Canada.

THIS is a HOME DYE that ANYONE can use.

SPORTS

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 25.—At a special meeting of the National Baseball Commission it was decided that the first game of the world's series between Philadelphia and New York would be played at the Polo Grounds, New York, on Oct. 7th.

The Hamilton Spectator says: Five Canadian Leaguers are in the below incomplete list, and at least four of the five are youngsters who were expected to make the grade into faster company. Neale and Hilliard are both outfielders who looked promising enough to be picked up, while Eddie Wright, the St. Thomas third baseman and Bradshaw, the Berlin twirler, are also deserving of a chance to make good in faster circles. McElvoy the Berlin catcher, is a youngster who joined the Dutchmen late in the season and was not regarded as a draft possibility, although his work was exceptionally good and he was regarded by several of the managers throughout the circuit as the best young catching prospect in the league.

Outfielder Neale and Hilliard were taken through the advice of the Cleveland scouts, who spent so much time in the league. The Toledo Club of the American Association is owned by the Cleveland magnates. The Cleveland club intimated that they would take Neale, but it was expected that Hilliard would go to Toronto. Wright has been promised a chance by the Detroit Club for the past couple of years and that he is to get this is indicated by the fact that he will go to Providence, the Detroit farm.

PRETTO GIRL WANTS TO BE A PRIZE IN KAISER'S LOTTERY

"Katherine K." Offers to Wed Man Who Wins Her, If He's "Nice."

Berlin, Sept. 25.—The Kaiser, who is a bishop as well as a lottery collector, received a letter the other day petitioning him to grant a pretty girl, who enclosed her photograph and signed her name "Katherine K." license for the running of a lottery with Katherine for the prize.

The enterprising young woman confesses to great beauty and equal poverty of purse. She wants to earn two hundred thousand marks (50,000) by her scheme and insists "there can be no harm in it since your Majesty yourself profits by lottery."

Furthermore Katherine states that she is a moral, innocent girl, capable of making happy any high-minded man of good birth and steady income.

To such a person Katherine is willing to give herself in marriage if he wins her in the lottery provided he suits her.

If he does not or if the winner is "immoral, unintellectual or a tough citizen," then Katherine will grant him 50,000 marks of the lottery money to compensate him—for his loss of Katherine.

All told Katherine seems to have a very good opinion of herself and promises the Kaiser to use the money or husband gained—whichever it may be—"like a little lady who respects herself."

William I. R. and lottery king referred the petition to the Minister of the Interior.

PROTECTING THE TRAVELLERS ON GOVERNMENT RAILWAY

Inauguration of Train Dispatching by Telephone—Block System Introduced

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Sept. 25.—For the safety of passengers travelling by the I.C.R. the new management announces an important innovation on that line. The train despatching of the St. John and Moncton section will be done by telephone, tenders now being invited for two copper wires with telephones in the despatcher's office and in each station along the line between the points mentioned. This will be the first attempt at train despatching by telephone on the Government system, but the results obtained on the Lake Superior section of the C.P.R. convince the Government that a like system will be successful on the I.C.R. The automatic block system will be introduced at the same time.

Better Stations.

The Intercolonial management is also improving the stations which are being generally overhauled while very fine new structures are being built at Bathurst and Sussex, in New Brunswick and at Truro in Nova Scotia. The last named will be one of the finest station buildings in the Dominion.

Grade Revision.

The grade revision of the entire system as promised when Mr. Gutelius took charge of the road, will be started on the Cape Breton section of the road as soon as authority for the expenditure will have been obtained from Parliament, while the surveys are about completed for the change between River du Loup and St. Flavie where the grades are heavy. Engineers are, in fact, going over the whole system and in good time better grades and curves will be secured.

Present indications are that the people of the Maritime Provinces will have a suitable railway system governed by intelligence and run for their benefit and the benefit of all Canada.

LAXATIVE FOR OLD PEOPLE—"CASCARETS"

Salts, Calomel and Pills act on Liver and Bowels like pepper acts in Nostrils—Danger!

Get a 10-cent box now.

Most old people must give to the bowels some regular help, else they suffer from constipation. The condition is perfectly natural. It is just as natural as it is for old people to walk slowly. For age is never so active as youth. The muscles are less elastic. And the bowels are muscles.

So all old people need Cascarets. One might as well refuse to aid weak eyes with glasses as to neglect this gentle aid to weak bowels. The bowels must be kept active. This is important at all ages, but never so much as at fifty.

Age is not a time for harsh physics. Youth may occasionally whip the bowels into activity. But a lash can't be used every day. What the bowels of the old need is a gentle and natural tonic. One that can be constantly used without harm. The only such tonic is Cascarets, and they cost only 10 cents per box at any drug store. They work while you sleep.

HEALTH PROTECTION FOR CITIES ON GREAT LAKES

Washington, Sept. 25.—Immediate measures to protect the health of great lake cities against sewage pollution of water are held necessary by the committee of the International Joint Commission which will present a report to the entire commission in Ottawa next month.

Principal pollution of the Niagara River comes from sewage pollution at Buffalo, the report holds, with the recommendation that the method of sewage disposal be changed there in the near future. The waters of the river even below Niagara Falls, are polluted and the towns on both sides are affected.

Sewage pollution along the Detroit River makes a more difficult problem than the Niagara, and is to be further investigated with the aid of sanitary experts.

Frank Streeter and Henry A. [illegible] will aid the investigation.

Commissioner Streeter holds that nothing but Federal control of sewage pollution can furnish effective remedies where the pollution of an inter-State stream by one State menaces the health of citizens of another. Congressional action may wisely be taken to provide Federal control in the interests of public health, says Commissioner Streeter.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Wharf Extension and Warehouse at Bracebridge, Ont.," will be received at this office until 4.00 p.m. on Tuesday, October 21, 1913, for the construction of a Wharf Extension and Warehouse at Bracebridge, District of Muskoka, Ontario.

Plans, specification and form of contract can be seen and forms of tender obtained at this Department and at the offices of J. G. Armstrong, Esq., District Engineer, Midland, Ont.; J. G. Sing, Esq., District Engineer, Confederation Life Building, Toronto, Ont., and on application to the Postmaster, at Bracebridge, Ont.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed forms supplied, and signed with their actual signatures, stating their occupations and places of residence. In the case of firms, the actual signature, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm must be given.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, equal to ten per cent (10 p.c.) of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

MUCH TREASURE IN SUNKEN FLEET IN 1827

Search to be Made in Bay on West Cost of Greece

London, Sept. 25.—One of the most romantic hunts for sunken treasure will start shortly on the Bay of Navarino, on the west coast of Greece, where 60 Turkish and Egyptian ships of war were sunk by the allied fleets of Great Britain, France and Russia in 1827.

Of these vessels, 42 have been located and buoyed, many of them are known to have gone down with specie and other treasure on board, and apart from this, the value of the actual material of the ships and their guns is estimated at an immense sum.

COMPANY FORMED.

A company has been formed in London to recover treasure and anything that may be of value in the ships themselves. The secretary told how the salvors would go to work, and what they expected to find.

"All the existing records that might throw any light in the size and armament of the sunken ships have been most carefully examined," he said, "and from the dispatches of Admiral Codrington himself, and from other sources we have been able to ascertain definitely the size and nature of practically every vessel that was sunk in the engagement.

200,000 TONS OF OAK.

"It is thus possible, for instance, to estimate at the bottom of the bay there are at least 200,000 tons of oak timbers, which, by the action of time and the sea have been turned to the color and hardness of ebony. At a moderate estimate this timber, which is an ideal material for making furniture, will be worth about $50 per ton.

"All these old ships were sheathed with almost pure copper, and it is estimated that there must be at least 3,000 tons of the metal in the hulls of the submerged ships.

2,106 GUNS WENT DOWN.

"Then, there are the guns. According to the records preserved at the British Admiralty, 2,106 guns went down in the Turkish and Egyptian ships. One thousand three hundred of these guns were made of bronze—which is worth from $250 to $300 per ton—and the average weight of each gun may be safely put at four tons."

The salvage of these materials alone should amply repay the venture, but there is also more than a possibility that the divers will find gold in specie and other forms.

SOLD INTO SLAVERY FOR $60 TO $100 PER CAPITA

Filipinos Dispose of Children Like Cattle; Worcester Charges Sustained

Washington, Sept. 25.—Secretary Garrison has before him today a Philippine slavery report by W. H. Phipps, auditor for the island, practically backing up the startling charges of Dean Worcester. It cites details of many cases of boys and girls being sold into slavery at prices ranging from $60 to $100. Heads of savage families sell their daughters and regard the practice as a right.

"I have no hesitancy in saying that I think that the charges of Secretary Worcester that slavery exists in the Philippines are sustained," says Mr. Phipps.

The Phipps report is based upon investigation conducted under the direction of the Philippine auditor, by District auditors. It was accompanied by a list of names of 67 persons held as slaves, some being held outright and some under so-called "debt" system, the fallacy of which is shown by the fact that some of the slaves so held are more than sixty years old and have been held by their present owners since birth.

On investigator made this report: "My observation has been that the largest percentage of real slavery exists in those provinces adjacent to or in part inhabited by hill tribes or so-called non-Christians. I myself have known of several instances where children have been purchased from the hill tribes and believe that a house-to-house canvass of the servants of the well-to-do class of Filipinos and proper inquiry into their status will show that a large number of them are actually owned, having been acquired by purchase. Some of these are old men and women who have been the property of some family since childhood.

"There is a considerable traffic in girls. I personally have had a number of offers of this kind and it is a generally known fact that a large percentage of the Chinese who have Filipino wives actually brought them at a stipulated price. A recent instance in which I was offered boys and girls for the small amount apiece of twenty pesos, thirty pesos and forty pesos was in August of last year at Cebu. Peonage exists in all parts of the islands and in many instances amounts to slavery."

A Boon to Humanity

Read the Following Letter Re SANOL From Professor Auguste Deraume.

Altona, Man., July 7th, 1913.
To the Sanol Manufacturing Co., Ltd.
975 Main St., Winnipeg, Man.

Dear Sirs,—These few lines are to add to my testimony in regard to the benefits derived from your SANOL. Although still ailing from lumbago through the lack of proper care of myself, I find SANOL a panacea not to equal it for instant relief from sufferers of Uric Acid in the blood. The trouble [illegible] of our people we do not give the treatment long enough a trial to make a cure, and sometimes people quit taking the medicine when they should continue it until all the symptoms of pains in the loins, or rheumatic pains have left them.

I have recommended the SANOL to an old friend of mine who is about 70 years old, and who was troubled with his inability to pass water without experiencing excruciating pains. After having taken two bottles of SANOL he got relief; he then ordered a half dozen bottles from your company, and I told him if he would continue he would get better altogether, which to my delight he has done.

I have, certainly, no flattery to make, but it is my duty to report it to the suffering public that do not believe in a scientific epoch-making panacea for Kidney trouble.

May you live long to manufacture SANOL, and help suffering humanity.

SINGING CHANCELLOR

Tenor Voice of Remarkable Purity and Strength

Mr. Emlyn Davies, A.R.A.M., the noted baritone vocalist, declares that the statements frequently made that Mr. Lloyd George is not himself musical to the extent of being able to sing in tune are entirely incorrect. "I can speak with some knowledge of the matter," says Mr. Davies, "because for ten years I occupied the seat immediately behind the Chancellor at Castle street Welsh Baptist Chapel, London, where Mr. Lloyd George is a deacon. I can assure you he has a tenor voice far above the average, of remarkable strength and purity. I remember him on one occasion, when we were trying a new hymn tune, turning to me and saying, 'Emlyn, sing the tenor part until I get the hang of it,' and this he soon did. He told me his favorite song was 'Captain Morgan's March,' the warlike refrain of which he is constantly humming during the social hours that brighten the experiences of the Welsh congregation at Castle street."

ARTESIAN WELLS

Water-filled Strata of Sandstone or Other Porous Rock

Artesian basins, or the underground water supply which furnishes artesian wells with their constantly flowing streams, sometimes spouting to a considerable height above the surface, are often popularly referred to as "subterranean rivers," which are believed to "flow" at great depths, eventually finding their way to the surface to feed some visible stream. Or they are thought to exist as great caverns or reservoirs, deep down in the earth, which is tapped by the drill furnish the tremendous flows of water which characterize some of our largest artesian wells—several hundred thousand, and even in some cases half a million gallons a day. It is true that artesian waters are stored up in underground reservoirs, but they are not of this character. Most artesian water supplies consist simply of water-filled strata of sandstone or other porous rock material, through which the water very slowly percolates, confined from above and below by other strata of impervious rock or clay. Through this inclosed layer of porous rock the water works its way with infinite slowness, following the dip or slant of the rock, and where tapped gushing to the surface, if the surface at this point be below the source of the supply. Coarse sandstone is capable of holding a great quantity of water, as much as 6 quarts per cubic foot; but the rate of its movement through this rock is so slow as to be almost inappreciable. To illustrate how slowly the water travels the "Scientific American" mentions that many artesian, or flowing wells are found along the Potomac River at Colonial Beach and other points in Virginia, about 60 miles south of Washington. This water is obtained by drilling into a sandstone formation which extends along the Potomac Valley and into Maryland and outcrops near Frederick, Maryland, some 50 miles north of Washington. It takes about 100 years for the water of the "subterranean river" to flow that distance; that is, the rains falling upon the exposed portions of the porous rocks near Frederick sink in and move southward at the rate of about 1 mile a year. The water issuing from the wells at Colonial Beach to-day fell as rain on the uplands and mountains of Maryland around about the time that Washington was President.

At a ball at the Skating Club, which was attended by nearly all the Roman aristocracy, Princess Radziwill made her appearance in a chariot drawn by a lion and a leopard. During the fetes the beasts became unruly, and created such an uproar that they had to be taken away.

Infant's Long Voyage

With the aid of the Allan Line officials a happy domestic union has just taken place. Recently the mother of John Duncan McDonald, aged six months, died in Detroit, Mich., and the relatives in Scotland were keenly desirous that the infant should be brought to them. Circumstances prevented anyone connected with the family from undertaking the journey, but the Allan Line undertook to send a special stewardess the 3,500 miles to bring the child to Glasgow. Both arrived a few days ago by the Scandinavian.

PLAYS FOR THE BLIND

Complete Edition of Shakespeare For Unfortunates in Darkness

Before very long those who are afflicted with blindness will be able to read the whole of Shakespeare's works in Braille.

"The blind," says Mr. Henry C. Preece, the travelling secretary of the British and Foreign Blind Association "had a great solace in reading, and are especially fond of plays. Hitherto they have had about half a dozen of Shakespeare's plays at their disposal."

Blind people are poor, as a rule, and cannot afford to spend much on their literature. Each of these plays will be sold at about 15 cents, which will cover the cost of paper, embossing and publishing.

The cost of preparing the zinc plates from which the pages of "pits" and "dots" are embossed, will be about $1,750 to be met by public subscriptions.

"People do not realise," Mr. Preece continued, "that there are over a million blind in the British Empire. There are 33,000 in the United Kingdom, 150,000 in Egypt, and 650,000 in India."

Nine plays have been finished, the last to be finished being "Midsummer Night's Dream." All the work is done by the blind at the association's headquarters in London.

Mr. Preece, though totally blind himself, is a man of remarkable versatility and optimism. Formerly a lecturer at King's College, London, he had to leave a good position at the India Office in 1907, owing to failing sight. He played cricket at one time for Cheshire and Essex. He is a lay reader in the diocese of London.

Moonlight Makes Fish Bad

Strange powers have been always assigned to the moon, and it is not surprising to learn that a South African belief is that moonlight hastens the decomposition of fish. But it is surprising to find this belief brought forward as more than a superstition. D. E. Hutchins, of England, claims to have obtained experimental proof of this action of the moon, and suggests that it is due to some low form of life called forth or stimulated to action by moonlight.

For Special Occasions

"Simple but elegant" is an expression often used in describing women's clothes. It exactly suits the full-length model pictured here.

Every woman and girl likes to have one really nice dress in a season which she feels she can wear at any special affair and look well.

It may be made, like the illustration, with low neck, short sleeves, and sash-ends. Or it may be easily converted into a high neck, long-sleeved costume by the use of a separate guimpe with sleeves attached.

The foundation of the dress is [illegible] satin with a tunic of green chiffon.

Other materials or color combinations may be substituted to suit the individual taste.

The handy needlewoman will do all the embroidering on the [illegible].

POULTRY POINTERS

Never use an incubator or brooder that has not been thoroughly disinfected and that is not thoroughly warmed before chickens or eggs are put in.

Buying eggs for hatching is a comparatively cheap way of getting started in purebred poultry, or [illegible] new blood in the purebred [illegible].

Don't set a hen or an incubator in a damp, poorly ventilated, musty place. You will not get a good hatch if you do.

Don't let the small chicks get wet [illegible]. [illegible]

Refreshing Sleep

TRACES HIS ANCESTORS SEVERAL GENERATIONS

A Canadian Seaman Relates His Experiences During an Adventurous Career

Captain W. Wilber, a native of New Brunswick, and an owner of tug boats in Vancouver, traces his Canadian ancestry back for five or six generations.

Born in Albert county, New Brunswick, Captain Wilber was only fourteen when he took service as a boy aboard a coasting vessel at $8 a month. In the course of the years which followed, young Wilber held every position on board ship from cook to commander. At the early age of 22 Captain Wilber was given his first command, and with this cargo he voyaged to the French port Havre. During the years that followed he commanded bigger vessels and he knows all the notable English ports intimately, as well as some of the inland towns. He brought the second load of rails from Cardiff to St. Stephen, New Brunswick, for the Grand Southern Railroad.

"One experience," he said, "I had about four miles from where the Titanic sank may interest you. Just there we ran into the iceberg zone one night shortly before dark. There was a thick fog, a light wind and slight rollers. We shortened the ship down to lower topsails and foresails. I stood on the topgallant fo'castle all night and the roaring of the icebergs filled the air all the time. The sea sort of rolled.

"We just wiggled on all night. I had all our boats slung out ready to take to them any moment and my wife and kids fully dressed and with everything packed. We expected to take to the boats any moment, but we weathered the night and early next day the fog cleared. As far as the eye could reach there were icebergs everywhere, some as large as good sized islands and others higher than the ship's masts. So strong was the suction from some of the icebergs that the ship would turn right round. There was a long narrow lane of water through the ice in one direction, so we got out the boats and pulled the ship into the lane, yet and eventually got out safely."

AN INCORRIGIBLE BOY

Diminutive Delinquent Told Judge He Smoked a Pipe

As Judge Choquet was interrogating a youngster in the Juvenile Court at Montreal, prior to sending him to the reformatory for three years at the request of the lad's father, the question was put to the prisoner: "Do you smoke cigarettes?"

"No, a pipe," chirped the wee delinquent, and the audience struggled to repress a smile, for, while he came within the juvenile court age limit, he looked much smaller than his years would indicate.

"I found him smoking cigarettes and supplied him with pipe and tobacco and let him smoke in the house," said the father, "on condition that he quit the cigarettes."

"I have tried everything but he won't work nor come home until late at night. Two days ago I was burying his little brother, and told him to stay in the house until I came back and then to come with me to the cemetery, but he ran out, and this is the first time I have seen him since. It is my wish that he go to the [illegible]. I can do nothing with him."

A Record Load.

The steamer Rainbow and barge, in charge of Capt. Barnett and Mate Simpson, tied up at the Peterborough Lock last night and was locked through this morning with a record cargo. The steamer came from Bewdley with 3,100 bushels of wheat for the Peterborough Cereal Co.

To Our Readers.

We request our subscribers when changing their address to notify this office, and be sure to give both former and present addresses. Many seem to think only their new address is necessary, while some others send in their removal, but neglect to give any address at all.

Another Bank Coming?

It is rumored that the Home Bank of Canada may establish a branch in Peterborough at an early date. The city is already well supplied with banks, and any addition to the number to our mind, is hardly likely at present, notwithstanding the report above referred to.

Greeting Cards.

We are showing a very fine line of Christmas Greeting cards. Those who have already seen them speak of them as the finest they have ever seen. Call and see them. If you are thinking of sending a greeting to your friends leave your order with us good and early as these goods are all to be imported.

Increase in Business.

An increase in mail matter and the coming parcel post will mean very probably that Peterborough will have to have a new or larger post office. The Times has no authentic information on this point, but it is understood that in the no distant future the needs of this city and the surrounding country will be met in this and other particulars.

An Accident.

Mrs. John McKee had her leg dislocated as a result of being thrown out of a vehicle outside her home. Doctors Frederick and Eastwood are in attendance. The accident was caused by a portion of the harness breaking, which caused the horse to back the vehicle down an open ditch, throwing Mrs. McKee out, with the above result.

Railroad Man Crushed Finger.

Mr. Walsh, station agent of the C.P.R. in Lindsay, and well known in Peterborough, had the misfortune to get his left hand caught in between a car door and a box, with the result that his last two fingers had the nails completely removed, and the member badly crushed. The injured hand had to have medical attention, and will likely begin to mend, although it will be a long time before the nails will be restored.

The Lindsay Armouries.

According to the Warder the new armouries at Lindsay are to be made a thing of beauty and a joy forever. Lieut.-Col. Maxwell, of Ottawa, inspected the building a day or two ago, and suggested several improvements. For instance the Government will prepare plans for the beautification of the entire park, and will see to it that Victoria Square is kept in a presentable condition the year around. Flower beds will be arranged as well as a nice driveway, while it is expected that the trees will be trimmed and a new band stand erected. This is a pointer for our military authorities in Peterborough.

Shell Game?

A Charlotte street resident bought some "fresh" eggs a few days ago but the sequel was somewhat singular. We don't want to tell any names for the sake of those involved. The man in question brought home the eggs and put them in the oven of the kitchen range over night. Next morning his wife [illegible] she heard a [illegible] voice, and in company with her husband began to investigate. After a few minutes she opened the oven door and out walked a live, healthy chicken that has been hatched out during the night.

Harvest Festival.

The Harvest Festival service at St. Luke's church was duly observed last night. The little church was fittingly decorated with the first fruits of the field, and the choristers added a musical touch of brightness to the services. Many of the congregation of St. John's were present, and were given the opportunity to hear Rev. Dr. Symonds of Christ Church Cathedral, Montreal, who preached a most excellent discourse. Special music was rendered by the choir. Evening service by Plummer, and the anthem "O Lord how manifold are Thy works," also constituted special features.

POLICE COURT NEWS.

Judgment was given in favor of the complainant in the Butler vs. Ross wage case, heard before Magistrate Dumble yesterday morning at Police Court. Wm. Butler, the complainant, claimed $8 wages due him from the defendant Wm. Ross, who was not in court.

H. Baxby, C. [illegible] and Frank Nelson, three [illegible], were each fined $2 and costs, amounting in all to $4.50 for riding on the sidewalk.

Karl [illegible] paid $4.50 for the privilege of riding his wheel on the C.P.R. property.

C. P. R.'s Police Staff.

Still on the Job.

That fire alarm box, No. 52, in Auburn, was tested only a short time ago, and that it would not be possible to remove the box without disturbing the whole system is the explanation made by Chief Howard in regard to the reported disappearance of the said fire alarm box. It would therefore appear that Auburn is hitched up with the fire alarm system.

FALLING HAIR MEANS DANDRUFF IS ACTIVE

Save your Hair! Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine right now — Also stops itching scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and after the first application your hair will take on that life, lustre and luxuriance which is so beautiful. It will become wavy and fluffy and have the appearance of abundance; an incomparable gloss and softness, but what will please you most will be after just a few weeks' use, when you will actually see a lot of fine, downy hair—new hair—growing all over the scalp.

MATRIMONIAL

Buchanan—McKelvie.

At the home of the bride's parents, Alma street, Norwood, the marriage took place of Miss Josephine Lavis McKelvie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. McKelvie, to Mr. Wm. Buchanan, of Belmont, son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Buchanan.

The nuptial knot was tied by Rev. Mr. Cree, B.A., pastor of the Presbyterian church, in the presence of a large assemblage of relatives and friends.

Wright—Jennings.

The home of Mr. Frank Dugan, Aylmer street, was the scene of a quiet wedding last evening at 7.30, when Miss Ethel Pearl Jennings and Mr. Lavern Wright, of Hope Township, were united in marriage by Rev. J. G. Lewis.

Mr. and Mrs. Wright will reside in the city.

Ellis—Porter.

A very quiet and pretty wedding took place this afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Ellis, 40 Queen street, when their eldest daughter, Margaret Gertrude, was united in marriage to Mr. Albert T. Porter, of town, son of the late Wm. Porter, of Manvers. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Bryant, before the immediately relatives and a few friends.—Lindsay Post.

HOW TO MAKE HAIRS DISAPPEAR FROM SKIN

(Beauty Topics)

Expensive or elaborate treatments are not necessary for removing objectionable hairy growths, for with a paste made by mixing water with powdered delatone the hairs can be made to vanish quickly. This paste is applied to the skin and after 2 or 3 minutes rubbed off, and with it comes every trace of hair. Washing leaves the skin clear and smooth.

Eyebrows will be greatly beautified by rubbing pyroxin on frequently, and short, straight eyelashes will grow long and slightly curly if pyroxin be applied at lash-roots with thumb and forefinger. Use care not to get any pyroxin where no hair is wanted.

LAUGHTER IS A CURE

To Build Theatre for Invalids at a Cost of $100,000.

Dresden, Sept. 25.—The first theater for sick people and invalids will be opened at the Oeynhausen Health resort in May next. There will be no seats. The invalids come in their rolling chairs and are rolled to such places as they prefer.

The theater and enterprise is capitalized at $100,000 and the management proposes comedy, comic opera and operetta.

There must be plenty of laughter in every piece produced and there will be vaudeville stunts between the acts—everything to make the invalids forget their troubles for a little while at least.

FINDS POTATO THAT RESISTS FROST AND BLIGHT

New Zealand Government Makes Investigation of Phenomenon in Agriculture

Auckland, N. Z., Sept. 25.—A new blight-proof and frost-resisting potato has been discovered by Mr. John Harris, of Chess-road, Rastihi, New Zealand. The discovery is said to be the most important one in agriculture for many years, and the Agricultural Department of the New Zealand government, has investigated the phenomenon and admitted that the properties claimed for the new potato are beyond question.

Mr. Harris has been experimenting with potatoes for years, and some time ago he noticed a [illegible] [illegible] growing among a crop of Northern Stars and El Doradoes, all of which were affected by blight. He took up the seed of the healthy plant, and [illegible] it in a perfect state began to experiment. The result is that a potato now called the New [illegible] has been grown. The plant was carefully [illegible] and tended, and for several seasons a new crop was propagated from the seeds of the previous crop.

NO TRACE OF BLIGHT.

The variety has been placed under the closest observation, but on no occasion has there been the slightest trace of blight or disease caused by frost, though the crop planted next to it has been blackened by severe cold and is even now badly affected. The strong [illegible] in the growth of the new variety of potato that some of the tubers can be extended to a length of [illegible] [illegible]. The tubers are the color of bananas, and from 10lb. to 12lb. of tubers are being taken from a single stalk. The average yield is about 15 tons per acre.

Mr. [illegible] of the Government Agricultural Department, has made an inspection of the growing crop, and though he has formed no theory to explain the origin of the [illegible], he admits that the potato is really frost-resisting and blight-proof. A frost in the district where the new potato was found is no small affair. The land is 2000 feet above sea level, and the cold is often so severe that potato cultivation has been stopped. The new potato will give a great impetus to the potato cultivation of the Dominion.

ANTIQUITY OF HYMNS

While hymns as we know them to-day are a comparatively recent innovation in church services, they are a very ancient institution, and existed long before the Christian era. Many important collections of hymns date back to about five hundred years before Christ, though, of course, hymns existed long before that period. Among the collections which have come down to us from then are the Sanskrit "Rig Veda," a Chinese "Book of Odes," the "Buddhist Hymns," the Greek "Homeric Hymns," and the "Odes of Pindar." "The Latin Hymns," or hymns of the western church, date from the fourth to the twentieth centuries, while the "Lutheran Chorales" date from the sixteenth century. The hymns which play so prominent a part in the services of the modern Protestant churches were not in this general use until about 1800.

BREAKING ALL RECORDS IN GETTING OUT WESTERN WHEAT

What Borden Government's Businesslike Policy Has Accomplished in Preventing Grain Congestion in the West

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Sept. 25.—The effect of the Government's transportation policy is being seen in the rapidity with which the enormous grain crop of Western Canada is being handled. The Canadian Northern Railway, in an official statement issued on Monday, Sept. 15, shows that they have moved almost 4,000,000 bushels since the commencement of the Western Canada harvest, as against only 440,000 bushels at this time last year.

Other Roads Also.

Reports from the other roads show that they have been moving heavy quantities of grain, and it is estimated by the officials that fully 15,000,000 bushels have now been taken from the harvest field. This exceptionally heavy shipment is taken by the business men as an indication that the recent money stringency is now a thing of the past.

Money Is Freer.

Owing to the large purchases made by Western farmers on the crop credit basis an enormous amount of capital has been tied up in the Prairie Provinces. This is now being paid rapidly, and the western retail merchants are meeting their obligations with the wholesale houses, and in this way quickly circulating the money.

No Congestion.

That there will be practically no congestion is now assured owing to the extra transportation facilities resulting from the two new transcontinental roads being in a position to handle the grain trade and the increased storage facilities provided at the Head of the Lakes by the completion of the large terminal elevator built, owned and operated by the Government. Grain blockaders, so common under the Laurier administration, have been abolished by the aggressive action of the Conservative Government in carrying out its National Transportation Policy.

ULSTER MEN WILL RESIST HOME RULE BILL TO FINISH

Irish Clergyman Gives His Opinion of the Situation in Ireland Over Home Rule Question

Toronto, Sept. 26.—That Ulster men are determined to resist to the last ditch was the statement made last evening by Rev. William Maguire, for forty years a Methodist minister in Ireland, and a member of the Loyal Orange Order since 1869, who arrived in Toronto yesterday.

"I have spent 27 years in Ulster," declared Rev. Mr. Maguire, "and am intimately acquainted with the question of Home Rule from its beginning to the present time. Over a quarter of a century ago I took an active part in England and Scotland in opposing the bill then introduced by Mr. Gladstone, and I am more strongly opposed to the present Home Rule bill before the House of Commons than that introduced by Mr. Gladstone.

Never More Prosperous.

"My native country was never in a more prosperous condition, nor were the people of all creeds and classes more united than at present, save for this unhappy introduction of the Home Rule question into the British Parliament. The people throughout the country, as a rule, do not want Home Rule. Hundreds of thousands of Irish farmers have purchased their own land and look forward to the time within a few years when they will be free from rentals. The men who have purchased do not want any further change. This is not only the case with the Protestants of Ulster but many Roman Catholics throughout the midlands and the south of Ireland have no ardent desire for any change from the present form of government.

Merchants Opposed.

"The Ulster merchants and business men, as well as the farmers and manufacturers, are strongly opposed, and are fully determined to resist the present Home Rule bill if it passes into law.

"A Parliament sitting in Dublin would be sure to be dominated by the Romish Hierarchy, as almost every election in the south and west is at present.

Economic Reasons.

"Ulster people are also opposed to the bill for economic reasons.—The men of Ulster are the chief tax-payers of the country. Whatever prosperity there is in Ireland is largely due to the energy and enterprise of Ulstermen. They dread their being taxed in the near future for the support of institutions and organizations such as you have specimens of in your own country.

Ready For War.

"I have lived in close touch with the Orangemen of the country, and whilst I am not personally an advocate of militant measures, I must admit that there is nothing being left undone in the preparation for emergency should Mr. Asquith's Government be so unwise, imprudent and rash as to launch this measure on our country.

A National Crisis.

"The friends of Ulster in this country may take it from me, and I am not an alarmist, that if something does not arise very soon to prevent the present Home Rule bill from becoming law, Ireland will face the greatest crisis of its history.

"I have recently been in South of Ireland and have conversed with the young and old on this subject and I can truthfully say that I did not meet ten persons during my trip who showed any sympathy to Home Rule, but, quite the reverse, looked upon it as being a step calculated, if it becomes law, to take away their individual and religious liberties."

Money For The Bilingual

French-Canadians are raising a fund to be used in their fight for the French language in the Public Schools of Ontario. Already $12,000 has been secured. It is claimed that money would be needed to engage lawyers and to put up the encounter which is sure to take place in the Ontario Legislature. English speaking Protestants do not desire a dual language system in this Province, and what is more—they won't have it. This is an English state, and our French fellow citizens must not be granted any privileges not accorded to other races. Sir James Whitney permits himself to be misled in regard to the true feeling of a vast majority of the people of Ontario in this matter, he will find himself discredited by his followers. This is plain talk, but it is true.

REV. F. A. CONNERS DELIVERS ADDRESS

On Thursday last, in the S.O.E. Hall, Rev. F. A. Conners delivered an address to the Protestant Federation, but owing to lack of space, we deeply regret that it is impossible to reproduce the whole of it. The following are extracts:

"Protestantism was first applied to those who at the time of the reformation under Luther, in 1529, protested or made a solemn declaration of dissent from a decree issued by Emperor Charles V. and is now applied to the various Christian denominations growing out of the great movement.

"With all our machinery of organization we will only be as France and other nations like her if we fail to recognize God. France had the wealth and the genius to have become a great nation, but she left out God, and where does she stand to-day?"

"As true-hearted Protestants I entreat you, attend public worship in some Christian church where true Protestantism is preached and its principles enforced."

"Romanism makes man's relation to Christ depend upon his relation to the church. While Protestantism makes man's relation to Church depend upon his relation to Christ."

"Protestantism is our only escape from Romanism and Atheism; the one a real religion without life (spiritual) and the other a life without religion. There is no real religion but within the Spirit of Christ and the laws of Love."

"The Romanists would do well to give heed to Acts 5; 38, 39; 'If it is of man it will come to naught, if it is of God it will stand,' and all the powers of earth and hell shall not prevail against it."

WILL ENFORCE THE STANDING BY-LAWS

Chief Thompson notified The Times last night that he was about to take measures to enforce two by-laws which were passed by Council to materially benefit the public health, and to ensure a more thorough sanitization of our city streets and public buildings. They are by-law No. 1380 and by-law No. 1793.

The first mentioned is a by-law to prohibit spitting in public places, placed and passed its several readings on May 13th, 1907. Since that time it has been practically dormant but the authorities are now awakening to the fact that if enforced, it would greatly benefit any measure to prevent the pollution of our public places. Primarily, notices to the effect that "Spitting is prohibited," will be circulated, and then followed by prosecution. Any person guilty of the offence, is liable, upon conviction, to a fine of not exceeding $50, or in default of payment, not exceeding six months imprisonment in the common jail.

The latter is a by-law to prohibit the dry sweeping of sidewalks in the area mentioned, passed Council on August 29th last. The area referred to is bounded on the south side of Charlotte on the south, the centre of Brock street on the north, the centre of Aylmer street on the east and west side of Water street on the east.

This comprises practically the whole of the business section of the city, and Chief Thompson remarked that as soon as the press had published a warning, strict enforcement would be maintained, and in public opinion, justly so, for it cannot be denied that the dust which is caused by dry sweeping, is a direct communicative of that disease, against which, a world-wide campaign has been organized, tuberculosis. The merchants should recognize this fact, and moderate their actions accordingly, being in compliance with the law, and in direct harmony with the Health Board and its associations. This offence is punishable with a fine of $5, and in default, not exceeding six months in jail.

APPOINTMENT OF REV. J. J. OBRIEN

As Parish Priest to the Sacred Heart Parish.

His Lordship Bishop O'Brien announced to the congregation of the Church of the Sacred Heart the appointment of Rev. J. J. O'Brien as parish priest, filling the vacancy occasioned by his elevation to the bishopric of Peterborough diocese.

Rev. Father O'Brien will commence his duties in the south end parish a week from to-morrow. Rev. Father Fergus O'Brien has been appointed to succeed Father O'Brien as parish priest at Lakefield. Rev. Father McCall has been appointed Dean of a portion of the diocese, and Ven. Archdeacon Casey has been made Vicar-General of the diocese, succeeding the late Father Brown. Several other appointments are almost ready for publication.

In announcing the appointment Bishop O'Brien stated that Father O'Brien was worthy of every respect and confidence and he asked that the co-operation which he himself had received be extended to his successor. Although they are of the same name there is no kinship between the Bishop and Father O'Brien.

SAM HUGHES HONOURED

London, Sept. 26.—Hon. Col. Sam Hughes was yesterday received by the King at Althorp, where the court has its headquarters during the army manoeuvres. Col. Hughes was sent for specially and had a long conversation with His Majesty.

The Standard's military correspondent says the Canadian officers are always the first among the parties observing the manoeuvres to take the field in the morning.

CARSON WILL BE MASTER OF HIS OWN BIG DEFEAT

Post Office Would Prove the Crux of the Situation--Belfast Would find Itself Cut Off From Rest of World

London, Sept. 26.—Some indication of how the Government regards Sir Edward Carson's Ulster proceedings is given in a speech yesterday by a minor member of the Ministry, J. M. Robertson, Under Secretary of the Board of Trade. Speaking at Newcastle Mr. Robertson said Sir Edward Carson's provisional government was an economic blunder and a practical impossibility. The post-office would prove the crux of the situation.

Belfast would find itself cut off from the rest of the world. Sir Edward Carson had not been prosecuted as the suffragists had been, because the government did not want to make "King" Carson into "Saint" Carson, who with all his bluster had taken care to keep within the law. It would be an act of unwisdom to prosecute him for bunkum.

Government is Wise.

Sir West Ridgeway, who has had immense experience in diplomacy and administration, and assisted in framing the Transvaal constitution, writes the Times to-day declaring that the Government are acting expediently in leaving Carson alone. "Note the gigantic proportions of the task Sir Edward Carson has undertaken," writes Sir West Ridgeway, "to equip, arm, and lead an army recruited from a population to whom discipline is hateful, and to prevent the massacre of Ulster Catholics at the hands of fanatics whom he has armed. There is no reason to believe that Sir Edward Carson could emerge triumphantly from the ordeal before which Napoleon might quail. Let the Government say what ought to have been said long ago, that North-Eastern Ulster shall not be coerced, that North-Eastern Ulster will have the option which is enjoyed by little Newfoundland, of accepting Home Rule when, but not before, the majority of its inhabitants so desire, or let the Government agree to a referendum.

Two Significant Questions.

"Let them put two questions to the country. First do you approve of Home Rule on the lines of the bill before Parliament. Secondly, do you agree that Ulster should be coerced. Personally I have no doubt the answer would be in the affirmative to the first, and very decidedly in the negative to the second question."

Meanwhile Sir Edward Carson has been ordered for a couple of days to bed to avoid a complete breakdown. It is announced that the fund for indemnifying the Ulster volunteer force amounts to considerably over $1,250,000.

THE MYSTERY OF THE AUTO SMASH

There is a mystery in regard to yesterday's automobile fatality near Lakefield. Although the victim was identified at noon yesterday by a resident of Lakefield, as Ephraim Windover, a former resident of Buckhorn and Peterborough, relatives of Windover after viewing the body, stated that the man was not Windover who has been away from this section for several years. From the clothes worn by the dead man he had evidently been working for some of the lumber companies, and efforts are being made to identify him through this fact.

Coroner Greer at Lakefield, opened an inquest to inquire into the death of the man who was killed in an automobile accident on the Lakefield road Thursday afternoon. The body could not be legally identified. The jury which was empanelled is as follows: Robt. Graham, foreman; Sydney Hunter, Wm. Charleston, J. H. Sheerin, Jas. Edwards, John Henden, Wm. M. Graham, Percy Spence, F. F. Cissan and Chas. Tanner.

The inquest will be resumed on Thursday next at 2 o'clock at Lakefield.

LOCAL OPTION FOR COBOURG ?

Cobourg, Sept. 26.—At a meeting of the Cobourg Temperance Committee of the Northumberland County Union, it was decided to bring on a local option contest for Cobourg in January next. A few years ago a local option by-law was submitted to the electors, and was carried by a majority, but lacked the three-fifths vote. Local temperance enthusiasts are confident of success if the measure is again submitted to the people. When Cobourg falls in line all of Northumberland County, if Alnwick Township also carries the by-law, will be under local option.

THE WEATHER.

ORANGE SENTINEL CONDEMNS THE MINISTER OF EDUCATION

How Dr. Pyne Taken Severely to Task Over the New Bilingual Regulations

The Orange Sentinel in this week's issue speaks out vigorously in denunciation of the new bilingual regulations made by Hon. Dr. Pyne, the Minister of Education.

In a long front page editorial it says in part:

"The changes made in the bilingual regulations for Ontario are of a momentous nature. The longer they are studied the more serious they appear. They remove every definite provision against the use of French, and greatly to the time during which the language may be used, and give the chief inspector power to allow it to be the language of communication and instruction in every form for every hour of the day. We do not say that full advantage will be taken of this power — it is incredible that it should—but we do most emphatically say that no official who is likely to be submitted to pressure before which Governments have been known to yield should be given such latitude. It is not too much to say that the bilingual regulations now make it possible for the chief inspector to mar the whole future of the Province of Ontario.

Law Made Wrong

"There are two facts of the utmost significance that seem to have escaped general notice. The first is that the use of French in the schools of Ontario, as a medium of communication, was never officially recognized until the bilingual regulations of 1912 were issued. Up to that time the school system, on paper, was English, though parents could, if they desired, have the subject of French taught for an hour a day. But that was all. French was a subject and the teacher had to teach it all other subjects in English. Unfortunately, the school law was not enforced. The inspectors were men who belonged to an association pledged to put French on an equality with English, and the abuses of the system became so apparent two years ago that definite limitations to use of French were adopted. These permitted French to be taught as a subject in every form for one hour a day, but confined its use as the language of instruction to the first form. Mark you! This restriction, while rigid, was a big step in advance for the French language, for the school law hitherto had made no provision for the use of any language of instruction but English. In other words, the law had been right and the enforcement wrong until two years ago. Then, on the assumption that the enforcement would be right, the law was made wrong.

Privileges Extended

"Our second observation is that the privileges then conceded to the French language last year have been greatly extended. Then, the subject of French may not only be taught in every form for one hour a day, as the old regulations provided, but for as much longer as the chief inspector desires. That is a serious change for the worse, but by no means the worst. The new regulations, for the first time, permit the instruction in this subject to be given in the French language.

"Now we come to the most alarming change of all, which is that the use of French as the language of instruction—first receiving official sanction last year, but restricted to Form One—may be extended to every form. All that is required is the approval of the chief inspector. To put it in plain English, this provision legalizes French schools, with French not only on an equality with English, as the extremists demand, but used to the exclusion of English. The inspector is the deciding factor; if he gives his consent, as he is empowered to do, there is no redress.

English Restricted

"A careful review of the new regulations must make it plain to every open-minded person that the French extremists have received a large measure of official recognition of their demands. They have been given privileges they never possessed before. Instead of further restrictions being placed on the use of French, the restrictions are reduced. And in conceding a right of way to the French language, restrictions actually have been put on the use of the English language. It is a scientific axiom that two bodies cannot occupy the

ADDRESS AT Y. W. C. A.

Last evening in the Y.W.C.A. an address was given by Miss Saunders before an assembly of over 200.

Other entertaining features were also on hand. A reading by Rev. Peever of George street Methodist church, was greatly appreciated. Other items were a pianoforte duet by Mrs. McClelland and Mrs. Cruikshanks, and a song by Miss Winnifred Sisk, who has lately returned from California.

Miss Saunders address was based on the world wide movement of the Y.W.C.A. at the conclusion of which she made a strong appeal to the Peterborough branch to forward their movement in Muskoka, which delegation by the way, is one of the strongest in that district.

Refreshments were served in the green room and a social hour was spent.

GREEK KING HURRIES HOME TO ATHENS TO CONFER WITH GREY

Seriousness of Balkan Situation Causes His Return--Turkish Troops are Active

London, Sept. 26.—King Constantine of Greece made preparations to-day for a hurried return to Athens where the Balkan situation is regarded by the Hellenic Government as very disquieting. The King has decided to cut short his visit to the seaside resort of Eastbourne, on the South coast of England, when he will come to London to-morrow for a special conference with Sir Edward Grey, the British Foreign Secretary.

All Greek officers have been recalled for active service with their commands, and many of the regiments disbanded after the conclusion of the campaign against Turkey are now being remobilized.

The activities of the Turkish troops are believed by the Greeks to foreshadow and attempt by them to recapture the towns ceded to Greece in the latest Balkan treaty.

A SOCIAL EVENING

A social was held in St. Andrew's Presbyterian church last evening by the people of the congregation with the object of better acquaintance, and the introduction of strangers. The people were received at the door by the elders and their wives. An impromptu programme was rendered and consisted of violin solos by Mrs. G. W. Boyd; piano solo by Mrs. Peer Kerr; songs by Miss May Laing and Mr. C. Thorpe; a duet by Misses Givern, and a piano solo by Mr. Herbert C. Treneer.

Dainty refreshments were also served. The proceedings terminated by the gathering joining hands and singing Auld Lang Syne.

On Sunday Mr. Rollins will conduct a Fall service in St. Andrew's church, to be followed on Monday by an illustrated lecture, on the subject "The High Grade and the Low Grade," which has been arranged especially for the benefit of the younger congregationalists.

TIME CLOCKS FOR CANADIAN GENERAL

It is stated that the check system which has been in operation in the local plant of the Canadian General Electric Company for some years will be dispensed with on the first of October. Twenty-eight time clocks will be substituted. The new system will greatly simplify the work of keeping accurate check on the time of the eighteen hundred employes who pass in and out daily.

A clock will be placed in each department and every employe from the office boy up to the big chiefs will be required to register their number on the infallible clock. The work of installing the new system is in progress.

PROPOSALS FOR A GREAT ADDITION TO THE SOO CANAL

Ottawa, Sept. 26.—It is announced that the Government is expropriating land for the construction of a new canal at Sault Ste. Marie, which will be of the same depth as the new Welland canal is to be, that is from 21 to 25 feet. This will in time provide a waterway for the largest vessels from the head of the lakes to the Atlantic seaboard.

This Hon. Mr. Cochrane's bold scheme, and in conjunction with the development of this policy Hon. Robert Rogers is creating along this great waterway a series of national harbors which will be superior to any now existing on the American continent.

That no time will be lost in carrying out this great scheme is evident from Mr. Rogers announcement that the Toronto harbor must be completed in four years. By this time the new Welland canal will be ready for traffic.

St. Catharines, Ont. Sept. 26—Considerable dissatisfaction is being expressed against the Government valuators at Thorold by people who have been given notice to vacate their premises at once to make way for the building of the new ship canal. Those affected contend that if the valuators had come around two years ago and give them plenty of time to get other homes things would not be so bad.

They point out that the valuators have made their valuations by cubic measurement. So much was allowed for brick, so much for stone and so much for frame. They claim the allowance is niggardly.

SEPTEMBER MOURNS.

A solemn occasion, fittingly observed during the past week.

ERECTION OF A STATIONARY BRIDGE

A few days ago the city received a communication from the Department of Public Works which, in effect, stated that the Department had authorized the C.P.R. to install a swing or draw-bridge, to connect the main line across the Otonabee River. Despite this mandate the construction of the stationary bridge is still progressing under the direction of the Hamilton Bridge Company. It is evident that the company have no immediate intention of halting the work with the object of changing their present plans.

Mayor Bradburn, when seen regarding the matter, stated that the city would take no further action respecting the question of having the present bridge changed from a stationary structure to a swing bridge, so as to permit of navigation on the Otonabee River as far as Hunter street. "The matter is in the hands of the Government and it remains for the department to take action," said the Mayor.

LEAGUE WAS FORMED

Last night at St. Luke's church a Unity League was formed, and the following officers elected:

Hon. Pres.—Rev. Canon Davidson.
Pres.—Rev. F. J. Sawers.
Vice-Pres.—Rev. Griffith.
Sec'y-Treas.—Mr. Frank Dawson.
Executive Committee to be elected later from among the members of the four parishes.

Dr. Symonds made a remarkable and strong address on "Christian Unity," suitably applying his remarks to the occasion.

SHE'D HAVE A FIT.

"Now what should you say after I have given you cake?"

"I dunno, Mrs. Peters."

"You should learn politeness. What would your mother say if your papa gave her $10 to buy a new bonnet?"

"She's say nothin'. She's have a fit."

HOW WARS BREAK OUT

Loss of a Man's Ear Made England and Spain Fight

"To the student of history," says a writer in the Glasgow Weekly Herald "there are few things more surprising than the number of wars which had their origin in trifles—trifles often of the veriest insignificance, but which precipitated nations into the throes of strife, aroused all the evil passions of war, and led to conflicts more sanguinary than the mind can possibly imagine.

"Wars involving the destruction of flourishing cities and the ruin of whole nations have been undertaken to gratify the caprices of individuals, and about the most frivolous was the whim of the Persian monarch, who prided himself on being able to fill his banquet hall with the products of his own territories.

"Persia and its vast dependencies produced the best cereals, the choicest wines, spices, oils, vegetables, fish, and meats, but the finest figs unquestionably came from Athens, and so the ruler of Persia decided to make the area of his Empire include the fig gardens of Athens.

"There is not the slightest doubt that Russia's interference in the Seven Years' War was due to the personal spite of the Empress Elizabeth.

"If we may credit the memoirs of the Princess Radzivill the morals of the Tsarina were quite as loose as those of her successor; but she lacked the wit and the magnanimity of the accomplished Catherine, and plotted vengeance against the critics of her extravagances. The most outspoken of these critics was Frederick the Great whose supper parties were spiced with merciless sarcasm at the expense of his crowned contemporaries. He quizzed the bigotry of Maria Theresa, the stupidity of King George, the indolence of the Grand Turk, and lost no opportunity to poke fun at the Grosse Catin du Nord, as he called the ponderous lady on the throne of the Russian Empire.

"On one occasion Adjutant Winterfeldt complained of the awkwardness of the famous seven-footers, who were recruited from all parts of Europe. 'There's one fellow who is really not worth the salt on his bread,' said the Adjutant, 'he is seven feet two inches and is heavy as a donkey, but every bit as thick-headed. He has not brains enough to deliver the simplest message and I really do not know what we shall do with him!'

"'Send him to St. Petersburg,' laughed the King. 'I am sure he will make his fortune in half a year. Bulgarian, is he? Well, no matter what language he speaks, he needs only to be seen to be appreciated.'

"A Russian spy reported that conversation in all its original ribaldry, and soon after the Tsarina's reply came in the form of a Cossack Army, reinforced from year to year, and wasting Eastern Prussia, till the total of their havoc could be estimated only by hundreds of millions.

"The loss of a man's ear brought about the war between Great Britain and Spain in 1739. About the year 1730 the Spaniards, encouraged to a great extent by a secret compact with France, began to exercise with great severity their right of search over all British vessels on the high seas which were in any way suspected of smuggling. The rigid enforcement of this regulation was often accompanied by acts of gross brutality towards the crews of examined vessels, and tremendous ill-feeling was caused between the two nations.

"In 1731, a British merchant vessel was boarded by a Spanish guardship and the captain, Robert Jenkins, was cruelly used. After his release Captain Jenkins made his way to England, where the story of his torture by the Spaniards, and the tearing off of one of his ears, evoked universal anger against the molesters. For some reason or another the matter lay in abeyance, but seven years later Captain Jenkins was called before Parliament, and, standing at the Bar of the House of Commons, retold his narrative to the assembled members. Being asked as to his state of mind when the Spaniards began to torture him, he replied:

"'Then sir, I commended my soul to God and my cause to my country.'

"The words caused a thrill of indignation to run throughout the country, and war immediately ensued."

THREATENED WITH PARALYSIS
Peter E. Summers relates his experience:

BEFORE TREATMENT
"I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay it to indiscretion and excesses in youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loose, memory poor, etc. Numbness in the fingers set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicines and tried many first-class physicians, wore an electric belt for three months, but received little benefit. I was induced to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the New Method Treatment and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic—I could feel the vigor going through the nerves. I was cured mentally and physically. I have sent them many patients and continue to do so.

BASEBALL'S JOKER IS REALLY FUNNY

"Germany" Schaefer a Circus in Himself—Does a Comical Rope Walking Act on the Diamond

Arlie Latham was funny in his day, but "Germany" Schaefer of the Washington club is the funniest fellow that has ever been connected with base ball. Schaefer is popular with the fans because he never gets peevish when they kid him. He can laugh at a joke at his expense, just as well as the fan laughs at his puns. His wit is spontaneous, and seldom does any one get the better of a battle of repartee with Schaefer. The umpires, realizing that the fans like to see him in action, never object to his comedy stunts unless he seems to go too far. During a series at Cleveland, Schaefer almost turned the game into a farce by his stunts. The Naps were getting so badly trimmed, that the fans forgot the game in their amusement at Schaefer. Umpire Connolly, seeing the state of affairs, pulled off his mask and yelled.

"Ease up on that stuff! The folks came here to see a ball game, not a burlesque."

"Wrong, as all umpires usually are, Mr. Connolly!" said Herman, wearing his broadest smile, a smile at which no umpire could take offense. "Just a minute and I will convince you."

HERMAN SCHAEFER

The crowd looked on in wonderment. Turning to the stands Schaefer asked: "Ladies and gentlemen, did you come to see the ball game or me?" Almost in unison the crowd shouted, "Schaefer!" So what could the umpire do?

Later in the game some fan who desired to take a little of the ginger out of Schaefer, asked, "When do you intend to play, and try to earn your salary?"

"The base is [illegible] for the world's series," answered Herman, almost before the fan finished his question.

One of Schaefer's best acts is his tight rope walking, using the whitewash lines of the coacher's box as an imaginary wire. It is really one of the funniest stunts ever shown on diamond or stage. After doing this on one occasion a spectator who didn't like the act, possibly because it was so ridiculous, remarked as Schaefer walked toward the bench: "You must be crazy when you will do that stuff to get the money!"

"Sure, I'm crazy!" answered Herman. "Those fellows who make a living driving automobiles and motor cycles 90 miles an hour are wise."

He has a habit of announcing to the grandstand in the early part of a game what the final score will be, and in an almost incredible number of cases his guess turns out to be correct.

"A Progressive Peterborough."

Our Point of View

The marriage in Winnipeg of Mr. George Apostle and Miss Stella Angelakos suggests a rather heavenly affair.

At this season of the year our advice is not to gather and eat mushrooms unless you are personally acquainted with them.

The scientists tell us that "Spirit primarily means wind." This may explain why some men blow so much when they are full of spirits.

"Man Killed Almost Hourly by Trains," says a Chicago newspaper headline. He must have a wonderfully strong constitution to stand that kind of treatment.

Speaking of the girls of the period, a Toronto clergyman says: "If they wear the skirts of to-day they will never get to heaven." Well, we should say not. It is all they can do to get as high as a car step.

The Prince of Monaco has come to the United States to study American institutions and it is to be hoped that before he departs for home he will be given an opportunity to get a glimpse into the mysteries of the shell game.

A news item in the Review says that a fisherman recently caught an eel wearing a dog collar. This rather fishy story is beaten a mile by the junior reporter of this great family journal, who says he was once handed a sausage with a muzzle on it.

One of the troubles about being a king is that the wearer of the crown has to kiss his royal visitors. We can easily imagine the feelings of Kaiser Wilhelm when he is compelled by custom to fill his mouth with the whiskers of King George of England.

In these germ-fighting days when nearly everybody uses individual drinking cups and antiseptic soap, the mind of the editor of this great family journal wanders back to the time of the old roller towel that served the whole office force for many weeks, and was never changed until it closely resembled a piece of real estate. But germs were unknown in those days and everybody was healthy.

New Treatment Now Advocated For Bronchitis

Is Having Wonderful Success, and is Making Most Remarkable Cures

For bronchitis a different form of treatment is now advocated. It consists of a scientifically-[illegible] vapor that penetrates to the uttermost recesses of the lungs and bronchial tubes. Every spot that is sore, every surface that is irritated is at once bathed with soothing balsams and healing essences that make chronic bronchitis an impossibility.

This treatment now so universally employed in bronchitis, throat trouble, colds, etc., is called CATARRHOZONE. It acts just as air of the pine woods acts, as a healing antiseptic remedy for all diseases of the breathing organs.

Just think of it—a remedy that can be carried with the very air you breathe to the seat of bronchial or catarrhal inflammation. A remedy powerful enough to kill germ life and yet so healing that disease flees before it. Catarrhozone is truly a wonderful remedy. In many lands it has won its way, and is affording grand results to sufferers from colds, catarrh, throat weakness, asthma and bronchitis. There is no sufferer from a grippy cold or any winter ill, that won't find a cure in Catarrhozone, which is employed by physicians, ministers, lawyers and public men throughout many foreign lands. Large size lasts two months and costs $1.00 and is guaranteed; small size 50c., sample size, 25c., all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y. and Kingston, Canada.

The Lesson of the Friedmann Cure

The report in the current number of the American Medical Journal, utterly discrediting the Friedmann "cure," on the basis of the unanimous results of investigators, may seem to partake of lily-gilding to those who long ago were convinced of the man's charlatanry, and of the utter worthlessness of his serum.

These results cannot be repeated too often. The success of the Friedmann advertising is, unfortunately, still bearing fruit. Like the fisherman's genii in the Arabian Nights, it has grown to such proportion that it can no longer be bottled up. And there are men bearing the medical degree low enough to take advantage of the well known hopefulness of the consumptive to engage in this wretched business.

If the great mass of the people whose credulity makes possible the success of the "sure cure" be it for tuberculosis or cancer "without the use of the knife," or for anyone of the thousand and one ailments that the human flesh is heir to, will but read aright the lesson of the Friedmann fake, it will indeed have proved a "cure." It is this:

No right-thinking physician ever associates with a private remedy. No honorable member of the profession can have any scientific secret from his colleagues.

No reputable physician ever guarantees—anything. There is no such thing as a sure cure. Every scientific man knows that the human equation cannot be bound by hard and fast rules.

The man with the secret or a guarantee is apt to be a fakir. His aim is usually to relieve the pocket-book of the victim.

Should the misery left in the Friedmann wake, the deluded hopes, the squandered savings, and even the hastened deaths, result in the awakening of the public intelligence in regard to the whole tribe of said-advertising harpies—if from it will come a greater trustfulness in the verdicts of the medical profession—the lesson may not have been in vain.

Ploughing with Dynamite

In Cassier's Monthly there is an interesting article by Zeno W. Putnam on the use of dynamite in farming. He claims that in many cases the farmer has no access to the plant food stored in the soil, other than what is found in a few feet or even inches of the surface. We can break up the surface soil with the plough, but often the soil immediately below where the plough reaches is too solid for the tiny plant roots to penetrate. But the farmers have begun to use dynamite to pulverize this too-solid subsoil and Mr. Putnam tells with what success. In one case a Connecticut peach grower planting a peach orchard, alternately dynamited and hand-dug holes, and three years later the trees planted in the dynamited holes bore each from three to six bushels of fruit, while those planted in the hand-dug holes were dried up and fruitless. Another peach-grower reckons that he gains two years by the dynamite method. In South Carolina dynamited land raised 33 per cent. more corn in a single season than it had ever done before. A Kansas farm worth less than $10 an acre for crops, now produces from $30 to $35 per acre of crop. Dynamite did it. A 10-acre swamp in Kansas could not be drained in the ordinary way, but a row of blast holes made it possible to crop it with oats the next year, and it produced an enormous crop. This does not mean that every farm needs dynamite, but there is room for thoughtful farmers in places where the subsoil is known to be heavy and hard to consider the matter and perhaps experiment a little. He is a wise man who is always learning.

ROMAN CATHOLIC TOLERATION

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I am a reader of your journal, although I do not always take stock in your utterances, especially in reference to political-religious matters. I believe that Roman Catholics the world over set Protestants an example of toleration. I am told that there is not a Roman Catholic country in the world where Protestants have not at present equal liberty and equal privileges with Roman Catholics. Try and be fair, Mr. Editor, if you would continue to influence public opinion.

F. L. WEESE.

Port Hope.

Reply.—We fear Mr. Weese is not familiar with conditions in other Catholic countries or he would not write as he does. Is he not aware that over the door of a Methodist church in Vienna, for instance, is the inscription: "Only for invited guests." Why is this? Because Austria is a Roman Catholic country, and only a certain degree of toleration is granted to the Protestant denominations. Fancy Protestant Canada compelling any religious denomination to use such a label over their place of worship. The Times believes in according our Roman Catholic friends every privilege enjoyed by Protestant, but no more.—Ed. Times.

AN APPEAL REGARDING GEORGE STREET CHURCH SIDEWALK

Editor Morning Times.

Dear Sir,—I see the council Monday night decided to put sidewalk outside trees on McDonnel Street. Now what will the street look like right in the centre of the city for one block one side of the street inside trees, the other outside? Talk about beautifying our town, and then go and do a thing like that and for an excuse that it is for economy's sake, as there won't be so much roadway to keep up, and make themselves the laughing stock for years to come, when visitors come to our city and stand on the Park and see such a piece of work as that. If the other walks were put down, then there might be some hopes of making it even. If the Council is anxious to economize let them try it on the other streets where the pavement walks are not yet laid. I thought they had more backbone in them than that. Have they ever imagined what it will look like when it is done?

Because some men from the church came and petitioned for it to be done, they gave in. I believe that the most of them are dead against it, and as the article in The Times stated yesterday. A petition should be got up at once, and I think the majority would be for the sidewalk to stay where it is. If it is done, as the council voted, it will be the biggest mistake they ever made, [illegible] the taxpayer should have a [illegible] say in it.

Yours truly,
Resident of McDonnel St.

same place. Similarly, you cannot permit a freer entrance of French without crowding out a corresponding amount of English.

"Until now the Government has stood behind the bilingual regulations. Everybody knew what these were. There could be no excuse for doubt as to the extent to French was permitted. The new regulations remove most of the barriers of the free use of French. The main hope of the English language now is not the regulations, with the strength of the Province behind them; it is one lone man, the chief inspector. On him is thrust the responsibility that belongs to the Government of coping with the greatest question of the day. He is the sole arbiter. What he says goes. The regulations guarantee an extensive use of the French language and gives the chief inspector authority to say whether its use may be extended throughout the school system.

Are Not Demanded

"The new regulations are not demanded by the teaching profession. They will not make for efficiency. They run counter to the opinion of Dr. Norman Black of Regina, the greatest authority in the world on the question of bilingualism. We venture the opinion that they do not commend themselves to Bishop Fallon, who is most concerned about the material welfare of the French Catholics in his diocese. Nor will the men who have acted as supervisory inspectors endorse them.

Not an influential Conservative paper has a word to say in their favor. The Toronto News and Telegram, the Kingston Standard, the Hamilton Herald, and the Ottawa Citizen are strongly opposed to them. The Liberal press, for the most part, contents itself with cynical references to "the flop."

"The attitude of the Department of Education as regards both the Public school and the English language must undergo a radical change before it is completely satisfactory to the people of the Province. The school language of Ontario is English, and no other language should be tolerated as a medium of instruction. French has no more legal right than German or Italian. The last census showed the Germans to be almost as numerous as French. All foreign tongues should have equal rights; in other words none of them should receive any recognition.

Orangemen to Raise Money

"The Orange Association stands ready to help every school section in the predicament of the one near Penetanguishene. If we have not the funds we will get them. We are confident that every petition for help that reaches the Grand Lodge will be presented to the Government, and if the Government fails to do its duty the association itself will devise means of financing the school. The local Public school supporters in each case should do their share, but having done it they need not despair. If they put their case plainly before the Orange Association and prove that they are suffering injustice, the association will see that their school is not closed for lack of funds.

TIGHTENS HER SKIN LOSES HER WRINKLES

(From Social Mirror)

"I want to tell you how easily and quickly I got rid of my wrinkles," writes one of our correspondents. "While in London a friend, much envied because of her youthful appearance, gave me a formula for a home-made preparation which has the effect of instantly tightening the skin, thus smoothing out wrinkles and furrows.

"The principal ingredient is powdered saxolite, which I found could be procured at drug stores here. An ounce of saxolite is dissolved in a half pint witch hazel. After bathing my face in this just once the transformation was so marvelous I looked years younger. Even the deep crow's feet were affected, as were the annoying creases about my neck. It seems difficult to believe that anything could produce results like these, but several to whom I recommended the remedy have been similarly helped, including an elderly lady whose cheeks had become quite baggy."

GRAND OVATION FOR PTE HAWKINS

Orono, Ont. Sept. 26.—The Durham Old Boys Association of Toronto with Dr. Jas. L. Hughes President, and Thomas Yellowlees, secretary, were given a great reception here today. Great crowds of people from this village and the surrounding country were present to greet the hero of Bisley. Private W. A. Hawkins, of Toronto who accompanied them, was given an ovation by his old school mates, and friends. Orono was his birthplace and the scene of his boyhood experiences.

There was a great automobile procession, a chorus of fifty voices sang "O Canada" and other patriotic songs. An illuminated address was presented to Private Hawkins, and the greatest enthusiasm marked the event.

Hawkins has always been popular here being a leader in sports in his school days.

SPORTS

The Brantford Expositor — The Guelph Herald does not like the manner in which the Expositor commented on the fact that Ottawa is one town where they would approve of a change in the Canadian League, replacing Guelph and Berlin by large cities, such as Niagara Falls, N.Y., and Erie, Pa.

"To be sure, Brantford had a poor ball team last year, but that has nothing at all to do with the case and this constant harping at Guelph and Berlin to get out of the Canadian League is all pure nonsense."

In place of dropping Guelph and Berlin The Herald writer suggests that Peterborough and Ottawa be dropped, and the circuit be confined to Western Ontario by the admission of Windsor and Chatham. Both of these places, he contends, are large enough to support Canadian League baseball, and have a splendid country round about them to draw from. It is well known that Ottawa, London, Hamilton and Peterborough were away above the salary limit last year, and yet this fact was winked at by President Fitzgerald, who made no attempt to find out the true state of affairs.

The local Collegiate Institute has the material for what promises to be a first-class rugby team this season. Several good players have come to the school, while some of last year's crack team are on hand to strengthen the line-up. Very enthusiastic practices have been held this week up on the Nicholls Oval.

As is generally known to the "sports" of Peterborough the Rugby Club has been grouped with the Capital and Parkdale Clubs of Toronto in the Junior O.R.F.U. series, and the first game will be played here on Saturday, Oct. 4th, with the Capital team as opponents.

Another interesting fact in connection with the team is reported. Elliott Green, a Varsity star, and who played on the half line of the M.A.A.A. last year, and who has played in the inter-provincial matches, will be the official coach for the Peterborough Juniors.

It had been previously arranged that the team should go to Port Hope to-day to play the T.C.S., but that arrangement has been cancelled, and a practice match at the Oval is in order instead.

There is splendid material here, and now that arrangements have been made by which the squad will be able to work out in Central Park at nights, Coach Green should be able to evolve a team that will worthily represent the city in the Junior O.R.F.U. series.

ADVERTISE IN "THE TIMES"

FASHION CORNER

Autumn fashions are always of greater interest than those for spring and summer. Unless a woman belongs to the summer-resort people, who must be on dress parade all through the sweltering days of midsummer and early fall, she usually contents herself with a sufficient supply of simple tub frocks to keep her clean and comfortable in hot weather, with a plain coat suit of taffeta or light-weight serge for trips to town or for little journeys. But when fall comes, with its prospect ahead of winter gaieties and the enforced activities for the housekeeper and the business woman, the instinct for clothes reasserts itself. Then nobody knows that suitable raiment must be provided if she would hold her own in the world that is hers.

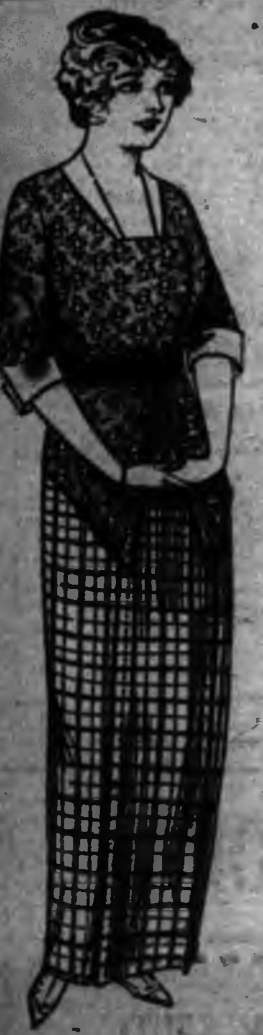

Figure 1.

Hence, too, the greater variety of fall and winter styles. Designers and modistes prepare for this awakening from summer lethargy by putting forth models calculated to appeal to the most divergent tastes, and shops and ateliers are piled high with a glorious array of new fabrics and gowns. It should be remembered, however, that many of these things are experimental. The woman who goes forth to buy too early is apt to fall into confusion and despair, and seize upon something which for the rest of the season she must wear in repentance and discomfort. Had she only possessed her soul in patience until the first rush was over, she could have gone armed with authentic information, which would have prevented such mistakes. That time has now arrived. The period of uncertainty has past, for the work of the designers has been done, and their carefully guarded secrets have been revealed.

Speculation concerned itself this year chiefly with the new skirts. Waists were of small moment—there isn't much to the modern waist, anyway, but a few diaphanous wisps of maline or chiffon over lace or net, even for the coat-suit blouse—but everyone was interested in skirts, for a certain uncertainty of outline in the spring models seemed to be the shadow of coming events in the fall. Narrow they still are, especially about the feet, [illegible] the double and triple flounces adhere closely to yard-wide foundations. The prevailing tendency is well exemplified in the two skirts illustrated.

The plaid skirt is, of course, without draperies or flounces, as the necessity for matching plaids enforces the need of the perfectly straight skirt. But no [illegible] of skirt can properly be said to be more stylish than another in these days of variety and individuality. So if it has no flare at the bottom, the skirt may be one or two pieces, [illegible] or four gored, [illegible] plaits or wrapped about the figure, and still show the wearer to be a woman who is equal to the [illegible] of modern [illegible].

Another popular feature of the present styles is the tunic or peplum, as it is variously called. Sometimes this is attached to the blouse, sometimes it is an appurtenance to the skirt, but in either case it is a most convenient device for making one of the new coat-dresses of two different fabrics, which of late have caught the popular fancy. Women like the coat-dress because it is such a convenient combination of house and street dress, quite within the conventions for either kind of wear. For early fall it is a most desirable substitute for the real coat-suit, which becomes a necessity a little later on.

No device of the dressmaking art, coat-dress, long coat or draped wrap can drive the coat suit out of the field. This year the tailored suits are fairly bewildering in their novelty and variety. The task of selection is not so difficult for the woman whose social obligations call for coat-suits for varied occasions. If her purse permits she can indulge her fancy to the limit in plain cloth suits, dressy, ruffled silk suits, elaborately draped and vested velvet suits, and two-fabric suits, black, brown or white, sure of finding need for all her supply. But the woman who must make one, or, at the most, two, serve all her purpose, must use the utmost discrimination. Her suit must be built on conservative lines if it is to outlast the season. It should be made of good material, too, even if the wearer has to strain a point to meet the added expense. With several pretty blouses, a handsome tailored suit is a real economy, as it reduces the number of dresses otherwise required.

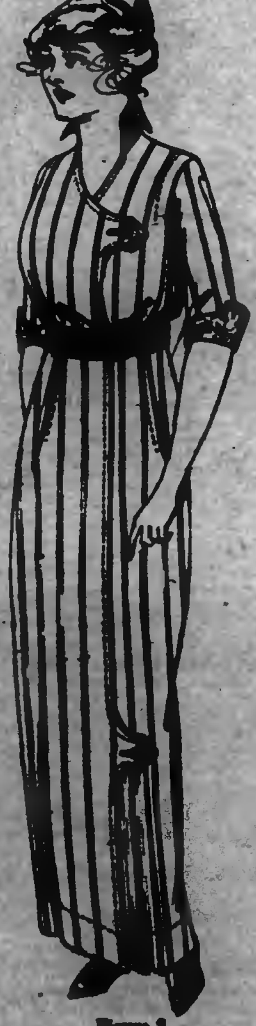

Figure 2.

Materials for such a coat-suit are abundant. The new duvetyne is expensive, but wears well and is worth the price. Broadcloth is durable and handsome and the Scotch tweeds and mixtures extremely serviceable. With a good coat-suit of this sort, and two or three pretty afternoon gowns, the great majority of women are amply supplied. If one has the good taste to choose a pretty silk-dress like that shown in Fig. 2, she will have one of unusual merit, suitable for her "at-home" days, for luncheons, or for any informal afternoon party. It is made of black-and-white striped silk and has a frilled collar and shapely cuffs of handsome all all-over Venice lace. A soft crushed black velvet belt gives the needful note of strong contrast to the dress.

It is the little accessories which enable the woman who has few gowns to make radical changes in them, and fortunately for her, they are abundant and of reasonable price this season. Neckties and bows of bright colors, ribbons, flowers, girdles and sashes, soft lace fichus, net and lace collars—never were there so much to choose from. A dainty gown may be made of the simplest dress by turning in the neck and tying about it a shadow-lace fichu, with a [illegible] ribbon rose for a finishing. With a black velvet girdle, the transformation from grave to gay is complete.

PRIEST KILLED IN SHOOTING TRAGEDY

Killed in the Confessional Through Demented Man's Mistake

A strange shooting tragedy occurred in Germany. A workman entered St. Englebert Church with the apparent intention of going to confession, but on approaching the confessional produced a revolver and shot the priest who was in the box.

The murderer was at once arrested. From his statement it appears that he intended to kill the parish priest named Welter, against whom he apparently had some grudge, but the man actually shot dead was another priest who was conducting a special mission at the church.

The murderer, who is a man of about forty years of age, is a Dutch workman. His conversation after his arrest indicated that he was of unsound mind.

OLD NOTIONS ABOUT HOISERY

How Stockings and Their Use Figure in Superstitions About Customs and Dreams.

Stockings figure in some curious superstitions touching old customs, especially those connected with marriage. Every one knows that there are notions both lucky and unlucky. Among the former it is commonly held that to put on any article of clothing wrong side out is decidedly a sign of good luck; but it must be done accidentally, and when the mistake is found out no change must be made, else the luck will immediately vanish. The idea is very firmly held about stockings, probably because it is more easy to make such a mistake in putting on a stocking than in donning other garments. It would be hard, indeed, for a woman to put on her dress or a man his coat or vest inside out without noticing what he was doing.

Sometimes folk are to be found who have improved upon the common notion or who have even reversed it.

Another superstition touching the use of hose is connected with dreaming. This is a Scotch notion. If a person be about to sleep in a bed that he or she has never slept in before, the certainty of dreaming can be assured by placing the stocking taken off the right foot under the head. Not only will the sleeper be sure to dream, but the dream will certainly come to pass.

Of the superstitions attached to marriage ceremonies, most people have heard of "throwing the stocking." This rite would hardly be regarded now as consistent with modern notions of decorum, but it was highly popular in former days. The ceremony was performed at the conclusion of the wedding day's festivities by young men and girls seated at the bed foot—the former having the bride's and the latter the groom's stockings—whose object in throwing the hose backward over their heads was to hit, if possible, the head, and especially the nose, of one or other of the newly married couple. A successful shot meant marriage at an early date for the thrower.—Tit-Bits.

Bloodhounds' "Evidence"

Benjamin Chant, charged at Hampshire Assizes with setting fire to a haystack, was acquitted by direction of Commissioner Radcliffe. It was stated in evidence that two bloodhounds taken to the scene of the fire followed a 'trail' which ended at Chant's house. Later, when Chant was placed with five other men, the dogs singled him out. Counsel for the defence said that there was no case, as no one could tell what was in the dogs' minds. The Commissioner said the dogs' evidence was valuable, but it only proved that the man had been near the stack.

A Remarkable Case

A remarkable case has been treated in Aberdeen Royal Infirmary. A married woman, who was a patient there was operated upon, when no fewer than seventy-three ordinary pins, eleven hairpins, and a small piece of steel wire were found embedded in the bowel. The woman is unable to account for their presence there, the only possible explanation being that for a considerable period she had, during sleep, extracted a pin from her nightdress and swallowed it. She is stated to be recovering.

A Nest of Adders

While John Howie, foreman roadman, Coleshill, was loading metal from a stamp depôt near Poundland, he came upon a nest of adders among the metal. It was composed of leafy mould and loose earth. There were fifteen adders in all in the nest varying from 5 inches to 12 inches in length. John M'[illegible] examined them, and was convinced the reptiles were of a deadly species. The reptiles were all slaughtered.

BABIES AS BRIDES

Strange Marriage Customs in the Eastern World

Baby brides and bridegrooms were numerous among the 400 couples whose weddings were celebrated simultaneously the other day at Surat among members of the Lewa Kunbi caste. None of the brides, said a telegram from Bombay, was over twelve years of age, the majority being from one to seven years old. The bridegrooms varied from three to nine. Most of the contracting parties sat or lay on laps of their parents during the ceremony and were given sweets to keep them quiet. The caste only celebrates weddings every ten or twelve years. In Chinese Turkestan the practice exists of writing out a bill of divorce at the same time that a marriage is celebrated; thus marriages often last for a day only.

Non-Attendance Bogbear

Dr. Willis, at an inquest at Soham, Cambs, on the nine-year-old daughter of a laborer stated that the child, although suffering from acute tuberculosis, from which she died, was kept by her parents at school until the day before her death, owing to the fear of the school authorities summoning them for her non-attendance. He knew of many instances of people being thus frightened, and considered something should be done to prevent evils resulting from this. The jury and coroner agreed, and urged that attendance officers should rather explain how the services of doctors could be obtained free. The doctor, coroner, and jury gave the parents their fees.

Anti-Boxing Agitation

Fred Welsh, the light-weight champion of the world, gave a boxing exhibition at the Carnarvon Pavilion to an audience which numbered about 1,000. The nature of the exhibition had provided much adverse criticism among Nonconformist leaders in the town, and, had time permitted, an endeavor would doubtless have been made to put a stop to it. The agitation may lead to county council candidates being asked to make the exclusion of boxing exhibitions a condition of granting theatrical licenses.

HE HAS PLAYED MANY PARTS

John Masefield, whose poem, "The Everlasting Mercy," won him the Edmond de Polignac prize of the Royal Society of Literature, was born a little more than thirty years ago near Ledbury, in the west of England. Mr. Masefield has had a varied career. After leaving school he went to sea in the merchant marine (he has since written some fine, breezy verse on the [illegible] and deep waters), spent a few years on an American farm, and subsequently became a clerk in a city office. Gradually his genius as a writer became recognized, and in the last few years his output has been enormous—dramatic plays, essays, novels and poems coming from his pen in rapid succession.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Wharf Extension and Warehouse at Bracebridge, Ont.," will be received at this office until 4.00 p.m., on Tuesday, October 21, 1913, for the construction of a Wharf Extension and Warehouse at Bracebridge, District of Muskoka, Ontario.

Plans, specification and form of contract can be seen and forms of tender obtained at this Department and at the offices of J. H. Armstrong, Esq., District Engineer, Midland, Ont.; J. G. Sing, Esq., District Engineer, Confederation Life Building, Toronto, Ont., and on application to the Postmaster, at Bracebridge, Ont.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed form supplied, and signed with their actual signatures, stating their occupations and places of residence. In the case of firms, the actual signature, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm must be given.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, equal to ten per cent (10 p.c.) of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

Oldest Coroner Dead

The death has taken place in Derry of Mr. Thos. Lindsay, stated to be the oldest coroner in Ireland. Mr. Lindsay, who was eighty-three years of age, was appointed coroner of Derry City in 1872. Owing to the state of his health he was unable to be conveyed to the poll at the recent election.

Farmer's Death on Roadside

The dead body of Patrick Kelly, a farmer of [illegible], has been found on the roadside at [illegible], near the borders of Monaghan County. Kelly visited Middletown a few nights ago, and on his way home was overtaken by the storm, and died from cold and exposure.

Mother and Child in Flames

The story of a two-year-old child's terrible death from burns was related at an inquest at Mullingar. The mother went out shopping, and on returning found the child a mass of flames. Catching up the child, she rushed from the house towards the hospital. Her own clothes caught fire, and she was only saved from death by the assistance of neighbors. The child was dead when it arrived at the hospital.

"He That Loseth His Life"

The Rev. R. T. Griffiths, M.A., Vicar of Cam and Rural Dean of Dursley, died suddenly while preaching in Cam Parish Church. Mr. Griffiths had selected as his text the words, "He that saveth his life shall lose it; he that loseth his life for My sake shall save it." He had referred to the death of Captain Scott and his party at the post of duty, when his voice failed, and he fell down the pulpit steps dead. A day or two before he had seen a physician for a heart affection.

Bigamist and "Grumbling Wife"

Sentence of ten months' hard labor for bigamy was imposed at Bristol Assizes on Rowland Moore Applegard, twenty-four, brass finisher. It was stated that he married a girl at Leeds three years ago, but left her to go to Bristol. There he met Edith Jessie Allen, and posed as a single man. Prisoner's defence was that his wife was always grumbling and telling him to clear out, as she could keep herself. Miss Allen gave him a good character.

Mother of Twenty-two

The body of a woman named Hannah Johnson, who was the mother of twenty-two children, seventeen of whom are alive, was recovered from the river at Blyth. She was forty-six years of age. At the inquest her husband, a shipyard caulker, admitted having struck her, making her nose bleed, but that, he said, was because she attempted to hit him with a poker. The jury returned an open verdict.

A Boon to Humanity

Read the Following Letter Re SANOL From Professor Auguste [illegible].

Altona, Man., July 7th, 1913.
To the Sanol Manufacturing Co., Ltd.
975 Main St., Winnipeg, Man.

Dear Sirs,—These few lines are to add to my testimony in regard to the benefits derived from your SANOL. Although still ailing from lumbago through the lack of proper care of myself I find SANOL a panacea not to equal it for instant relief from excess of Uric Acid in the blood. The trouble with many of our people we do not give the treatment long enough a trial to make a cure, and sometimes people quit taking the medicine when they should continue it until all the symptoms of pains in the loins, or rheumatic pains have left them.

I have recommended the SANOL to an old friend of mine who is about 70 years old, and who was troubled with his inability to pass water without experiencing excruciating pains. After having taken two bottles of SANOL he got relief; he then ordered a half dozen bottles from your company, and I told him if he would continue he would get better altogether, which to my delight he has done.

I have, certainly, no flattery to make, but it is my duty to report it to the sceptic public that do not believe in a scientific epoch-making panacea for Kidney trouble.

May you live long to manufacture SANOL, and help suffering humanity.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at the office of any Local Agent of Dominion Lands (not sub-agency), on certain conditions.

Duties.—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required in every case, except when residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside of his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Six months residence in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and 50 acres extra cultivation. The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land after report by Homestead Inspector on application for patent.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price, $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

Proposed Government Buildings, Ottawa, Ont.

ARCHITECTS are invited to submit sketch designs in a preliminary competition for the erection of Departmental and Courts Buildings.

From the designs submitted in this preliminary competition, six will be chosen by the Assessors, the authors of which will be invited to submit more matured designs in a final competition, for which the five unsuccessful competitors shall each receive an honorarium of Three Thousand Dollars (3,000.00).

The author of the design placed first by the Assessors will be entrusted with the work which the Government intends carrying out at once.

The competition is limited to British Subjects practising in the British Empire.

The Government has appointed Mr. T. E. Collcutt, Mr. J. H. G. Russell and Mr. J. O. Marchand, as Assessors to act in its behalf.

The designs in the first competition must be delivered in Ottawa (carriage paid) not later than 12 o'clock noon, 2nd January, 1914, addressed to the undersigned.

Conditions for both competitions may be had on application to the undersigned, and at the office of the High Commissioner for Canada, 17 Victoria Street, London, England.

WELLAND SHIP CANAL.
Section No. 2.
NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

SEALED TENDERS, addressed to the undersigned and marked "Tender for Section No. 2 Welland Ship Canal," will be received at this office until 12 o'clock noon on Wednesday, October 15th, 1913.

Plans, specification and form of contract to be entered into can be seen on or after this date at the office of the Chief Engineer of the Department of Railways and Canals, Ottawa, and at the office of the Engineer in charge, St. Catharines, Ontario.

Copies of plans and specifications may be obtained from the Department on the payment of the sum of fifty dollars. To bona fide tenderers this amount will be refunded upon the return of the above in good condition.

Parties tendering will be required to accept the fair wages schedule prepared or to be prepared by the Department of Labour, which schedule will form part of the contract.

Contractors are requested to bear in mind that tenders will not be considered unless made strictly in accordance with the printed forms, and in the case of firms, unless there are attached the actual signature, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm.

An accepted bank cheque on a chartered bank of Canada for the sum of $150,000.00 made payable to the order of the Minister of Railways and Canals, must accompany each tender, which sum will be forfeited if the party tendering declines entering into contract for the work, at the rates stated in the offer submitted.

The cheques thus sent in will be returned to the respective contractors whose tenders are not accepted.

The cheque of the successful tenderer will be held as security, or part security, for the due fulfilment of the contract to be entered into.

The lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

GIRL'S CLAIM TO TITLE

Baroness in Her Own Right if the King Removes Abeyance

Baroness Furnivall will be the title of the Hon. Mary Frances Petre, a child of twelve, if his Majesty decides to call the peerage out of abeyance in her favor. The Committee for Privileges of the House of Lords decided in favor of the claim advanced by Lady Petre, widow of the fourteenth earl, on behalf of her daughter.

The Barony of Furnivall has been in abeyance since 1777, and Lord Ashbourne declared that there was really no controversy as to the pedigree of the petitioner, and it was conceded that she was entitled to the peerage claimed. The only point was the date from which that dignity should be fixed.

The petitioner argued that there had been a summons to Parliament of Thomas, first Baron Furnivall, in 1295, and that although there was no direct evidence of a sitting of Parliament until 1299, yet following the precedent of many other claims, the date of the dignity was not the date of the sitting, but related back to the date of the earlier summons.

HUNGER STRIKERS FOOL GOVERNMENT

According to Mastication Expert a Long Fast is More Beneficial Than Harmful

Horace Fletcher, the famous exponent of the art and science of chewing, says that the hunger strikes of the Suffragettes are pure fakes, and that the British Government has permitted itself to be made ridiculous by forcible feeding. He is rather in favor of the women doing without food, and says it is the best thing that could happen to them. They would emerge from prison in better physical health and in sounder mental condition if they went without food for a few weeks or months.

Mr. Fletcher says that by this time everyone should know that a normal human being can go without food for twenty, thirty and even fifty days. Abnormal persons suffering from certain diseases can do without food for perhaps eighty days, and at the end of the period of fasting both normal and abnormal persons will find their health benefited. In fact it would be a very good thing for the average man to eat nothing for a couple of weeks each year, and thus permit his system to get rid of impurities.

Cured by Fasting

Mr. Fletcher says that he observed an unusually healthy woman who went without food for three weeks. For the first three days she took no water whatever, and after that but very little. Throughout the course of the experiment she suffered no discomfort whatever. This patient was threatened with neuralgic twinges in the vicinity of the heart, and believing that a week's fast would do her good she abstained from food. At the end of the week, however, her sensations were so comfortable that she was tempted to go on for curiosity to learn what the sensations of the starving Suffragettes would be like.

At the end of the three weeks the lady's face was seemingly smaller, but not apparently thinner, and her symmetrical figure was as before. Mr. Fletcher himself went without water for 100 hours, just for the purpose of studying the effects of fasting. He mentions the case of John H. Patterson, president of the National Cash Register Company, who was supposed to be a hopeless invalid in 1904. He was traveling in Italy, and it seemed doubtful if he would live to be brought home. As a last resource he accepted the advice of a medical man and tried the starvation cure for the diseases that were wasting him. He went without food for thirty-seven days, and at the end of that time he was cured.

Made New Man of Him

Holes in the intestines caused by ulcers had become healed, and even a wart that had been upon Mr. Patterson's forehead from boyhood disappeared. His complexion had become like that of a child, and in every respect he was in better health and looked better than for many years before. Mr. Fletcher says many persons imagine that those who go for a considerable time without food become irritable. That may be the case with those who are what Edison has called "food drunk," for with them it is as with the drinker who is deprived of liquor, and according to the experts the fermentation of excess food causes a similar irritability. The mentioned authority says that when one has finished the appetite to obey the will there comes a mental exhilaration and that one is far better-tempered without food than with it.

A Defeat of Nature

What most of us identify as a sensation of hunger, says Mr. Fletcher, is what he would call "habit hunger." We feel that we want food not because our body requires it, but because it has become a lifelong habit at certain hours of the day to eat a meal. The only way to find out when we should eat, according to Mr. Fletcher, is to begin experimenting and discover how long we can comfortably go without food. The human body is something like an automobile. It will run for a considerable distance with the gasoline supply shut off.

The passengers by an express train which left Liverpool for London included Detective-Inspector Fowler, of Scotland Yard, a Liverpool police officer, and a prisoner, a man about 45 years of age. After leaving Rugby, and whilst the train was travelling at fifty miles an hour, the prisoner made a dash for the door of the compartment in which the party were travelling, and succeeding in opening it.

Inspector Fowler seized the man by the collar, and a fierce struggle ensued. Ultimately the prisoner reached the footboard, and, his collar giving way, jumped clear of the train. The man subsequently entered a lonely signal-box, snatched the signalman's cap, and made off across country.

Later in the day, after a description of the fugitive had been circulated, a constable at Leighton Buzzard took the man into custody.

MASTER OF ART OF GRAFTING

Representative Burleson of Texas Describes the Operations of the King of Them All.

"No, I won't give you a cent. You are a grafter, and a smooth one, but you don't get me."

Following this declaration just outside the national Democratic headquarters one man made for the elevator and the other entered the general offices of the national Democratic machine. The latter was Representative Albert Sidney Burleson of Austin, Tex., and his face was flushed with anger.

"There is the nerviest fellow you-all ever saw in your life," said Mr. Burleson, by way of apology and explanation. "That fellow keeps a list [illegible] for men in politics and borrows right and left. I don't think he ever made an honest cent in his life.

"I first knew him in the Panhandle section of Texas. There, by sheer nerve, he took over a small ranch and then borrowed money from a bank to stock and run the place. Here is a story that is typical of him: One day he took a horse to a negro blacksmith to have it shod. He induced a neighbor named Peters to accompany him. After the negro had put two shoes on the horse he turned to Peters and said:

"'That's the best work I ever saw a nigger do. By George, he deserves a reward. Give me a dollar for a few minutes, Peters, to give this nigger.'

"Peters forked over the dollar and went away. When the negro blacksmith had finished putting the last two shoes on the horse, this fellow dropped back a few feet and stood looking on in admiration.

"'That's the finest job I ever saw in my life,' he said. 'Any man, even if he is a nigger, that can shoe horses like that can drink with me. Come on, my man, and have a drink.'

"And then he took the negro across the street to a saloon and borrowed the dollar from him on the way over. He is actually the best money getter I ever saw, and I honestly believe if he was stranded on the Sahara desert he would have a harem and car fare to San Francisco before two days. He is simply a wonder."—New York Herald.

A Handy Chicken Fount

Small chicks, in order to do well, require access to good drinking water at any time they want it, and in such a manner as to prevent their getting into it, fouling it or drowning themselves. This can be done at small expense. Take a clean tin can, such as a bakingpowder can, and punch a small hole through it near the rim. Then fill the can with water and place a dish over it, the diameter of which is about two inches more than that of the can. By turning the can and dish over quickly, the fountain can be set anywhere desired, for as fast as the chicks drink the water out of the dish it will be automatically filled from the tank.

Bad Stomach Rumblings Distress Before Meals

HAS SELDOM FREE FROM THAT WEARY, DROOPY, HALF-DEAD FEELING.

Now Cured, and Gives Good Advice to Others With Dyspeptic Tendencies.

If you have any stomach distress at all you will certainly be interested in the following experience which is told by Mr. Edward Dawkins:

"When I was working around the farm last winter I had an attack of inflammation," writes Mr. E. F. Dawkins, of Port Richmond. "I was weak for a long time but well enough to work until spring. But something went wrong with my bowels, for I had to use salt or physic all the time. My stomach kept sour and always after eating there was pain and fullness and all the symptoms of intestinal indigestion. Nothing helped me until I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Instead of hurting, like other pills, they acted very mildly, and seemed to heal the bowels. I did not require large doses to get results with Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and feel so glad that I have found a mild yet certain remedy. To-day I am well—no pain, no sour stomach, a good appetite, able to digest anything. This is a whole lot of good for one medicine to do, and I can say Dr. Hamilton's Pills are the best pills, and my better [illegible] proves it."

Refuse a substitute. Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut, 25c per box or five for $1.00 at all druggists and storekeepers, or post paid from the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

An Acquisition

The Militia Department have decided to run the road which is at present south of the Rifle Range, through the Hunter property, by the concession immediately east of the Cox farm. This will be a fine, high dry road, and a much needed acquisition. The road was recently gone over by Mr. Burnham, and recommended by him to the Militia Department. This would entirely do away with the old road that at present runs north and south.

Stock Raising in Ontario

Peterborough and all Ontario may look for a revival of the cattle industry, which will more than compensate for the diminution in grain-growing, a branch of husbandry that must be largely left to the west, except for fodder crops. This development should go hand-in-hand with an increase of intensive farming, as it probably will. Under the stimulus of wider markets and new methods a farming renaissance in Ontario appears to be beginning. The rough country to the north of Peterborough is well adopted for ranching and is sure to come to the front.

Bogus Maple Sugar

The Department of Inland Revenue are determined to put an end to the manufacture of adulterated maple sugar. 29 samples of maple sugar tested by the department this season have been found to be compounds, while only 47 were genuine. The chief analyst states that there is an evident intention on the part of the makers of maple sugar to deceive the public by selling their product as "Maple Cream Sugar," "M.S. Cakes," etc. These he holds as deliberate attempts to gull the public. Retailers, who buy these cheap compounds, are frequently under the impression that their goods are pure and hence they sell them as such. This same condition applies to maple syrup. Of 128 samples taken in December only 86 were found to be pure. Much of the syrup sold to retailers is not labelled "compound," as the law demands. Prosecutions in a number of instances may follow.

SICK, SOUR STOMACH, INDIGESTION OR GAS

Take "Pape's Diapepsin" and in Five Minutes You'll Wonder What Become of Misery in Stomach

Wonder what upset your stomach—which portion of the food did the damage—do you? Well, don't bother. If your stomach is in a revolt; if sour, gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented into stubborn lumps; head dizzy and aches; belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food; breath foul, tongue coated—just take a little Pape's Diapepsin and in five minutes you wonder what became of the indigestion and distress.

Millions of men and women to-day know that it is needless to have a bad stomach. A little Diapepsin occasionally keeps this delicate organ regulated and they eat their favorite foods without fear.

If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest, most harmless relief is Pape's Diapepsin which costs only fifty cents for a large case at drug stores. It's truly wonderful—it digests food and sets things straight, so gently and easily that it is really astonishing. Please for your sake, don't go on and on with a weak, disordered stomach; it's so unnecessary.

THIEF OPERATING IN PETERBOROUGH

The store of Mr. J. R. Lillico, corner Park and Charlotte streets, was entered by a burglar on Wednesday evening and a quantity of cash stolen from the cash drawer. The thief entered the building by means of a grating which opened into the cellar and made his way to the upper part of the building. After ransacking the till, the burglar, it is said, made his way to Bradshaw's grocery, 252 Charlotte street, where a quantity of provisions was removed. The matter has been placed in the hands of the Police Department. It is said that a couple of suspicious looking characters were seen in the neighborhood on the evening of the burglary.

Other reports of burglary come from different parts of the city. The residence of Mr. Kaufman, corner of George and Dublin streets, was entered and a quantity of articles taken away.

A COMPLETED WILL CASE

In Which Several Former Citizens of Peterborough Figure Conspicuously

Judgment has just been given in favor of the plaintiff, in the case of Goldsmith vs. Harnden et al., tried at the sittings of the High Court Division at Belleville before the Chancellor, Sir John A. Boyd. The facts in the case go back over more than half a century and include an unusually large number of the technicalities of real estate law which a dozen lawyers have been engaged in unravelling.

In 1846 the late John Platt, a prosperous merchant of Warkworth, made his will appointing the late Thos. Scott of Cobourg, and Adam Henry Meyers of Trenton his executors. After disposing of other interests, the will purported to give a farm of 100 acres in the Township of Cramahe, near Brighton, to his brother, the late Daniel Platt for life; then to the late Homer Platt for life; then to such of Homer Platt's offspring as Homer Platt should appoint and should survive Homer Platt. The wording of the will was such that it left it open to the contention that Homer Platt had an estate tail instead of an estate for life, and he mortgaged the farm in fee to the late John Eyre, Barrister, of Brighton, and afterwards sold the equity of redemption. Homer Platt then, on the assumption that he only had an estate for life appointed the farm in fee to his daughter Luella Sweet, who mortgaged it to the late E. B. Stone, barrister of Peterborough, and who assigned it to Senator Cox. Luella Sweet afterwards sold and conveyed the farm in fee simple to the late Dr. Goldsmith, then practising in Peterborough, who conveyed to his wife, the plaintiff. After all this in 1909 Homer Platt purported to revoke the appointment to his daughter Luella Sweet, and made a new appointment to two other daughters, Mrs. Harnden, of Warkworth, and Mrs. Dr. Rankston, of New York, for a consideration of $500.

In the case of Sweet vs. Platt, the late Sir Chas. Moss, acting for Eyre, contended that Homer Platt had an estate in tail, and could convey to Eyre, but the Chancellor determined that Homer Platt had only a life estate, and that the mortgage to the late John Eyre affected only that life estate. Homer Platt died in 1912. In the case of Goldsmith vs. Harnden the defendants contended that the appointment to their sister Luella Sweet was void because there was no consideration for it and it was made without Luella Sweet's knowledge at the time. The Chancellor, however, determined that the first appointment of Homer Platt to his daughter, Luella Sweet, was irrevocable and binding, and therefore the plaintiff took the farm to the exclusion of the defendants, Mrs. Harnden and Mrs. Rankston.

W. C. Mikel, K.C., acted for plaintiff, and the defendants were represented by Geo. Denny and R. Gordon Porter, K.C.

IRISH NATIONALISTS IMAGINE CARSON TO BE A HUGE BLUFF

Ulster Question Will Recede Into Proper Perspective When Lloyd George's Land Reform Campaign Comes Up Next Month

London, Sept. 28.—Although the threatened Ulster rebellion is causing considerable excitement here in London, thanks to highly colored despatches in the Unionist papers, it is regarded with complete equanimity in England.

The immediate object of the Unionist party in forcing the Ulster question to the forefront is to forestall and, if possible, overshadow Lloyd George's impending campaign for land reform in England, a matter that touches the English Tories much nearer than does Home Rule. The Ulster question will quickly recede into its proper perspective next month when Lloyd George puts the England landed aristocracy on the defensive.

In Ireland the Nationalists are satisfied that the whole Carson movement is a huge bluff, and that when the moment comes for action it will slide out even it, as is very likely, a settlement is not reached beforehand. Sir Edward Carson's claims about the strength of the volunteer movement, to say nothing of its efficiency are grotesque. He promises to have a quarter of a million men in the field, but there are only 207,000 men between the ages of 15 and 35 in all Ulster, including the deaf, dumb, blind, lunatics and idiots, and fully half of the male population between those ages are Nationalists. In Ulster it is pretty safe to take all Catholics as Nationalists, but not more than half the Protestants are Orangemen, and it is on the Orangemen alone Carson relies.

When the Orange Unionist leaders talk about armed resistance to home rule, the English Unionist leaders are working with might and main for a conference at which some concession may be obtained to enable Carson and his friends to withdraw from their difficult position before they are called upon to follow up their threats with action. The Nationalists would be willing to do something consonant with the principles of the home rule bill, not for the sake of the Orange leaders, whom they regard with contempt, but for the sake of the Orange rank and file who, if it came to rioting, would be the only ones to pay the penalty. These men are looked upon as helpless dupes of leaders playing upon their patrons, prejudices and religious fanaticism for their own ends. They are mainly workingmen who carry on their labor under the worst conditions of any region in Great Britain, because they are held in complete political bondage by their employers, who are also the chiefs of the Orange lodges.

John Redmond will address a meeting in Kerry to-morrow and will give the Nationalists' view of the suggested conference on the home rule bill. He can do no more than repeat the offer he has already made in the house of commons that the Nationalists are willing to insert in the bill any provision the Unionists deem necessary to afford civil and religious security to their friends, although he is convinced that such a provision is superfluous. Nationalist Ireland will never agree to separate treatment for Ulster, which is represented in the house of commons by seventeen Nationalists and sixteen Unionists.

INSTALLATION OF THE LORD MAYOR OF LONDON TO-DAY

Most Imposing Ceremony Will be Held To-Day--Wearing of Gorgeous Robes of Office

London, Sept. 28.—With the exception of the coronation of the King, Great Britain has no more imposing ceremony than the election and installation of the lord mayor of the City of London. Consequently every Londoner is anxiously awaiting the election of the new lord mayor, on Monday, to succeed Sir David Burnett, the present incumbent.

Despite the fact that the lord mayor is "elected" there is never any doubt as to who will be the next chief magistrate. Following the custom of years, the lord mayor will be chosen from the members of the board of aldermen, and it is always the senior alderman, who must have served as sheriff of London, who is elected.

Sir Vansittart Bowater, a wealthy paper manufacturer, will be the next lord mayor. In order to be lord mayor one has to be extremely wealthy for the chief duty of the office is that of entertaining, consuming much roast beef at imposing official banquets and wearing gorgeous robes of office with becoming dignity.

Outside an ambassadorship to a European capital, there probably is no quicker way of spending money than to be the lord mayor of London. To be sure, the incumbent of that office receives an allowance of $50,000 a year, but this is a mere drop in the bucket compared to what he must spend. Its occupants spends not only his allowance but $100,000 additional. He must, simply! Why? Because every lord mayor of the past has done it.

The lord mayor who is always elected on Michaelmas Day, September 29th, takes office in November 9, following, and that is the occasion for another imposing ceremony. After that his official life is just one imposing ceremony after another.

The lord mayor's authority extends no further than the boundary of the one square mile of the old City of London, which has a resident population of only about 20,000. In the day time the small area probably holds about 1,000,000 people, and it is in many ways the centre of the empire.

PROVISIONS SHIP REACHES DUBLIN

Thousands of Half-Starved People Welcome Relief Sent by Trades Congress.

Dublin, Ireland, Sept. 27.—The relief ship loaded with provisions sent by the Parliamentary committee of the Trades Union Congress to the aid of the Dublin transport workers and their wives and children who are in a condition of semi-starvation owing to the strike, reached the Liffey this afternoon, and was accorded an ovation by the thousands of people who lined the quays. The food on board was valued at $25,000.

This vessel was the first to come to the succor of the famine-stricken workers of the Irish capital since the United States sent a ship load of provisions during the famine of 1879.

The strikers themselves unloaded the relief ship, the first work they had done for a month. They carried the food to sheds, where hundreds of stewards distributed it to the eagerly-awaiting hungry people, each of whom received a package containing diversified rations weighing 20 lbs.

HARVEST FESTIVAL AT S. A. TEMPLE

Harvest Festival services were held yesterday by the local Salvation Army Corps, and special speakers, Brigadier Hargraves, who is making a tour of the Dominion, and Staff Captain Walton, well known to Peterborough citizens, who gave profitable and interesting addresses, helped the occasion on to a great extent.

Adjutant McElhenny was hardly in a fit state after his recent indisposition to take active part, but his unflagging determination and zeal commanded his presence.

Four services were conducted, viz., at 7, 11, 3 and 7 o'clock. The interior of the Temple was tastefully decorated with fruit, flowers and vegetables, which added a taste of harmony to the occasion, as did also that splendid musical contingent.

To-night at the Temple at 8 o'clock, a great sale of harvest festival goods will take place, and it is expected there will be a large attendance. The proceeds will be used discriminately.

ALBANIANS FORCE MARCHING ON SERVIA

Belgrade, Servia, Sept. 28.—Balkans—A force of 50'000 Mohammedan Albanians equipped with modern arms and machine guns was advancing to-day on the town of Kitchevo, Philip, Prizrend and Letovo, now in the hands of the Servians, who did not offer any resistance to them in their progress through the country.

Official circles here declare that several days must elapse before the Servians commanders are able to oblige a force of troops sufficiently strong to deal with the Albanians.

The town of Monastri is overflowing with fugitives from the country districts, who tell tales of horrible atrocities committed by the Mohammedan Albanians on the Christians.

There are several rapid calculating machines on the market, but so far as rapidity is concerned none of them has anything on the old fashioned gas meter.

A MORNING IN A CATHOLIC CHURCH

Address by Rev. Webb, of Murray St. Baptist Church on That Subject

In the Murray street Baptist church last night, the Rev. Webb delivered an address of great interest on the subject "A Morning in a Roman Catholic Church." He took for his text, John 14.6: "No man cometh unto the Father but by Me." He spoke highly of the service, and said it was a very helpful one, while the sermon was particularly strong. There were some things, though, he deplored. Firstly, the fact that it was necessary to conduct the main part of the church service in Latin in view of the fact of the words of St. Paul—"unless ye utter by the tongue speech easy to be understood, ye will be speaking into the air." I also regretted it was necessary, said Mr. Webb, in their ritual, for the incoming Bishop to observe such things as he did, particularly in the presence of the Mayor and Aldermen in their representative capacities. Altogether it was a very kindly treatment and I felt that if any man was worthy of an honor, it was the man who was to be consecrated, Dr. O'Brien.

NEW SERVICES FOR THE WINTER

The winter schedule for the collection of garbage will come into force to-day, and as this calls for only a once a week service for private residences the following changes have had to be made. To avoid confusion as much as possible the routes have been altered but slightly. The following is a complete time table:

Monday—No change. The district bounded on the north by Charlotte; on the south by Townsend; on the east by the River; on the west by the Monaghan road.

Tuesday—as before, as far north as Dublin, namely. From Charlotte to Dublin, and from Aylmer to the River.

Wednesday—The district bounded on the north by London; on the south by Charlotte; on the east by Aylmer; on the west by Downie.

Thursday—All the business section from King to Murray and Aylmer to Water, and other stores outside this section.

Friday—From Dublin north to Auburn Railway bridge, and from Aylmer east to the River.

Saturday—The district bounded on the north by McDonnel and London; on the south by Charlotte; on the west by the Monaghan road; on the east by Downie.

BULGARIA AND TURKEY AT PEACE

Constantinople, Sept. 27.—The peace negotiations between Bulgaria and Turkey were concluded satisfactorily to-day. A treaty of peace is to be signed by the plenipotentiaries of the two nations on Monday.

HARVEST IN THE WEST IS FAR AHEAD OF OTHER YEARS

Winnipeg, Sept. 27.—The final chapters in the serial story of the seeding, growth and harvest of the Canadian prairie west's finest wheat crop is now in the telling.

From lakes to Rockies the threshers are working at forced pressure, and the grain stream shows a world record. Winnipeg, from whose gates train after train rumbles out for the long thunderous rush to the lakes, is handling up to 1500 cars daily, or as much as Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago together at the present time.

The most striking feature of the threshing is the early date. Last year at this time the farmer of the west had just commenced to haul in the first tricklings from the threshers posts, and only 4,332,000 bushels of wheat had been placed on the market throughout the entire West. This year, to present date, 21,337,000 bushels have been marketed. Of the other grains, oats, barley, flax, etc., only 671,000 bushels were marketed last year, whereas this year the amount is 5,000,000 bushels, figures which are startling verification of the speed with which the 1913 crop is being handled.

A fair estimate is that 25 to 30 per cent. of the crop is threshed.

Railways are meeting the phenomenal rush in splendid fashion. A quarter of the crop has passed to the lakes and no whisper anywhere of car shortage or difficulty in obtaining cars for individual shipping. Additional staffs have been put to work in the yards and on the roads. In Winnipeg the grain exchange inspectors' staff has been considerably increased to cope with the heavy demand for inspections, but every man who puts a hand to help move the crop seems to be rising finely to the occasion, and things are moving without a hitch.

FRENCH AVIATORS BREAK WORLDS FLYING RECORDS

Rheims, France, Sept. 27.—The remarkable speed of 118.6 miles an hour, beating the standing official record of 111½ miles an hour, was attained here to-day by both Emile Vedrines and Maurice Prevost, two French aviators. They were flying in the eliminatory trials to select a French team to participate in the International Aeroplane Cup race here under the auspices of the Aero Club of France Monday. Emile Vedrines, Maurice Prevost and Eugene Gilbert were chosen as the French representatives.

More dangerous than the high-speed contests were the efforts of the fifteen entrants in the preliminaries of the low-speed competition to remain in the air at a lower altitude than 150 feet for as near as possible six minutes and 40 seconds while flying once around a course measuring 6.2 miles. Fourteen competitors qualified for the actual race, the most successful among them being Abel Gaston Lucien Cailleaux, whose time was just 2½ seconds under the limit.

THE WEATHER.

To-day: Mostly fair and about the same temperature.

IMPROVING THE STANDARD OF THE INTERCOLONIAL RAILWAY

Government Presses Foward Important Work of Bringing People's Railway Up to Mark

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Sept. 27.—The work of improving the Intercolonial Railway is being steadily and consistently proceeded with by the present Government and a general reorganization is now under way, which will result in the raising of the standard of efficiency. Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Railways and Canals has had the general manager of the line in consultation with him and a plan for a better line has been evolved.

Two New Departments

The programme will include the creation of two new departments, the double tracking of several sections of the road, increasing yard and shop facilities at several points, improved ferry service at the Strait of Canso, installation of a telephone despatching system on the St. John-Moncton section, where the automatic block system will also be introduced, and a general overhauling of station property, as well as the construction of several new and attractive station houses, including one at Truro, which will rank among the finest in the Dominion.

The Fuel Bill

The two new departments, which are being created will result in the centralization of work which was formerly scattered over several departments. A fuel superintendent has been appointed who will exercise greater supervision over the coal buying. The railway is now paying from forty to fifty cents more a ton for their coal than eighteen months ago—forty cents more at the mine and fifty cents more delivered at the water front at Levis and other places. The value of the appointment of a fuel superintendent, would be in the fact that a closer inspection would be possible, securing a better grade of coal and more economical handling. The advantages to be derived from the appointment of a general tie agent would be about the same, as in future ties will be delivered where they are required and in the quantity required.

As regards the reorganization now going on along the line of shops, when all the shops are fully manned the Government will have a sufficient force to look after repairs of cars and locomotives. They have now about a thousand men at work in the Moncton shops, but it does not pay to make an absolute concentration of the system's mechanical force at headquarters. They have shops at Chaudiere Junction, at River du Loup, at Stellarton and at Halifax, where repairs could be carried on with economy and despatch. In fact, they had put on fifty additional men at River du Loup quite recently, but of course all the boiler repairs had yet to be done at Moncton.

Double Tracking

The additional-tracking of the line is going forwards at congested points. A contract has been given out to Messrs. Soper & McDougall for the double-tracking of eight miles of road from Levis to Chaudiere Junction, while the yards at Levis are also to be extended to about double their present size.

New Ferry

Another step forward is being taken down east in order to secure quicker transportation across the Strait of Canso. The Canadian manufacturers have been asked to tender on a second ferry boat for the Canso crossing, the expenditure on this alone amounting to about $300,000. The old ferry, has done splendid service, but the service required a duplicate boat and this will be secured in the near future.

ULSTER ARMY PARADES WITH LARGEST UNION JACK IN WORLD

Eleven Thousand Volunteers and Twenty Thousand Spectators Unite in Singing "God Save the King"

Belfast, Sept. 28.—Fourteen battalions of Ulster volunteers, comprising 11,000 men of the "No Home Rule Army" marched through the streets of Belfast yesterday with colors flying and bands playing, and were accorded a rousing reception by the citizens of the northern Irish capital. Fully twenty thousand spectators drawn from all parts of the north of Ireland taxed the capacity of the review grounds, where the army was drawn up for inspection under the command of Gen. George Richardson. When an order was given for three cheers for the Union the largest Union Jack in the world was broken from the flagstaff in the centre of the grounds, and the volunteers and the crowds joined in the singing of "God Save the King."

The volunteers were armed with dummy rifles, as the carrying of firearms by unlicensed persons is prohibited in the British Isles.

The usual Saturday afternoon sporting fixtures, including all the football matches, were played earlier than usual, so as not to interfere with the big event of the day.

During the march of the volunteers with Gen. Sir George Richardson at their head, a revolver was fired in the vicinity of Garrick Hill, and a child on the sidewalk received a slight injury.

Sir Edward Carson was a prominent figure in the parade.

MASS MEETING.

On Sunday a mass meeting was held in Belfast, and special services held in the churches, yesterday being commonly known as "Ulster Day." Special intercessory services were held in 55 churches re[illegible] Presbyterians, Methodist, Congregational. A special commemoration service was also held in the evening in the Leicester Hall, at which Sir Edward Carson and other leaders were present. Clergy of all Protestant denominations participated in the services.

JUMP OF FORTY THOUSAND IN FIVE MONTHS IMMIGRATION

Ottawa, Sept. 29.—The department issued a statement to-day, nearing the close of the immigration season, to which importance is attached by comparison. Condensed, it says: The total immigration to Canada during the first five months, April to August, of the current fiscal year are 282,737, made up of 112,061 British, 63,721 Americans and 106,955 from all other countries.

During the five corresponding months of last fiscal year the total number was 242,699, composed of 96,142 British, 78,399 Americans and 68,158 from all other countries. The increase is 17 per cent.

MINISTER HAS AFFIDAVITS IN GIBSON CASE

FIFTY YEARS MORE FOR MONTE CARLO

Famous Gambling Resort Renews Lease With Prince of Monaco Who Is a Gracious Monarch

It is a little over fifty years since Francois Blanc made his deal with the reigning Prince of Monaco and set up his Temple of the Goddess of Chance, the most famous gambling rooms in the world. Even fifty years ago public [illegible] strongly condemned gambling, so an out-of-the-way spot had to be found by Blanc when he determined to establish gambling on a grand scale. In Prince Charles [illegible] [illegible]

III. of Monaco he found the man he had been looking for, Charles was a bonafide prince at the head of a free country, and he was also in very hard luck, being so badly pressed for money that he had been obliged to sell part of his territory to France.

So Blanc was able to make a bargain that was profitable to both. He paid a large sum of money down, agreed to pay all the expenses of the principality, and to hand over a certain percentage of his winnings in exchange for the exclusive privileges of gambling in the principality of Monaco, the rights to extend for fifty years.

New Agreement Made

The lease came to an end recently, but in exchange for a bonus running into the millions the Prince of Monaco extended it for another fifty years. This was a breach of faith, for it was only on the understanding that the bargain should be terminated at the end of the original lease that the present Prince of Monaco was recognized and received by Queen Victoria, by Emperor William and by some other monarchs, who saw in him merely the agreeable protector of a gambling game. The Prince, however, is so absorbed in his scientific studies that he is indifferent to the praise or censure of the world. Since his people pay no taxes and are all well fed and contented, they have no complaint to make, and since the gambling tables add yearly to the Blanc millions, he, too, is satisfied.

Blanc's Strange Career

Francois Blanc, the founder of the gambling industry, had a remarkable history. He was a Frenchman, and a broker. When he attempted to secure a seat on the Stock Exchange at Bordeaux his reputation was so unsavory that his application was rejected. Shortly afterward he moved to Tours, and he and his brother were placed on trial for bribing semaphore operators to transmit wrong messages. In those days the despatches on which the Stock Exchange business was transacted were sent by means of semaphores, and by bribing the men operating the signals the Blanc brothers put through what would now be called a wire-tapping game. The operators were convicted and imprisoned, but the Blancs escaped on a technicality. Francois, however, realizing that his reputation was against him in France, moved to Germany, and there went boldly into the business of running a gambling establishment. He operated a resort at Homburg for some time, and made a lot of money.

Gambler by Nature

Sentiment against the game was growing, however, and Blanc realized that it would not be long before the petty States that permitted gambling would be wiped out as political entities. So he began to look elsewhere for a site, and hit upon Monaco, a tiny principality which no other country envied save for its wonderful climate, and, finding the ruling prince in straits made the deal. Old Blanc is said to have been an inveterate gambler, and for hours would dice alone, his right hand against his left. Frequently he would play against his own tables, not stopping to realize that whether he won or lost he was playing against his own money. He acquired an immense fortune, and some of his children married into royal families. The only son, Edmond Blanc, is now the head of the gambling establishment.

Patron of the Turf

He is famous as a patron of the tu being by far the most importa breeder of racehorses in France. was he who paid a record price f Flying Fox. He made several v attempts to win the English Derb and has been a frequent starter the English turf. In France he h won all the great races, the Gra Prix at Longchamps no fewer than ni times. In spite of his wealth a his racing success he has been unab to secure admittance to the Frenc Jockey Club. He is said to feel t slight very keenly.

TORPEDOES ADD TO WAR'S HORRORS

Latest Pattern Bore Their Way Into Ship's Vitals Before Letting Loose Destruction

There was a time in the history of naval warfare when under water attack was frowned upon as not being quite in accordance with the ethics of the day. The contrary is true now. The torpedo and the submarine mine are very much in evidence in every scheme of marine attack and defense to-day.

It was only a few years ago that the automobile torpedo had an effective range of a trifle more than a thousand yards, and even at that distance its accuracy of travel was an uncertain quantity. Sometimes it went straight to its target, at other times it swept far off to either side, and once in a while it described a wide loop and came rushing back upon the vessel that launched it.

Admittedly destructive as its warhead charge of guncotton was, still these erratic performances caused grave misgivings. But the torpedo enthusiast was full of faith in his chosen weapon. The principal weakness was the steering apparatus which guided the torpedo after it had left the launching tube. In the last two or three years a good deal has been heard about gyroscopes—technical developments of the tops of our childhood. A type of gyroscope is now available which is strong enough in its corrective powers to control the travel of a torpedo for several miles.

After Longer Range.

But the capacity of the gyroscope outlasted or exceeded the running endurance of the torpedo's reserve of propulsive air. Here was an obstacle that dashed cold water upon the hopes of the torpedo man, but the chilling resulted in the shape of a brilliant inspiration.

Up to a point the metallurgists made it possible to fashion air flasks capable of holding air at a higher pressure; in other words, more air to supply the engines. But this did not add more than five or eight hundred yards to the effective range of the torpedo. This was no answer to the reach and accuracy of the rapid-fire gun.

Air when heated expands, but compressed air when heated is pretty nearly a dangerous double of powder and a lighted match. Just the same, a torpedo engineer devised a way to apply flame to the compressed air in the torpedo's flask, and he did this so cunningly that the rise of pressure above a certain point automatically checked the fuel of the flame and effectually prevented the tension nearing the bursting point. By expanding the air in this manner motive energy for far greater distances was generated, and this was done without increasing the size of the flask or the maximum practicable pressure of the confined air. It amounted substantially to giving the torpedo its second wind.

Turbine Power.

Compact and wonderful as the little reciprocating engine was that so long drove the automobile torpedo, it was only natural that the turbine should supplant it; and this is the motor now used in the latest of these weapons. The torpedo has grown from the 18-inch type of shorter length to the long 18-inch and 21-inch patterns of the present.

Likewise the charge of guncotton carried in the wicked head of torpedoes has increased, reaching to-day in the biggest torpedoes a weight of more than 300 pounds. Battle ranges have gone from 4,000 to 6,000 yards and an effective range of quite 8,000 yards has been promised.

All of these improvements have come to pass within the last few years and the torpedo has not only obliged the installing in bigger guns on battleships to stand off attack, but it has forced upon the naval constructor [illegible] changes of a vital character below the waterline.

Fighting Same Battle.

The torpedo and the defense against it are fighting the same battle that armor and shell have waged for years. The naval constructor has found ways of strengthening the underbody of big ships, so that the explosive gases of the torpedo's gun-cotton shall be robbed of their first violence by having guarded spaces of sufficient volume in which to expand. In this way the probable area of damage is restricted, the likelihood of a single torpedo sinking a ship through flooding much reduced and the chance of reaching the very vitals of a craft made well-nigh impossible. And now the latest and most deadly torpedo carries a "gun" which is fired when the torpedo's nose hits an obstruction. The shell is discharged with tremendous velocity and cuts out its way through a protecting net and burrows through several inches of armor plate before the explosion proper takes place. The ordinary torpedo explodes upon the instant of hitting the outer plating of a ship but the new torpedo goes of its deadly [illegible] with almost sinister [illegible] [illegible]. When it has penetrated far enough the [illegible] bursts with all of its [illegible] violence.

"A Progressive Peterborough"

Our Point of View

A friend of ours who said that in a moment of excitement he has lost his head, got angry when this g.f.j. advised him to advertise for it in The Times as a smooth, bald thing, for the return of which the finder should expect no reward, as it was valuable only for personal reasons and as a heirloom.

"What will the women of Holland do with the suffrage that has been granted to them?" asks our friend Miss Sadie. Well, our idea is that they may use it in a way to beat the Dutch, so to speak.

So many persons have come forward to tell of having loaned Governor Sulzer, of New York, large sums of money without receiving anything back in payment that we are forced to the conclusion that the Hon. Bill is a man of touching personality.

A Toronto preacher said: "I would rather see women going around naked than wearing the styles they do." No doubt about it, but that would be carrying the diaphanous idea a little too far.

While those national dressmakers, who are now assembled in convention, are about it they should show some consideration for the poor husband by devising a hookless dress and releasing him from the thralldom of hooking up his wife.

"Abraham knows why I did it," says Father Schmidt, the Roman Catholic priest, who murdered the young girl in New York. Maybe so; but Abraham is so far away that he cannot be interviewed, even by wireless and as Schmidt won't explain why he did it, the matter is likely to be as great a mystery as the identity of the individual who struck Billy Patterson.

Love must have a firm grip on the soul of a woman who waits two hours for a loafer of a husband to come home for supper.

Redistribution

At the next session of parliament a bill will be introduced providing for the decennial redistribution of the constituencies. Already there have been warnings in opposition papers to the effect that if the government attempts to play any gerrymandering tricks the bill is sure to receive short shift in the Senate. The Hamilton Herald (Lib.) thinks that such warnings ought not to be necessary. Probably they are not. We don't believe that Mr. Borden would countenance any redistribution measure which carves up constituencies unfairly, with an eye to party advantage.

That form of political meanness called gerrymandering is not only wrong; it is also inexpedient and unwise. Whatever advantage may be gained by it is sure to be outbalanced by the bad effect which it produces on political friends and opponents alike. Moral prestige is an asset which no government can forfeit, and any government which resorts to the gerrymander, has no right to lay claim to a high sense of honor and fairness towards its opponents. The odium of its act is sure to cling to it so long as it remains in power, weakening the confidence and loyalty of its friends and furnishing its enemies with a danger weapon. A government which does things on which its respectable friends are ashamed is a government which is in the down grade.

Redistribution should be made in strict accordance with the plan to be agreed upon by the premier and the opposition leader, or by a committee representing the government and the opposition. Should that procedure be followed, there will be no good reason for any such bitter feeling and invective as have been caused by former redistributions. A "square deal" all round will be found to be the best policy even from a party point of view.

Your Bad Taste In the Morning Is Due to Catarrh

Destroy This Poisonous Disease Before Your Health is Seriously Injured.

Perhaps you haven't thought of calling those unpleasant symptoms that affected your nose and throat by any particular name—but it's Catarrh just the same.

When the attack is severe, your eyes are watery and look weak. Your breath is offensive, due to inflammation in the nose and throat.

At last science has discovered a real remedy, a new scientific marvel which acts like no other Catarrh remedy on earth. "Catarrhozone" operates on a new plan; it is a direct remedy, goes instantly to the source of the trouble. Its rich, fragrant essences and healing balsams are breathed in vapor form through a special inhaler and give instant relief.

Catarrhozone doesn't stop at the relief stage—it goes further—keeps on going till a cure is effected. Bad cases are cured, as you can judge from the following letter:—"Every morning for six months last winter I awoke with a bad taste, an awful breath and stuffed up feeling in my nostrils," writes Rob E. Rutland, of Regina. "It was simply an awful case of chronic Catarrh. Relief first came from Catarrhozone. I used that inhaler twenty times a day and took it to bed with me at night. I am cured, and by the use of Catarrhozone stay well. Now I am free from irritable throat trouble, coughs, colds, headache, or catarrh."

No medicine on earth is so certain to cure every form of Catarrh or throat trouble as "Catarrhozone." Get the large $1.00 size, lasts two months and is guaranteed; medium size, 50c.; sample size 25c. all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

FROM WASHERWOMAN'S BOY TO A BRITISH MINISTER

"I came into the world with a struggle and I am still struggling."

There are doubtless few people in England to-day who have achieved a greater amount of success and popularity than the member of parliament for Battersea (London), that is, the Right Honorable John Burns, who made the above statement. Born in London in 1858, of most humble parents, he started life with little hope of becoming anything but a humble citizen. His mother was a hard working washerwoman and as a boy it was John's duty to carry home the washing when finished. At the age of 10 he started work at Price's Candle Factory at Battersea, and later was apprenticed to an engineer, a calling in which he became highly skilled rising to be one of the leaders of the great organization—the Engineers' Society.

In 1885 he started on his political career and ran as a Socialist candidate for West Nottingham, but was far from successful, he having failed to receive more than 600 votes. In 1889 he came forward as a leader in the great dock strike and was sentenced to a month's imprisonment for taking part in the Trafalgar Square riots. It was thought that this check would ruin his career but nothing daunted he came forward as labor candidate for Battersea, in 1892 and was elected. In politics he is a free trader, home ruler, and is a strong enemy of the race course and all gambling concerns. As a life abstainer he is always on the side of the temperance party.

In private life he is a sportsman, having in his younger days been a rugby football player, cricketer, sculler, and a boxer of no small merit, and when the weather permitted he was a conspicuous figure skating around the lake in Battersea Park. He is still a great admirer of his old pastimes and can be seen, whenever opportunity admits, as an interested spectator. One characteristic about Honest John, as he is usually called is that he always patronizes the cheap or cents and even at the theatre the gallery is his favorite seat. Standing not much over the average height he is broad shouldered, strong and active. Although having had no school education he is considered a well read man and his library is one of his chief hobbies and delights. His family consists of his wife and one son, who is like his father both in features and build. The one ambition of the elder John is to see his son follow in his footsteps.

"PETTICOAT" DAN

The Passing of a Peculiar Scottish Character

Petticoat Dan, a well-known Kirkintilloch character, died at the advanced age of 77 years. Dan dressed somewhat peculiarly, so far as his nether garments were concerned, for he invariably wore a woman's petticoat of a blue color. Dan was in receipt of parochial relief, but added to his income by taking in coals and other odd work, and very seldom was he turned away from a door, whether work was given him or not, without a copper or two, or a good meal. When the latter was provided Dan said grace which was a very peculiar collection of Biblical texts and curious sayings all mixed up, its recital occupying sometimes 10 or 15 minutes. Many stories are told of Dan. One is to the effect that being told by a small boy that a can of milk Dan was carrying was "rinnin' oot," the worthy turned the can upside down to see the hole. One day he was engaged to take in coals, but was long in coming, and another person was got to do the work. Dan arrived shortly afterwards and stood by with a very dejected mien. The lady came out to explain matters, when Dan burst out, "Oh woman, my heart's just like to break to see hoo thae coals is haunlt." Told that an asylum was to be opened in Bellfield (Kirkintilloch) for "a' the daft folk," Dan replied, "Aweel, they ma' be money left in Kirkintilloch." Visiting at a house in the district Dan was given a lighted lantern to help him to see his way home. He carried it to the end of the avenue, blew out the light, took the lantern back to the house and said to the inmates, "Thank ye kindly. I've seen fine."

Judge on Women's Dress

"I have heard," said Judge Crain the [illegible] Recorder, addressing the jury in a case in which evidence was given in regard to the wearing apparel of the accused, "that a good many ladies spend the sermon time in church in studying the dress of their lady friends. A new hat, a new bonnet, a new bow, or even a pearl pin [illegible], is written down in the tablets of their memory. Dress is a very great point with them, and to be an expert on such questions is one of the things in which women pride themselves."

Hatpin Danger

Notices have been posted in the Glasgow tramway cars calling attention to the danger to passengers by large pins projecting from ladies' hats. It is stated that a number of accidents have occurred, and the management accordingly request the attention of ladies to the matter to avoid further risks.

A SULTAN'S VIEWS

He Thought the Lot of Western Husbands Must be Lamentable

Another selection of chapters from the diary of Abdul Hamid appears in the The Review Nord and Sud giving his views on women. The ex-Sultan of Turkey says: "The countless divorces and scandals in Europe and America show that many men in those countries incline to polygamy. The west has an entire misapprehension regarding the position of woman in Turkey. Even though woman is fortunately debarred from taking a part in Turkish public life, and is compelled to leave everything to men she at any rate is an autocrat at home. As I observe the stern imperious facts regarding western women a comparison with them easily favors our women. Why do the people of the west criticise our women? Which is more sacrificing or more beautiful, the Oriental woman or the European? In Turkey woman belongs to her home, belongs to a man alone; in Europe she has too many liberties to remain womanly. If only half one reads in the newspapers and books about western women be true then the lot of the men there must be truly lamentable."

SOME ONE PLEASE ANSWER

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—From government returns I gather the following: At the late Dominion census I notice that the illiterates in Ontario amounted to 4.01 per cent. of the population, while in Quebec it is 15.64. That is in Roman Catholic Quebec where the education is absolutely under the control of the priests, the percentage of people who are unable to read and write is three times greater than in Protestant Ontario. Will some one please explain why this is so?

ARMED DETECTIVES GOT MAN SAID TO BE A NOTED DESPERADO

They Allege Their Midnight Quarry is Parker of Tennessee—Caught in Raid on Toronto House—Was Chased Into Canada—Agrees to Waive Extradition

Toronto, Sept. 28.—A few minutes after midnight four Toronto detectives, Miller, Young, Armstrong and McConnell, entered a red brick house which stands a few yards from the sidewalk at 319½ Clarens avenue. Every man of the four were heavily armed, for they were going to deal with a known desperado, a man said to be convicted of murder—Who, with the assistance of his two brothers, is alleged to have deliberately shot a fellow man to death. The one they were after was Archie Parker, of Nashville, Tennessee, and they say they got him.

Eight months ago Archie Parker, Brink Parker, and William Parker were convicted in Nashville of the murder of Jesse Calhoun. The three men rode into town one afternoon just before three o'clock. Calhoun was standing in front of the Sweetwater inn, a little frame structure which stands on one of the side streets. Without a word the three men drew their guns, all shot together, Calhoun fell. Then after emptying every chamber in their revolvers into the prostrate form, the three desperadoes, who were well mounted, fled to the mountains.

A pose was hurriedly gathered and the pursuit of the three begun. For three days the fugitives eluded the pursuers.

TALK OF LYNCHING

Then the pose came up with them one afternoon just before sundown. Another pistol fight took place. nearly starved and with all their ammunition gone, the three murders surrendered. They were brought back to Nashville. That night there was talk of a lynching party. They do those things in that country. The jail was strongly guarded and the trio were eventually placed on trial.

After one of the most sensational legal battles that ever occured below the Mason and Dixie line, the three were found guilty. In some manner they secured bail.

One day the three disappeared and though the officers of the law scoured the country far and wide they were never able to locate any trace of them.

PURSUED INTO CANADA

Finally a clew was secured. It was learned that the three had gone north. A detective was placed on the case and he followed the men through all the Northern States, learning that they had crossed the line and entered Canada. He arrived in Toronto some days ago and related this story to the police Department. Toronto detectives were assigned to the case, and it was learned that people answering the description of the three men had been living at the house in St. Clarens avenue.

Death however had cheated the law out of one of the trio, for William Parker was dead. He died in Toronto. Brink Parker had left the country and the only one left to be placed under arrest was [illegible], [illegible] Archie Parker. Brought to headquarters he admitted his identity, and consented to accompany the officer back to the south without fighting extradition.

EMPLOYED AS CARTER

According to the report which the police have received of the three they were known as fearless desperadoes in Tennessee. Quick with a gun and ready to shoot on the slightest provocation. They were suspected of many crimes which never could be proved against them. The Toronto officers were heavily armed and ready for any action on the part of young Parker when they entered the house, but he submitted quietly enough.

Since the trio have been in Toronto they have been employed as carters and have been passing under the name of Massey. The oldest brother was a man of about 35 years of age tall, broad-shouldered and weighing in the neighborhood of 190 pounds. Brink Parker the man who escaped, is about the same size as his brother although not able to talk, while Archie, the youngest of the three, is the weakling of the family. He is about five feet, seven inches in height weighs about 140 pounds, and but for the family likeness, bears no resemblance to his brothers.

POPULAR BRITISH LECTURER AN IRISH STAR GAZER

When Not Studying the Heavens He Indulges it Sport

Sir Robert Ball has been described as the most popular British lecturer of the day. This is a remarkable tribute, considering Sir Robert's subject is astronomy, which, in itself, does not usually create much interest amongst a general audience. The secret of his success is to be found in the fact that he is an Irishman well endowed with native wit and a pleasant voice.

A scientist whose training has been chiefly academic, Sir Robert has little of the professional manner. His love of open-air exercise has endowed him with a ruddy countenance, which, added to his genial, kindly manner, convey the impression of a philanthropic landlord. He was educated at the Universities of Dublin and Cambridge, and both Ireland and England have freely recognized his remarkable knowledge of astronomy. For eighteen years he was Astronomer-Royal for Ireland, and he is now director of the Observatory at Cambridge and Professor of Astronomy at the University.

Sir Robert Ball has presided over several learned societies and has written many books on astronomy. When not studying the heavens he finds recreation in gardening, golf, and cruising.

Marriage Feast Turned to Wake

From county Kerry a remarkable succession of events is reported as having occurred in a house situate between Tralee and Castle Island. The first event was the marriage of one of the members of the household. While a merry party the same night was in the height of the enjoyment of the wedding feast the guests were shocked to learn of the death in an adjoining room of a two-year-old child who had been ill for some time, but not seriously. The wedding party then resolved itself into a wake, the traces of the festival being removed. While the wake was in progress it was announced that a birth had just taken place in the house, the mother being a near relative of the family.

Ingenious Whiskey Selling

Patrick Triel was convicted at Glasgow of shebeening in a house at Renfrew place. The police were watching another house for another purpose, when they observed a long pole, to the end of which money was attached, being lowered from the window of a house two stairs up to the window of a house below. The accused was seen taking off the money and attaching in its place a half mutchkin bottle of whiskey. Later the operation was repeated. The magistrate imposed a fine of £20.

Athlete's Tragic Death

At one time a well known athlete, Mr. Leonard R. Wilkinson, J.P., of Lyndhurst, Hampshire, was found shot dead in a shed adjoining his house, with a gun by his side.

Tobacco by Aerial Post

Preferred to be a Man

When medical aid was called to "James Palmer," injured while working on a wherry at Derwent Lough, near Newcastle, the discovery was made that the individual was a woman. A stack of iron collapsed and knocked down Palmer in the morning. Other workers promptly came to the rescue, and clearing off he iron carried Palmer into a shed and summoned the doctor. Then the patient, painfully struggling for breath, appealed to the doctor to send the men away.

When the two were alone together Palmer made the astounding confession of her sex. She said she was a married woman with two children.

THE PEOPLE OF MARS

Plenty of Evidence That They are Highly Intelligent and Build Canals to Preserve Race

In 1877 the Italian astronomer, Schiaparelli announced that he had detected on the surface of the planet Mars an intricate series of lines which he believed to be canals. Their existence was not universally admitted and it was strongly contended that they were of optical production. Public attention and interest were greatly aroused when Professor Percival Lowell, director of the Flagstaff Observatory in Arizona, issued a bulletin containing photographs of the ruddy planet which he claimed as corroborating the objective existence of the canals and further insisted that it was the abode of a race of reasonable beings. Since then there has been considerable controversy about the canals and in an effort to arrive at a final decision investigations were started on an elaborate scale at Flagstaff under the direction of astronomers and astro-physicists who employed all the most recent methods of research. Dr. James H. Worthington in an article published in an English scientific journal [illegible] "that the engineers of the planet from the [illegible] of Flagstaff find abundant reason to believe in the existence of a highly developed and intelligent race, making a last stand against the [illegible] dangers of its world. The [illegible] canals are evidence of tremendous and united efforts to eke out the diminishing water supply to the last drop. In this struggle we see in [illegible] a forecast of what the earth must also become in the fulness of time." This contention is supported by the author by a description of the [illegible] and as much technical [illegible]. Dr. Worthington insists that there remains no rational doubt of the existence of a race of canal-builders on the planet Mars.

ANCIENT CHEESE INDICATES RANK

Oldest Swiss Families Have Most Ancient Cheese

The English, the Germans and the Norwegians are great consumers of cheese, but the people of Switzerland surpass them all. The cheese of Emmett is so hard that one is obliged to scrape it or cut off chunks with a hatchet, and its use is considered most important on all ceremonious occasions. The rank of a Swiss family is known by the age of its cheese, and the more affection or respect a guest inspires the harder is the cheese which is cut in his honor. It is said that there are families in Switzerland whose cheeses date from the first French Revolution, and these are served only at baptisms, weddings and after funerals. The larder in every family is guarded with care, and the cheese is named. Upon the birth of a new heir a cheese is made that takes the name given him or her, and that particular cheese is never in any circumstances cut until the boy or girl grows up and is married. On such occasions each of the guests takes a piece of cheese from the bridegroom and from the bride and drinks to their felicity, the cheese being held aloft.

one sold, and one which hangs unerringly to the failure of those who hold it. The man or woman who believes that human beings are no better than that, won't make the best of them, or of himself or herself either. "Don't expect too much, but don't expect too little of men or women," advised Lord Palmerston. "People are always running to one extreme or the other in too much or too little confidence in them. I have seen a good deal of gratitude and much ingratitude. I think I may assure you of this, that desert inevitably gathers to it those who remain true to it in every misfortune."—The Penny Magazine.

DR. DOUGLAS MAWSON

Dr. Douglas Mawson, Antarctic explorer, is a distinguished Australian who has achieved a brilliant record in Antarctic exploration. He accompanied Sir Ernest Shackleton in the famous expedition which in 1909 all but reached the South Pole. He was with the party which accomplished the first ascent of Mount Erebus, the greatest active volcano as yet known to exist on the Antarctic continent, and he was one of the three who fought their way through the southern mountains in the face of stupendous difficulties and incredible hardships to the South Magnetic Pole. He graduated with honors at Sydney before he was twenty, and then devoted himself to scientific research and geology. He acted as geologist to the Australian expedition which explored the New Hebrides. In the Shackleton expedition, as Sir Ernest has recorded, he was "physicist, magnetic geologist, and photographer."

He stands over six feet in height, and is "the embodiment of the best type that grows up in Australia."

BABEL OF WORSHIP

City of Jerusalem Has Variety of Active Members of Every Faith

Conditions of worship in Jerusalem to-day are peculiar, according to Thomas R. Green, who contributes an article on the subject to The Century Magazine. No city on earth, he asserts, has such a tumult of devotion, such a confusion of worship as the "City of Peace." In many ways it is essential that there should be all of the great substantial hospices, capable of sheltering and caring for the multitude of pilgrims who still, as in the ancient days, come from afar to worship in Jerusalem. They come from every nation in Europe, mostly in comparative poverty, making their toilsome way by personal exertion and sacrifice.

The roads leading from seaports are thronged with pilgrims, trudging their dusty way, sleeping beside the highway or in rude shelters erected for them, all with their faces set steadfastly toward Jerusalem. For these there must be rest and shelter and food, for which reason in the Holy City and at neighboring shrines huge caravansaries are sustained by the various national churches. More elaborate buildings, like modern hotels, exist for those who come upon a pious pilgrimage with ample means.

TIDE PERFORMS HARDEST PART

From the bottom of the Bay of Fundy come some of the finest grindstones in the world, and the manner in which they are procured is simple and ingenious, the stonecutters making the exceptional tide perform the hardest part of the work. When the tide is out, which happens twice a day, the workmen quarry the stones from the solid rock and fasten them to a big flatboat. Then in comes the tide, a mighty flood rushing in as though the great ocean had suddenly changed its mind. Wonderful sight it is, rising often as high as a house. And now the men have nothing to do. The tide lifts the boat, and up comes the stone with it. Boat and stone are then brought close inshore where the stone is removed at leisure when the tide is out.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Wharf Extension and Warehouse at Bracebridge, Ont.," will be received at this office until 4.00 p.m. on Tuesday, October 21, 1913, for the construction of a Wharf Extension and Warehouse at Bracebridge, District of Muskoka, Ontario.

Plans, specification and form of contract can be seen and forms of tender obtained at this Department and at the offices of J. G. Armstrong, Esq., District Engineer, Midland, Ont., J. G. Sing, Esq., District Engineer, Confederation Life Building, Toronto, Ont., and on application to the Postmaster, at Bracebridge, Ont.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed form supplied, and signed with their actual signatures, stating their occupations and places of residence. In the case of firms, the actual signature, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm must be given.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, equal to ten per cent (10 p. c.) of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

PETER THE GREAT GUIDES RUSSIA

The Will of the Czar Who Died in 1725 is Believed to be a Living Influence

For nearly two centuries Russia's political activity has been guided by a program formulated by Peter the Great. When he died in 1725 the great emperor made a prophecy that some day Russia would rule the world, and in his secret will he traced the steps the future czars must travel to accomplish that end. In the years since Peter's death many of his prophecies have come true. He said in his will:

"We must progress as much as possible in the direction of Constantinople and India. He who can once get possession of these points is the real ruler of the world. With that view we must provoke constant quarrels at one time with Turkey and at another with Persia * * * Moreover, we must take pains to establish and maintain an intimate union with Austria, apparently countenancing its schemes for future aggrandizement and all the while secretly rousing the jealousy of the minor states against it. In this way we must bring it to pass that one or the other party shall seek aid from Russia and then we shall exercise a sort of a protectorate over the country which will pave the way for future supremacy."

No diplomat of to-day could summarize Russia's activity in the Balkans ever more clearly. Servia, Montenegro and Bulgaria are jealous of Austria's creeping power and have turned to Russia for support. That is the protectorate. And as for future supremacy! Poland once turned to Russia as the Balkan States do to-day.

To Eliminate Austria

Peter the Great's dream was to make Russia mistress of the world. His entire plan worked to that end. First, he said, Russia must get Finland, Poland, the Baltic Sea and the Black Sea. These conquests are a matter of history. Then India and Persia were slated for overthrow. Russia has spread around the Caspian Sea, made Turkistan a subsidiary province and only last year went into Northern Persia. Only Afghanistan remains between Russia and India. Russian princes have taken German princesses as their consorts as Peter the Great counseled. Then he comes back to Constantinople. "We must make the house of Austria interested in the expulsion of the Turks from Europe, and we must neutralize its jealousy at the capture of Constantinople either by preoccupying it with a war with the old European states, or by allowing it a share of the spoil, which we can afterward resume at our leisure."

Peter the Great's plan to make Russia master of the entire world was:

"When Sweden is cut, Persia vanquished, Poland subjugated, Turkey conquered—when our armies are united and the Black Sea and the Baltic in the possession of our ships—then we must make separate and secret overtures, first to the court of Versailles and then to that of Vienna, to share with them the dominion of the world. If either of them accept our propositions, which is certain to happen if their ambitions and self interest are properly worked upon, we must make use of one to annihilate the other. That done, we have only to destroy the remaining one by finding a pretext for a quarrel, the issue of which cannot be doubtful, as Russia will then be already in the absolute possession of the East and of the greatest part of Europe.

A Good Dreamer

How nearly that dream materialized makes one of the most interesting chapters of Napoleon's life. The French Emperor and Czar Alexander I. met on a raft in the middle of the Niemen River at Tilsit and drew up plans to divide the world. Austria was then a cat's paw for Napoleon through his marriage with the archduchess, Marie Louise. But England was too strong on the sea and Napoleon began to play Russia false so Alexander broke his pact with the French Emperor.

Peter believed the future supremacy of Russia was ordered by providence. He saw the star of empire working its way north—Egypt, Chaldea, Babylon, Greece, Rome, France, England and then the hordes from Russia and northern Asia. He said:

"I look on the future invasion of the eastern and western countries by the north as a periodical movement ordained by providence, who in like manner regenerated the Roman nation by barbarian invasions. These emigrations of men from the north are as the reflow of the Nile, which at certain periods comes to fertilize the impoverished lands of Egypt by its deposits. I found Russia as a rivulet. I leave it a river. My successors will make of it a large sea, destined to fertilize the impoverished lands of Europe, and its waters will overflow in spite of opposing dams erected by weak hands if our descendants only know how to direct the course. I give those counsels to their watchfulness and care, as Moses gave the Tables of the Law to the Jewish people."

A new thrill for Alpine tourists is a ride through midair from one point to another on a suspended cable starting from Chamonix, at an altitude of 3,000 feet, according to the Glacier des Bossons at 7,800 feet, with two intervening stations and a grade of 50 to 80 degrees. The line will be finally extended to the Aiguille du Midi, at an altitude of 11,800 feet. Each carriage will accommodate 24 persons, and three cables are used.

In France 21.34 per cent. of the population is engaged in farming, while in England the percentage is 8.58.

GARDEN YIELDS GRIM SECRET

Skeleton Discovered In Tiled Pathway—Story of a Missing Son and a Quarrel

The discovery of the skeleton of a man under the garden path of a house at Poole has caused a great sensation in the Dorsetshire town. Until recently the house was in the occupation of a retired prison warder named Alfred Westbeare, who lived alone. When the discovery was made neighbors recalled the fact that a few years ago a son of Westbeare, who had been staying with his father suddenly disappeared, and it was inferred that the skeleton was that of the missing man.

John William Rowlands, the landlord where the skeleton was found, told the court that when Westbeare was seriously ill he did his best to get the address of the man's wife, but he declared: "It is no use. She is too old. She is seventy-two years old, and no use to me. My son and daughter I do not think will care about coming, and they cannot afford to do it." Referring to being separated from his wife, Westbeare said: "We could not get on, and decided to separate mutually and peaceably."

Josiah Brown, builder, said he had done some repairs to the house occupied by Westbeare, and, when completing the inside of the house, he asked Rowlands if he could see what was the matter with the back yard. Eighteen inches below the surface he came across several human bones. They were covered with a layer of broken bricks. He gave information to the police. Next morning he removed other remains.

Maud Mary Westbeare said that her brother, Alfred Charles had some years ago come to visit his father but disappeared. Her mother later wrote to her father about the missing son, and the father replied something to the effect:

"You need have no fear; your son is at rest."

On her father's death Miss Westbeare and her brother Frederick went to Poole for the funeral. They found in the house two suits of working clothes, and a best suit belonging to her missing brother.

Dr. Oliver, police surgeon, Poole, said the skeleton found in the yard was that of an adult male. There were no signs of any fracture of the skull or injury to the bones, upon which there was little flesh. The body was buried 2 feet 6 inches deep, and was lying full length face upwards, with the arms straight by the sides. Under the shoulder-blades some fragments of clothing were found. The body must have been buried some years.

Levi Leakham, who stated he had lived next door to the house for fifteen years, said Westbeare was a queer man, and very seldom spoke. Some years ago Leakham noticed that the old man was frequently pulling up the tiles outside the back door and relaying them. At one time the old man had all the tiles up and piled against the coal-hole; for a long time witness thought he did it for amusement. Westbeare also used to barricade off that part of the place with a curtain, and had sat in the yard in a bath, sometimes all night, as though keeping guard.

Westbeare used to walk about in his rooms the whole night. Leakham did not believe he undressed for years; he always had his boots on.

The jury returned an open verdict, the foreman stating that there was no evidence of identity nor of the cause of death.

PAINTING THE NEW BARN

Should be Thorough—Use Paint or Whitewash for Old Buildings

Paint adds value to the farm, but paint gives much better service if not put on till the lumber is thoroughly dry. New lumber is apt to be green, and if painted before dry the oil does not get into the wood, and as a result the paint will often blister and peel off. The unpainted new barn doesn't look well. But let it stand a season and then give it two good coats of oil paint, and it will hold its color for years. It will take more paint to do the job then, but it will pay in the end.

And just a word in regard to the old buildings. When real estate men want to sell a building they give it a coat of fresh paint. It pays to have the buildings well painted, even though they are not for sale. A building lasts longer if it is well painted, as well as impressing every one favorably who looks upon it. A farm never appears prosperous with unpainted buildings. Where paint cannot be afforded a barrel of lime and a whitewash brush will do. Whitewash is the poor man's paint. Whitewash is a germ killer. It purifies and sweetens and lightens up the inside of the barn. It is cheap and easy to apply. Get a barrel of quicklime, put about two pailfuls in a half barrel, fill the half three-fourths full of water, mix with a hoe till thoroughly dissolved, and apply while still hot. Skimmilk instead of water or buttermilk will improve the whitewash. A spraying machine will aid greatly in applying the whitewash, but a brush will do the work all right. Every building on the farm in which live stock are kept should be whitewashed every year.

Brazil is Progressive

A great scheme of public improvements, involving an expenditure of $20,000,000, has been inaugurated in Sao Paulo, Brazil, which is the capital of the coffee-growing State which bears the same name. The name of this city is known to comparatively few persons, but it is a thriving place of nearly 400,000 inhabitants, and it is estimated at the present rate of growth the number will reach the million mark in fifteen years. The improvements contemplated include impressive boulevards, asphalted streets and garden effects at different points throughout the city. The place already has an opera house which is as fine as any other in the world, and the old cathedral will be torn down and a two-million-dollar structure erected in its place. The latter item is not included in the twenty million which is to be devoted chiefly to municipal improvements.

Read the Following Letter Re SANOL From Professor Auguste Derome.

Albena, Man., July 7th, 1913.

To the Sanol Manufacturing Co., Ltd.

975 Main St., Winnipeg, Man.

Dear Sirs,—These few lines are to add to my testimony in regard to the benefits derived from your SANOL. Although still ailing from lumbago through the lack of proper care of myself I find SANOL a panacea not to equal it for instant relief from excess of Uric Acid in the blood. The trouble with many of our people we do not give the treatment long enough a trial to make a cure, and sometimes people quit taking the medicine when they should continue it until all the symptoms of pains in the loins, or rheumatic pains have left them.

I have recommended the SANOL to an old friend of mine who is about 70 years old, and who was troubled with his inability to pass water without experiencing excruciating pains. After having taken two bottles of SANOL he got relief; he then ordered a half dozen bottles from your company, and I told him if he would continue he would get better altogether, which to my delight he has done.

I have, certainly, no flattery to make, but it is my duty to report it to the sceptic public that do not believe in a scientific epoch-making panacea for Kidney trouble.

May you live long to manufacture SANOL and help suffering humanity.

SANOL, positive cure for Gall Stones, Kidney & Bladder troubles, Gravel, Rheumatic pains, and diseases of Uric Acid origin. Price $1.50.

Plucky Messenger Girl

The plucky act of a Post Office messenger girl who made her way through floodwater four feet deep to deliver a telegram is reported from Maddercar, Scotland.

The Dunkeld road was under four feet of water, and the Scottish messenger [illegible] was [illegible] with the importance of delivering her message at all costs. She had to pass through the water for a considerable distance, but succeeded eventually in delivering the telegram.

Gordon College Success

Lord Kitchener in forwarding his report on the Gordon Memorial College at Khartoum to the governing body stated that the practical utility of the institution was securely established and showed very satisfactory results. Over 500 students had passed out of the college, and are employed in various capacities by the Soudan Government. Among these not more than 10 per cent. failed to give complete satisfaction. The whole tone of the natives has been raised by the example set by these educated and trained youths, who now occupy positions of some importance throughout the country.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at the office of any Local Agent of Dominion Lands (not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties.—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required in every case, except when residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside of his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Six months residence in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and 50 acres extra cultivation. The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land after report by Homestead Inspector on application for patent.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price, $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

WELLAND SHIP CANAL.

Section No. 2.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

SEALED TENDERS, addressed to the undersigned and marked "Tender for Section No. 2 Welland Ship Canal," will be received at this office until 12 o'clock noon on Wednesday, October 15th, 1913.

Plans, specification and form of contract to be entered into can be seen on or after this date at the office of the Chief Engineer of the Department of Railways and Canals, Ottawa, and at the office of the Engineer in charge, St. Catharines, Ontario.

Copies of plans and specifications may be obtained from the Department on the payment of the sum of fifty dollars. To bona fide tenderers this amount will be refunded upon the return of the above in good condition.

Parties tendering will be required to accept the fair wages schedule prepared or to be prepared by the Department of Labour, which schedule will form part of the contract.

Contractors are requested to bear in mind that tenders will not be considered unless made strictly in accordance with the printed forms, and in the case of firms, unless there are attached the actual signature, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm.

An accepted bank cheque on a chartered bank of Canada for the sum of $150,000.00 made payable to the order of the Minister of Railways and Canals, must accompany each tender, which sum will be forfeited if the party tendering declines entering into contract for the work, at the rates stated in the offer submitted.

The cheque thus sent in will be returned to the respective contractors whose tenders are not accepted.

The cheque of the successful tenderer will be held as security, or part security, for the due fulfilment of the contract to be entered into.

The lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

By order,
L. K. JONES,
Asst. Deputy Minister and Secretary.
Department of Railways and Canals,
Ottawa, 22nd September, 1913.

Newspapers inserting this advertisement without authority from the Department will not be paid for it.—[illegible]

A Princess' Suite

Since her sixteenth birthday, Princess Mary has had her own suite of rooms at Buckingham Palace. There is a delightful view from their windows up Constitutional Hill.

Princess Victoria, aunt to the young Princess, was the former occupant of the suite, and everything was freshly decorated for their present possessor. The prevailing tone is suited to youth—that of pink and white. The schoolroom where Princess Mary pursues her studies has white walls and woodwork, with delightful old chintz hangings and cushions of pink and white, the volumes in the bookcase being bound in rose-colored leather.

The many-hobbied Princess shares the family liking for the camera, and snapshotting forms one of her most pleasant recreations. But, strange to say, she does not shirk developing the pictures herself. As she remarked to a visitor:

"It's the best part of the fun!"

Cleansing a Carpet

To brighten a carpet, take five or six large potatoes and scrape them finely into a pail of water. Stir, then strain. Wring out a cloth in the water and rub the carpet. Rinse the cloth as soon as soiled. Should soot fall on a carpet, sprinkle dry salt thickly over it, leave it for a few minutes, then brush up. No trace of the soot will remain.

Elaborate Evening Gown

This evening gown is of white chiffon embossed in velvet leaves and flowers in shades of orchid and mauve. It has a long pointed train over white charmeuse sash giving the much-desired uncurved line at the hip. A wide collar of white chiffon outlined in rhinestones forms the only trimming on the bodice, the neck of which is cut in a low V front and back. The bust line in front is finished with a single velvet orchid outlined with diamonds.

The peculiar form of the collar and the way in which the tunic is draped in the front carries out the straight lines which adds to the wearer's height.

LOVE LED TO DEATH

Beautiful Girl Who Eloped With Officer Left to Starve

Two French soldiers passing through the Forest of Fontainebleau discovered the dead body of Mlle. Jeanne Eude, the beautiful young daughter of a retired Army doctor. The discovery proved to the awful end of a love story.

A few months ago Mlle. Eude left her home in Versailles to visit a relative at St. Quentin. In the evening she telegraphed to her father from Paris that she had missed the train, and would not start for St. Quentin until the next day.

After that nothing more was heard of her, and, on being notified of her disappearance, the police discovered that Mlle. Eude's telegram to her father had been handed in at the telegraph office by a young man whose description corresponded to that of a lieutenant who had been stationed at Versailles, and who had recently resigned.

It was also ascertained that a couple resembling Mlle. Eude and the lieutenant had been seen at La Rochelle. The obvious conclusion was that the doctor's daughter had eloped with the lieutenant. When her body was found an examination showed that she had died of hunger.

It is not known how Mlle. Eude reached the lonely spot where she died, but the police believe that after eloping with the officer Mlle. Eude was abandoned by him, and, not daring to return home and face her parents, and having no money left, wandered about aimlessly until death ended her sufferings.

Watch Yourself

When you sit, do you lean forward from the waist as though your backbone were a curved line? Bending should be from the hip joints, not from the waist.

Do you settle down in a sort of meaningless way when you stop to speak to a person on the street, or "flop" in a cramped heap when you slip into a chair to rest?

Do you walk with your shoulders back and your head in its proper place, or do they droop miserably as if you had lost every vestige of energy?

The muscles of the body are wonderfully pliable and seem almost anxious to follow your bidding.

Give them a chance to make you proud of yourself.

A little practice will do it. Watch yourself!

Long Bodied Men

Man wants to eat over-much without getting over-fat!

If he is short-trunked he cannot do it. If he measures far from his last rib to his hips, he is pretty certain to fatten up as he passes across the youth line.

The men with endurance and vitality are usually those with long trunks. They are the men who can work hard and long and keep it up for successive days without tiring out. They are the men who "sit high," as the saying goes.

Invention of Shoddy

Shoddy was invented and the first two machines installed for its production in England 100 years ago this year.

Gained in Weight, Digestion Restored Health Renewed

Here is More Proof of Quick Cure For All Folks That are Weak, Ailing, Nervous.

More Praise for Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

"For a period last summer the thought of food excited feelings of nausea," writes Mrs. C. A. Dekes, of [illegible]bury. "The heat had made me listless and the distaste for food reduced me to condition of semi-starvation and brought me to the verge of nervous collapse. Tonics were no use to produce an active desire for food. The doctors told me my liver and kidneys were both at fault, but the medicine they gave me were too strong and reduced my strength so that I had to abandon them. At the suggestion of a friend who had been cured of blood and skin trouble, I began the use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. The difference I first noticed was that while they cleansed the system instead of feeling weaker I felt better after taking them. Indeed their activity was so mild it was easy to [illegible]. I had taken them [illegible] they seemed to go right to the liver, and in a very brief time not only did all [illegible] of nausea disappear, but I began to crave food and I digested it excellently well. Then I began to put on weight until within [illegible] months I was brought to a condition of good health. I urge Dr. Hamilton's Pills for all who are in poor health."

Get this best of all medicines to-day and refuse a substitute for Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. Sold by all druggists and storekeepers, 25c. per box or five for $1.00. Sent postpaid by The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Mr. Jewett, in explanation says that he took this step in retaliation for what he claims to have been a long drawn out process of suspicion, distrust and espionage, of which he has been the victim, and to which he objects in this manner.

A Case of "Sour Grapes."

The Lindsay Post, in referring to the statement that Peterborough is likely to have a new post office at an early date, says: "Peterborough seems to be able to get 'plums' every time it reaches out for them. Lindsay has been praying for a clock in the post office tower for some time but the prayers are unanswered."

Mr. Smith's Modesty.

Bobcaygeon Independent: A Montreal Bishop denouncing the indecency of women's dress, said the prevailing styles must be banished. The Sporting Editor of this great journal says he is not going to be the man to object, if the banishing stunt is to be carried any further, though he had the idea that the good bishop might have recommended more clothing and more material in the clothes. Another Reverend gentleman in the States says that he would prefer seeing women go naked than in their present styles. It is strange how these things go sometimes.

Hotel Purchased.

Mr. Charles Perry, formerly of the Royal Hotel, has purchased the Turner House and will convert it into an up-to-date hostelry. It is Mr. Perry's intention to build a large dining room at the south of the present building and also add about twelve bedrooms. The work will be proceeded with as rapidly as possible. The hotel formerly belonged to Mr. J. J. Turner, of Peterborough.—Cobourg Star.

At Last.

After nearly four years of weary waiting a start has at last been made on the street paving. All last week a gang of about 30 worthy sons of Italy were busy tearing up the old roadway on Hunter street, from Water to Aylmer streets. The cement mixer which was brought to the city a few days ago, was put into commission on Saturday, a real and earnest work commenced. A bed of cement approximately five inches deep has already been laid from Aylmer street to just across the bridge. After the whole work of cementing has been finished and the material sufficiently hardened, the road will be opened for traffic as it is impossible to get the asphaltic machine here for a time, as the contractors Messrs Foley and Gleeson, propose to finish up the work in Lindsay before removing here. From appearances the road even when opened will not give much encouragement for traffic—pretty bumpy.

MATRIMONIAL

Williamson—Boundy.

A very pretty wedding took place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. John Boundy, Cobourg road, when their only daughter, Ethel Fanny, was united in marriage to Mr. Walter Edmund Williamson, son of Mr. Williamson, of Peterborough. The bride, who was unattended, was given away by her father, and was dressed in Messaline silk of pale green trimmed with Irish point lace. The bride's bouquet was lily of the valley and maiden hair fern.

Rev. Mr. Going, pastor of the Methodist church, officiated. Mr. Vernon Fisk, cousin of the bride, played the wedding march and at the close of the ceremony sang "Oh Promise Me." The bride's gifts were numerous and useful. About thirty guests sat down to a sumptuous wedding repast, at which the bride's health was drunk. Among the guests were friends from Fullarton, Woodville, Argyle, Peterborough, Toronto and Port Hope. The happy couple left on the International Limited for an extended tour of Western Ontario.—Cobourg Star.

DEATHS AND FUNERALS

Mr. A. G. Gilbert.

The death occurred in Ottawa of Mr. A. G. Gilbert, a former resident of Peterborough, at the age of 76 years. The late Mr. Gilbert was a brother-in-law of Mr. Sheriff Hall, and had lived in Peterborough in the early sixties. He went to the front as a volunteer in 1866 and was at Ridgeway. Several years ago he became director of the Poultry Department at the Dominion Experimental Farm, and his visits to Peterborough in an official capacity will be remembered by many in the city. A year ago he retired from his connection with the Department on account of ill health.

Mr. George Wybling.

The death occurred yesterday morning in the Protestant Home of a very aged citizen, in the person of Mr. George Wybling, aged 84 years. [illegible] is known of his history and he has no relatives here. He was, when his health permitted, a regular attendant at St. John's church. The funeral will be held this afternoon to the Little Lake cemetery.

WARSAW.

Mrs. A. Rowe, of Dummer, was visiting friends in Smith last week.

One of the best colts seen at Lakefield fair was that of Mr. W. G. Kidd's, Dummer, brought out to show by Mr. Rowe.

Mr. W. J. Kidd, of Dummer, has gone to New York for a visit.

Mrs. Gordon, of Warsaw, is nursing in Lakefield at present.

10 CENT "CASCARETS" IS YOUR LAXATIVE

Best Liver and Bowel Cleanser and Stomach Regulator in the world—Work while you sleep.

Get a 10-cent box.

Put aside—just once—the Salts, Pills, Castor Oil or Purgative Waters which merely force a passageway through the bowels, but do not thoroughly cleanse, freshen and purify these drainage organs, and have no effect whatever upon the liver and stomach.

Keep your "insides" pure and fresh with Cascarets, which thoroughly cleanse the stomach, remove the undigested, sour food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will make you feel great by morning. They work while you sleep—never gripe, sicken, and cost only 10 cents a box from your druggist. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never have Headache, Biliousness, Coated Tongue, Indigestion, Sour Stomach or Constipated Bowels. Cascarets belong in every household. Children just love to take them.

Our farmer friends will be pleased to learn that the Canadian Bankers' Association have appointed a committee to more fully investigate the loaning of money to farmers with which to continue threshing.

The reception to be given by the Women's Teacher's Guild to the new teachers in the city has been postponed from to-day until to-morrow evening. It will be held in the kindergarten room of the old Collegiate building. A cordial invitation is extended to all the women teachers in the city.

From reports noticed in several of the district papers it would seem that the burglaries committed in Peterborough were some of a series conducted by a gang of orderly thieves. Reports from Belleville indicate that a barber shop was entered and $50 of stock taken, and at Campbellford, a factory was broken into and a fight with the night watchman followed, but nothing was missing. It is quite probable some of the gang will find themselves within the clutches of the law shortly.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. Richard Hall was in Toronto on Friday.

Rev. Dr. Symonds returned to Montreal Friday night, after spending the past two weeks in the city.

Mr. Ernie Langford and Mr. Colin Lees leave for Queen's University to-day to resume their studies.

Mr. Bert Bellegham, Bank of Montreal, is spending a few days visit in the city with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. Bellegham, Hunter street.

Messrs. Jack Harstone, Ray Scott and H. Eastwood are leaving for Toronto University to-day to enter their sophomore year.

Messrs. Wilfred Stratton, Gordon Matthews, Meredith Huycke and Stanley Walsh of Peterborough leave for Toronto to-day, to begin their courses at the University.

Mr. Charlie Parsons, who has been teller in the local branch of the Bank of Commerce for the past year and a half, has been transferred to Montreal, where he will join the staff of the Bank in that city.

Mrs. George Syer, of McDonnel street, has arrived home after spending a couple of weeks with a brother and sister and their families in Malone and Burke, N.Y. She attended Malone Fair and had a very enjoyable time, it being the place where she spent most of her girlhood days.

POLICE COURT NEWS

There was a large docket at the Police Court, and a large amount of fines were collected on Saturday.

Albert Nightingale and Sid. Anderson, were charged with being disorderly in a public place, a Chinese cafe, which ultimately cost each of the defendants $6.75.

Herbert Sweeney, a respectable-looking young man, was charged with vagrancy and was remanded until to-day.

Robert Sheridan, charged with vagrancy, was, on the request of Chief Thompson, remanded until Thursday next.

A case of great interest will be heard to-morrow, when Garnets [illegible], is out on bail, charged with seduction and also procuring drugs for a female with the intent to interrupt a miscarriage. Mr. G. N. Gordon is acting for the accused.

The Bovey case was again aired in court, but no judgment was made, as it is not positively known, whether or not an election was made. The case will receive the Magistrate's decision.

MUSIC and DRAMA

"THE PINK LADY."

The greatest musical comedy success of late years has been "The Pink Lady," which was produced at the New Amsterdam Theatre, New York City, and ran there for an entire season. At the conclusion of its New York run it was taken over to England and had a most successful engagement at the Globe Theatre, London. "The Pink Lady" was made into an English musical comedy by C. M. S. McLellan, who adapted it from a French farce by Georges Berr and Marcel Guillemaud, called "Le Satyre," he providing the book and lyrics while Ivan Caryll, one of the best known of English composers, furnished the music.

"The Pink Lady" is all about a young Frenchman who has sown his proverbial wild oats and who is about to settle down into married life. Wishing to have just one more fling with the gay life of Paris, he arranges to take luncheon in the forest of Compiegne with an old flame of his, a girl of the theatre, known as "The Pink Lady," and in order to do so, tells his sweetheart that he has a business engagement with a friend to whom he gives the fictitious name of Dondidier.

He is surprised at the restaurant by his bride-to-be, who has come thither with an automobile party and whose suspicions are aroused that he is not telling the truth. These are allayed, however, when The Pink Lady assures her that she is the wife of her lover's friend, Dondidier, and that she has only come to meet him to acquaint him with the fact that her husband's illness prevents his keeping the appointment. To the dismay of the young man he learns that there really is a Dondidier and that he is a respectable dealer in antiquities from Paris and that The Pink Lady has given his sweetheart the true address. Fearing that she will go there and discover the truth of his stories he hastens onto Paris to arrange with the merchant to keep up the deception. The old dealer refuses quite indignantly at first but finally consents when the young villain promises him a rare snuffbox for which he has long sought. When the young woman arrives Dondidier keeps up the deception as he had promised but only succeeds in getting himself into trouble with his own wife. Finally everything is adjusted. Dondidier's wife forgives him, the young girl condones her erring sweetheart and The Pink Lady goes back to her theatre.

There are many popular musical numbers in "The Pink Lady." A few of them are: "I'm Going to be Married in June," "When Love Goes A-straying," "The Girl by the Saskatchewan," "The Kiss Waltz," "Donny Did, Donny Didn't," "Hide and Seek," and of course the one number which has been heard every place, the waltz song, "Beautiful Lady."

"The Pink Lady" is being presented under the management of John C. Fisher, of Florodora fame, and B. D. Stevens, two of the best known New York managers, and it is promised that a splendid production of this entrancing musical play will be given.

In the company, which is an exceptionally large one composed of clever singers, dancers and comedians and a big coterie of pretty choristers, are, Olga De Baugh, James McElhern, Georgia Harvey, Elsa Von Bostel, Louise Kay, Abbott Adams, Mortimer Meyer, Chas. J. Hines, Russell Lennon, Alfred Derry, Alice Moffatt, Jack Ryan, Lucie Carter, and Jack Hall.

The big musical success with the same appointments as originally seen in New York is on view at the Grand Opera House next Friday, Oct. 3rd.

"THE ROSARY."

This well-known play of human interest to Peterborough theatre goers, was welcomed back again on Saturday evening by a good and appreciative audience. The piece was appropriately staged, and the touching story faithfully presented by a well-balanced company. Myrtle Bigden filled the difficult dual role of the twin sisters in a very effective manner, while Harry M. Royale, as Father Brian Kelly, carried his part through with a swing that took a responsive grip of his audience. Art Walton gives an ideal conception of the character Bruce Wilton, a devoted, but latterly suspicious husband and ruined man. Miss Dixie Dowe, admirably impersonates Leonora Watkins, the single maid who cannot be made to laugh until the final act, in which her father has "made heaps of money." Her comedy is very skilful and acceptable.

WHO IS VICTIM OF THE ACCIDENT

Many and Varied Reports of Identification of Lakefield Auto Accident Victim.

There still seems to be deep mystery concerning the identity of the unfortunate man who met death on the Lakefield road on Thursday morning while speeding around a corner and the following are extracts from our E.E.C's:

The body of the man who was killed in the auto accident near Lakefield is still unidentified, but it is thought to be John McDonald, who was an employe of the Oriental Hotel some fifteen years ago and of late a lumberman in the north country.—The Review.

The Examiner publishes that the man who was killed near Lakefield on Thursday morning, when Roland Darcy's car was overturned, was identified late last night as William Richardson, supposed to hail from Cornwall, Ont., and who had been working for several weeks at Patterson's lumber camp in the north country. The identification was made by William Cumbie, who came down from the camp to view the body, and who said that the dead man had worked beside him for two weeks, and was known in the lumber camp by the name of William Richardson. He had told the foreman of the camp that he came from Cornwall and the Lakefield authorities are endeavoring to-day to secure some information from the eastern town in regard to Richardson.

There are some mysterious features about the case. The dead man had given several names in Peterborough and Lakefield, among them McDonald. He was identified by Lakefield people as Ephraim Windover, who formerly lived in Peterborough, but who left here several years ago, on account of some trouble which brought him under police surveillance.

In all probability the matter will be cleared up at the resumed inquest, which will be held at Lakefield at 2 o'clock to-day.

BELFAST QUICK TO RENEW VOWS—NO COMPROMISE

Saturday's Spectacular Review and Sundays Solemn Services Beared Fruit—Will Never Have Home Rule

Belfast, Sept. 29.—Ulster's complete answer to the critics was given here Saturday when 12,000 splendidly drilled and determined men marched in review before Sir Edward Carson, General Richardson and Mr. F. E. Smith, led by officers of the active list to the tune of patriotic airs by massed bands.

Thousands lined the field of Balmoral grounds, thousands more unable to gain admittance.

The densely packed three mile route from the city cheered the marchers, and waved Union Jacks. It was a display of patriotism to affect the most cynical, but behind all was the grim determination to fight rather than be divided from the Union and subservient to a Parliament.

The Hills Echoed the Applause.

The applause of the crowd was echoed to the circling hills.

On the reviewing stand were Ulster's leaders forming a [illegible] to the Britain a few years ago.

Lords and ladies, officers and clergy, the Lord and Lady Mayoress, members of Parliament and men and women of humble birth.

The scene when Carson arrived punctually was thrilling and indescribable as Carson entered the reviewing stand bugles sounded attention.

Three Cheers for Union.

General Sir George Richardson called for three cheers for the Union. Then all heads were uncovered, and the band played "God Save the King." Sir Edward Carson addressed the regiments. He said the review was the natural outcome of their determination if Home Rule came to oppose it.

He knew they would never surrender.

"I promise you as long as you stand firm I and my colleagues will stand firm and we never will have Home Rule," he said.

Dr. Patterson said recently he had spoken at anti-Home Rule meetings in ten leading cities in Canada, from the Atlantic to the Pacific. In every place he met enthusiasm which almost equalled that in Belfast.

Hundreds of thousands in the Dominion and overseas lands were watching Ulster to-day. The crisis was the same that Ulstermen's fathers had faced when the Pope crowned kings and made nations.

Service in Ulster Hall.

The services on Sunday were of great enthusiasm.

All churches were crowded with thousands unable to gain admittance. The main feature was the united service in historic Ulster Hall, attended by 4,000, Carson, Smith and the Lord Mayor attending. The solemnity was emphasized by the absence of cheering as the mass stood when Carson entered.

The clergy were seated in provided pulpits draped with Union Jacks.

Rev. T. W. Davidson, who toured Canada recently, opened with prayer ending:

"Lord, give us wisdom and strength and equipment to meet what may occur."

"There were prayers for the King also that he may surround himself with advisers, who will understand, why we array ourselves in the Lords name; and forgive us our unfaithfulness but strengthen our hands." The tenseness and fervor of the silent men and women with bowed heads, showed how deeply religious conviction enter Ulster's fight.

Referring to Canada, "We know something of the Ne Temere decree in Belfast." He referred to the domination of the priests and concluded: "Over all sits the supreme old man himself, we asking no privileges, but asking equal religious rights similar to the whole Empire. There is not a Dominion but enjoys religious rights and liberty under the Union Jack.

Fight For Fathers' Cause.

"We, as sons of our fathers, are as brave, and we will fight for what our fathers fought for.

"We are unaggressive but determined."

Then came the hymn, "O, God. Whose Help in Ages Past," "Onward Christian Soldiers," by the United Protestant Choir of 1,500. The whole congregation sang "God Save the King," then standing up, lifted the right hand, swore to keep the covenant and to follow Carson.

The Freedom of the Press

A short time ago there was presented in the House of Representatives at Washington a "petition of the Holy Name Societies of the diocese of Newark, N.J., protesting against using the United States mail to injure the Catholic Church," and later on there was presented in the same place a petition from the same quarter protesting against the publication of the Menace. These petitions indicate very clearly the attitude of the Roman heirarchy toward the question of freedom of the press.

HOME RULE WOULD RUIN THE COUNTRY

Mr. Henry Roberts, of Cannington, spent a day or two in the city on his return from a trip to Ireland. He is the guest of his nephew, Mr. Donald Roberts, of this city.

Mr. Roberts says that if Home Rule comes into life in Ireland, it will provoke civil war and destroy the country which is now enjoying a full measure of prosperity. The people of Ulster are so strongly opposed to Home Rule, that they are willing to fight and even die in their efforts to prevent such an evil. "People wonder why Protestants are so hostile to the measure of Home Rule as that prepared by Mr. Asquith." "The answer is, that Protestants in Ireland, who know the power which the priests exercise, do not hesitate to say that 'Home Rule is Rome Rule,' pure and simple. Roman Catholics owe their first allegiance to the Pope and the heirarchy and after these are satisfied what is left goes to their country."

Mr. Roberts wished it to be understood that the men of Ulster desire no privilege or advantage over their Roman Catholic fellow citizens, but they will not be governed by a Dublin Parliament, which will be controlled by the Church.

PROMOTION FOR PRIVATE HAWKINS

Toronto, Sept. 30.—More honors have been thrust upon "Bill" Hawkins, the King's prize winner. He has been made Sergeant Instructor of Musketry of the 48th Highlanders which gives him the rank of staff sergeant.

He won the Regimental rifle match and the Davidson Cup at the Ranges on Saturday and "A" Company to which he is attached carried off the Company honors.

DRY DOCK PROMISED FOR PETERBOROUGH

The following letter has been received by Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., from the Department of Public Works and its contents should prove of great interest to steamboat owners as well as the general public, taking as they do participation in the subject which it materially means. Advices indicate that expropriation proceedings will be taken in a day or two immediately after which tenders will be called for as shown by the letter.

"Office of the Deputy Minister,
Ottawa, Sept. 27th, 1913.

Dear Mr. Burnham,—

I am in receipt of yours of the 25th instant, for which I thank you. Everything is now moving along nicely in connection with Peterborough Dry Dock. Engineer King telephoned yesterday that he would make every effort to have the plans and specification in our hands here at an early date; and as soon as these are printed tenders for the work will be invited.

Yours very truly,
(Sgd.) S. Hunter,
Deputy Minister.
J. H. Burnham, Esq., M.P.,
Peterborough."

This step will add greatly to the industrial aspect of our city, which is now generally recognized to be one which will show its greatness in the near future. Mr. Burnham himself is working hard to obtain various improvements which have been brought to his notice and he deserves the support which undoubtedly he will always receive.

COL. HUGHES ASKED TO SPEAK FOR WHOLE BRITISH EMPIRE

At Army Council Banquet—Notable Compliment Paid to Canada and Canadian Officers—Prince Alexander of Teck Suggested as Next Commander

London, Sept. 30.—Most of the Canadian officers who attended the manoeuvres return home at the end of this week. The party to-day goes to Woolwich, to-morrow to the Hythe School of Musketry and Wednesday will be the guests of the Admiralty at Portsmouth.

Colonel Hughes is yet undecided as to the date of his return, being busy with War Office conferences. A notable compliment was extended to the Dominion services at the army council dinner to the foreign and overseas services.

Sir John French requested Colonel Hughes welcome the foreign representatives on behalf of the British Government, this being the first time such a pleasurable duty had been entrusted to a Dominion representative. It is learned that several of the Canadian officers have asked Colonel Hughes to invite Prince Alexander of Teck to command a Canadian camp at an early date.

Prince Alexander was in close touch with the Canadian visitors during the manoeuvres. His charm of manner greatly impressed them. Colonel and Mrs. and Miss Hughes were guests of Sir Frederick and Lady William Taylor at Ascot during the week end.

THE WEATHER.

To-day—Mostly fair and about the same temperature.

NOTED S. A. BAND CONDUCTOR COMING

Great interest is being taken at the local corps of the Salvation Army; the meetings are drawing large crowds, and every department of the corps making progress. Adjt. and Mrs. McElhenny are doing a great work assisted by the local people. The band is still making progress both in its playing and in its membership. Two new men arrived last week. They hail from Ramsgate. One is a bass player and the other a fugal horn player. This brings the membership up to 44 players. Wednesday night is to be one of the band's big nights. Col. Mitchell, who is at present in Toronto making arrangements for General Bramwell Booth's visit to Canada this fall, will visit Peterborough Wednesday night. He is the Bandmaster of the Salvation Army's premier band, viz., the International staff band. They are a picked band of musicians, and Col. Mitchell, their leader, has been described as the Sousa of the S.A. Band. The band under Bandmaster Pulyer will meet him at the Salvation Army him at the C.P.R. local on Wednesday evening. He will be escorted to the Hall, where the band will give an up-to-date musical evening. This will be a rare treat for Peterborough citizens. The Colonel will be master of ceremonies and his presence alone should ensure a very profitable evening. After the meeting the Colonel will conduct a rehearsal with the band, and the band will escort him to the midnight train, on which he will travel on, way back to England.

GAME OF CARDS RESULTED IN BATTLE ROYAL

Toronto, Sept. 30.—As the result of a drunken quarrel over a card game, Giuseppi D'Allesandro, of 40 Terauley street, is in the General Hospital with a slash in the back of his neck extending from ear to ear, while six of his compatriots are held by the police on a charge of disorderly conduct, and among them the police believe they have the man who did the wounding.

Practically all day the house at 33 Terauley street, where the affray occurred, had been the scene of a gambling party in which about 40 Italians had taken part. The quarrel appears to have arrisen over an accusation of cheating. The fight commenced with fists, as the weapons. The men surged out into the back yard to finish the combat. In the melee some person drew a knife and slashed D'Allesandro. Neighbors telephoned to the police and Detectives Wallace and Newton and Acting Detectives Oulder and Strohm and Constable Ough hurried to the scene gathered in all the Italians they could find.

Constable Ough found the injured man in a serious condition in the kitchen and immediately rushed him to the hospital. There it was found necessary to use fifty stitches to close the wound. This morning he was reported to be improving and the doctors say he will recover if blood-poisoning does not set in.

In the police court Francis Rocco faced a charge of wounding with intent to kill, while his five companions were charged with vagrancy. The Crown Attorney outlined the circumstances of the affray, and Magistrate Denison granted a remand in the case of Rocco until next Friday. The other prisoners will appear again on October 1st.

This afternoon it was stated that the condition of D'Allesandro was very critical.

SITUATION IS FAR MORE SERIOUS THAN IS REALIZED

In This Country—So Says Lord Northcliffe Regarding Home Rule Question

London, Sept. 30.—"The expiration of two years will see the end of the home rule trouble in the old land, but what the outcome will be no one can even guess." This was the opinion expressed to a correspondent by Lord Northcliffe, the head of a chain of newspapers throughout England as he stopped in Toronto for ten minutes on his way from Montreal to the west.

"The Home Rule situation is far more serious than seems to be realized in this country," he continued. "The dangers which threaten are real and not fancied dangers. If there is a tendency to discount or disbelieve the stories of unrest in Ulster, it should be remedied. The recent developments there are more than alarming.

"There really are a large number of armed troops in Ulster now, ready I may say and Home Rule to consider a fact of most terrible significance. Everybody in England is beginning to realize the same thing. England has come to regard the situation now more as an English problem than as one for Ireland only, as indeed it is." Lord Northcliffe will return home by way of New York after a hurried visit to the west.

CHINESE LOAN AGREEMENT IS PRACTICALLY DISSOLVED

Great Britain Withdraws Her Support From Quintuple Financial Monopoly

London, Sept. 30.—A practical dissolution has taken place of the Chinese loan agreement by which the five powers concerned, Great Britain, France, Germany, Russia and Japan, gave a monopoly to certain banking groups for all Chinese loans and from which the United States Government withdrew its support.

The British Government took the initiative in the dissolution of the agreement because of the failure of the other powers to observe its spirit. They had made of the agreement according to the British official view, simply an instrument against the interests of British financiers.

The five powers mentioned shall act together in making loans to the Chinese Government for general administrative purposes, but each of the powers has been left free to support any of its citizens in floating loans for railroads and other industrial projects and for provincial purposes.

The declared object of the original agreement, it is pointed out here, was to prevent an international scramble to lend China money, but such a scramble is in progress, and the dissatisfaction of British financiers that their Government is using its influence to prevent them from bidding, has compelled the British Foreign Office to withdraw from the quintuple monopoly. Its support had heretofore been given to those banks participating in the quintuple loan to China.

STEALS $1,400 TO GO TO OXFORD CONFESSES; EMPLOYER TO HELP

Youthful American Plans to Attend English University and When Trusted With Big Sum Cannot Resist Temptation—Gets Help From Unexpected Source

New York, Sept. 30.—In order to satisfy his ambition to enter Oxford University, Wilbur Foerste, a 17-year-old errand boy, stole $1,400 from a Cleveland, O., department store last Saturday, he told detectives to-day who arrested him on his arrival from the Ohio City. Foerste explained that he planned to sail on the Mauretania on Wednesday for England and to enter a preparatory school to fit himself for a course in Oxford.

When an assistant cashier in the store gave him the $1,400 to take to the office of the chief cashier Foerste could not resist the temptation to satisfy his ambition, he told his captures and cramming the money in his pocket he started immediately for New York.

Young Foerste will be arraigned on a charge of grand larceny and will be held to await the arrival of officers from Cleveland with requisition papers. Foerste said that he would plead guilty on his return to Cleveland and throw himself on the mercy of the court.

Cleveland, O., Sept. 30.—"If that is true—if the boy really wants a University education and has the mental qualification I'll see that he gets it", said Chas. [illegible] Jr., vice-president of the department store from which Wilbur Foerste ran away Saturday with $1,400.

TARIFF REPORT IS SHOWING SOME CONSIDERABLE CHANGES

Washington, Sept. 30.—The conference report on the Underwood-Simmons Tariff bill, representing the final adjustment of disputes between the Senate and the House over the former's amendments, was made public to-day when the Democratic managers submitted it for the first time to their Republican colleagues on the conference Committee.

In the form in which the Tariff bill ultimately will go to President Wilson for his signature, it carries many changes from the original Underwood bill passed by the House last May.

Income Tax Increased.

In a summary of the agreements that have been informally announced from day to day during the conference work the report shows the following important alterations of the original Underwood House bill.

The tax rate on incomes above $75,000 was increased by a graduate scale from 3 per cent. to 7 per cent. and the income tax exemption reduced from $4,000 to 3,000. Articles added to the free list include pig iron, ferro manganese ore, cheap grades of bronze, oils and other food stuffs, in which flour, flax, hemp, sugar, refining machinery, school text books, sand blast machinery, indigo dyes, photographic moving picture films, cement asphalt and many other articles.

A new classification for woollen stockings, gloves and mittens makes a reduction from the house rate on those valued at less than $1.20 a dozen and an increase on those above. Angora wool and articles made from it, were given a higher duty than in the House bill.

In many of its more important amendments to the bill, the Senate was successful in convincing the conferees that the changes should be accepted. These include the heavy increase in the tax rate on large incomes, the postponement of the date when free raw wool and reduced duties on woollen goods should become law on that trade may readjust itself, the transfer to the free list of pig iron, ferro manganese ore and cheap grades of iron and the reduction of duties on food products and many other articles.

CANADIAN FARMERS HELPED BY POSTAL REFORMS

System of Rural Mail Delivery Greatly Extended and Many New Post Offices Established

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Sept. 29.—What the Hon. L. P. Pelletier has accomplished since coming into power constitutes an excellent commentary on the business ability of the Postmaster-General. What he has done for the farmer shows his willingness to run his department for the service of the people and the creation of the rural mail routes, particularly has been steadily developed.

System Is Growing.

There were 1,400 rural mail routes in operation in Canada on September 1st last, serving nearly 70,000 homes. In addition 811 new routes were under advisement, so that there are nearly 2,400 routes either already established or about to be set up, and nearly 90,000 farm houses are receiving mail at their doors. When the present government came into power in October, 1911, only 416 routes, serving 16,000 homes, were in existence.

New Post Offices.

In addition, Hon. Mr. Pelletier, since entering the office has opened 1,300 new post offices, as well as 675 new money order offices and 300 postal note offices. From October 1, 1911, to the present time, the amount remitted by money orders shows an increase of $20,000,000 as compared with the previous eighteen months, of 29 per cent. The number of money orders in this period increased by 2,700,000, or 36 per cent. The amount remitted by postal notes during the same period, shows an increase over the previous 18 months of $1,000,000, or 19 per cent.

SPORTS

The athletic enthusiasts of the city especially those who are interested in Rugby, will be sorry to hear that Mr. Fred Craig, manager of the local team, has resigned his position as such. He states no reason. The club will indeed be losing a valuable man, both as player and otherwise, as Mr. Craig was generally recognized [illegible]

OLD QUEBEC DAYS

Bostonnais Invasion Recalled by Finding of Rebel's Expense Book

Mr. Thomas O'Leary, assistant librarian of the Chateau de Ramezay, Montreal, unearthed a very interesting document, the "Expense Book of John Halstead, Commissary under Benedict Arnold, before Quebec, 1775-76." It consists of the commissary expense book of the Commissary to [illegible] Benedict Arnold, when he kept [illegible] at Quebec after the [illegible]. It is a pocket memorandum, [illegible] and end May 17th, 1776. They go to show that large sums of money were disbursed for the purchase of beef and other supplies, and that, to give the invader his due, he paid his way to this extent at least, and did not live at the expense of the inhabitants as it may possibly have been assumed.

The little book is in excellent condition, when it is remembered that it was with difficulty that the American soldiers at Quebec took even their bodies back. The wonder is that the book should have survived the perils and dangers of that unfortunate expedition. But more wonderful is the fact, that the book should have found its way back to the very locality at Quebec, where it had been in 1775 and then to the Chateau de Ramezay the headquarters of the Continental army in 1775-76.

Although this account of purchases of provisions for "Les Bostonnais," is nameless as to signature, it can be no other but that of John Halstead, a Quebec rebel. It gives the names of his comrades who were no doubt chased out of Quebec with him by Lieut.-Governor Cramahe and General Carleton.

According to Historical Document No. 8, of the Literary and Historical Society of Quebec, John Dyer Mercier and John Halstead, two citizens of Quebec, purchased in the year 1774, a water lot on the river St. Lawrence under Cape Diamond at Quebec. On this they constructed a wharf 130 feet long, and in the fall of 1775 put up the frame work of a strong warehouse. The invasion of the Bostonnais stopped the work of construction by the hurried flight of Messrs. Mercier and Halstead, who were rebels. The former seems to have been a particularly trusted friend of Arnold, who sent him a letter on the 10th October 1775, from Dead River by the hands of an Indian named Aegeas, informing Mercier of his coming with 2,000 men to attack Quebec, and requesting him to forward provisions and supplies to the Chaudiere river. Fortunately this letter was delivered to Lieut.-Governor Cramahe.

This probably accelerated Mercier's exit from Quebec, if Cramahe's proclamation of 12th September had not already done it. However, nothing more was heard of Mercier until the end of the war, when he petitioned the Governor through his agent, Dechenaux, for the return of his property.

Nothing was heard of the two rebels until 1784, when they jointly laid claim to their property, demanding from the Government rent for its use since they abandoned it; also compensation for the frame work of the store which Carleton had used for construction of batteries, etc., behind the Hotel Dieu, St. John's, and St. Louis gates.

They claimed $1,200 damages from the Government but the final award made after a long delay in 1797, was $4,425, from which the Government deducted the total cost of the improvements to the property, $3,315, leaving to Halstead and Mercier, a balance of $149.

Dwindling Vaccination

At a meeting of the Radnor and Machen District Council Dr. R. O. Barnard, the medical officer of health, said vaccination was gradually dwindling to vanishing point in the district. In the event of an outbreak of smallpox the position would be critical.

TINY WIRE STRAND CROSSES ICY WASTE

Telegraphic Work in the Far North Means Much Hardship

From Ashcroft, on the old Cariboo road to British Columbia, winding northward for 2,500 miles, runs the Yukon telegraph, the most remarkable and romantic telegraph line on the continent. Its origin was like no other; its operation never had and perhaps never will have an analogy; its service to mankind has certainly never been surpassed.

The visitor rafting his goods into the lone north land seeking a gold claim in the bed of a rivulet, or staking his future on a free farm and a muscular back, may jeer at the low straggling poles with the wire sagging down like the domestic clothesline back home. But when he tastes for a month or two the supreme isolation of that infinite silent wilderness, that pitiful strand of wire will size up as a strand of gold.

The Yukon telegraph was born in the feverish days of 1898, when it seemed that half the country was turned northward to wrestle with the fickle god of Chance. In those days it had two kinds of stories to deliver, one of the "lucky strike," transforming a penniless tramp into a millionaire; the other of some mute tragedy of the wayside, wherein a discouraged adventurer wrapped himself and his hopes in the snows by the trailside and left the remainder to Providence.

To-day when the reckless glories of that "wickedest camp on earth," have given away to a standard of respectability and a firm obedience to law and order, the little Yukon telegraph tirelessly fulfills its duties. Now, however, it flashes a new code of success, the code of the pioneer farmer whose cottages are fast trailing up the northern valleys, searching out the last choice spots in Canada where the speculator has not stuck his sign board. In a year the Dominion Government loses about $30,000 on the line, but as an old northern traveller says: "It is the best $30,000 ever invested."

Links With the World

The route of the line is almost parallel to that weird and abandoned survey of the Western Union half a century ago, when that company after the breaking of the Atlantic cable in 1860 decided to lay a land line through Alaska and Siberia to Europe. Over $3,000,000 was spent on the line when the company recalled the plans having in the meantime picked up its Atlantic cable again. Some of its engineers and line men were then so far inland that it was nine months from the time the order was sent until it could be delivered to them. For many miles portions of the Western Union wire are now being worked as an auxiliary by the Dominion Government.

At intervals of from 17 to 50 miles the operators live out their lonely and dangerous lives in their roughly built cabins. That each operator should be an expert lineman is a necessity of the task, and those with the long sections located on flat lands are given a horse to assist in the inspections. In the mountain districts much shorter sections are in an operator's care, and in the depth of winter he is called upon not infrequently to bring the snowshoes across treacherous areas to repair wires.

Lives of Isolation

In some districts winter departs for only two months in the twelve, so that day and night, month by month, the deadening loneliness of perpetual snow threatens to drive a man into melancholia. It is a heavy test of human endurance, not so much in the times of activity as when the monotony of existence turns a week into an eternity. Twice a year the supplies of food are "packed" in, and then the operator and his visitors exhaust the possibilities of conversation. For the rest of the time it is only a break in the line that gives a man a chance to meet his comrades. When that significant accident occurs, he loads his tools on his back and marches forth in search of the interruption.

Two of the worst foes of the mountain operator are the forest fire and the avalanche. Again and again their depredations sweep away poles and wires, demanding heroic service of the linemen to restore normal conditions. An eyewitness of one of these storms described it as an avalanche of ice and snow that had swept great rocks and giant trees like matchwood before it down the mountain side. The slide measured 1,200 feet across and 30 feet deep. It could have buried out of sight a good sized town. Yet when it was necessary to re-establish the wires and poles ripped to shreds in its thunderous course, the linemen took it as "a little incident" scarce worth writing about to headquarters.

WOMEN RUN A BANK

They Made a Big Success of It in London

The possibilities of work in a bank as a career for women have been demonstrated by Farrow's Bank for women, which was inaugurated in London a couple of years ago, and which, after being managed entirely by women, proved so successful that it was transferred to enlarged premises in the very heart of the West End.

"Our success is largely due to the hearty support we have received from women," said Mrs. Kate Reilly, the manageress.

"The eagerness with which women of all classes and from all parts of the Empire took up the idea of an institution devoted entirely to their needs was in itself a proof that Farrow's novel departure was fulfilling a long-felt want. Our bank gives women the privilege of consulting one of their own sex over their business affairs.

"The business transacted is exactly the same as that transacted by any other joint stock bank, and the fact that all our staff consists of women is good evidence that one sex is not more gifted than the other in accuracy and a head for figuring."

HINTS FOR THE HOME

Torn music can be mended easily by the use of transparent sticking tape which is sold on spools.

Do not use the attic as a storehouse for rubbish. When you are through with an article give it to somebody who will benefit by it; or if it is useless, burn it.

Do not use washing-powder or soda when washing gilded china as these cleansers will soon remove the gold. A mild white soap is preferable.

To laugh instead of cry run your horseradish roots through the meat grinder instead of grating them.

If casters slip out of the furniture, wrap the shanks with elastic bands before returning them to their places.

An old chair may be converted into a comfortable seat for a baby. Saw the back off, turn the chair upside down and place a soft quilt inside for baby to sit on. A few clothespins to stick on the rounds of the chair will afford much amusement for the little one.

When sheets wear thin in the middle, cut them in half down the middle and sew the outside edges together; they will wear twice as long.

When a kettle is badly burned, do not fill it with water, but set it aside to cool, then put in a handful of washing soda and water and allow it to boil for an hour or more.

To absolutely prevent wrong bottle tragedies, tie a little brass bell around the neck of every bottle containing poison.

A new use for a medicine dropper is that of using it to evenly distribute hair tonic. Fill the dropper with the tonic, and parting the hair at close intervals, press out the liquid and then rub.

"A Progressive Peterborough"

Our Point of View

A Chicago doctor says: "Women will all be bearded in another century." What a bright prospect for the safety razor trade, if for nothing else.

Says a headline: "The Thaw Case May Last for Years." If it does all of us who can afford to do it will the back-to-nature movement and seek a lodge of some vast wilderness.

As a result of the vigilance of the health authorities it is now difficult to sell bad eggs. But this g.f.j. might venture the assertion that entirely too many of them are being electrocuted too often.

The bank officials are authority for the statement that those suspicious looking American nickels are perfectly good money, and we are glad to hear it. This great family journal is not much frightened at the prospect of getting stuck with a counterfeit $20 bill but the menace of bad nickels makes the situation desperate for him.

We judge by the comment of Western newspapers that it will be interesting to hear what the Liberal members of parliament, who fought for reciprocity to save the farmer from ruin, will have to say when they find there is going to be no ruin.

We are astonished to hear that the natives of Australia did not invent the boomerang. But if they didn't the inventor must have been some politician of early times who got the idea from the results of shooting his mouth off.

According to our observation, [illegible], golf is a game in which you knock a little ball around a large pasture and count how many strokes it took to get it into nine holes. After doing this the player retires to the clubhouse where he puts away his golf balls and proceeds to fill up on highballs. Handling the latter, [illegible], is the most satisfactory part of the game.

The days of autumn are not melancholy, or at least they should not be. Nature does not die: it merely goes to rest. She takes in the symbols of her utmost fecundity, and changes not the essentials, but the outward aspect of things. But she gives ample recompense. She lifts the pall of heat and humidity and drops a mantle of refreshing coolness which gives a new zest to life, a greater interest in pleasure, in books, music, and even in the pursuit of some [illegible].

If Breathing Is Difficult, If Nostrils Are Plugged You Have Catarrh

At Last a Remedy that Already has Permanently Cured Thousands.

Perhaps you haven't heard of the new remedy—it's so pleasant to use—fills the nose, throat and lungs with a healing balsamic vapor like the air of the pine woods. It's really a wonderful remedy—utilizes that marvelous antiseptic only found in the Blue Gum tree of Australia.

The name of this grand specific is Catarrhozone, and you can't find its equal on earth for catarrh, colds, catarrh or throat trouble. You see it's no longer necessary to drug the stomach—that spoils digestion—just simply inhale the balsamic essence of Catarrhozone, which are so rich in healing that they drive out every trace of Catarrh in no time.

"I look upon Catarrhozone as the most valuable medical discovery of recent years," writes R. V. [illegible], of Prince Albert. "As a long sufferer from nasal and throat catarrh I was obliged to take considerable medicine and, although it helped me, my digestion was always disturbed and the catarrh didn't go away. With Catarrhozone it was different. It cleared my nose and throat of all phlegm and discharged a stuffy feeling in my nose and frontal headaches. To-day I am entirely free from Catarrh, and I use my Catarrhozone Inhaler a little every day in order to prevent the disease from returning."

With Catarrhozone experimenting ends. A permanent curative action results. The large size costs $1.00, [illegible]. Lasting relief from Catarrh last two months and is guaranteed. Small size 50c.; sample size 25c. All storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Decrease in Great Britain's Pauperism

The Local Government Board has issued a paper setting forth in striking fashion the benefit which the Old Age Pensions Act has conferred upon Britain's poor. Originally the act did not reach paupers at all, but in 1911 it was made to apply to them, and now we find that the decrease since 1906 of the number of persons over seventy years of age in receipt of outdoor relief has been 94.9 per cent., and of those receiving indoor relief 19.8 per cent. In March, 1913, the old age pensioners formed 60 per cent. of the people over 70 years of aged In some of the urban districts the proportion dropped below 30 per cent., but in some it reached nearly 80 per cent. The total sum paid in old age pensions in 1911-12 for England and Wales was nearly $40,000,000. The old age pension system is not ideal. It is admittedly but a makeshift to supplement a glaring defect in our industrial system, but it is certainly better than the poorhouse, with its everlasting stigma.

Prince George, B.C.

There is probably no large undertaking at present being executed in Canada which means more for the development of the Dominion than the construction of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, and this fact would appear to b) realized to some extent by the interest which is now being taken in the sale by the company of the Townsite of Prince George in British Columbia, which is being h?ld by auction in Vancouver this week. As only about one-sixth of the entire Province of British Columbia is accessible by existing Railway lines it is considered that Prince George will eventually become one of the largest cities on the Pacific Province on account of its central location in the largest fertile section of that part of the country. For many years the Hudson's Bay post has been located there and it will no doubt be the distributing point for years to come in connection with the development of the vast territory which lies beyond it. It is situated on the main line of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway almost midway between Edmonton and Prince Rupert, and it is expected that the construction of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway from the east will reach Prince George by the end of the present year, when train service will be established from Winnipeg and Edmonton and all eastern points.

On Friday, the 19th September, after the morning session of the sale of Prince George lots, 824 lots had been sold for a total of $1,000,000. The sale of Prince George lots was open in Edmonton, September 24th, and a sale of the lots will also be held the following week at Prince George.

The Passing of the Finger-Bowl

The Hotelkeeperspers' Association of the Northwest, in session at Minneapolis, decided to abolish the finger-bowl. It is frankly stated that many of the hotel patrons, descendants of the rude forefathers of the West, do not know what the bowels are for, and insist on drinking from them, as a kind of post-prandial ceremony.

Others who have been informed as to their use have dealt with them too roughly, have splashed about in them noisily as they washed their faces and whiskers, and indulged in other elaborate toilet operations. As a matter of fact, the finger-bowels have been a source of embarrassment and sometimes of wrath. But there is another reason for their abolition which is not mentioned by the Minneapolis reformers.

The presentation of the bowl by a polite waiter is a silent invitation for a tip, quite as much so as is the whisking of a Pullman porter. When the finger-bowl appears the waiter stands and waits and thus avoids the necessity of making a demand by sticking his palm out on a level with your vest pocket. We are sorry to witness the passing of the finger-bowl. Its use is pleasant and its appearance is pretty; but, in addition to its being the adjunct of an evil system, there is a large class of Americans whose education is not sufficienctly advanced to prevent them from mistaking it for a loving-cup or a wash basin.

PUBLIC OPINION.

The Times does not hold itself responsible for the opinions of its correspondents.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—We have often heard about Sir Wilfrid Laurier's desire to allay racial feeling in Canada, but I have no hesitation in saying that there never was a time when racial feeling is being appealed to more cunningly and more dangerously than at present, and I would call your attention to the following extract from "Le Canada," which is the most important of all the journals in the Province of Quebec standing for French predominance in Canada. Here is what The Globe reports that journal's language to be:

Montreal, Sept. 26.—The fight in Chateauguay, where a successor for the late J. P. Brown, M.P., is to be elected, is warming up. The Conservatives who [illegible] nominated James Morris, who was only forty votes behind Mr. Brown in the general election of 1911, are perfecting their organization and beginning a vigorous campaign.

The Liberals have not yet selected a candidate, though the popular choice seems to rest on [illegible] McGowan, who, however, it is said, does not want the honor. If Mr. McGowan cannot be persuaded to run, Mr. Edward Brown, a son of the deceased member, may be invited to stand. Either gentleman, the Liberals think, would make a strong candidate.

Le Canada has asked Chateauguay electors the following questions:

Have we to ask ourselves why our influence has come to nothing in Ottawa?

Why has our representation in the Government been reduced?

Why was the portfolio of Public Works taken from us?

Why did we lose the post of Solicitor-General?

Why have we lost positions in the civil service, and even on the Bench?

Why are we losing influence everywhere?

Why is the business of the Transcontinental taken to Toronto instead of Quebec?

Why was Hon. Mr. Pelletier replaced by [illegible]?

Why are our [illegible] and ill-treated at Ottawa?

[illegible]

tain classes of French people to rule at Ottawa regardless of the fact that we are all Canadians in common. However, since we see what this powerful journal demands it is a fair warning that no doubt Canadians and all other extractions will take note of.

OBSERVER.

REV. MR. WEBB'S SERMON.

Editor Morning Times.

Dear Sir,—The sermon by Mr. Webb in the Baptist Church tries to find fault with what was said at the Church at the Consecration. Now, no matter how hard Mr. Webb feels, he makes mistakes. The Catholic Church and clergy can make no mistakes, so what is the good of a man who makes mistakes, finding fault with men who can make none? The Father thanked all who had helped to make the procession and ceremony of respect a success, and thanked the Aldermen. He refers to and makes special mention of the Mayor, what the Mayor did was like the city recognizing the Church and the papal delegate. It was good and true. So Mr. Webb cannot find fault with that. St. Paul did not speak in English, so what is Mr. Webb kicking about? Latin is a language that does not change like English, and will never change. That is why it is used, and so in science works. Mr. Webb has the ceremony of baptism, but will not let others have their pet ceremonies. Sure one is as good as the other? If the letter killeth and the spirit alone give life, why insist on water? I think Mr. Webb has got out of his depth.

FIVE MINUTE CURE IF STOMACH IS BAD

When "Pape's Diapepsin" reaches stomach all indigestion, Gas and Sourness disappears.

You don't want a slow remedy when your stomach is bad—or an uncertain one—or a harmful one—your stomach is too valuable; you mustn't injure it with drastic drugs.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in giving relief; its harmlessness; its certain unfailing action in regulating sick, sour, gassy stomachs. Its millions of cures in indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis, and other stomach trouble has made it famous the world over.

Keep this perfect stomach doctor in your home—keep it handy—get a large fifty-cent case from any drug store and then if anyone should eat anything which doesn't agree with them; if what they eat lays like lead, ferments and sours and forms gas; causes headache, dizziness and nausea; eructations of acid and undigested food—remember as soon as Pape's Diapepsin comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. Its promptness, certainty and ease in overcoming the worst stomach disorders is a revelation to those who try it.

Health and Beauty Hints

By Mrs. Mae Martyn

Laura: You say you are under 45 and have wrinkles in spite of all your care. There is something wrong with the face-cream you use. I have found that to remove wrinkles and restore firm outlines and softness there is nothing better than this greaseless cream, which you can easily make yourself and which shows results right away. It does not induce hair growth. Mix 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine and one ounce almozoin in ½ pint cold water. Use it as you would any cold cream. This feeds and tones the skin—filling out wrinkles and hollows and reducing the pores.

Mrs. G. T.: Mix some water with powdered delatone and apply this paste to the objectionable hairs. After two or three minutes remove, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. This is entirely harmless and rarely requires a second application of delatone, excepting perhaps where the growth is quite stubborn.

Mrs. A. B.: Rub a little pyroxin on eyebrows and they will come in thick and have a beautiful gloss. Your short eyelashes will grow long and delightfully curly merely by applying pyroxin at lash-roots with thumb and forefinger. Be very careful not to get pyroxin where no hair is wanted.

Dora: That dry, unhealthy state of your hair is probably due to improper washing. Maybe you use soap? Avoid it and use only this simple, safe shampoo. Get a [illegible] canthrox from your druggist and dissolve a teaspoonful in hot water. This is plenty for one washing. It leaves the hair as soft as silk and extremely fluffy. It dries quickly and removes all oily dirt [illegible]. Perhaps you need a little tonic to brace the whole system. For this see answer to Thea.

Thea: Indeed you must get rid of that tired, depressed feeling, which [illegible]

[illegible] of the old-fashioned blood cleanser and tonic before each meal. This is splendid for that weak, worn feeling and restores the [illegible] to normal action and blood to a healthy condition. Its timely use will save [illegible] serious sickness.

Cornelia: You are having your troubles, certainly, if you are "very fleshy" and yet want to wear the latest styles. Have you ever heard of this sure and simple means of reduction? Dissolve 4 ounces of parnotis in 1½ pints warm water and take a tablespoonful a few minutes before meals. It is harmless and yet very effective and does the work so naturally as to leave no sagging or wrinkled tissues. It has the added advantage of requiring no strictness in diet or exercise.

Lulu: You can easily stop that dandruff and your hair from falling out if you will use a good tonic twice a week. Here is a splendid old remedy which costs little and which you can prepare at home. Mix together one ounce quinzoin, ½ pint alcohol and ½ pint water. Rub it well into the scalp two or three times a week. It is invigorating to the hair roots, encourages a luxuriant soft growth and affords immediate relief from the itching scalp. Be sure to rub it into the roots.

Lucy: Instead of clogging up the pores of my skin with face powder, I use this recipe in which I find a very dependable lotion, protecting, softening and beautifying the skin. Get 4 ounces spurmax from the druggist and dissolve in ½ pint hot water. Add 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine. Apply freely to your face, neck and arms. It will not rub off and gives an attractive, velvety fairness without that "made-up" look. This is inexpensive, too.

Gertrude: You will find it a simple matter to clear the eyes of redness and reduce the [illegible] if you will use this eye-tonic which can be easily prepared at home. [illegible]

CANADA IS MENTIONED IN THE IMMIGRDNT CASES

Unfortunate Wives Before a London Police Court Tell of Their Harrowing Experience

Canada as a refuge was mentioned in two cases in a London, England, court. In the first a woman asked the magistrate if he could assist her to get into communication with her husband. She said in 1907 they were all sent to Canada by an East End Emigration Committee, and after about [illegible] months her husband went out [illegible] with two other men, leaving her [illegible] with the children. When they learned this, the Canadian authorities shipped them home. Next time she heard of him he was an inmate of the City and County Hospital, St. Paul, Minn. He then asked for her address and promised to write to her. Two letters had been received from him since, but he had not written to her, although he continually inquired about her. In one of his [illegible] he said he might shortly return. He had not contributed anything to the maintenance of herself and child for over four years. Mr. Chester [illegible] remarked that he could do nothing, but the case was certainly a peculiar one. During the hearing of a summons for assault issued against [illegible] Burrows, the complainant [illegible], stated that he had offered to go to Canada if she would pay his fare. This she was quite willing to do provided he would leave the country at once.

The magistrate said that, even provided he could agree to such a course, defendant would only be sent back if he became unable to follow his employment. In any event, he (the magistrate) must hear the evidence. [illegible] Phelps said Mrs. [illegible] had a pitiful story. She was deserted by her husband some years ago, and Burrows now [illegible] to Canada. He then paid [illegible] the wife's [illegible] and later induced her to go through a form of marriage with him, although he knew she was a married woman. Owing to his continued ill-treatment she surrendered herself to the police, and eventually was sentenced to imprisonment for one day at the Central Criminal Court.

On the following day Burrows left her, taking $100 of her money, but returned after a few days' absence. He had threatened to shoot her, and tried to poison himself, had chased her with a hatchet, and recently had tried to hang himself, and had laid at night on a stone floor to try and make himself ill.

"I don't suppose the Canadians want you," said the magistrate to Burrows. "You will be bound over to be of good behaviour."

THE NEW VICTORIA BRIDGE

Some insist that modern Montreal was born in 1851, while others say that there was hardly a hint of modernity until 1860. The building of the Victoria Bridge and the consolidation of scattered railway interests, aided in the growth, which became marked in the important matters of new buildings and the opening up of new streets. The Hon. John Young had predicted the bridge, and was laughed at as a dreamer. The bridge was completed in 1860. It was superintended in its construction by the great Stephenson, who was presented with an address in the Mechanic's Hall by the late Mr. Henry Bulmer. The Prince of Wales, the late King Edward, came out to open the bridge. That visit is vividly remembered by many now living. The Prince, when in the city and country, won the good will of all by his urbanity and simple, unaffected attitude. At the time of the Prince's visit the population of the city was only 90,000 and the value of real estate $36,976,270. The ship channel showed eighteen feet and there were 141 manufactories in the city, of which the product was $5,290,961.

COMMISSION GOVERNMENT TRIED WITH SUCCESS

St. John, N.B., is a progressive Canadian city where the commission form of government has been tried with success, so it is said. The civic administration is in the hands of a Mayor and four commissioners, the Mayor elected for two years and the commissioners for four years, two retiring at the end of each biennial period. Any official may be removed from office by the recall, and popular government is further secured by the initiative and referendum.

Punishment to Fit Crime

Among Chinese coolies a favored method of stealing rice is to lean up against a pile of sacks and stick a tin tube through the sacking, the rice, which is dry, naturally flowing through the tube into the coolie's clothing. Flour is also stolen in this manner, and a common punishment in this case is to let the thief obtain a large quantity and then pour water into his clothing, which makes matters rather uncomfortable for him.

Old at Forty-five

"He's an old man, sir; forty-five years of age," said a constable at Belfast Police Court, referring to a defendant charged with drunkenness.

An Uncut Cake

An uncut wedding cake, nine years old, was one of the exhibits in a breach of promise case in New York, in which the plaintiff was sixty and the defendant eighty-three years old.

THE KNACK OF SWIMMING

Neccessary to Relax the Muscles and Avoid Sense of Fear

Leo Sorett explains the difficulty which the nonswimmer has in remaining afloat in an interesting article, "The Knack of Learning to Swim," as follows: "The non-swimmer, fearing the water, very naturally tenses his muscles as he struggles to keep his head above the water, until he is as hard as a rock, and, like a rock, he sinks; whereas the swimmer, having no fear, relaxes his muscles, and hence becomes buoyant. The explanation is a simple physical one. Tense, taut muscles increase the specific gravity of the body and make it sink in water; loose, relaxed muscles (given an ordinary supply of air in the lungs) will make the body float."

CANADIAN BOATS AND THEIR NAMES

Some Taken From Scriptures, Others From Mythology—the Whole Comprises a Big Fleet

A perusal of the Canadian shipping list introduces us to the names of over eight thousand sea-going, river and lake plying craft, proud ocean liners, razor-backs, canal barges, mud-scows, stone hookers, schooners, dredges and barks. These are not, however, 8,000 several and distinct appellations. Many of these titles are used many times over. But by observing the frequency of various names and classes of names one may venture upon some interesting speculations as to the character, habits and fancies of Canadian mariners, in fact, as to the whole psychology of Canadian navigation.

Scriptural names are found, such as Ruth and Beulah, Dorcas and Sharon, but not to any great extent. Classical history and mythology are written large upon our marine. The Argo, the first ship that sailed the sea—some, of course, will insist that the credit go to the Ark of Noah—is commemorated several times. Autolycus, known to readers of Shakespeare's Winter Tale, is also to be met with. Ajax, who defied the lightning, no doubt indicates a modern sailor's scorn of electrical disturbances. Our ships show a love of the Muses. Clio, the muse of History, and Calliope, the muse of Heroic Poetry, are now travelling the seas, but not Terpsichore, the muse of Dancing. There are as well some pseudo classics. The ship "Adelphi," the brothers, was probably not launched directly under classical auspices. It may refer to some sailorman's visit to the port of London and the Adelphi theatre on the Strand, which is reminiscent of Shakespeare's Comedy of Errors and the twin [illegible] of the [illegible] [illegible] Ariadne, who was [illegible], Sappho, Penelope and Medea are other familiar and genuine classical allusions.

Seen the Alphabet

The letters of the Greek alphabet are also used to vary the cruel monotony of such numerical titles as 1, 2 and 3. Opposed to the severely classical we find many names in a lighter vein, such as G. White, [illegible], Tubby C. Rose and Pulling Billy. Puddle Duck is not an inapt description of a stern-wheeler that is doomed to splash forever in the shallows and meanders of river navigation; but on the whole our sailors are not very successful in their attempts at jocosity.

The true spirit, however, of the sea and the no less tempestuous lakes is seen in such names as Challenger, Relentless, Intrepid, Defiance. The sailor deems no title too magnificent for his ship. There are dozens of Kings and Queens, Emperors and Empresses, Princes and Princesses working daily, hard and [illegible], in grime and coal dust, in the interests of Canadian trade. The lesser nobility are no less industrious. We find Dukes and Duchesses, Counts and Countesses, Lords and Ladies in the employ of our commerce. When the Angel of Gabriel, hundreds of Saints and a Cardinal submit to service it is not surprising to see King Daniel and King Josiah enlisted in the marine. King Edward and King George as well, are found on board ship and also King Pin, but to what dynasty he belongs is not stated. Not even a Dreadnought could object to such names of high distinction.

A Great Calling

Of strictly nautical titles, Captain, Admiral and Commodore are met with, the latter being the favorite. There are, in fact, a dozen Commodores, including Commodore Jarvis. There is no doubt, therefore, of the Canadian sailor's love for a title, but this, perhaps, indicates not snobbishness, but merely his conviction of the greatness and dignity of his calling. This belief is shown also in other names, sometimes boastful, such as Cock of the North and Beat the Wind, and in the names of heroes and strong men, for instance, Hercules and Samson, and of giants, such as Gog and Magog. Also, in selecting names from the animal kingdom, the sailor seems to prefer the animals that are noted for strength and swiftness, quite apart from any connection they may have with the sea. Tigers, Lions, Eagles and Caribou plow the Canadian seas, but no ship is called the Duck. Beaver, however, is a favorite title for good patriotic as well as aquatic reasons.

Guessing at Distance

An English police official took an automobile chauffeur into court, and swore that he was exceeding the speed limit, but on examination the officer was found to have such a poor idea of time and distance that the magistrate refused to hold the defendant. The officer was tested by asking him the width of the courtroom, and the answer was 30, whereas it was more than 50 feet. His idea of time was just as questionable.

Uncertain Honey Crops

While a Spring report is of value in determining the general prospect of the honey crop, there is no other farm crop so entirely dependent upon the weather conditions from day to day during harvest time. Any sudden change from hot to cold will often check the secretion of nectar in the flowers and reduce the expected honey crop by hundreds of thousands of pounds.

What Becomes of the Rains

The discharge of the Mississippi River at St. Louis is but little greater than the volume of rainfall over the State of Missouri alone, despite the thousands area drained by the river above that point.

MUSIC and DRAMA

"PEG O' MY HEART."

Oliver Morosco will present at the Grand Opera House, Saturday, Oct. 4th, matinee and night, his production of J. Hartley Manners' overwhelmingly successful comedy, "Peg O' My Heart," which has broken all the dramatic records of a decade in New York City.

"Peg O' My Heart," opened the New Cort Theatre, the most beautiful playhouse in America, last December, and instantly the little white marble palace became the focal point of audience-attention for the entire city. "Peg O' My Heart" rapidly crept up in public favor, until it was neck-and-neck with that supreme sensation, "Within the Law" and at last, in the early summer actually passed that piece in point of monetary figures, a lead which it afterward steadily maintained.

The extraordinary success of "Peg O' My Heart" is unquestionably accounted for by its humanity and wholesomeness—two elements which in days of bizarre mechanical plots and tawdry sexuality are put so far in the background as to be almost mythological.

"Peg," the little Irish-American girl, is as witty as a character of Thackeray's pen; she is as philosophical as a Balzac jeune fille, and has the quaint pathos of a Dicken's person—a being from a world of hard facts, certain sorrows and evanescent joys, with a touch of melancholy sobering the brightness of her laughter, and with smiles that tremble for the small irresponsible tears behind them.

"Peg O' My Heart" proved conclusively that New York can still laugh heartily and sincerely at humor which is not coarse, and that a simple story, directly and simply told, is more potent than any plot fantastic, complex or merely outre.

The following well known players are in the cast: Elsa Ryan, in the title role, Lillian Keller, Fanny Addison Pitt, Wilda Mari Moore, Henry Stanford, Lewis Broughton, Gilbert Douglas, Frank Burbeck and Gordon Darby.

CARE OF THE HANDS.

During the cold weather the skin on the hands is liable to chap and the finger nails are liable to become brittle and break off. Both give the hands a very neglected appearance, which with just a little care and time can be avoided.

Before retiring for the night rub cold cream or a preparation of rosewater and glycerine on the hands till it has been entirely absorbed, also after washing the hands rub on a bit of cold cream, not enough to make them oily but enough to soften the skin. This will prevent chapping.

A Boon to Humanity

Read the Following Letter Re SANOL From Professor Auguste Dorune.

Altona, Man., July 7th, 1913.
To the Sanol Manufacturing Co., Ltd.
975 Main St., Winnipeg, Man.

Dear Sirs,—These few lines are to add to my testimony in regard to the benefits derived from your SANOL. Although still ailing from lumbago through the lack of proper care of myself I find SANOL a panacea not to equal it for instant relief from excess of Uric Acid in the blood. The trouble with many of our people we do not give the treatment long enough a trial to make a cure, and sometimes people quit taking the medicine when they should continue it until all the symptoms of pains in the loins, or rheumatic pains have left them.

I have recommended the SANOL to an old friend of mine who is about 70 years old, and who was troubled with his inability to pass water without experiencing excruciating pains. After having taken two bottles of SANOL he got relief; he then ordered a half dozen bottles from your company, and I told him if he would continue he would get better altogether, which to my delight he has done.

I have, certainly, no flattery to make, but it is my duty to report it to the people public that do not believe in a scientific epoch-making panacea for Kidney trouble.

Not you live long to manufacture SANOL, and help suffering humanity.

SANOL, positive cure for Gall Stones, Kidney & Bladder troubles, Gravel, Rheumatic pains, and all ills of Uric Acid origin. Price $1.50.

SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES, only positive cure for Diabetes. Price $2.00.

Our Aim

It is the desire of the Peterborough Times to present to its readers a book that will be an everlasting memento of their loyal support. Webster's New Illustrated Dictionary meets every requirement and more firmly seals the bonds of friendship between its readers and their favorite Peterborough newspaper. Everybody who receives the book is delighted with it, and our friends are enthusiastic in their praise of this great educational campaign conducted by The TIMES.

Cleaning Game

To remove feathers from game or any kind dip in boiling water, then wrap in a thick cloth. The feathers are steamed loose in a very few minutes and the "pins" will give very little or no trouble.

Anti-Ants

To keep away ants, sprinkle a little powdered borax and sugar on pantry shelves or anywhere that the ants are troublesome and they will leave immediately.

Save the Nut Shells

Save your nut shells to put on the fire when you want a very hot oven for a few minutes, say when browning cookies or roasting potatoes with meat. The shells burn with a quick fierce heat and do not deaden a coal fire as does wood when put on for extra heat.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at the office of any Local Agent of Dominion Lands (not sub-agent), on certain conditions.

Duties.—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required in every case, except when residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside of his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Six months residence in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and 50 acres extra cultivation. The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land after report by Homestead Inspector on application for patent.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price, $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

LIGHTNING ON MOUNTAINS

Much More Severe in the Higher Altitudes

As one climbs up to a mountain top the danger from lightning is [illegible] rapidly, and, as a rule, the observatories located on the mountain tops are rather uncomfortable places of residence, as discovered by scientific gentlemen who have had the experience of a winter on a mountain top. It is evident that ordinary lightning rods are entirely inadequate to carry off the enormous discharges of the mountain thunderstorms. There are several observatories on Mont Blanc and at one of them, that of [illegible], there have been bombardments, during which the interior of the place was filled with ribbon-like streaks of electricity and balls of fire which moved silently from point to point. Other observatories have been repeatedly struck, although what was regarded to be adequate protection has been provided. In contrast to this there is another observatory which has never been visited by lightning in the 13 years of its existence.

Softening Gloves.

If black kid gloves or calf kid boots have become hard, put the gloves on the hand and apply in that position (as if washing the hands) as much camphorated oil as the leather will absorb; then take off and hang to dry and also allow the camphor to evaporate. With boots rub in well with the hand the same kind of oil. This gives the original suppleness to the leather.

Stockings should be washed in a fresh lather of tepid water; if washed in water previously used for other garments, stockings have bits of [illegible] sticking to them almost impossible to shake off when dry.

To keep the cut edge of cheese from hardening one need merely smear a little butter over it and so keep it from the air.

The Queen's Dolls

Queen Mary sent three of the largest and handsomest dolls ever seen in public to the "Truth" Doll Show at the Royal Albert Hall. They were naturally placed in the most prominent position amongst the 5,000 dolls on view.

Her Majesty's dolls each stood 42 inches high, and were specially dressed to the Queen's order to represent England, Scotland, and Ireland. England was in soft white robes, with pink roses in her hair and a branch of them in her hands. For Bonnie Scotland an effective Tartan was used with the snood over the shoulders and a handful of heather, while Cold Ireland was a winsome figure in dark frieze, with a bunch of shamrock. The splendid dolls were intended eventually to be donated to some of the institutions in which Her Majesty is interested.

The Canary's Health

Never let a birdcage hang in a room where the gas is alight, unless it is exceptionally well-ventilated. The air near the ceiling is always the most impure at night. Set the cage on the table, or, better still, on the floor (presuming you have no cat), and you will find the bird's health improve.

Salt Bed in the West

The discovery is reported of an extensive salt bed at Kwinitsa, Mile 63 on the main line of the Grand Trunk Pacific east of Prince Rupert. The importance of this find lies in the fact that about the only other deposits of commercial value in Canada are situated in Ontario at Kincardine, Goderich, Windsor, Parkhill and on Lake Huron so that, so far as the western Provinces are concerned British Columbia may be the distributing centre for this essential of the culinary art.

ELECTRIC CLIPPER

For Horses, Not Men, and Does Its Work Easily and Swiftly

One of the latest of electrical appliances is the electric horse clipper. The clipper has a long cord which is reinforced by a heavy string [illegible] to keep it from twisting or breaking and no special wiring is necessary to use it. Just plug into a socket that has 110 volts and there you are. A thick handle affords a firm, comfortable grip and as the jaws work automatically all the user need do is guide the implement. The carbon brushes are accessible and easily replaced, adjusted or cleaned. The housing is dirt and dust proof, which prolongs the life of the motor contained within. Incidentally, this housing is of aluminum, which is strong enough for such a purpose, yet light enough to make easy handling. Furthermore, the motor is short and handy to clip the horse's legs.

Are You Drowsy, Tired, Worn Out?

HERE IS GOOD ADVICE TO ALL WHO FEEL AS IF THEIR VIGOR AND LIFE ALL OOZED AWAY.

This Condition Can be Quickly Cured by a Good Cleansing Medicine.

Your experience is probably somewhat similar to that described by Mr. J. T. Fleming in the following letter from his home in Lebanon: "I think I must have the most sluggish sort of a liver. In the morning my mouth was bitter, and that bad, sick feeling that tells you, "No breakfast needed here this morning." A cup of coffee would sort of brace me up, but in two hours I was disposed to quit work, all energy having oozed out of me. Supper was my only good meal, but I guess I didn't digest very well, for I seemed to beat the band. A friend of mine put me wise to Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I think they must have taken hold of my liver, perhaps my stomach, too, because at the very start they made things go right. Look at me now—not sleepy in the daytime, but hustling for the mighty dollar and getting fun out of life every minute. That's what Dr. Hamilton's Pills have done for me—they rebuilt and rejuvenated my entire system."

To keep free from headaches, to feel young and bright, to enjoy your meals, to sleep sound and look your best, nothing can help like Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box, five for $1.00 at all druggists and storekeepers or postpaid from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Belittling the Job.

A farmer in great need of extra hands at haying time asked Si Warren, [illegible] town fool, if he would help him out.

"What'll ye pay?" asked Si.

"I'll pay what you're worth," answered the farmer.

Si scratched his head a minute, then announced decisively:

"I'll be darned if I'll work for that."

Broke His Arm.

Jim Hawthorne, the youngest son of Jas. Hawthorne, porter at the Oriental Hotel, was the victim of a painful accident yesterday morning, by which he sustained a fracture of the arm. The boy was trying to catch a colt at the home of R. J. Cox, butcher, and in climbing over a fence, lost his balance and fell, breaking his arm. Dr. Morgan rendered medical assistance and reduced the fracture.

Northern Outlet.

According to the plans prepared by the engineers, the Trent Valley Canal will leave Lake Couchiching about a mile to the west of Washago, and cut across to a point below Severn Bridge. The Washago people want the canal to leave the lake past that village, and have suggested an alternative route. Unfortunately, while there is scarcely any rock cutting on the first route, which follows a depression filled with earth, the alternative involves rock cutting nearly all the way.

Scared by Bears.

A Times correspondent at Warsaw informed us yesterday that on Sunday, at the farm of Mrs. J. Kidd, about two miles distant from Warsaw, a number of bears were seen. Mr. Howe's children had gone back to bring in the horses when they noticed what they termed "Big Black things" come out of the woods not two yards away. The children were badly scared and when they reached the house, they were crying and said they had "seen tigers and lions." A search by a number of men, however, revealed nothing, but it is expected that the bruins had crossed over to Nelson's woods.

Coming Here.

The Campbellford Herald says:—Mr. G. A. Bonar leaves Campbellford on October 1st for Peterborough, where he will act as district manager for the Northern American Life Insurance Company. Mr. Bonar has been with the North American for 19 years and his promotion is an evidence of his success in the work of the company. He will still take charge of the life insurance part of his business here and his brother, Fred, will take over the accident and fire insurance. While regretting Mr. Bonar's departure we join his many friends in congratulating him on his promotion.

An Orange Temple.

The Times has been informed that the construction of the proposed Orange Temple is likely to take place during the present year. The plans will be based on lines by which the various lodges will have rooms and also to provide a large hall, which will be utilized as a place in which to hold functions and [illegible] meetings. It is understood that [illegible] The Old Orange Hall, on Simcoe street, is thought to be insufficiently large to cope with the growing Orange movement.

HEAVY WHITE WOOL BLANKETS, $2.49.

$3.25 would be nearer the real worth of these excellent blankets that are named "Cressman's Annex Special." They are of heavy white wool in double bed size, 60 by 80 inches, and are very popular amongst our Annex patrons. Wednesday per pair $2.49

WOMEN'S BLACK CASHMERE HOSE, 15c PAIR

This is a seamless, full-fashioned hose of fine cashmere, dyed fast black. Neat, and well fitting, they are also cheap, being a factory clearance. Wednesday, per pair 15c

Men's Coat Sweaters 89c

THE USEFULNESS OF A SWEATER COAT at this time of year cannot be denied, and in this purchase of factory overmakes one can secure a well-made, heavily ribbed Coat, in color combinations of brown, navy, grey, cardinal, green and fawn. Neatly finished with V-shaped neck, a few having high buttoned collar. The value cannot be surpassed at the price 89c

WOMEN'S DARK PRINT BLOUSES, 29c.

A moment's consideration and you will see that the material alone could not be bought for this price. But they are a clearing lot in Navy Blue print, and are neatly patterned with white stripe and figure designs. As a blouse for wear around the house, they are hard to equal —at the price. Sizes are 34, 36, and 38. Wednesday 29c

6 INCH, PER YARD 13½c

POLICE COURT NEWS

Edward Heron, a blacklister, was fined $10. Robert Sheridan was charged with supplying liquor to Heron, was fined $50.

Sheridan also faced a second charge—one of vagrancy. Detective Newhall testified that Sheridan was frequently seen with blacklisters, and for some time he has refrained from anything that savoured of work. His widowed mother has had to have him locked up on several occasions for his boisterous conduct. "Heron was working steady before he met Sheridan," said Newhall.

Herbert Hill gave his last address as the Central Prison, was remanded. Hill was found begging from door to door on London street this morning. He had his arm tied up in a sling. Upon investigation the arm proved to be in a remarkably good state of preservation. Hill's [illegible] will be looked into.

Herbert [illegible], another alleged vagrant was allowed to go, and to report to Chief Thompson, one week from to-day.

CHILDREN HATE OIL, CALOMEL AND PILLS

"California Syrup of Figs" best for tender stomach, liver, bowels—tastes delicious.

Look back at your childhood days. Remember the "dose" mother insisted on—castor oil, calomel, cathartics. How you hated them, how you fought against taking them.

With our children it's different. Mothers who cling to the old form of physic simply don't realize what they do. The children's revolt is well-founded. Their tender little "insides" are injured by them.

If your child's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing, give only delicious "California Syrup of Figs." Its action is positive, but gentle. Millions of mothers keep this harmless "fruit laxative" handy; they know children love to take it; [illegible]

WHAT GOVERNMENT HAS DONE TO PREVENT GRAIN BLOCKADE

Borden Ministry Grappled With Big Problem and Efforts Are Meeting With Success

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Sept. 30.—The annual congestion of Western grain at the head of the lakes seems now to be a thing of the past. There is no blockade this season, and the wheat is moving rapidly. The early harvest and good threshing weather have of course been contributing factors, but the government has been making special efforts to handle the West's crop and with great success.

Better Facilities.

The improvement of the facilities for crop movement was one of the first problems the Borden Government tackled when it came into power. A grain commission was appointed and this board has been devoting all its energies to improving the conditions under which grain is marketed and transported.

Lack of proper storage facilities at the head of the lakes was one difficulty and they have built a magnificent government owned elevator holding three and a half million bushels, which is ready for this year's crop. In addition through their encouragement there has been a great increase in private owned terminal facilities at Fort William and Port Arthur and this season the storage capacity has been increased by no less than twelve million bushels.

Staff Increased.

The inspection and weighing staff has also been largely increased, so that the Western farmer is almost absolutely protected from the evils of grain grading by unscrupulous dealers. Take it all in all the West's biggest crop is being moved this season with remarkable ease and speed.

Rushing the Railway

The government has also been rushing the National Transcontinental and this route is also available this season if there is any danger of Western congestion. Whereas in the past a large part of the West's crop always found [illegible] this year it will nearly all move to the Atlantic through Canadian channels.

Preparing for Future

But the government is not resting on its accomplishments. It is looking ahead to the day when the West will have not a two hundred million bushel crop, but a billion bushel yield. A system of internal storage elevators is being established and the contracts have already been let for two elevators, one at Saskatoon, and the other at Moose Jaw. Two will be built in Alberta and others added when necessary.

On to Hudson Bay

In addition the Hudson Bay Railway is being rushed with all possible speed. Some 200 miles of the road will be graded this fall and steel will be laid on 70. In the spring the work can then be rushed. At the tidewater end 100 men with all necessary equipment are working on the new terminals, docks and harbor at Port Nelson, so that when steel reaches the Bay steamers will be able to load at once with the Western grain.

More Elevators.

Government owned elevators will also be built at both Port Nelson and on the Pacific Coast.

The Government has grappled in a vigorous way with a big problem and the question of the marketing of the West's growing [illegible] crops seems at last in a fair way to be solved.

CO-OPERATION RE HYDRO ELECTRIC

His Worship Mayor Bradburn, and Alderman Johnston, chairman of the Power Committee of the City Council, on Monday represented the city at the Ontario Electrical Association meeting, which was held in the City Hall, Toronto. Nearly all the municipalities interested in Hydro-Electric were represented. A general discussion concerning the advisability of purchasing electrical supplies on the co-operative plan took place.

Speaking of the co-operative idea at Monday's meeting, Mayor Bradburn said; "Peterborough knows that it can get equipment and material much cheaper when dealing through the medium of the Hydro-Electric Commission. We will do well to appoint a general purchasing agent and let this agent be the Hydro-Electric Commission."

In answer to a question as to the probability of uniform prices, Mr. Beck declared that the new department would bring about such results. The Association also expressed its approval of the Commissions rules and regulations in regard to wire inspection.

The local representatives to the conference returned to the city on Monday night. While in Toronto they waited upon the Hydro-Electric Commission in reference to matters pertaining to the installation in Peterborough of the Hydro system.

WHAT HOME RULE WILL MEAN TO IRELAND

Dublin, Sept. 30.—Even the man in the street here, the city that will, if the Asquith plans do not fall, be the capital of a politically-created new nation, does not know what Home Rule means. In this Nationalist stronghold, naturally they all say they want it, and that they will get it in spite of Ulster's threats; but they do not know what it is they want, or what they will get.

What is Home Rule? was asked of a University professor.

Here is briefly, and without party bias, the result of the professor's explanation:—

Wide as the Poles.

The Home Rule question is concentrated into two parts—wide as the poles asunder—the one the dry, uninteresting, but necessary section that deals with executive and financial powers the bill will transfer from the Imperial to the Dublin Parliament. The other part may be focussed in the now historical sentimental phrase, "Ireland a Nation." It is the hot, fuming frictional section that has caused the sensational stand, really seriously sincere, in Ulster. It has caused the great argument of the minority rights against the majority. It has furnished the oratorical driving force that keeps the agitation going and draws dollars by the [illegible] from Canada and the United States to be used both for and against.

The Home Rule Bill is a measure to set up an Irish Parliament in Dublin, with an executive that is practically responsible only to itself. Ireland at the present time has the same amount of Home Rule that England—as England alone—Scotland and Wales have. By this I mean Dublin sends popularly elected members to Westminster as does Edinburgh, Llandrindod or Chelmsford. Under the bill this would be altered so that in addition to sending members to the "Ireland a Nation" Parliament in Dublin she would still send a reduced number to the Imperial Parliament.

Mainly Nationalist.

If the Dublin Parliament is ever formed it will be mainly National in politics and Roman Catholic in religious complexion. Under the bill the executive would be responsible to the Irish Parliament. John Redmond would be Premier and Joseph Devlin his right hand man. They would be at the head of the Government, and therefore in control, ruling the whole country along their ideas, dangerous to the minority.

Then for the sentimental side.

"When we shake off the English shackles, when we get back to the old Parliament house on College Green."

The executive of the Irish Parliament would have enormous power, but there are several clauses in the bill which name things over which it must have no control. The Imperial Parliament at Westminster is to be "predominant" over the Irish Parliament; Unionists argue that in practice this predominance will be nothing but a myth. The bill gives power to Dublin to make laws for the "peace, order and good government of Ireland."

Reserves These Matters.

The bill also lays down the following matters as "reserved"—that is kept in the hands of the Imperial Parliament so far as altering them or passing new laws which would conflict—for some years at least: the Land Purchase Acts, Old Age Pensions and National Insurance and Labor Exchange Acts. In addition the Imperial Parliament will continue to control the collection of taxes the Royal Irish Constabulary, the Post Office Savings Bank (not the Post Office itself), and a few other minor financial items. The new Parliament would not be allowed to establish or endow any sect, penalize any person on account of his religion or prohibit the free exercise of any religion.

Of the "reserve" clauses mentioned above the bill says that the Irish Parliament, after six years, is to control the Irish Constabulary; can take over the Post Office Savings Banks; control the Insurance Act, Old Age Pensions and Friendly Society funds.

Those who claim the bill has been shorn of its objectionable features point out that the Lord Lieutenant appointed by England, will have a veto over bills passed by the Irish Parliament, just as in Canada the Governor-General can, but does not, veto legislation of the Government.

Menace of 40 Members.

Another menace would be the forty Irish members at Westminster, who again might hold the balance of power between rival parties at Westminster and demand certain enlarged powers for the Dublin parliament.

Critics of the financial parts of the bill say these alone will prevent the measure being put into operation. Out of the long and intricate financial scheme of the bill there is the feature that even with an Irish Exchequer and an Irish Consolidated Fund there will have to be paid out of the English Treasury about two million pounds annually, paid out and put under the control of the Irish Minister of Finance. And again, in spite of this, after a certain period the bill gives the Irish Parliament power to vary, increase or discontinue in Ireland taxes levied by the Imperial Government.

There are two vulnerable places in which a man resents being attacked, his religion and his pocket. Ulster, with cause, sees what will happen if there is a Nationalist Parliament given to Ireland.

TABLET TO THE MEMORY OF SERGT. D. SPENCE UNVEILED

At the Armouries Last Night—Was Gift of the Daughters of the Empire

Last night, in the Armouries, before a large crowd of citizens, a large detachment of the 57th Regiment, and a number of the members of the Daughters of the Empire, a tablet of bronze, erected to the memory of Daniel Spence, by the D.O.E., was unveiled. The tablet is situated on the south wall of the drill hall, between company rooms 1 and 2.

The Regiment with the band in the centre were drawn up around the tablet, and Canon Davidson, officiating made the following remarks, after the band had played, "O Canada":

"The 57th Chapter, D.O.E., wish me to express their pleasure in coming into close contact with the Regiment whom it is their privilege and pleasure and honour to serve, and to recognize the good services of the regiment, they desire to do something to press forward the part of true patriotism, in presenting to this regiment a tablet to the memory of a former member of the regiment, one who did his service, and died in the execution of his duties in the South African War. I can remember the memorable occasion when a number of years ago it was known that a certain number would be picked for service in South Africa, 1901. The longing to be one [illegible] high among ours, as it did among many other regiments in Canada for that position. Only a very small proportion were chosen, and of them, one was Daniel Spence, Sergeant of No. 3 Company, P.R. We remember the [illegible] enthusiasm there was in the town of Peterborough then. We heard of their splendid progress in the battlefield for some time, then, one day we were all stricken with sorrow, and at the same time with pride to know that one of our regiment had had the honour to fall. While out with a scouting expedition he was shot by the Boers. Sergeant Spence lived in Peterborough and lived a good and bright life, and he was greatly interested in the work of the Y.M.C.A. He was also well liked by all his colleagues in the regiment and also by the citizens, who contributed to his memorial in the shape of the Dan Spence ambulance.

Canon Davidson, then, as Chaplain of the regiment applied a few more [illegible] remarks, after which he said:

"To the honour of the King, of this Empire, and of the Dominion of Canada, and to the Canadian Militia, we now unveil this tablet to the memory of Daniel Spence."

One of the members of the D.O.E. then drew away a Union Jack, which revealed a beautiful bronze tablet, bearing the following words in raised letters:

In Memory of
DANIEL SPENCE, 1st C.M.R.
Sergeant No. 3 Company,
57th Regiment, P.R.
KILLED IN ACTION AT BOSCHPOORT, S.A.
23rd September, 1901.
(For King and Empire.)

Erected 1913 by the Regiment
Chapter Daughters of the Empire.

The band then played, "God Save the King," and Col. Clegg thanked the Daughters of the Empire on behalf of the Regiment for their kind act.

CANADIAN OFFICERS AT WOOLWICH ARSENAL

London, Sept. 30.—Canadian officers spent to-day at Woolwich inspecting the famous arsenal and the system of training artillery engineers. Colonel Clark, Brandon, had been left in the country after the manoeuvres, suffering from congestion of the lungs. The officers' opinions were well summarized by Colonel McLeod who says: "Most of us came expecting evidence that the British army would compare unfavorably with the continental forces. The South African War left that painful impression in Canada and nothing could be less true. No where in Europe have we seen finer soldiers than those who manoeuvred last week in the presence of the King and Queen. The other Canadian officers were welcomed as spectators. Colonel Hughes and myself being official guests of the War Office, were presented to the King at Althorpe Park. His Majesty expressed deep pleasure at presence of the Canadian party and was keen to learn our impressions. The Queen was all graciousness and charm and both recalled pleasant memories of their Canadian visits. Nothing could exceed the excellence of the War Office arrangements to enable us to see whatever we wanted."

CANADA IS AIDING THE HOME RULERS IN IRELAND

Belfast, Sept. 30.—The Belfast Provisional Cabinet met yesterday to consider routine matters. An official statement said no overtures of settlement were discussed. Sir Edward Carson was absent, resting for the reviews of Tyrone, Donegal and Armagh, starting Wednesday. These counties are not altogether friendly, and Sir Edward is likely to get a mixed reception.

The donation of Canadian Irishmen to the Redmond fund was a surprise to Ulster leaders. In an interview with the treasurers of the Carson defence fund and indemnity, it was said large contributions to the defence fund from Canada, probably amounting to £5,000 had been received.

Also there were cabled offers to assist the indemnity fund.

The Nationalists claim many workmen in the review on Saturday were intimidated by the employers and had to parade, much against their will. They say, also, that the labor element would make thousands of workers join the ranks of the Nationalists and completely upset the Ulster organization.

There was a scene in the Revision Court to-day when a Unionist counsel, declaring that the bench was unfair to their cause, packed up his lists and left the court with his witnesses. He later returned, however, and proceeded with the revision. It is expected Sir Edward Carson will reply to Mr. Redmond's speech when he reviews the volunteers at Armagh on Saturday.

LAYMENS BANQUET TO BE HELD HERE

Missionary Movement Will be Pushed By Peterborough Representatives.

The laymen of the Protestant churches of Peterborough are at active work in connection with the Provincial Missionary Campaign which is to be conducted throughout the Province this fall. Already representatives of the Protestant churches of Peterborough have held several meetings. Officers and committees have been appointed and the preliminary plans laid, which should ensure Peterborough doing its part in this great movement.

To-day there is to be held in Toronto an inter-denominational conference, at which representatives will be present from all parts of the Province. Most, if not all, of the churches in Peterborough will have from one to three or four representatives at the conference.

The conference will open with a banquet in the Parish House, St. James' Cathedral, at 1 o'clock.

On November 13th, it is proposed to hold a somewhat similar banquet of laymen in Peterborough. Churches outside of the city are each to be invited to send three laymen and their pastor. An effort is to be made to have 600 or 700 men attend this banquet. It also will be addressed by well-known outside speakers, who will explain the objects of the movement, what it has already accomplished, and what it it proposed to accomplish at this time.

During the first week in December there will be a simultaneous campaign in the city by the various churches who will appoint their own givings. Some of the churches will perhaps make a canvass to increase their givings for the current expenses as well.

Officers and Committees.

The following officers and committees have been appointed:

Executive Committee—A. W. Cressman (chairman); J. J. Turner, Jr., (secretary); H. B. Cowan, Wm. Kemp, Frank Dawson, R. F. Downey, J. A. Aylmer, B. F. Ackerman and Mr. Clark.

Finance and Program Committee—H. B. Cowan (chairman); Harry Morgan (secretary); Frank Linton, Wm. Kemp, Dr. Middleton, A. W. Cressman and A. J. Johnston.

Banqueting Committee—R. F. Downey (chairman); J. A. Aylmer (secretary); W. J. Chisholm, C. S. Thompson and Messrs Ward and Griffin.

Billeting Committee—Frank Dawson (chairman); John Williams, Geo. Curtis, W. A. Logan, Mr. Petley and Mr. Clark.

The membership committee will be composed of the pastors of the city churches, who will appoint their own chairman and secretary.

The general committee is composed of the pastors and two laymen from each of the city churches.

Ontario Marriage Laws

Ontario amended marriage law, which required the residence for three weeks previous to the ceremony, of one or both of the "contracting parties" in the community in which the wedding is to take place, is said to be working distress in some cases among couples about to mate. The regulation seems to be pointed in the right direction, however, and should have a tendency to curtail the number of clandestine marriages, without entailing more than a temporary hardship on ministers who seemingly for the accompanying fee, marry without serious question any and all who present themselves for union.

THE WEATHER.

To-day—Mostly fair and about the same temperature.

DESPERATE FIGHT TO AID LAURIER AT CHATEAUGUAY

Ottawa, Sept. 30.—The news that Hon. Sidney Fisher had been nominated as the Liberal candidate in Chateauguay was not a surprise to Ottawa.

It was known that Edward McGowan and Edward Brown, son of the late member, the two most likely standard bearers for the Liberals in the riding itself, did not want to run. The ex-Minister of Agriculture has labored under the impression for two years that his defeat of 1911 was an accident and that the electors of Canada were anxious for his return to Parliament.

Fisher's nomination will mean a desperate fight. Fisher is a good fighter, is wealthy and speaks French fluently. In addition this is his last chance and he will naturally leave no stone unturned to carry the seat. As the riding is normally Liberal by 400 majority the Conservatives have a big task in their hands.

No bye-election since the South Renfrew contest has aroused as much interest at Ottawa as the present fight in Chateauguay. It is the first real test of public opinion in Quebec since the Naval Bill, so that the result will be watched with the keenest interest. The shrewdest Quebec politicians have frankly admitted that they were unable to forecast what would happen in that Province in case of an election. Sentiment has been in a condition of flux. This contest will give the first opportunity to gauge public sentiment.

PROPOSED FACTORY FOR MONAGHAN

Interested Toronto Parties Make an Inspection.

The opening of a brickyard on the Kincaid farm in North Monaghan is almost assured for next year. Several considerations in the present negotiations remain to be provided for, and if these are covered satisfactorily the new factory will be actualized.

The proposed location was formerly owned by Dr. Kincaid and is about four miles from the city, on the Monaghan side of the river. It has a waterfront, at what is known as Dangerville, of one mile or more, and the Port Hope line of the G.T.R. cuts through the middle of the property.

The reports in regard to the proposed factory are not very definite as yet, but it is known that a Toronto man is interested and has secured possession of the property and is now endeavoring to interest men of capital in the proposal, with a view to erecting a first class factory.

Besides the assets of easy transportation facilities, of water and rail communication direct to the property, it is declared that natural gas can be secured there with which the brick could be burned.

These are some of the considerations that indicate the possibilities of the property for brick-making purposes. The next step it is understood, is to secure financial backing and this is virtually assured. It is learned that several wealthy men of Toronto are interested and it is expected that within a short time some assurance regarding the proposed new industry will be made public.

CHINESE SMUGGLED IN THROUGH MEXICO

Washington, Sept. 30.—An increase in the smuggling of Chinese into the United States, alarming in its proportions, has caused the immigration authorities to redouble their vigilance, particularly along the northern and western borders of the country. Early next week Richard H. Taylor, immigration inspector-at-large, will begin a trip along the southern border of the country to see that the law is rigidly complied with. Later he will extend the trip to points on the Pacific coast.

Scores of Chinese recently have been apprehended in the United States who gained entrance across the Mexican border. Many of them passed through the country to Mexico in bond, ostensibly to become laborers on Mexican plantations. Some of them were arrested on the American side of the border within ten days of their arrival in Mexico. All are being deported to China.

CORNER STONE OF ARMOURIES LAID

Military Function at Millbrook Attended by Officers Yesterday Afternoon.

Millbrook, Oct. 1.—The corner stone of the Millbrook Armouries was laid yesterday by Col. G. A. S. Williams, Adjutant-General of Ottawa. Among those present were Col. John Hughes, Col. McNaughton of Cobourg; Col. J. A. V. Preston, and the officers of the 46th Regiment. The usual ceremony was witnessed by a fairly large crowd of citizens and visitors. The erection of the Armouries is progressing steadily. Mr. Richard Sheehy, of Peterborough is the contractor. A banquet was held last night in the Town Hall.

C. P. R. SETTLES MANY FARMERS IN THE WEST

Montreal, Sept. 30.—During the month the C. P. R. has settled one hundred and eighty farmers on 45,000 acres in Western Canada, being at a rate of 5 families per day on small farms, averaging 250 acres each. This was done on the Company's 20 year $2,000 loan policy for rapid extensive settlement on medium sized farms. As the families average five to each, this means that nearly one thousand desirable settlers took up farms in Western Canada in the short period of one month. Advices from the Company's agents throughout the United States indicate a still greater influx of prospective settlers for the next two months, owing to the termination of harvesting operations south of the International boundary.

From the first of the year to the end of August, nearly 2,000 homeseekers registered at the Calgary office of the C. P. R.

Y. BOYS TO GO TO THE NEW RIFLE RANGES

On Saturday afternoon through the kind permission of Col. Clegg of the 57th Regiment, the boys of the Junior Department of the Y.M.C.A. will hold an observation trip to the new rifle ranges.

The boys will be shown the mysteries of rifle shooting and the system of scoring by the Sergt. Instructor of Musketry, who will accompany the boys. The party will leave the Y.M.C.A. at 1 o'clock.

A WAGNER STORY

Veteran Player Thought More of Admirers Than Himself

Of Hans Wagner, the baseball star, a story is told—a tale that shows how the German had a heart that was purest gold: A few years ago Hans Wagner, rich in this world's goods and even then weary of the game announced his retirement. No hold out, no demand for money or privilege—just determined to quit and take things easy, that was all. Panic prevailed in Pittsburg—and Harry Pulliam, now dead, came up to see the German. He found Wagner obdurate, immutable, immovable. "I'm through, that's all," growled Hans. "I've got money—and sore muscles. I need no more money—I can't stand much more ball playing. I'm done."

"Hans," said Pulliam, "this old smoky town is full of hard-working honest toilers, men of the mills. Little pleasure is theirs in life—mighty little. A Saturday afternoon—a few hours under the blue sky—and the chance to see Hans Wagner play ball. They go out there to that field by thousands, just to see you. That's a joy and a real delight to those poor fellows—and you don't want to take that pleasure away from them?"

"Give me that pen," growled Wagner; "I'll sign it, Harry, and I'll play as long as they want me to!" No hold-up, no hold-out—only a sacrifice of the strained body that yearned for rest and ease—only a sacrifice to please a gentleman and to please the smoke-grimed thousands that made Wagner the idol of their leisure hours! That was all—but it showed the golden weave of Wagner's heart and soul.

Marriage Sequel

At Mohill a young man named Edward Smyth, of Rossmore, Drumlish was returned for trial, on bail, charged with shooting at and wounding his father Terence Smyth. The father's deposition was to the effect that he went to bed when he heard his son coming home on the car drunk from Longford. The son went up stairs, told him he had got married and that he and his wife would be the "bosses" there, and then pulled him out on the bedroom floor. Witness ran downstairs. His son followed him into the kitchen, and putting two cartridges into a double-barrelled gun placed it under his arm, saying he would do for him. The gun went off then, and the charge went between witness's legs, the shot entering his flesh.

Born in the Trade

In the case of a Tonypandy milk vendor summoned at Ystrad for selling milk deficient in butter fat, a witness was asked if the defendant had delivered milk for twenty-six years. Inspector J. Davies: "He is only twenty-five." Defendant: "I am twenty-nine." The Magistrate: "Well, we will say he was born in the trade. Most infants have to do with milk pretty early in their career."

CARING FOR RUGS

Suggestions for Sweeping and Cleaning Soiled Spots

Greatest of care should be taken in sweeping or wiping thick piled carpets and rugs. They should always be swept the way of the pile or grain, and a carpet swept against the grain soon loses its bright sheen or color and looks rough and ill used.

Wiping the rug or carpet thoroughly after sweeping is an excellent way of keeping the colors perfect. Wring a soft flannel cloth dipped in warm water with ammonia in proportion of one-half cup of ammonia to two quarts of water. Do not dip the cloth into all the water. After once wiping the rug use a little at a time, so each part of the rug may have clean water and ammonia.

Sugar or candy spots may be removed by using clear, warm water. If varnish has been spilled on the rug or carpet cut it at once by applying turpentine, then wash the spot carefully with warm soap suds, rinsing thoroughly and not allowing the space to be walked upon until perfectly dry.

On Style.

Idiosyncrasies of character tell even more than variety of subjects in their influence on style. No two persons are cast in the same mould. Clearly, therefore, the dress which is very becoming to one writer or speaker may be very unbecoming to another. Yet, to the end of time, in defiance of this truism, packs of imitators dog the steps of genius, as the courtiers of Alexander copied the conqueror's wry neck, or the courtiers of George IV. his bulging cravats, or as the under carter apes the slouch and shamble of the wagoner. This peculiar style in which Carlyle clothed his oracular utterances suited him and them, the jerkiness and joltiness of his sentences startling the world into attention, and the difficulty of unwrapping the mummy from the cerecloths necessitating the effort of Will, without which the thought cannot be grasped. In fact, the style of Carlyle is part of the man and of his temperament. But it was good advice of the dying critic to his friend, "Avoid Carlyleism." And what is true of Carlyle and his copyists is true widely. Can any great writer be named who has not had a herd of servile imitators at his heels? Is not the old saying doubly, trebly true in this application, "The best, if corrupted, becomes the worst!"—I. Gregory Smith, in the Oxford and Cambridge Review.

Too Much of a Luxury.

A friend of ours tells us that he went to consult a doctor last week.

"I have some queer pains," said our friend.

"I see," said the doctor, looking wise. "Do you feel a sharp pain low down on your right side?"

"Doc," answered our friend, "I only get $12 a week. Don't go lookin' for any symptoms of appendicitis."

The case was immediately diagnosed as indigestion.

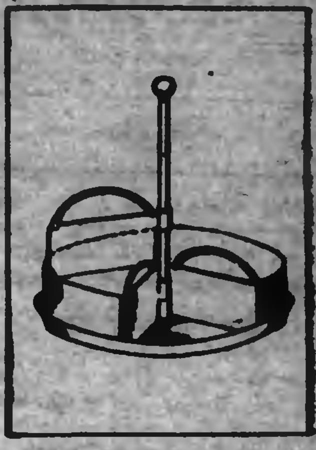
NOVEL CHEESE KNIFE

Movable Blades Mounted on Rod That Runs Through Middle

An ingenious method of cutting cheese has been designed by a New York woman. A rod has three broad, movable blades slidably mounted upon it. The cheese—the cutter is designed for use on round cheese, by the way—is placed on a dish and the rod thrust through the center. The three blades, being light in weight, can rest on top of the cheese. When a slice or wedge of cheese is desired it can be cut quickly and accurately by pressing down two of the blades with the desirable width between them. Another advantage of this device, and the probable reason for the third blade, is the fact that it keeps the remainder of the cheese fresh by closing the cuts against the air. The blades are about the depth of the usual round cheese and two of them can be kept pressed against the cuts where the inside is exposed.



KEEPS CHEESE FRESH, TOO.

TRIBUTE TO LAJOIE

The Detroit News printed the following tribute to Napoleon Lajoie, the veteran second baseman of the Cleveland Club, under a cut of the famous Frenchman wearing a hat similar to the one in which the great warrior of 100 years back is usually seen in pictures:

For 17 year, long tam ain't it—very long tam; she's been playing dat long. She nevaire was a flash on de pan, but she was boog bright star all tam.

Many she's come and many she's gone, but 'Poleon she's still in de roong an she's goin' be there long tam yet. She's got de applause from de peep from de Nort', de Sout', East an' West, an' she's always been de same, always play de good, honest game an' every tam hees bat hoots de ball she always make a clean hoot sam lake boom.

Today you see heem standing at de bat or playing aroun' de bases; every move she's make is jus' sam lak wan leetle French girl of sixteen year ole, graceful an' also no mattaire if someting she's been defeat or sometam she's got hurt. She don' make heem no difference. She's square on heem self an' she's square on everybody else.

'Poleon de peep she's all proud of you, always have been, and always will be an' we'en you go way 'Poleon, to dat place from where he wan come back no matter how good she was, de peep will still remember you, 'Poleon Lajoie.

HOW TO TELL A GOOD SNAIL

Feel Its Jaw If You Would Make Sure It Is Not a Base Substitute.

When you order Burgundy snails and are served with a [illegible] toothsome terrestrial pulmonates do you know how to tell whether they are the genuine article or the vulgar imitations technically known as "petits-gris?" asks a writer in the Paris edition of the New York Herald. It is the easiest thing in the world. All you need do is to take one of the gastropods in your fingers and examine its jawbone, much as you would study a horse's teeth to determine its age. If the jaw is large the snail is, or was, white; if the interior of the mouth looks like a dental factory the pulmonate belonged to the gray family.

But this is not the only test. In the white snails the horns are more developed than in the gray; in some of the latter the horns are hardly perceptible, in fact. Also, the back of the white snail, when cooked, sometimes assumes a dark gray color, sometimes bluish or greenish tints. Always the coloring is even. The gray snail's back remains a grayish white, but is more or less spotted or [illegible].

This is said on the authority of Mr. Vaillet, expert of the French department of agriculture, who, at the suggestion of Mr. [illegible], director of scientific work in that department, has just been making these interesting tests.

The discussion in Dijon recently of two rival associations of snail merchants revealed to the public a fraud which it appears is not uncommonly practiced. Clothes may make the man, but shells do not make the snail, and "petits-gris" are sometimes placed on the market in shells which originally were worn by snails from Burgundy. Thanks to Mr. Vaillet, the connoisseur is now able to tell whether his "Burgundy" is really a wolf in sheep's clothing.

Mr. Vaillet adds that the two species appear to be equally indigestible by delicate human organisms. After all, a snail by any other name would taste as bad—or as good—according to whether you like snails or not.

"A Progressive Peterborough"

Our Point of View

Mr. George Burn, the popular general manager of the Bank of Ottawa, is reported to have said that the money pinch it over, but it is understood that he talks for himself and not for us.

— o —

During the re-union of Uncle Sam's army veterans, held a few days ago, an old soldier ran a hundred and forty yards in seventeen seconds, but it is safe to say he made a much better record in the civil war.

— o —

A dispatch from Washington says the new postal cards, with the head of Thomas Jefferson, will be printed in light green ink. This looks like the administration is making a bid for the Irish vote.

— o —

The military court appointed to investigate the killing of President Madero reports that it it not "a punishable crime." Of course not. In Mexico assassination is not a crime, it is a pastime.

— o —

We are informed that in one of the university hospitals they are making artificial kidneys, which is enough to encourage the belief that the day is coming when artificial people will be seen walking along the streets.

— o —

The Ottawa mint is said to be turning out 25,000 five cent pieces a day. This ought to be cheery news for the picture shows and the street car companies.

Farmers Do Not Raise Enough

But the question naturally arises, are the farmers of the older portions of Canada producing as much as they can produce? If we take the census figures of 1911 it is quite evident they are not. For the one item of cattle the census would seem to show that there has been a falling off of about 800,000 head in ten years. In the same way cattle production in the United States has fallen off about 20 per cent, and in both countries the diminution of the supply of this vitally important branch of the food-raising industry has taken place in the face of an enormous increase in population.

The Christians in Turkey

The Turk, if forced to live on equal terms with his Christian neighbors—and that is what must come in the end—will not die out. He will, in the long run, work out a peaceful living. But in the meanwhile the demand of the Christian subjects of Turkey that equal terms shall be accorded cannot forever be denied as it has been for a half century. Sir Edward Grey intimated that if the concert of Europe will not deal with Turkey some one of its members will have to be allowed to do so. If the Turks are forced back into Asia, the Power to assume this task will most naturally be Russia, and next time Russia will hardly be stopped on the heights of San Stefano.

Old Winter Coughs
Now Easily Cured

A New Remedy Now Cures Without the Use of Cough Syrups or Drugs.

Just think of it—you can clear away that hard, racking cough, drive it completely out of the system, make yourself perfectly well by the new breathing cure that employs no medicine at all.

You wonder how; a very simple method; you simply breathe in through a Catarrhozone Inhaler rich balsamic essences that heal and soothe away the cough in a few hours' time.

In using Catarrhozone you bathe the lining of the nose and throat with that powerful antiseptic of the Blue Gum Tree of Australia, which is probably the surest cold and cough cure in the world to-day.

Clarence E. Cromwell, writing from Medicine Hat, says: "To cure a sneezing cold in about ten minutes the one thing I know of to do it is Catarrhozone. To relieve an irritated throat quickly, nothing can equal Catarrhozone. It simply eats up a cough or cold of any kind. I know of colds that have hung on for months that Catarrhozone cured quickly. Nearly every man I know carries a Catarrhozone Inhaler with him day and night, and in this country it makes a wonderful protection against all winter ills."

Get the dollar outfit, including the hard rubber inhaler, and medication to last two months; medium size 50c.; sample size 25c., at all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Equal Suffrage in Holland

The decision of the new Dutch government to grant the right of suffrage to women does not establish a precedent, inasmuch as two other European governments, those of Sweden and Denmark, have already made this concession. It is however, highly significant as an evidence of the volume and force which the equal suffrage movement is gaining in Europe.

The advance of the movement, moreover, is most rapid where the methods employed by the women for their own emancipation are the sanest. It is the cool-headed women of northern Europe thae are first to assert themselves successfully. On the other hand, in England, where the women suffragists resort in violence, the cause is retarded, and the victory which would probably have come to English women b)fore now had they used moral force alone is indefinitely deferred.

As to the ultimate extension of woman suffrage to all civilized countries, there remains little doubt. It seems to be only a question of ti e until the last of the political barriers between the sexes is broken down, and what the results will be in the long run God only knows.

Reply.—The most fatal explosion ever known in the history of the world was that at Gravelines in 1654 when three thousand people were killed on that occasion.—Ed. Times.

DISLOYAL PLAYS.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I was one of the comparatively few Protestants who attended the Irish play at the Opera House by the O'Hara Company on Monday night, and was sorry to note the applause which followed any unfavorable reference to England in the play. When O'Hara referred to a national flag for Ireland, the applause was marked. Why do the Irish people—I mean those who belong to one particular religious party—invariably show a feeling of hostility to the British flag? Many of the so-called Irish plays are more or less full of disloyal expressions and sentiments, and I think they should not appeal to true Canadians who love their country.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your valuable space, I am, etc.,

Loyalty.

ASSESSORS RETURNS ON THE TAX ROLL

Returns of City Assessor Show An Increase of Over One Million Dollars.

The capitulation on the returns of the City Assessor shows that Peterborough is enjoying growth and prosperity. The total population is given as 20,150, being an increase of 391 over the previous year. It will of course, be understood that as the growth of the city has been to a very large extent in the south and this section of the city hat attracted a large percentage of the people who have come to Peterborough, and they have settled in Brownton and in other parts of North Monaghan, which has not as yet been incorporated in the city.

The total assessment in the city is $13,415,464, which is an increase of $1,065,538 for the year. There were 3[illegible] births and 115 deaths. The total number of canines, male and female, is [illegible]. At the same time only 520 tags have been issued.

An increase in the total assessment of a little over a million dollars and an addition to the population of 391 are two of the outstanding features of the assessments returns. The rolls were formally handed over to City Clerk Armstrong yesterday morning by the assessment department. The actual increase in the population is much greater than the figures contained in the returns would indicate. The advent of several new factories in the south end of the city have resulted in the addition of nearly two thousand people to the population of Brownton and the district situated to the south of the southern boundary. Mr. W. H. Henry of the assessment department is authority for the statement respecting the exodus of the people to the southern fring? of the city.

"KICK THE POPE" SO SANG A DRAFT OF INNISKILLINS

When Ordered to India, Were About to Leave Ireland—Rioting Ensued Resulting in Many Arrests

Belfast, Sept. 30.—Although all was quiet to-day what may happen at any time was shown last night when adraft of the Inniskillens, regulars, ordered to India started for Heysham, en route to Aldershot, the men sang "Dollys Brae," which means "Kick the Pope," almost as a national anthem. It resulted in a riot on the quary before the men embarked and in many arrests and general confusion. If this is the temper of regular troops the influence of General Richardson has reaching effect with the people here.

A resolve not to yield one iota to Redmond is uncompromising in the south, where the situation really is serious. This is shown by the arrest of a Unionist to-day, who resented an attack on the Union Jack, while in an auto passing the Nationalist quarters in Belfast. He was ready to fight if a fight was wanted. This is seen on the street every night.

TAKES OFF DANDRUFF HAIR STOPS FALLING

Girls! Try this! Makes hair thick, glossy, fluffy, beautiful — No more itching scalp

Within ten minutes after an application of Danderine you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first —yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any —that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all — you surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine.

GAYNORS DOGGIES SEARCH IN VAIN

New York, Oct. 1.—Pathetic in connection with the death of Mayor Gaynor have been the actions of his three dogs in his country place at St. James, L.I. Ever since the family received the news of their master's death they have shown that they realized something untoward had happened to him. They make frequent trips over the roads and paths which the mayor was accustomed to take on his long walks with his dogs as companions.

The most persistent in his search for traces of his master is Boss, an Irish setter, that was Mr. Gaynor's favorite. Frequently Boss has been seen during the past week with his nose to the ground, trotting along in quest of a lost scent, followed by the Skye Irish and Scotch terriers.

On meeting old friends of Mayor Gaynor, Boss stops and looks at them with an expression, they declare, as if begging for some word from his master.

FOR SALLOW, BLOTCHY, ROUGH OR GREASY SKINS

(From Woman's Tribune)

Some skins require constant grooming to keep them from becoming oily, muddy, blotchy or rough, or if such condition has developed, to overcome it. In such chronic cases it is particularly inadvisable to keep piling on cosmetics which clog the pores, collect dust and dirt, making the complexion worse than ever. It's a lot more sensible to use ordinary mercolized wax, which literally absorbs a bad complexion. Apply the wax, like cold cream before retiring; next morning, on washing it off, you'll wash away fine, flour-like particles of the unsightly cuticle. Repeat for a week or more and you'll have an entirely new skin—soft, satiny, spotless and beautiful as a child's. One ounce of mercolized wax, procurable at any druggists, is all you'll need.

If the skin be wrinkled or flabby, here's the best possible remedy: Mix 1 pint witch hazel and 1 ounce powdered saxolite and use as a face bath. It works like a miracle, yet is entirely harmless.

WOMAN ADMITS SHE PLOTTED MURDER OF HUSBAND

In Jail at Benton, She and Brother-in-Law Confesses Their Crime

Shreveport, La., Sept. 30.—"My husband had threatened to kill 'Bud' Chappell before night. I was in danger, too. There was nothing else for us to do. So we sat down and discussed the safety way to kill him."

Mrs. C. A. Carlisle, a handsome young woman, who is held with Chappell in the Benton parish jail at Benton for the murder yesterday of her husband, is said to have made this calm statement to the sheriff today. Both are understood to have confessions, complete and startling in their details. Mr. Carlisle is held as an accessory before the fact.

According to the authorities, Mrs. Carlisle told them that she stood in the cotton field, where he husband was busy picking his crop, and watched while Chappell aimed carefully and shot him in the back.

Carlisle was shot with a single barrel gun. His young wife, the police say, leaned against the fence and looked on while the murderer calmly ejected the empty shell, blew the smoke from the gun barrel, inserted a second shell and sent another charge into the head of the mortally wounded man, who was struggling in death agonies with his cotton sack still about his shoulders.

A COOLY-PLANNED MURDER

The sheriff has been unable to secure any evidence that there was any romance to lighten the sordidness of the deliberate murder. Chappell and Carlisle married sisters. They were farmers, living about ten miles from Benton. Their lands adjoined, and there was continual war between them. Both had made threats, it is said. Mrs. Carlisle said that she had repeatedly warned Chappell that her husband would kill him. She said that he had even fixed Monday as Chappell's last day of life. When she told Chappell this he said that it became an urgent question of self-preservation.

In his confession Chappell is said to have declared that he slipped up to within a sure distance and shot his enemy as he stooped over a cotton plant.

Mrs. Carlisle has a ten-year-old daughter. The Chappells have several children. The case will be presented to the grand jury at its meeting next month.

SOCIETY WOMAN ON TRAIL FOR MURDER OF HUSBAND

Burglar Shot Him, Her Defence; Two Friends in Pen On Same Charge

Bartlesville, Okla., Sept. 30.—The trial of Mrs. Laura M. Reuter, former society leader of Tulsa, Okla., was resumed in the district court today. She is charged with complicity in the murder of her husband, Chas. T. Reuter, a prominent attorney, in 1912, and her trial began late Monday.

Reuter was shot to death in his home in Tulsa. Mrs. Reuter said her husband was killed by a burglar who took valuable jewelry from her home and who locked her in a room before killing her husband. Her screams attracted neighbors, who released her.

Grover Bellow and Joseph Baker, were arrested as suspects the day after Reuter was killed. Later Guy D. MacKenzie was arrested charged with complicity in the crime. Bellow, in a confession, charged that MacKenzie and Baker conspired to kill the attorney.

He said Baker was the hired assassin and that MacKenzie paid him $300 to commit the crime. Bellow said he drove a motor car in which Baker fled to Sapulpa and that he and Baker buried in the Osage Hills the money and jewelry taken from Reuter.

MacKenzie and Baker were convicted last fall of complicity in the murder.

A PROPHECY OF THIRTY YEARS AGO

Berlin, Oct. 1.—Recent events in the Balkans have brought to mind the wise prophecy of a queen, nearly thirty years ago, which prevented uncle and nephew from being arrayed against each other in the war just closed by the treaty of Bucharest.

In 1879, the Bulgarians, having finally thrown off the Turkish yoke, set out to choose a ruler. Among the candidates for the Bulgarian throne was Prince Waldemar, of Denmark, then but 21 years old. The choice finally fell upon Prince Alexander, of Battenberg.

Alexander abdicated seven years later and the Bulgarian government began negotiations with the Danish royal family to secure Waldemar as king. The negotiations came to naught through the energetic opposition of the queen of Denmark. "The nationality and strength of the Greeks and the Bulgarians," she said, "are so diametrically opposed that a lasting understanding between them is impossible. Hence, it could happen that the two brothers, one from Athens (King George, eldest brother of Waldemar), and one from Sofia, would be compelled to become enemies and to wage war upon each other. It is for us to prevent this terrible possibility with all means at our command. Our son in Athens shares our view."

The Bulgarians nevertheless elected Waldemar king. He refused the election, and ten months later Ferdinand of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha was elected.

Talking Money the Latest.

"Money talks" is a well-known metaphorical saying, but if the latest idea to prevent counterfeit notes is carried out, we may yet hear our dollar bills asserting their genuineness with no uncertain sound. The proposal is that each note should carry a given phrase, which would be inscribed on the edge just as on a phonograph cylinder, a specially prepared paper being used for the purpose. When a note is tested it will simply be placed in a properly designed phonograph, when, if genuine, it will repeat or play the phrase, but if counterfeit, it will either remain silent or give itself away by using the wrong sound.

Criminals Cured Through Eyes

Dr. Archer Leslie Hood, an English oculist, who made a long study of the human eye as an index to character, discovered what he believes to be the key to happiness, good behaviour and success. If you have been bad instead of good, unhappy instead of happy, and, if your life has been punctuated with miserable failure, perhaps it wasn't all your own fault. You may attribute it to your head, or rather to the condition of your brain.

MUCH PRIZED HEIRLOOM

Indian Chief Has Valued Relic of Troublous Days

Chief American Horse, of the Caughnawagas, is a staunch Britisher, despite his name. American Horse is the proud bearer of a tribe trophy which has been handed down from father to eldest son since the war of 1812. This trophy is a silver epaulette such as were conferred on the Indian leaders of courier bands during the war, by the British generals. To win one was an honor such as the decoration of the Garter or the Iron Cross. Chief American Horse may therefore, quite properly be proud of the distinction of belonging to the first Canadian nobility. True, the epaulette is a bit tarnished now from its century of use on state occasions, but it has been rather well preserved, and the distinguished looking son of the forest wears it with quite a military air on state occasions. He is with a travelling Indian show.

ARE WE GROWING MAD?

Some Reasons For "Yes" to Queen Victoria's Question

"I think," Queen Victoria remarked one day towards the end of her reign, "that people are getting more mad."

And this belief certainly is being corroborated both by medical evidence and statistics. In 1912, no fewer than 135,661 people, certified as insane, were under care in England and Wales; and, although this number exceeds that recorded in the previous year by 2,164, the increase shown is only very slightly above that recorded annually during the ten preceding years.

These figures really are alarming, and should give the would-be social reformer food for serious thought. In 1859, the ratio of insane people to population per 10,000 was 18.67 per cent. By 1912, the ratio increased to 37.12 per cent.; and, according to Dr. Forbes Winslow, if this rate of increase be maintained, three hundred years hence there will be more mad people than sane.

A MISER'S DEATH

Had Plenty of Money Yet Could Not Afford Butter

An old man named George Lovett was found dead in an old tumble-down cabin in the Red Bog, Belturbet. In his clothes the police found a five-pound note, two one-pound notes, ten shillings in silver, and twopence, while in a small box they discovered a deposit receipt for $500. The old man appeared to live in great poverty, grudging himself the comfort of a halfpenny candle. A few days previous to his death he asked a neighbor to bring him a pound of treacle for his bread, as he could not afford, he said, to buy butter. He was passed for the old age pension, to receive his book on the day he died.

KNEW DAN O'CONNELL

John Reilly Belonged to a Family of Great Longevity

The death has taken place of Mr. John Reilly, Ireland, at the age of 101. The deceased, who was one of the best known devotees of cock-fighting in the north of Ireland, was personally acquainted with Daniel O'Connell, whom he met at the great Tara meeting. He was one of a family of sixteen. A few years ago the eldest brother died in America at the age of 113 and was accorded a public funeral.

Notable Minister Dead

A notable figure in the Welsh Congregational ministry passed away in the person of the Rev. David Griffith, Bethel, near Carnarvon, who was within a few months of attaining his ninetieth year. PROVIDING A WATER SUPPLY

Natives of the Soudan Utilize a Hollow Tree, Which Serves the Purpose Admirably.

Surely the strangest use to which a growing tree can be put is to turn it into a reservoir. Yet this is what the people of Kordofan in the Soudan do with the tree which the botanists call "Adansonia Digitata."

The tree, which is known to the natives by the name of "Homr," groups being called "Tebeldi," attains a considerable height. The trunk, which measures from 30 to 35 feet in circumference, is, like so many of the bamboo family, hollow, and the natives have discovered that it makes an excellent cistern for storing water, for the arid season. Should the cavity not be large enough the natives scoop it out still further. The Soudanese have also a method of cutting the opening for the reception of the water just at the top of the trunk where the branches begin, so that during the rainfall the great off-shoots of the tree act as gutters and guide the water into the trunk. At the same time pools are dug at the foot of the tree to collect the rain and from these are water is transferred to the trunk by buckets. Sometimes, though rarely, the tree cracks under the weight of the water, after which the trunk is of little use. However, the natives have found that cracks can be successfully stopped with cement, and recently a number of broken-down trees have been thus repaired.

Curiously enough, the presence of large quantities of water in the trunks in no way impairs the growth of the trees, whose use in this way is undoubtedly an ingenious solution of the water supply problem.

SPORT PORTFOLIO

France May Make Physical Training Department of Government

The development of sport and athletics may shortly be taken under the direct supervision of the French Government, the idea being that physical training of the rising generation is quite as important to the nation as art or railways, and that it is in accord with the new spirit of progress in France.

The French Cabinet has under consideration the question of asking Parliament to create an Under Secretary of State, who shall be attached to the Ministry of Labor, and whose duties will be solely to look after sporting affairs.

Important Notice

In the Interests of Suffering Humanity

February 28, 1912.
245 Spence St., Winnipeg.
The Sanol Manufacturing Co. Ltd.,
Winnipeg, Man.

Gentlemen,—

I beg to draw your attention to the fact that I have suffered from rheumatism for the last nine years, and particularly for the last five. I have been unable to stand, walk, or in fact, help myself in any way, my knees and elbows swollen, drawn and stiff, could not bend them in any way. I tried everything, went to the Banff Springs three months in 1906, twice to Hot Springs, Arkansas, two months in 1907, four months in 1908, done me no good. I heard of SANOL last September and have been taking it ever since, and I am glad to say the swelling is about all gone. I am going around the house on crutches, also my joints are loosening and straightening, and I fully expect that SANOL will cure me.

I believe SANOL will cure rheumatism, for my case is a hard one, and in fact has been pronounced incurable, and if I improve for the next three months as I have for the last three I will be walking in good shape.

I remain,
Yours truly,
John J. Lane.

P.S.—You can show this letter to anyone you feel like, and send them to me as I can tell them better than I can write it.

The Oldest Aviator

A gentleman named Clausen probably holds the world's record as the oldest aviator. He is eighty-three, and recently took his first flight on a Farman biplane at Copenhagen. He states that fifty years ago a woman, telling him his fortune by cards, predicted that he would fly, and he has lived to see this prediction fulfilled.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at the office of any Local Agent of Dominion Lands (not Sub-agency), on certain conditions.

Duties.—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required in every case, except when residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside of his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Six months residence in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and 50 acres extra cultivation. The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land after report by Homestead Inspector on application for patent.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price, $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

Uses of Water

Of the [illegible] [illegible]

HOUSEHOLD HELPS

To remove fruit stains from the hands, rub them with the juice of a tomato.

Milk will not turn sour if a teaspoonful of fine salt be added to every quart.

To prevent mustard from drying in the mustard pot, add a little salt when making it.

To make glassware clear and sparkling, add a little washing blue to the [illegible] when washing.

When using a sewing machine, if the thread breaks easily, soak spool and all in water for about two minutes.

When preparing onions, turnips, and carrots for cooking, cut across the fibre, as this makes them more tender when cooked.

After filling a lamp with oil, damp a cloth with vinegar and rub the reservoir till quite dry. This will prevent the lamp from sweating.

When washing colored or patterned materials in which the colors may run, one teaspoonful of blue-black ink added to the tub of water will set the colors once and for all.

A cut lemon may be kept for a long time by laying on a piece of waxed paper, with the cut side downwards, and folding the paper over it in such a way as to exclude the air.

To soften hard water, into four gallons and a half of water stir one ounce of quicklime. Let it settle, and then pour off the clear solution, which will be enough to add to two barrels of hard water.

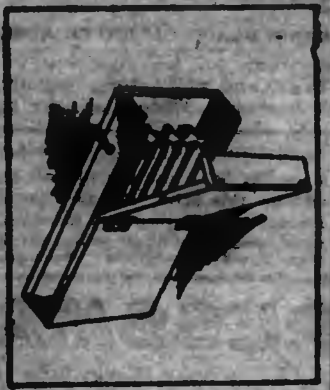
An agreeable method of changing the atmosphere in an invalid's room is to pour some eau de Cologne into a soup plate, and with a lighted match set fire to it. The spirit will impart a delightfully-refreshing odor to the air.

If you are a sufferer from rheumatism, [illegible] dyspepsia or neuralgia, eat plenty of celery, either stewed or raw. If stewed, very little water should be used, so as not to waste the valuable salts contained in this vegetable.

GOOD TOOL HOLDER

Grooves Keep Bits or Chisels of Various Sizes Apart

This convenient box for holding tools will keep separate a number of bits or chisels of different sizes, and each can be selected and removed in a twinkling. The box is a flat, rectangular affair, with a lid that consists of half of the top and one end, as the cut shows. The inside of the box is divided into two by a lengthwise partition, with different size grooves on both sides. This partition [illegible] within a few inches of the upper end of the box so that when the lid is opened the ends of the tools project beyond it and make them quickly accessible. With each tool separate, as in this receptacle, the nicking of points and edges, as happens when they are jumbled up together, is obviated.



EASY TO SELECT TOOL.

World's Smallest Tree

The smallest tree in the world is the birch found in Greenland. It is only three inches in height, but spreads in a circle about three feet in diameter.

A household novelty is a lifter for removing fruit jars from high shelves.

KITCHEN KEYNOTES

If a white shirt is scorched when ironed, the brown marks may be removed by rubbing them with a little dry borax.

A teaspoonful of borax to a quart of water will make hard water soft, so that it can be used for washing the most delicate skin.

To thread a darning-needle, take a length of cotton, put the two ends together and thread through the eye, put wool through loop and draw it.

To prevent custard dishes or glasses from cracking when pouring boiled custard into them, place the dish on a damp cloth. This plan is most effective.

Soap that is allowed to dry and harden lasts twice as long as if used when fresh. Therefore it is cheaper to buy it in quantity and keep it in a dry place.

When washing pudding cloths, throw some orange peelings into the water. This collects the grease and helps to make the cloths white and clean looking.

Hot water marks may be removed from japanned trays by the simple process of rubbing them over well with sweet oil, and then polishing with a little dry flour on a soft duster.

To curl a feather that has become damaged with rain or dew, sprinkle it thickly with common salt and shake before a bright fire until dry, when you will find it as good as new.

Save all odd bits of twine, knot them together, then knit with steel needles into pieces about a foot or more square. These make excellent dishcloths for saucepans and pie dishes.

Before putting curtain hooks in curtains in damp weather, rub the pins with a clean, oily rag. It prevents them rusting and tearing the curtain, and they can be taken in and out more easily.

Use For Sour Cream

When cream is only slightly sour it may be made delicious to serve with puddings, etc., in the following way. Put it into a basin with the juice of a lemon and a tablespoonful of sugar, and whip until quite stiff. This treatment makes it excellent, and increases the quantity at the same time.

Mending Window Blinds

If you want to patch your window blinds, don't sew on the patches. Instead, paste them on with hot starch and press down with a warm iron. They will look neater than if sewn, because the stitches would be apparent, whereas a pasted-on patch is almost invisible.

Plea of the Newly-Married

There was much merriment at the New Ross Guardians' meeting on the reading of a letter from a laborer stating that, noting that the Board would only give cottages to married men, he had "married the girl at last," and that, as his having no house was "not conducive to happiness," he hoped the Board would "hurry up" and grant him a cottage.

Bright, Ruddy Cheeks For Pale Girls

NO LONGER ANY NEED TO BE PALE, WEAK OR ANAEMIC.

By Following the Advice of Miss [illegible] Even You Can Quickly Become Strong Again.

The pallid girl always lacks appetite. What little she eats is badly digested.

At night she is restless, she dozes, but doesn't sleep soundly.

Vital force must be increased, new blood must be supplied and a general upbuilding take place before she will [illegible].

Dr. Hamilton has invaluable experience in these cases and found nothing so prompt in building up young women as his vegetable pills of Mandrake and Butternut.

Dr. Hamilton's Pills begin by cleansing the system and purifying the blood; they also improve digestion and render food ready for absorption. Additional [illegible] is rapidly supplied and the patient [illegible].

Full of spirit, ruddy and strong is the girl that makes her system by the use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

The following recent letter from Miss [illegible], of [illegible], speaks for itself:

[illegible] using Dr. Hamilton's Pills I [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] in the morning [illegible] [illegible] felt tired and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] over my body. [illegible] [illegible] could give greater results than Dr. Hamilton's Pills and I strongly advise every young woman to use them."

All dealers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box or five boxes for $1.00, by mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Houses to Rent.

Three houses to rent on October 1st. Apply to R. J. Kidd, Real Estate, 337 Charlotte street.

At Oak Hall.

Oak Hall, which under the management of Mr. J. Maher, has made such rapid strides toward recognition among the leading stores of the city, is now fitted with an up-to-date gents' furnishing department. Mr. R. White, formerly of T. C. Elliott's Ladies' Ready-to-Wear, has taken charge of the new department, and under his capable supervision it will no doubt be a success.

Gates Working.

The G.T.R. have installed their gates at the Hunter street crossing and had them in operation yesterday. The G.T.R. have now altogether seven crossings protected, two by [illegible] and five guarded by gates. The C.P.R. have two crossings protected, one by gates and one by a flagman.

A Presentation

On Saturday a deputation of Bell Telephone Co. employees, waited upon Miss Ina [illegible] and presented her with a dainty [illegible]. The occasion was her transference to Oshawa as Chief Operator with the same company in that town. Miss [illegible] has been supervisor in the Peterborough office for a few years, and she left yesterday to take up her new duties. The good wishes of her host of friends follow her to her new post.

Musicale.

Invitations are being issued for a musicale to be given by Miss Aileen Sullivan, A.T.C.M., pianiste, pupil of [illegible], and Miss [illegible], A.T.C.M., [illegible], in the Conservatory of Music Hall on Thursday evening. All interested [illegible] [illegible] may apply for [illegible] of admission by phone [illegible], and invitations will be mailed. The [illegible] [illegible] will be Miss [illegible] [illegible], [illegible] pianist, and Miss Pearl [illegible], [illegible].

[illegible] An Afternoon

A [illegible] in police court this morning will probably [illegible] [illegible] at the next sitting of the Council [illegible] of his committees.

Joseph Turner, a [illegible] in the employ of [illegible], was charged with being drunk while in charge of a [illegible] and vehicle. He was [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] about 2.30 and at [illegible] o'clock, went to his employer's house half crying, and said he had [illegible]

[illegible] his horse which had fallen into an excavation on George Street, near Hamilton's factory. It took nearly an hour to get the animal from its unpleasant position. Ald. G. N. Gordon who was present in court, interested in another case, asked the location of the hole, and upon being informed, made notes, with a look in his eyes that boded his intentions.

Juvenile Court.

Two juvenile offenders appeared before Magistrate Dumble yesterday morning, charged with stealing some sweepings from C.P.R. cars. The cases were enlarged for a week.

Work at Buckhorn.

There is a gang of men at work at Buckhorn, putting in a new sluice drain in the new conflict dam. This is quite a hard job, and is reinforced by the concrete, making it somewhat difficult. The sluice, we are informed, will provide a means of escape for the water, and will prevent extra high water at the Chemong Lake and in the waters between Buckhorn and Bobcaygeon. The work is being carried out by the Engineering Department of the Canal, with Mr. Mark Dobson as foreman.

George St. Wharf Pavilion.

The Times was asked yesterday why it is that the pavilion at the George street wharf, which has been under construction for some time, is not being completed. The windows have not been put in or the painting done. It will be remembered that the contract for this work was given to Mr. Robert ——, and it was ultimately found that the appropriation was not sufficient to complete it. No doubt further funds will be available in the near future.

A New Kind of Varnish

A well known citizen of Peterborough, whom we will call Smith, had repeatedly promised his wife to varnish her kitchen oil cloth. Finally, in desperation, one Saturday afternoon, he donned his overalls and went at it. Monday evening it had not dried a bit.

"Something is wrong with the varnish, Henry. Where did you put the can?"

"I put it back on the cellar shelf," he answered absently from the depths of a newspaper.

She came back into the room presently with the can and stood in front of him ominously quiet, he thought, so looked up. She held the can toward him.

"Can't you read, Henry Smith? You varnished that kitchen oil cloth with Dunmore maple syrup."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

This is What a Customer Says

Being a copy of a postcard we received early last week which clearly expresses the writer's estimation of Annex merchandise:

"Dear Sirs:—

"It is a long time since you had any Mill Ends in the Annex. So please try to have some by next Wednesday. Also stockings for the bigger boys and girls.

"Yours truly,
"A Regular Customer."

This is encouraging. Is it not?

Mill Ends — $1.25 an End

DRESS GOODS, SUITINGS, COATINGS,

THIS LOT IS A DUPLICATE OF last week's sale and comprises about eighty Ends in varying lengths from 1½ to 4 yds. long. There is an excellent range of new Fall materials, in many choice colorings, the first glimpse of the Ends convincing one that only at from $2.50 to $4.00 could such goods be bought by the yard. Wednesday, Per End $1.25

"LITTLE DARLING" HOSE

This brand of children's stocking needs no introduction to the reader, because they are well known as the best Hose for children's wear. Made of all wool cashmere, with silk heels & toes. Colors are pink, sky, tan, red, cream and black. Worthy of notice is the special reduction in price to be obtained in the Annex on Wednesday

SIZES 4 TO 6 Reg. 25c for.......20c
SIZES 6½ AND 7 Reg. 30c for.......25c

WOMEN'S HOUSE WRAPPERS, 68c.

They are mostly in colors of red, grey or blue, the material being either Percale or Wrapperette. And because they are odd lines taken from regular stock, they have received a remarkable reduction in price, thus presenting a very serviceable house wrapper at a trifling cost. Wednesday 68c

All Satin Underskirts $1.49

THE COMFORTABLE WEIGHT, AND THE RICH APPEARANCE of a satin Underskirt is very seldom to be obtained at anything near the Annex price. And these Skirts, being of fine satin throughout are wonderfully showy and are cut on narrow tailored lines, with plain tops and deep pleated flounce. The colorings are beautiful and varied, including navy, brown, black, King blue, mauve, white, purple and Emerald green. In many places such a Skirt would cost nearly double our Annex price. Wednesday $1.49

BLACK SATEEN BLOUSES, 58c.

Those women who desire a Blouse of black satin, will find in these a mighty cheap and useful garment. The quality of the satin is good, the Blouse being made with tucked front, trimmed with guimpe and self buttons. Sizes are 34 to 42, while the value is nearer 85c than the Annex price.. 58c

YARD WIDE WHITE FLANNELETTE, 11c.

A very fine quality which has the well known soft, Saxony finish. From 35 to 36 inches wide in pure white, this last lot of an old mill contract will surprise you by its splendid value. Per yard 11c

SPUN GLASS LINING, 19c. YARD.

Our best quality 25c "[illegible]" spun glass lining that is used so extensively for separate underskirts and as coat linings. Black, navy, brown, grey, green, etc., are the shadings, the low Annex price per yard being 19c

PURE BLEACHED COTTON, 9c.

The purchasing of this household necessity is made particularly easy in the Annex. A cotton of good weight, even weave and soft texture, being procurable at the wonderfully low price of, per yard 9c

HEAVY WHITE WOOL BLANKETS, $2.49.

$3.25 would be nearer the real worth of these excellent blankets that are named "Cressman's Annex Special." They are of heavy white wool in double bed size, 60 by 80 inches, and are very popular amongst our Annex patrons. Wednesday per pair $2.49

WOMEN'S BLACK CASHMERE HOSE, 15c PAIR

This is a seamless, full fashioned hose of fine cashmere, dyed fast black. Neat, and well fitting, they are also cheap, being a factory clearance. Wednesday, per pair 15c

Men's Coat Sweaters 89c

THE USEFULNESS OF A SWEATER COAT at this time of year cannot be denied, and in this purchase of factory overmakes one can secure a well-made, heavily ribbed Coat, in color combinations of brown, navy, grey, cardinal, green and fawn. Mostly finished with V-shaped neck, a few having high buttoned collar. The value cannot be surpassed at the price 89c

WOMEN'S DARK PRINT BLOUSES, 29c.

A moment's consideration and you will see that the material alone could not be bought for this price. But they are a clearing lot in Navy blue print, and are neatly patterned with white stripe and figure designs. As a blouse for wear around the house, they are hard to equal —at the price. Sizes are 34, 36, and 38. Wednesday 29c

Wide Taffeta Silk Ribbons

IN EACH OF THE THREE WIDTHS —4, 5 and 6 inches—there is a complete range of all the leading colors. And the quality being equal, perhaps a trifle better than ordinary stock lines, we draw your attention to the exceedingly good value that the Annex offers at the following prices:

MANY CHANGES AT THE Y. W. C. A.

Many changes have been made at the Y.W.C.A. during the past month both in the staff of officers and also in the interior of the building.

With the wonderful success that the Y.W.C.A. has met with during the past few years it has certainly become an indispensable adjunct to the young life of the city. Besides a handsome building on Simcoe street they have also a boarding house in the south end of the city which has been very largely patronized.

The main entrance and the front hall of the parent institution present an entirely new appearance. A new and cosy office has been arranged for the financial secretary. The boarding hall is in charge of Mrs. Frederick Barnes of Montreal, who succeeded Mrs. Read. Miss Agnes C. Dyer is the new assistant secretary, while Mrs. G. W. Gray remains general secretary.

Miss Pearl Pahl, late of Alma College, Toronto, is the new house secretary at the south branch.

At the opening rally Miss Sanderson addressed a very representative audience.

All the classes conducted by the Y.W.C.A. this year promise to be the best yet, and an exceedingly large enrolment is expected. Enrolment can be made by the applicant conferring with the officers at the Association building on Simcoe street. Miss Olive [illegible], late of McGill College and holder of the Strathcona diploma in physical culture, will be in charge of the physical culture department, and the physical classes will in all probability be the most successful in the history of the institution.

BEST LAXATIVE FOR BOWELS—"CASCARETS"

They Clean Liver, sweeten Stomach, and Stop Headache, Bad Breath Indigestion, Constipation.

Get a 10-cent box.

Are you keeping your bowels, liver, and stomach clean, pure and fresh with Cascarets, or merely forcing a passageway every few days with Salts, Cathartic Pills, Castor Oil or Purgative Waters?

Stop having a bowel wash-day. Let Cascarets thoroughly cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour and fermenting food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will make you feel great by morning. They work while you sleep—never gripe, sicken or cause any inconvenience, and cost only 10 cents a box from your druggist. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never have Headache, Biliousness, Coated Tongue, Indigestion, Sour Stomach or Constipated Bowels. Cascarets belong in every household. Children just love to take them.

WILL ASSEMBLE FORDS IN TORONTO

Plants Will Be Erected in Toronto and in [illegible].

Ford City, Ont., Sept. 30.—Plans have been completed for the erection of [illegible] [illegible] plants by the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited, in Montreal and Toronto.

Both buildings will be the best factory construction and similar plants will be later erected in other cities of Canada.

This is along the lines of distribution followed in the United States, there being six assembling plants in operation and others projected for immediate building.

Cars are shipped in knock-down form from the parent plant and assembled on the ground. Both time and money are saved by handling the business in this way. When the plants at Montreal and Toronto are completed, the parts will be shipped from the Ford plant here to these assembling houses.

UNDER THE ARMS

Medical Men Find New Place to Vaccinate Girls.

Paris, Sept. 30.—Fashionable physicians here now decided that the best place to vaccinate a girl, baby or otherwise, is under the arm.

Vaccinating on the arm was long disputed with owing to the disfiguring marks shown in evening dress. Then it became the fashion to vaccinate girls on the thigh, but owing to new rulings in different European countries, this practice had to be discontinued, too. Russia, Turkey and the Balkan States, or rather their frontier representatives, now demand ocular inspection of the vaccinate marks, and naturally women object.

Industrial School Night Classes

The registration for INDUSTRIAL NIGHT SCHOOL CLASSES, under authority of the Peterborough Board of Education, will take place on WEDNESDAY and THURSDAY EVENINGS, OCTOBER 1st and 2nd, from 7.30 to 9.00, in the Old Collegiate Building, Murray Street.

It is important that all those who wish to avail themselves of these classes shall register immediately.

POLICE COURT NEWS

In Police Court this morning a frequenter at the court, was assessed $5.75 for being drunk and disorderly.

Three men named Hall, Bellest and Cole, were each fined $5 for being disorderly in a house on Queen street.

John O'Reilly was fined $5.75 for driving a vehicle while in an unsuitable condition.

Garrett Innis appeared on bail charged with seduction and supplying drugs. The case was again enlarged until Oct. 8th.

MUSICAL SOCIETY FOR PETERBORO'

A small musical society has been formed in the city, which has for its object, the study of the life and works of the old and modern masters and examples of their works. A paper on each master will be given by the members at each fortnightly meeting of the society which will be held at one another's homes.

The society is called "The Morning Musical Society," with a membership limited to 25. The first meeting will be held at Mrs. Allan's, Dowsie street, on Thursday, October 9th, at 10.30, when Beethoven will be the master studied.

The officers are as follows:

President—Mrs. R. F. Wood.
Vice-Pres.—Mrs. Allan.
Secretary—Mrs. Frederick.
Treasurer—Mrs. Fessenden.
Committee—Mrs. Rollins, Mrs. Buchanan, Miss Dorothy Allan, Miss Milburn Hill.

THE BOTTOM KNOCKED OUT OF THE WIDER MARKET CRY

Facts Which Prove That Reciprocity Would Have Injured Canada

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Oct. 1.—In view of the repeated declarations of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his co-leaders, both in the House of Commons last session and on the platform throughout the country this summer, that Reciprocity was still a leading plank of the Liberal platform, the following statistics, obtained from the Department of Customs, are particularly interesting to the farmers and fruit and vegetable growers and dairy-men of this country.

For the first four months of the present fiscal year—from 1st April to 31st July—Canada imported from the United States no less than 2,594,764 dozen eggs, valued at $572,141. She exported to the United States during the same period 1,400 dozen eggs, valued at $[illegible].

Cheese and Butter.

The Liberal party claimed that Reciprocity would increase the consumption of Canadian cheese in the United States. The facts show that for the period of four months mentioned above we imported from the United States 110,000 lbs. of cheese, valued at $21,207, on which the duty of $6,303 was paid. For the same period we exported to the United States 11,000 lbs. of cheese valued at $2,124.

With regard to butter, we imported 80,000 lbs., valued at $20,940, on which $2,355 duty was paid; and we exported about the same quantity.

And Potatoes.

The farmers of Canada were told that once the tariff barriers were removed and Reciprocity came into effect that there would be an unlimited market to the south for Canadian produce. What are the facts? We exported for the four months 114,346 bushels of potatoes, valued at $46,-816. We imported from the United States 323,837 bushels of potatoes, valued at $347,209, on which $[illegible] duty was paid; so even with the duty against the American potatoes we imported nearly three times as many potatoes during the past four months as we exported to the United States.

Poultry Imported.

The man who raises poultry on his farm has not much to hope for with reciprocity, as our exports to the United States, for the four months of live poultry were $6,725, and of dressed poultry, $47; while, during the same period we imported from the United States $77,[illegible] worth of poultry, on which the duty of $15,-417 was paid.

Imports of Wheat.

Then there is the question of wheat and the great market to the south which was promised the Canadian wheat grower by Reciprocity. What are the facts? In the four months we imported from the United States 41,[illegible] bushels of wheat, valued at $[illegible], on which the duty of $5,000 was paid. Surely, with a surplus of wheat in the Canadian West, it is hardly necessary to import 41,000 bushels in the four months from the great market to the south.

We imported fresh tomatoes to the extent of 150,000 bushels, valued at $[illegible], on which the duty of $100,-[illegible] was paid, and the statistics fail to show that we exported to the United States one tomato. There is, [illegible] a great future in [illegible] for the tomato growers of Canada.

Beans and [illegible].

Then take the item of beans. We imported from the United States for the four months 13,134 bushels, valued at $31,[illegible], on which $8,283 duty was paid. We exported to the United States 1,[illegible] bushels of beans, valued at $[illegible].

Of oatmeal and rolled oats, we imported [illegible] lbs., valued at $114, and we exported to the United States the magnificent quantity of 1 barrel of oatmeal, valued at $5, and of meal of other kinds we exported to the United States 3 barrels, valued at $11. Surely there is room here for that wider market.

We also imported from the United States during the four months $104,-[illegible] worth of hay, on which $13,[illegible] duty was collected. We also imported 300,000 bushels of oats during the four months.

Argument Refuted.

These facts and figures are interesting in that they prove that the claim for wider markets is not supported by the real conditions, as they exist, and show that the home market of Canada is increasing so rapidly that the farmer will not be led away by specious arguments concerning wider markets to the south, when he has a market right at his doors in his own land which will buy all he can produce in the way of dairy products, vegetables, etc.

NEW CAUSE OF APPENDICITIS

Paris, Oct. 2. — That appendicitis is due to water drinking is the remarkable theory put forward by a leading scientific review. The statistics collected tend to show that only 1 in 200 wine drinkers is attacked by the malady, while ten per cent. of water drinkers are said to be victims. It is also pointed out that appendicitis has become vastly more frequent, especially among the well-to-do classes, since water drinking has become fashionable, that is during the last twenty-five years, and the remarkable case is cited of a family of sixteen of whom six, who are water drinkers, had to be operated upon, while the others were immune.

The theory offered by several prominent medical men to account for these facts is not that water contains a microbe which may cause the complaint, for many sufferers drink mineral or boiled water, but that wine is an antiseptic and keeps down the bacilli, which, when they become too numerous, may cause appendicitis.

From this date the public is drawing the conclusion that total abstinence is an exaggerated virtue, even from a scientific point of view.

NATIONALISTS IN FIGHTING MOOD; NO CONFERENCE

Belfast, Oct. 1.—That Nationalists are unwilling to enter any conference which would consider the suggestion that Ulster be left outside the scope of Home Rule was the statement made in an interview by a prominent Nationalist here to-day. He said: "It is altogether impracticable that Ulster, though pretending to wish to remain part of the Union, would demand a government of equal powers with Dublin. It would be as if Ottawa and Quebec had Federal Parliaments, each responsible only directly to the King's Ministers at Westminster.

"I am sure that would not work in Canada and that is why Mr. Redmond makes clear that he must have in Dublin one Parliament responsible for the whole Island. He already declared he was willing to consider further suggestions the Convention might put forward to safeguard the religious rights of the Protestants but that is as far as we will go."

OVERTURES TO MR. BONAR LAW

Messages passing between Bonar Law and Carson suggest the British meeting of Ministers resulted in some overtures being made to the leader of the Opposition. In an interview an Ulster leader to-day said it was possible some scheme similar to that in Canada of the Provincial Legislatures, which would include Northeast Ireland and South Ireland, two districts of Scotland and two in Wales, also several in England, might be made responsible direct to Westminster. That would suit only part of the Ulsterites for unless the Legislature's powers were much more curtailed than in Canada Ulstermen think this would lead to disunion. On the other hand Nationalists demand Parliamentary powers at least, as strong as those at Ottawa.

PLANS FOR PRINCE ARTHUR'S WEDDING

London, Oct. 1.—Arrangements for the wedding breakfast and reception to Prince Arthur of Connaught and the Duchess of Fife at St. James Palace after their marriage are almost complete.

The reception at St. James will be a departure from precedent, as on the occasion of the King's marriage the guests returned to Buckingham Palace. The utilization of the banqueting hall at St. James, however, is at the King's express command. His Majesty having been impressed by the possibilities of the magnificent apartments when he entertained the Duke and Duchess of Connaught there on the eve of his coronation, the Duke having then remarked that St. James Palace should be more frequently utilized for state functions.

MIXED PROGRAMME AT THE BOARD OF WORKS, LAST NIGHT

The Board of Works met in regular session last night. There were present Ald. Buller, chairman, Aldermen Johnston, Gillespie, Anderson, City Engineer Parsons and City Solicitor Hall.

Ald. Buller said there was one thing should be seen to and that was to stop digging trenches on both sides of the street railway track which would be, if not stopped, the cause of a lot of actions for damages.

A letter was read from Mr. Dumble, re the Downie street creek. It was pointed out that the Board was taking action to protect Mr. Dumble and inconvenience everybody else. The letter was left over to the chairman and City Engineer.

RAILWAY COMMISSION.

A letter was read from the Board of Railway Commissioners with regard to the extension of the C.P.R. crossing at King street. Solicitor Hall wrote the Board objecting to the position of the proposed switches, inasmuch as the location of the switching would greatly interfere with the traffic on King street, which would one day be utilized to the water front, which would be owned by the city. It was proposed by Ald. Gillespie, seconded by Ald. Anderson, that the chairman of the Board and other members of the Council attend the Commission which will sit for the consideration of the above matter, and also consideration of the underground wires, and the crossing at the [illegible], which will be held at Toronto on Oct. 13th.

RE OVEREND PROPERTY.

The matter of purchasing the Overend property on Prince street, which has been under consideration before, was left in the hands of the Mayor and Chairman of the Board.

RAILWAY SIDING.

The matter of a railway siding to Messrs. Turner's factory was again raised. Alderman Gillespie proposed and Ald. Johnston seconded that no action be taken.

[illegible]

[illegible] 10 miles in the centre of the city. The league has offered to furnish signs at cost. The letter was referred to next year's sitting, as the season is now practically over.

HYDRAULIC LANDS.

The question of diverting Hunter street was decided last night. A by-law will be prepared conveying to the Peterborough Hydraulic Company a strip of land on the south side of Hunter street, in accordance with the original agreement and provided for by a special course of legislation enacted this spring.

STREET PAVING.

Ald. Buller wanted to know, where, if at all, the street paving would be continued after Hunter street was

CARUSO JUST BURNS UP MONEY; SINGS FOR NOTHING

Newspaper States Correspondent Finds Great Tenor Digging In His Garden

Rome, Oct. 1.—Your correspondent found Caruso in the garden of his Villa Bellosguardo, digging away for dear life.

"I can dig like the poorest Italian" said he, "and don't I look like one." Caruso wore a pair of fringed and patched trousers, a collarless shirt that was probably clean the week before and was without shoes and socks.

"I wish there were no hotels in the world," he continued, "then nobody would find me. As it is, I have bribed the inn-keepers in the nearest village, Belvedere, to give the wrong directions."

"I have to be very careful about being invisible here for the reason that almost every woman in the neighborhood is fully persuaded that she has a voice which I ought to train—free of charge, of course. If, on driving out, you had been accompanied by a lady, I would have taken to the woods at once. I draw the line at trying voices.

"When I want to see people I go to Florence or drive over to the theatre at Montecatini. There I am always [illegible] by strangers and welcomed by numerous friends."

"Are you studying any new parts?" asked your correspondent.

"Only the tenor role in the new opera Julien by Charpentier," said Caruso, "but come in, I feel like throwing away a couple of thousand dollars."

He conducted your correspondent to the music room and sang for him several French, English, Italian and one German song, winding up with Lasciati Amare, a beautiful aria which Leoncavallo just dedicated to him. Caruso sang with his full voice—at least five thousand dollars worth.

GREAT SENSATION IN PETERBORO' HISTORY

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—There is a deal of truth in what the Reverend James Webb, M. A., the pastor of the Murray Street Baptist Church, says in his crushing sermon in answer to the consecration of the new Bishop of Peterborough, which took place on Wednesday last, when the new bishop on his bended knees before the Pope, in the [illegible] of his Special Ambassador Extraordinary, the Hon. Excellency [illegible] Stagni, swore in Latin to curse heretics and heresy and of course all forms of Protestantism and Protestants. This coming after the new bishop's address to the citizens of Peterborough on Sunday before, in which he requested co-operation and peace was a good deal like asking the people to commit hari-kari, viz.: to co-operate in their own damnation and cursation. Mr. Webb was too clever for them and understanding Latin was able to know what was really going on when the Mayor and Aldermen and leading citizens were sitting looking on, praying that the new bishop would have more power given to him for peace and co-operation in the good work of cursing and damning Protestants and traitors. Rev. Webb has risen to be the chief [illegible] us by this great work. But for him we would have been pacified into a childlike sleep, not knowing that our nurse was about to do the child grievous injury. After all this double-dealing, if Protestants are fooled they do deserve to be and the vote-hunters, who rely upon the Catholic vote will get it in the neck at the first opportunity and don't you forget it.

THE BOYNE.

HE WANTED TO MAKE WHOLE WORLD SHUDDER

Berlin, Oct. 1.—The sensation of the day is still the amazing case of Ernest Wagner, the school teacher, who murdered no fewer than sixteen persons in the village of Muhlhausen, a couple of weeks ago. A vigorous discussion as to his sanity is being carried on, although various doctors who have seen the man state that he does not show the usual signs of homicidal mania.

Whatever form of madness he may be suffering from, there can be no doubt that a morbid grudge against humanity and a deep desire for notoriety were among the complex motives that impelled him to his atrocious crime. In the course of an examination Wagner remarked: "I wanted to make the whole world shudder with horror."

That the crime was premeditated there is no shadow of a doubt. Indeed, it seems that the man had been turning over some such scheme in his mind for many years. Some insight into the mind of this extraordinary man may be obtained from a letter which he sent to the Tagblatt of Stuttgart, shortly before doing the deed. In the course of this epistle he wrote:

"The human species are too numerous; half are not worth their keep, are unhealthy and should be slaughtered."

NO HOPE FOR CHARLES GIBSON LAW MUST TAKE ITS COURSE

Ottawa, Oct. 1.—The law must take its course in the case of Charles Gibson, of Toronto, sentenced to be hanged on Oct. 9, for the murder of Myer Rosenthal over a year ago. Such is the final decision of the Governor-in-Council this morning. Gibson will hang.

Hon. C. J. Doherty, Minister of Justice, after long and careful consideration of the trial evidence, and also of affidavits later submitted upon request for a new trial, reported that the application could not be granted, as it was not founded on sufficient material to justify him in ordering a second trial.

The first trial, it is considered, was very carefully conducted, and the verdict of the jury was concurred in by Sir William Mulock, who presided at the trial. Under the circumstances a new trial could not be granted upon a very strong case as to newly discovered evidence not available at the first trial.

No such case, in the opinion of the Department and the Governor-in-Council, has been made out or presented.

GIVEN EVERY CHANCE.

In addition to the careful consideration of the Minister of Justice and the officials of his department, the case was considered many times in Cabinet Council. Such was the desire to give the condemned man every benefit of the doubt that a three months' reprieve was granted. On further consideration of evidence and affidavits, however, the Privy Council has not been able to recommend to His Excellency the Administrator any interference with the ordinary course of justice.

On receiving the Order-in-Council, his Excellency Sir Charles Fitzpatrick gave it two days' consideration before affixing his signature. He entirely concurred in the opinion of the Privy Council.

NO NEED FOR FEAR OVER U. S. TARIFF

New York, Oct. 1.—The Journal of Commerce says to-day:

"Some of the fears entertained in Canada regarding the new tariff will not be realized. If Canadian exports to the United States increase materially as the result of the tariff, it will be a benefit to both countries, whether the changes are made in Canada or not.

"There will inevitably be more or less increase in our exports to Canada which now vastly exceed our imports from there, on account of the demand for cotton, for machinery and for many articles of manufacture which we can supply to better advantage than they can be supplied from elsewhere, even with the preferential tariff on those from Great Britain.

"There will be an advantage in cheaper transportation and in exchange by direct trade."

BRITISH LIBERAL M. P. DOES NOT AGREE WITH HOME RULE

Toronto, Oct. 1.—James Wishart, a linen manufacturer, from Kirkcaldy, Scotland and a Liberal, who has broken with the Asquith Government in England owing to the Home Rule bill, is at the Queen's Hotel. Mr. Wishart gave an interview to-day on the subject of Home Rule, in which he sets forth his reasons for opposing this item in the program of his party.

He said that if it were proposed to give Ireland a constitution similar to that of one of the provinces in the Dominion, he would support the proposal. He is a great admirer of Canada's Federal system. He points out however, that the Home Rule bill gives Ireland a national existence independent of England, Scotland and Wales, and yet will permit her to retain forty members in the Imperial Parliament to influence the domestic affairs of the other divisions of the British Isles. The bill would permit Ireland to constitute her own courts, appoint her own judges, and even raise her own tariff against England if she wished to do so.

Mr. Wishart pictured as against this state the state of the province of Quebec in Canada. He pointed out that there was in Quebec and in Ireland a large rural population of Roman Catholics and an urban population largely Protestant. He regarded the Quebec plan of government much more favorable than the Home Rule bill. Quebec was able to manage her own local affairs, but controlled in other matters, just as the other Provinces are controlled, by Federal Parliament at Ottawa.

ADMIRALTY RECOGNIZES UNION

Will Allow Workers in Dockyards to Submit Grievances.

London, Oct. 1.—The very important concession was made by the British Admiralty to-day of officially recognizing trades unions.

In reply to the demands of the dockyard men the Admiralty agreed hereafter, in the event of disputes, to meet deputations of the workmen, either in London or at the dockyards. It also will allow them to be accompanied by trades union leaders not employed in the dockyards.

RECOGNITION FOR CHINESE REPUBLIC

Pekin, China, Oct. 1.—The principle of the recognition of the Chinese Republic was adopted to-day at a meeting of the Diplomatic corps here, but the question of the date of recognition was adjourned until the next meeting on October [illegible]. It is understood that it is the general intention to recognize the republic immediately after the election of the President, which probably will take place on October [illegible].

MYSTERY DEEPENS IN THE LAKEFIELD AUTO ACCIDENT

Who Was the Victim—Lately Identified as Eck—Body Was Sent to University of Toronto

More mystery has been added to last Thursday morning's automobile accident above Lakefield, when an unknown man driving with Mr. Roland Darcy, was instantly killed by their car overturning at a sharp bend in the road.

This morning the body was identified by Mr. W. A. Bell, a farmer residing on the 7th line of Smith, who states that he is confident the body is that of James Vincent Eck, who worked as a hired man with him when Mr. Bell was living near Selwyn.

Having read of the doubt as to the identity of the victim of the accident it is learned that Mr. Bell came into the city this morning and examined the body at Bellegham's Undertaking establishment. A scar in the hollow of one knee, a token of the South African War, and a tatooed Indian girl on one arm above the wrist, were the marks by which Mr. Eck was known to Mr. Bell.

The main question confronting the authorities swings round his identity. Is the man Eck, or Windover, or McDonald, or Richardson, or some one else. In the meantime the inquest will be resumed at Lakefield to-morrow.

It was learned from Lakefield that the body had been sent to Peterborough, and yesterday morning it was forwarded to the University of Toronto, as an unclaimed body. There it will be held fifteen days to await a chance claimant.

Eck worked with a number of farmers in the Selwyn district, and after that went to the lumber camps, where he is known to have spent a winter or two.

Thus, the different indications of his identity seem to be equally substantiated, but in neither case apparently has there been strong evidence that would remove all doubt. This will probably be cleared up at the inquest.

The victim was in Peterborough for several days before the accident and gave his name as McDonald, while at least in one instance he stated that his name was Richardson. He was picked up here by Darcy and accompanied the latter to Lakefield. Next morning the two started for Buckhorn in Darcy's car, which turned turtle and the man was killed. The body was viewed by a number of Lakefield people and they identified it as Ephriam Windover, formerly of Buckhorn. This identification was accepted until that evening when several of Windover's relatives, including his wife, stated that the body was not Windover's. This in spite of the fact that identification marks including scars on the wrist and knee, a triangular scar on the eye lid and a broken finger, were all found. Windover who disappeared from this section several years ago with a warrant for his arrest, is said to have been quite bald, while the dead man had brown hair.

On Friday, William Jenkins, a lumberman, identified the body as that of Wm. Richardson, a man who had been employed at Carew's lumber camp in the north country. He stated that he had worked with the man for some time and was positive as to his identity.

Now comes the identification of the victim as James Vincent Eck.

The inquest into the death of this man will be resumed by the coroner.

If It Is Eck?

If the man is Eck, then it is fairly easy to follow his past. High County Constable Cochrane yesterday morning had an insurance policy which Mr. Bell said Mr. Eck had left with him. It was for $2,000, with the Imperial Life and was written at St. Catharines, February 1, 1911. It gave the name as above and age 35 years, September just passed. He had produced a death certificate showing that his mother had been a Spanish Countess, and said that he was sent out from the Old Country by his father with an allowance of $200 a month.

He was regarded as a young man who with efforts in his own behalf would easily have made a name for himself. He was well liked, and apparently had been a good student.

The matter will probably be cleared up to-day.

Spelling Didn't Count.

A southern negro put up a sign on his house, "For Sail." He was ridiculed, and changed it to "[illegible]," and finally tried a third time, his sign reading "[illegible]."

It had not been up an hour when an old colored man came along and queried: "Does you mean dat dis place am fur Sally? What yo' gwine to giv' de place to Sally fur?"

"Am you findin' fault wid dat sign?" asked the other.

"Well, I doan' quite catch on to de spellin."

"You doan' eh? Has you got seben hundred dollars to pay cash down fur dis place?"

"No, sah."

"Den you pass on, an' shet up! Maybe I doan spell just the same as you do, but I've prospects of handling some seven hundred dollars while you got head knees out to de weddah. Go 'long, ole man; you too fly on jogerfy."

THE RECIPE BOOK

Soup With Noodles—Vegetable or meat soup with noodles is relished occasionally. For noodles, beat an egg, and add a pinch of salt and flour enough to make a stiff dough. Roll out in a thin sheet, dredge with flour to keep from sticking. Next, roll up this thin sheet as you would a jelly cake and slice very thin. One half hour before the soup is served add the noodles.

Canned Rhubarb—[illegible] [illegible] run full force into the jar for 15 minutes till air is excluded. Screw on the top while the jar is still under water. Be sure that it is perfectly air-tight. The contents should keep and be just like fresh rhubarb.

Stuffed Potatoes—Bake the potatoes. When they are done, take out of the oven, cut in halves and scoop out of their jackets. Mash with butter until they are smooth; pepper and salt. Put them back again into their jackets. Put them into the oven for a few minutes to heat and brown on the top.

Baked Hominy—Mash enough left-over hominy to fill an ordinary baking dish, after all lumps are eliminated. Add two eggs, one tablespoonful of flour, with one teaspoonful of baking powder, salt, pepper and about half a cupful of milk, to make a stiff batter. Put all this in a dish and bake three-quarters of an hour.

Bread Pudding—Pour two cupfuls of boiling milk over half an ordinary loaf of stale bread. Mash this mixture until smooth and add one tablespoonful of butter. Add three well-beaten eggs, when this is cold, one half cup ful of white sugar, a little nutmeg one teaspoonful of vanilla, and one cupful of mixed citron, seeded raisins and currants. Bake or boil about three-quarters of an hour. Serve hot with or without hard sauce.

Skeletons of 400 A.D.

Fourteen skeletons, with the remains of bronze-wire wristlets, have been dug up on the farm of Mr. T. C. Ratcliffe at Chesterton, near Peterborough. Near the skeletons were scraps of Roman pottery and glass, and it is thought that the remains may date back to the Roman occupation about 400 A.D.

Dowries for Servant Girls

Wedding dowries of $310 each have been granted to two domestic servants, Alice Elizabeth Johnston, daughter of a railway guard, and Lily Harby, daughter of a groom, by the trustees of a fund of $20,000 left by Mrs. Waldo-Sibthorp, who was three times married, to provide annually dowries to two poor Sleaford girls.

Weighing about 24 lb., a cannon ball has been dug up by a workman near King John's Palace, Eltham, Kent.

Gramophone for Prayers

At a Congregational soiree in Rothesay one of the speakers, a layman, referred to the recent discussion in the Presbytery of Glasgow on the reading of private prayers, and said it was a lamentable state of matters if ministers were unable to conduct the Church services according to Presbyterian usage. If ministers lacked the ability to perform the duties for which they were so well paid he would suggest—if he might do so without irreverence—the introduction of the gramophone into the service of the Church.

Eddy's Matches

The Choice of Generations

Sixty-two years ago your Grandmother kindled the fire with the "Eight-day" sulphur—the first EDDY product. To-day most of the nine million Canadians favor the new silent "Ses-qui" non-poisonous matches, or one of the many other brands made by EDDY. Ask your dealer.

RATS IN MANITOBA

Efforts to Stamp Out Pests Which Cause Immense Losses

The Deputy Minister of Agriculture for Manitoba estimated the damage done by the brown rat at a million dollars a year. According to the report of the government inspectors, the rats in the province move in a radius of fifteen miles each year. A few years ago the Department produced a virus that it was thought would eliminate the pest. There was quite a considerable amount of interest at first, and many applications were made for the virus. Thousands of rats were destroyed by its use. But, by and by, the public interest lagged.

At Gretna, Mr. J. J. Golden conducted some interesting experiments in order to determine the amount of food a rat would consume per day, and, at the same time to test the virus.

A number of rats were caught alive in the traps and fed, and, while the amount of food consumed varied, Mr. Golden demonstrated beyond peradventure of a doubt the efficacy of the virus in the following manner:

Two rats were caught and one of them received an injection of the virus. Within two days it died while the other rat, not having been provided with food, proceeded to devour its dead comrade. Within twenty-four hours it had consumed all of the dead rat, with the exception of half an inch of the tail, and it succumbed within a few hours, to the poison which had been injected into the other rat.

Among other interesting experiments, Mr. Golden found that the rats, while mainly confining themselves to the cities and towns, made frequent visits into the fields and destroyed quantities of grain. Near the southern border of Manitoba a farmer found sixteen rats in a shock of corn in the spring, which demonstrated that this colony had lived in this particular place throughout the winter, and had fed upon the grain and the cornstalks.

A FAMOUS CAT

Has Been Rat Chasing for a Quarter of a Century

Interest is centered in the announcement that Tiger, the pet cat of the Great Eastern Railway Company's goods sheds at Peterborough, England, who is reputed to be about twenty-seven years old, was practically retired. Few cats live much beyond fourteen or fifteen years. During her long life Tiger is said to have killed thousands of rats. She is a light tabby, and first visited the sheds for refuge during a fire at a timber yard close by over twenty-six years ago, having been driven from her home in a timber stack by the flames. Tiger has always been wild, and has obtained her own food, consisting almost entirely of rats, of which she would kill as many as fourteen and fifteen in one night. Her custom was to bring all the rats alive to one of the men employed in the sheds, and she would not eat one until she received permission.

DANGER IN ATHLETICS

Wide Difference in Healthy Exercise and Machine Work Says Physician.

Athletic recklessness is a growing health menace, says a widely known physician. The enthusiasts for physical education have hitherto failed to emphasize the important distinction between those strenuous performances which tax the body to its utmost (comprehended in the term "athletics") and that exercise of the bodily functions more appropriately included under the designation "physical education."

Europeans have a happy expression for the employment of their bodily activities in the word "sport," which implies the combination of a healthy spirit of pleasure and satisfaction with which we call exercise. "Athletics" have long been under the dominance of so-called "trainers," frequently men of keen judgment and technical skill, but usually persons without any systematic acquaintance with physiological truths. Their sole concern is to turn out a winning team or a victorious athletic giant.

University athletics and the conduct of intercollegiate contests should receive a more serious consideration from those who assume responsibility for these features of college life. This is a most timely moment in which to inaugurate a campaign against athletic recklessness. If college athletics of to-day are a menace to health, they cannot escape the attack of those who are alert for every evidence of human extravagance and waste.

The best intellectual feature of rival contests—the encouragement for each man to put forth the best that is in him and to exercise his own ingenuity in the development and maintenance of an efficient, superior body—is suppressed by the advent of that guardian saint—the trainer. It can be freely admitted that the cultivation of physical intelligence furnishes a valuable asset to man in developing co-ordination and promoting health and happiness.

But when the results of vigorous sports or exhausting struggles are involved, something more than a "pardonable pride in an expanding chest and swelling biceps" should furnish the guiding motive. The obvious abuses of athletics must be threshed out.

INSPIRED THE BOYS

Chauncey Elliott Was a First Class All-round Sport

Chauncey Elliott, all-round sport, than whom in his day no Canadian had a better athletic record held his friends by his magnetic personal qualities. At any line of sports he was equally at home, though baseball, rugby, and hockey appealed to him most of all. He was perfectly at home in any company. He had a fund of good stories, and his experiences were always interesting, especially as he had the happy faculty of invariably seeing the humorous side of things. He was of a happy-go-lucky, roving disposition, and wandered around a great deal in his lifetime. The great secret of his success in coaching was not so much what he taught the players, but the inspiration he gave them to do their very best all the time. As a referee he enjoyed the complete confidence of the players, and as a consequence he was always in great demand. The harder the task, the better he liked it, and no gamer man ever stood in shoe leather.

Working For Jim Hill

One of the pioneers in the development of the northwest tells a story illustrative of the great prominence of James J. Hill in the early days of the building of railroads and settlement of the northwestern states. The story is of a Swede attending a revival meeting of the old-fashioned kind, one in which the revivalists excited the emotions, got the converts shouting, and resorted to personal exhortation. The Swede sat stolid, while half of the audience was weeping, confessing or shouting hallelujah. One of the preachers tried a personal appeal.

"Work for the Lord!" he shouted. "Come forward, Ole! Come forward! Won't you work for the Lord?"

"Naw," drawled the Swede impassively. "Aye dank not! Aye bane got good yob by Yim Hill."

"A Progressive Peterborough"

Our Point of View

A 75-year-old woman of Laporte, Ind., walked fifteen miles to set fire to her son's house. What a fine recruit she would be for Sister Emmaline Pankhurt's arson squad!

We are inclined to believe that the fact that Mrs. Pankhurst does not suffer ill effects from her hunger strikes is due to the years of training in a boarding house.

No, Miss Sadie, all men do not admire the slit skirt. It is what the skirt reveals that commands their admiration.

The reforms instituted by the department of customs, resulting in better protection of the revenue and increased facilities for transacting customs business by the public are worthy tributes to the capacity of Hon. Dr. Reid.

A Warm Session

Five hundred questions asked by T. M. Tweedie, member for Calgary in the Provincial Legislature now in session in Edmonton, will keep the members of the government and a score of departmental clerks busy during the next three weeks. Meanwhile other members of the Opposition will continue to keep Premier Arthur L. Sifton and the members of his executive council guessing as to additional questions. The chief legislation for this session is the building of the Alberta & Great Waterways Railway from Edmonton to Fort McMurray, 290 miles. Some say that the Opposition will urge the government to build the road and it is hinted that the entire railway policy will be subjected to the most searching criticism by the Conservative minority. J. D. McArthur, of Winnipeg, recently undertook to build the line.

Tax Exemptions

The question of Tax Exemption is forcing itself to the front, and rightly so. To our minds the custom has become indefensible, says the Kingston Standard. The time has passed when any exemptions from taxes are necessary or advisable. This opinion is spreading as witness the agitation in Montreal and Toronto against the custom. In times past, perhaps it was wise, in the same way it was necessary to grant subsidies to the railways in order to get them built. This, however, does not apply to ecclesiastical property.

Some people claim that the matter is a complicated one, but it surely is not so. So far as church property is concerned, there would not be much objection probably to the edifices being exempted. If people want churches they should be prepared to pay for them as much as for their houses. Let all be treated alike. It is simply outrageous that church property which brings in revenue should not be taxed; more especially as in a large number of cases in Canada the land is producing a trifle as compared with what it might if it were not being held for speculative purposes.

We do not agree with exemptions and bonuses to industries, though Kingston has been forced to grant them in order to keep on equal terms with other cities. We believe that if an intending manufacturer asked for these in Great Britain he would be looked upon as mad or impertinent. These people are expected to run their business "off their own bats." It should be so in Canada.

"I Sleep Soundly, Feel Like New"

ALL WHO LACK VIGOR, THOSE WHO ARE DESPIRITED AND WORN OUT SHOULD READ THIS CAREFULLY

Proof That Health and Renewed Vitality Quickly Return When Right Remedy is Used.

"I am only thirty years old, yet for almost two years I have felt more like seventy-five. I have found it difficult to sleep at night, and in the morning felt so depressed and heavy that effort was difficult. My hands were always clammy and perspiration on slight effort would break out all over me. It was not unnatural that I should begin to brood over the change that I should be unfit to do my work, and this dread made my sleepless nights perfect misery. After repeated trials of medicines and mixtures Dr. Hamilton's Pills gave me the first gleam of hope. From the very first I could see they were different in action from other pills. They didn't gripe and acted so naturally as if nature and not the pills were cleansing my clogged-up system. My spirits rose. I felt much better. The sluggish action of the system gave way to normal activity. Dizziness and headaches ceased, appetite, good color and ambition to work returned, and have remained. I am like a new man, and I thank Dr. Hamilton's Pills for it all."

This was the experience of J. R. Parkhurst, a well known grocery dealer in Jefferson. Follow his advice, use Dr. Hamilton's Pills for your stomach, kidneys and liver, and you'll enjoy long life and robust good health. All druggists and storekeepers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box, 5 boxes for $1.00, or postpaid from the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y.; and Kingston, Canada.

Meanwhile the understanding is that if there is any congestion of grain the Grand Trunk Pacific will operate trains over the section to Cochrane and North Bay.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

MIXED PROGRAMME AT BOARD OF WORKS

finished. He suggested that instead of starting in the middle of the business section, a start be made at McDonnell street. The asphaltic would not be laid before eight or nine days hence, and the work should go on.

City Engineer Parsons said he had figured, that if they started at Charlotte and worked up, they could go on without interference.

Ald. Johnston—Now we have started the work, we ought to keep on with it.

A resolution was passed, proposed by Ald. Gillespie, and seconded by Ald. Johnston, that the street railway company be notified that work would commence at once from Charlotte street up, so as to give them an opportunity to lay the additional rails they have agreed to do.

SEWAGE DISPOSAL.

City Engineer Parsons has been to Toronto and conversed with Dr. McCullough, of the Provincial Board of Health with regard to the sewage disposal plant, which subject has been fully described before. New ideas have been proposed. Further discussion will take place later.

MINOR MATTERS.

Ald. Johnston agitated for grading on Dennistoun avenue, and Aylmer street. This was agreed to.

Ald. Anderson—A resolution was passed two years ago that a walk should be built at the end of Dunlop street. This has not been done yet.

The Board then adjourned.

SPORTS

The Indoor Baseball League of the 57th Regiment will open its schedule next Tuesday night, when a double-header will be played. There will be two games each Tuesday and Thursday nights until the schedule is completed. All the companies of the regiment have entered teams except Companies 2 and 4, but the Brass and Bugle Bands each have a team so that altogether eight teams will fight it out for the League championship. Great interest is being shown in the competition by the men of the regiment, and it is expected that the League will be a great success.

A Kingston exchange has the following to say of Harold Hill, the local boy, who is attending Queen's University.

A few days ago the management was of the opinion that the back division would be weak, but fortunately a number of students turned out on Monday afternoon who showed the earmarks of promising players.

One of the most noticeable men who figured on the back division is a freshman from Peterborough, by the name of Hill. He is a fine runner and a sure catch. He has received considerable physical training in Peterborough under J. J. Thompson, formerly physical director at the local Y.M.C.A. Besides being a rugby player, he is spoken of as being an excellent man at 100 yards 220 yards and 440 yard dashes. He will be taken over to the R.M.C. sports on Saturday afternoon to represent the local university in these events.

LAWYERS ARE VERY HOT

Were Ignored by City—Want Plans for the New Registry Office to Provide for York County and Land Titles Offices.

Toronto, Oct. 2.—Although the competitive plans for the proposed new city registry office have to be in by noon today, the York Law Association may stir up a fuss that may lead to a reconsideration of the whole matter. The association, according to one of its members, has been ignored.

They wanted a registry office which would accommodate the east and west divisions of Toronto, the York county office, and the land and titles office. The building for which the competitive plans were called will be for the registry needs of Toronto alone. Hence the threatened protest from the York Law Association.

GAVE EVERY CONSIDERATION

The city authorities claim to have given the association every consideration.

The city clerk has already received three architects' plans. More are expected in to-day. These will be immediately passed upon by the assessors, Mr. A. E. Denison, Prof. C. H. C. Wright and A. R. Bowes, registrar for the western division of Toronto. The registry office will cost $350,000.

WHAT IS IT LIKE ON A ZEPPELIN

One of Two Dozen Passengers Gives His Experiences—Dinner in the Air

A fascinating discription of an air trip by Zeppelin from Dusseldorf to Berlin is supplied by a passenger. The start was made at 4.30 in the morning, and, says the writer, "after the arrival of my fellow-passengers, who numbered twenty-three, the automatic docking apparatus drew the ship into the open, and as we entered the cabin there was not one of us who did not show evidences of a fever of excitement. Air was pumped into the last ballonet at the stern, and the Viktoria Louise tilted her nose at a rather sharp angle toward the sky. So nicely balanced was the ship between lift and dead weight that the driving power of the motors was required to send her upward like an aeroplane. As soon as a satisfactory level was reached the air was discharged, and we assumed a perfectly level position. A Zeppelin airship leaves the earth with none of the balloon's soaring motion. It is just like a train, started without perceptible jar and kept in motion upon a perfect roadbed, perfect track, and perfect wheels. Bremen came to us a little before seven o'clock, and as we swept in wide circles above the city we could see its armies of men going to their work. They were little interested in us. The airship is an old story in Germany. Hamburg was reached just an hour and a half after we left Bremen behind. Again we made great loops over the city, which with its harbor, wharves, and houses, was spread out as though it had been modelled of clay. The hum of thousands of voices came up to us, and could be heard above the clatter of our own motors. From Hamburg we took a south-east course against the wind, travelling in the direction of Berlin. At noon we were flying up the Elbe Valley by way of Bergedorf and Domitz. In another two hours we reached Wittenberg.

Siesta in Armchairs

"In the meantime individual tables had been placed in position, and luncheon was served much as it is in the ordinary dining-car. There was soup, an entrée, a roast—all piping hot—vegetables, salad, cheese, and coffee. More of a dinner than a luncheon, and all served as though the chef and waiters had the conveniences of a great hotel at their command. The principles of the fireless cooker had been brought into service in preparing the food; the exhaust from the engines being made to supply heat. After luncheon several passengers dozed comfortably in their armchairs enjoying the sun that shone through the starboard windows. A better place for an afternoon nap than the cabin of a Zeppelin airship cannot well be imagined. The drone of the motors becomes a lullaby. There is the sense of motion—swift motion—and yet not even the slightest jar. An almost imperceptible vibration is felt only when a hand is placed on a side wall of the cabin. For the purposes of a laboratory the airship is ideal. It has been proposed, and seriously, by German surgeons, to turn the cabin of the Viktoria Louise into a temporary operating-room when certain delicate surgery has to be performed. The upper air is so pure that it really acts as an antiseptic, and removes all danger of poison. After Nauen, Spandau and Charlottenburg came quickly into view. We were over the Imperial Palace fifteen minutes before four o'clock, having made the flight from Hamburg in less than four hours. Following the Spree River, we came in five minutes to the Air Traffic Company's dock. The Viktoria Louise pointed her bow toward the landing-place, and the three motors drove the big ship downward.

Making the Landing

"Here we experienced the only difficulty of the voyage. During our trip of [illegible] miles we had lost nearly a ton in weight as the result of the burning of fuel. The ship, as a consequence, was so buoyant that when the motors were slowed down it shot into the air before the dockmen could make the landing ropes secure. At a height of about 1,000 feet a small amount of gas was discharged. Again the bow of the ship was pointed earthward, and our motors sent us to the landing-place. This time the hawsers were caught, and in another moment the Viktoria Louise was clamped to the heavy motor trucks which drew us into the great barnlike shed where we disembarked. From the time we took our places in the cabin of the Viktoria Louise until we again stepped on solid ground just twelve hours had elapsed. During that time we had come from Düsseldorf—against a wind that at times had a velocity of twenty miles an hour—by way of the seashore to Berlin. There had been no untoward incident.

A Waltz King

M. Poincaré enjoys the title of being the Waltz King of Paris. The Society of Dramatic Authors, of which he is counsel, gave a ball some years ago, and organised a waltzing competition in which Poincaré took part. He is an admirable waltzer, and was considered to have won the competition and to be entitled to have the distinction of "Waltz King" conferred upon him. Poincaré was presented with a laurel wreath, but he would rather not have won the competition for when it came to an end all the ladies wanted to dance with him. He danced a hundred waltzes that night and became so tired that he left the ballroom, as he was almost unable to move his legs.

BACK TO THE LAND

Duke of Marlborough is Putting Blenheim Park Under the Plough

The Duke of Marlborough proposes to put Blenheim Park under the plough. He says:

"So far as I am concerned I mean to make an effort to show that in my locality it is possible to grow corn stuffs and vegetables for suitable markets. The Park which you know so well, and on which a brigade of yeomanry has been trained, will no longer be offered as a training ground for national defence, but will be employed for the purpose of producing food for a national food supply. A thousand acres or more will be under the plough, and a greater number of laborers employed. When I have succeeded, as I mean to do, I shall then have given a lead to my farming neighbors. I shall be a captain in a different kind of an army from that which I have previously had the honor of commanding in Blenheim Park, but it will be an army quite as useful and quite as necessary to the welfare of the State."

PROMISE OF IMPROVEMENTS

The Times was informed this morning by reliable authority that the Trent Valley Canal Department intend to do something this fall to remedy conditions at the Bobcaygeon lock, which has caused so much trouble to the boating public and helped make the water so low in Sturgeon Lake this year.

Chief Field Engineer A. W. Spence who has been engaged with some special work near Kirkfield and also in connection with the new dam at Fenelon Falls, it is understood, will go down to Bobcaygeon shortly to make a special report and recommend on the situation.

New lock gates will not suffice as the lock walls and parts of the walls of the canal are leaking badly and will need either a complete overhauling or have to be built new.

JOHN ALVIN, PARIAH

To All Except His Mother, Whose Love Endured Through All His Trials.

BY HAROLD CARTER.

Ten years in prison take a good deal out of a man's life that can never be replaced or made up again, and when John Alvin found the gates of the state penitentiary barred behind him instead of in front of him, he felt acutely the gap that had to be bridged between the Alvin of 1902, the young bank cashier who had flung his firm's money into the bottomless pit of speculation, and the Alvin of 1912, prematurely bowed, embittered by brooding over his planned revenge, and walking with the peculiar gait which made him the object of suspicion to every passing policeman.

He had a new suit of fairly good blue serge, a new hat, a new pair of shoes, and fifty-one dollars in his pocket, besides a ticket for Cranston.

But Alvin was not going to Cranston. He was going to Myrtle, two hundred miles in the opposite direction, and he had asked for a free ticket to Cranston to blind the spies of Howell, his enemy. He meant to kill Howell, and then to wipe out the disgrace which he had brought upon him. What happened after that he did not care. There was no one to whom he mattered. His mother might have cared, but Alvin was confident that she was dead. It was ten years since she had seen or written to him—in brief, since he entered the penitentiary. And a mother's anger seldom lasts ten years.

All the way in the train to Myrtle, Alvin was busy bridging over the hiatus in his life. He had been just an ordinary clerk in the bank in his home town, engaged to an ordinary girl who, nevertheless, seemed very extraordinary in his eyes. He was just a weak, foolish boy who, believing that he saw a short cut to wealth, had played with the bank's money and lost. Howell, the director, had prosecuted, and, having considerable influence, had obtained for Alvin the sentence which he had heard with dismay and terror. Ten years to expiate for the theft of ten thousand dollars! Why, he was not getting a thousand a year in those far-off days when he was engaged to Isabel!

Almost Reluctantly He Raised the Revolver.

But Alvin was not going to kill Howell for that. He was going to kill him because he had afterward married Isabel. That was the barb, that the secret of his incredible vindictiveness! He had never suspected a rival in the smooth, plausible bank director. And Isabel, her foolish little head turned by the opportunity of a great match, had promptly married him. That was eight years ago. Nobody had wasted any sympathy upon Alvin.

He had pieced events together with difficulty since that day. His father, the faithful old cashier with the Glenn company, had, he knew, forbidden his name to be mentioned again. His mother was evidently dead. Nobody came near him; nobody had written to him. He was a pariah. Even now, for one helping hand he would have turned aside from his project; but none was extended. He changed trains at Lowell and, during the interval, purchased a revolver.

The thought of his revenge, cherished during those terrible years, had become a monomania with him. He felt exiled from humanity; he was something fantastic and alien. He did not look upon the uninterested, hurrying passengers as fellow-beings of his. He lived in a world of phantoms.

It was strange how little Myrtle had altered. When Alvin descended at the station he noticed two or three new blocks of buildings that had not been erected before; otherwise the streets were much the same. Nobody recognized the dapper young bank clerk in the gray-haired man who strolled up the high street, though Alvin knew several of them. There was Joe Miller, the banker—unchanged; Schmidt, the butcher—unchanged; and that stout man with the paunch who hurried past must be the cashier, Knowles—unchanged! A sudden thought impelled Alvin to buttonhole him.

"Don't you know me, Mr. Knowles?" he leered, thrusting his grinning face within an inch of the other's. "I'm Alvin."

Knowles stammered in embarrassment. "Why, I'm glad to see you, Mr. Alvin," he muttered. "Let me see—you've been away quite a while, haven't you?"

"Yes, but I've come back," answered Alvin. "Mr. Howell has promised me a position with the bank again, but he's moved, hasn't he? Where is he living?"

"On the corner of Main street," faltered the other. "I—positively I have an engagement." And he shambled away, casting back frightened glances at the ex-convict as he walked.

That was all Alvin wanted to know. He guessed that Howell occupied one of those new white frame structures that he could see in the distance, very pretty in their groves of shade trees. If he hadn't been a fool he and Isabel might have occupied one of them now. Isabel! He had not thought of her, but now, in his desperate temper, he resolved to make her suffer just a little. He would not hurt her much, of course; she was almost beneath his notice.

And Isabel was seated on the lawn, right at the edge of the lawn, under a tree, watching the passers-by in her foolish, empty-headed way, and rocking. As he approached he saw that a boy some seven years old was standing by her side and that another sprawled at her feet. Her children, evidently! He stopped; and suddenly the veil that obscured his mind was lifted, and with a sob he turned away. She had not recognized him.

He knew that Knowles would spread the story of his return all over the town. What a fool he had been to betray himself! He might have gone to the bank and accomplished his purpose; now he would have to wait till dark and fire through Howell's dining room window. As he meditated on his revenge he noticed that, automatically, his feet were leading him in the direction of his father's home, two blocks away. It was a street he had trodden a thousand times. He halted and looked up at the little house. It was unchanged. But the shades were down and evidently it was unoccupied.

It had grown dark when Alvin finally turned toward his enemy's house. He passed the little place of his birth. A light was burning in the parlor. Then it was occupied, after all. But he did not speculate as to its inmates. He passed swiftly along the empty street to Howell's residence. Once, as he walked, he thought he heard steps behind him and hastened, for that which he was to do had to be done quickly and there was no time to temporize. Yet, when at last he crouched outside the room and saw Howell, his feet in slippers, stretched out in a chair, reading, he forbore to fire. His hatred needed the sight of the man to enkindle it. At last, almost reluctantly, he raised the revolver.

Just then his arm was caught from behind—not that which held the revolver, invisible in the darkness; nevertheless he lowered it and swung round to look into the face of a little elderly lady. His mother stood there at his side.

"John!" she whispered, clinging to him. "You've come home, John! I knew you would. Father is waiting for you. He is bedridden now, but he has forgiven you.

"He wouldn't let me write or see you for years, John, but his illness has softened him. He said you would come home. He made me promise to wait for you. We have a light in your room every night, John."

Then the mists lifted entirely, and suddenly he understood that the most precious love in all the world was his; and, having that, what did he care for others?

He felt his eyes blinded with tears as he slipped the pistol into his pocket and clasped his mother in his arms.

Alpine Zones of Silence

Discovery of a "Zone of Silence" in the Alps is said to have been made by workmen employed in the construction of the highest section of the Jungfrau Railway. Heavy charges of dynamite were set off, and [illegible] The detonations were heard within a [illegible] miles, then within a [illegible] there was silence, but further up to a concentric circle of fifty miles the noise was again heard clearly.

Forty Years' Service

Mr. John Cowan, of the Toronto Customs office has an enviable record of forty years in the public service. During that long time he was never five minutes late at his post, and he was not off duty five minutes on account of illness.

Abolishing Sash Weights

In the construction of houses sash weights are being largely dispensed with, automatic devices taking the places of the weights. This innovation is said to greatly simplify and economize the operation of building houses.

Mr. and Mrs. Pearce, of Bradford-on-Avon, Wales, celebrated recently the seventieth anniversary of their wedding. They were married at Hilperton, in Wiltshire. Mr. Pearce is ninety and Mrs. Pearce ninety-two years of age.

"TERROR" AT SIXTEEN

Girl Who Boasts no Home Can Keep Her Longer Than She Cares

While Alma Simmonds, a domestic servant, was charged at Marylebone with stealing a sovereign belonging to her employer, the Rev. William [illegible] Creighton, curate at St. [illegible] Church, Harrow road, who resides at Blomfield street, Paddington, Mr. [illegible] Kirby, the court missionary, said: "I have spent twenty-three years in police-court missionary work and I have never known a girl of sixteen with such a history."

Simmonds had been tried in almost every home in London, said the missionary, but not one of them would have her, she was "such a terror." She fought and quarrelled with the [illegible], upset everyone, and demanded her freedom, declaring that unless she got it she would commit suicide. She had been brought up in an orphanage since she was three months old, and numerous situations had been obtained for her by the sisters, but she went [illegible] of them. The Aborigines of Australia

The aborigines of Australia are of a distinct race from that which inhabits the Indian Archipelago, and are black, with some slight variety of shade from brown-black to jet. Their hair is curly, but is not the crisp wool of the negro. Their faces are well developed broad at the base; their lips less protruding than those of the negro. Their bodies are deficient in muscularity and strength, but are capable of great endurance. It is said that they readily adopt European habits. These natives seldom build huts or other fixed dwellings, but use as a shelter a strip of bark or a large bough. The Australian aborigines are said to be rapidly decreasing in number, and it is thought that many years will not elapse before they are extinct.

Industrial Japan

Japan each year produces more than 200,000,000 bushels of rice, nearly 60,000,000 pounds of tea and more than 25,000,000 pounds of silk.

Flying Bicycle

A Massachusetts inventor has been granted a patent on a plane carrying bicycle, by which he believes it is possible to fly through the air.

Memorial Stones

In every part of Palestine, along the roadside and in the fields, particularly on the hilltops, may be seen piles of stones, usually not over three feet high. If we should question a native about them he would tell us that they are "memorial stones" set up in recognition of some special providence of God. If we should examine the stones closely we would discover that they are blackened with oil, which indicates their sacredness, as they had been anointed. These stone heaps actually became objects of worship so common that Moses issued edicts against them.—Christian Herald.

Important Notice

In the Interests of Suffering Humanity

February 28, 1912.
245 Spence St., Winnipeg.
The Sanol Manufacturing Co. Ltd.,
Winnipeg, Man.
Gentlemen,—

I beg to draw your attention to the fact that I have suffered from rheumatism for the last nine years, and particularly for the last five. I have been unable to stand, walk, or in fact, help myself in any way, my knees and elbows swollen, drawn and stiff; could not bend them in any way. I tried everything, went to the Banff Springs three months in 1905, [illegible] to Hot Springs, Arkansas, two months in 1907, four months in 1908, done me no good. I heard of SANOL last September and have been taking it ever since, and I am glad to say the swelling is about all gone. I am going around the house on crutches, also my joints are loosening and straightening, and I fully expect that SANOL will cure me.

I believe SANOL will cure rheumatism, for my case is a hard one, and in fact has been pronounced incurable, and if I improve for the next three months as I have for the last three I will be walking in good shape.

I remain,
Yours truly,
John J. Lane.

P.S.—You can show this letter to anyone you feel like, and send them to me as I can tell them better than I can write it.

Worth All His Cost

The owner of Diamond Jubilee, Senor Ignacio Correas, gave the late King Edward $157,500, or 31,500 guineas, for that horse. That it was no extravagant figure was established by sale of stock at Buenos Ayres. Nine Diamond Jubilee colts averaged $3,750, and nine fillies $2,500. This was the fourth lot of Diamond Jubilee's progeny to be sold, and in round figures they brought $600,000.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at the office of any Local Agent of Dominion Lands (not sub-agent), on certain conditions.

Duties.—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required in every case, except when residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside of his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Six months residence in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and 50 acres extra cultivation. The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land after report by Homestead Inspector on application for patent.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price, $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

FOR LOVE OF A CHUM

Designated Also as "A Darling" and "Cut Up," She Had Heart of Gold.

BY GEORGE ELMER COBB.

"Don't trifle with me, Vera—I am desperately in earnest!" pleaded young Doctor Irwin.

"I'm not, Robbie," asserted the bright-eyed, vivacious girl who leaned upon the garden gate that separated them. "I think too much of you to tell you a falsehood, and I am too young—oh, far too young, mamma says—to think of telling you the truth," and the flashing eyes looked clear and loyal, if they were mischievous.

The wholesome looking young fellow who had just asked her to become his wife, looked puzzled, then hopeful, and then he had a smile.

"I know you are the dearest, sweetest little midget of cheerfulness in the world," he declared enthusiastically, "and I am sure a good friend of mine."

"Never doubt that, Robbie," said Vera. "But when you come to talk about becoming engaged—why, think of a romping cut-up, as everybody calls me, trying to pose as the dignified wife of Dr. Robbie Irwin. It would shock everybody. Besides, dear," and her voice was as tender as was it honest, "with your career just commenced, I would be a drag on you. Not that I wouldn't share a crust of hard bread with the man I loved, but I am very proud of you, and I don't want to hinder you from making your mark in the world."

Doctor Irwin bestowed a fond look upon the little child-woman who was the dearest being in the universe to him. He bade her good-by, not at all gloomily, and started for his office. Vera stood following him with her eyes, a demure and thoughtful look on her usually smiling face.

"Poor boy," she said, and then she added: "I love him! I love him!" and her face vieing with the red, red roses along the garden path, she ran down it, bursting into a happy song.

Vera had called herself "a cut-up." The young men of the town designated her as "a darling," her girl friends as "a love of a chum," and there was not an adult man or woman in Brandon who did not pretty nearly worship her. Her bright ways cheered everybody, and the victims of her mischief felt honored, rather than offended.

Stood Following Him With Her Eyes.

There was the pure gold of a noble manhood in Doctor Irwin, and Vera recognized it. She had liked him the better because he had accepted a piece of real injustice without a murmur. When his grandfather, old Stephen Dunn, had died, Robbie was one of the [illegible] heirs. They were to receive $10,000, but it was contingent on the will and caprice of Mr. and Mrs. Egbert Dawson.

Stephen Dunn had willed all his real estate to them. They also were given a life interest in his investments. However, if mutually agreed, they could distribute these latter, pay off the minor heirs, and take a third for themselves.

This was the original intention of the husband and wife, and the minor heirs had confidently expected their legacies. Then a terrible quarrel came up between them. It was regarding the old Dunn homestead. Egbert Dawson wanted this so that he might give it to a [illegible]. Mrs. Dawson insisted on having it to present to a superannuated spinster relative. They could not agree; bitter feelings arose. They separated. The husband lived alone at one end of the village. The wife lived alone by herself at the other end of the village.

Egbert Dawson vowed he would never address his wife again until she spoke first. Sarah Dawson obstinately declared that not a word should escape her lips until her husband spoke. This action tied up the estate, and the minor heirs expectant considered it a far look ahead before they would enjoy the goodly heritage they had anticipated.

Egbert Dawson had become a crusty, unhappy hermit. His wife shut herself up like a recluse. There was no heart that withal, sprightly Vera could not reach, however. Mr. Dawson doted on her, and she swayed him as if he were a child. With the same sunny influence, she was almost idolized by the lonely Mrs. Dawson. More than once Vera had tried to bring about a reconciliation between the unhappy pair, but—neither would "speak first."

"Oh, what a splendid idea!" cried Vera, an hour after the visit of her suitor. "If it is only for the sake of dear good Robbie, I am going to try it."

Her eyes danced and her face showed eagerness and delight. Vera told her mother she was going down to see Mr. Dawson. She was soon at his home.

"I have come to ask a great favor," she told him. "You know there is going to be a mask party at the library hall next week. It is for the benefit of the old folks' home—want you to buy a ticket."

"Two of them, if you like," readily announced Mr. Dawson to his favorite.

"And I want you to go."

"No, no, child," rejoined Mr. Dawson gravely. "I am past the folly of dancing."

And then the little witch began her powers of beguiling. At the end of half an hour, even down to the mask he was to wear, Vera had prevailed in her coaxings.

Mrs. Dawson was not so easy to persuade. Wily Vera told of the good cause she was helping along. Finally she carried her point.

"Well, I'll come, dear," promised Sarah Dawson, "but it's just to please you."

The bright little schemer had woven quite a plot about the estranged and unsuspecting husband and wife. She took great pains to conceal from each the expected appearance of both at the function. Vera enlisted the co-operation of a number of her girl friends. Everything turned out as they planned. Mr. Dawson, arrayed in his best, and his wife, wearing a tasteful silk gown, a reminder of happier days, came, saw and were soon carried out of themselves amid the enjoyment of the occasion.

Shrewd and watchful Vera had kept close track of them. They had danced together twice without recognition. When the hall called for unmasking, Vera arranged it so that just after a dance, they and herself alone were the sole occupants of one of the small rooms leading off from the dance floor.

"Unmask!" she cried gaily, her eager eyes dancing with suspense and delight, and the dumfounded husband and wife confronted one another. Both had enjoyed the unusual occasion, and Vera knew it. "Quick!" she demanded, with a roguish laugh—"who spoke first?"

"I did," declared Egbert. "Sarah, you're as sweet and handsome as ever. You can have the old homestead. I reckon you and I have [illegible] of miserable long enough, don't you?"

"Egbert," returned his wife, glad to meet him half way, "I don't care a pinch of salt for the old homestead—I just wanted to have my own will."

"Well, you've got it," observed Egbert, "so let us kiss and make up."

The Dunn estate was divided soon after that, and Doctor Irwin received his little fortune. He proceeded to offer it and his deepest love to the wonder-working little miss who had brought it all about.

Care of Brooms

Buy brooms in pairs. You will save money by so doing. Give one a bath and allow it to rest a day and see how fresh and new it seems. Dip the broom into hot soap suds. Try it on wash day. Dip it in until the suds get clear. Then dip the broom into clear hot water and hang it in a draught to dry. Wash the broom handle. You will be surprised at the amount of dirt you will find. Be sure there is a hook or screw eye screwed into the end of the handle to hang up the broom. More "one-sided" brooms are made from standing on the floor in a corner than from being worn by sweeping. Do not use the same broom for all parts of the house. One that has been used in the dining room may be in such a condition as to ruin a valuable rug.

No Club for Lady Cop

In Chicago, where they have ten women police, the collegiate leaders asked that every appointee have the following qualifications:

She must be "husky."

She must have nerve.

She must have had experience in social service.

She must understand young people.

She must have common sense.

She must have [illegible].

All the collegiates agreed that she should have a star. The more militant believed she should carry a revolver, but none took kindly to the idea of a policewoman swinging a club.

Couldn't Breathe Through His Nose Stuffed With Catarrh

Catarrhozone Inhaler the One Means of Relief, and It Cured Quickly

The extraordinary efficacy of Catarrhozone is without parallel. A sneezing cold is cured in ten minutes, a harsh cough is cured in an hour, the most offensive catarrh is thoroughly driven from the system. In case of asthma and bronchitis the relief and certain cure that comes from the healing balsamic essences in Catarrhozone is simply wonderful.

"For more than twenty years I suffered with a cough, bronchitis, asthma and nasal catarrh," writes J. F. Fenwick, of Stanton, P.O. "Every attack I had seemed to grow worse and I could hardly breathe on account of an accumulation of phlegm in the nose and throat. One day I tried Catarrhozone and in ten minutes was wonderfully relieved. I could breathe freely and naturally through the nose, and blood spitting was stopped—the phlegm was cleared away and my regular breathing restored. No remedy can do more than Catarrhozone."

There is no remedy so certain and safe as Catarrhozone, but being a good remedy it is imitated. Beware of the substitutor. Large Catarrhozone, lasts two months, price $1.00; smaller sizes 50c and 25c. At all druggists and dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Attended Conference.

A large gathering of laymen attended the Laymen's Missionary Conference that was held in Toronto yesterday, among them were three from each of the Anglican churches of Peterborough.

Will Parade

The 57th Regiment will parade to the rifle ranges on Thanksgiving Day for the annual shooting matches. The usual cups and money prizes will be competed for. It is probable that a band concert will be given in the Armouries at night.

Work Progressing.

The erection of the Hope factory at the Byersville end of the street car line is progressing steadily. The iron work of the "saw tooth" roof is completed and some of the planking has been laid. The east and west walls have not been begun yet. The building promises to be a large one when finished.

Literary Society.

On Friday evening of this week, the St. Peter's Ladies' Literary Society will hold their first meeting of the season. As this meeting will be devoted to the election of officers for the ensuing year, a large attendance is requested. It will be held at 8 o'clock in St. Alphonsus Lyceum.

Police Are At It.

Infantry training classes have been inaugurated at the armories for the police of the city, and every Friday afternoon, they are put through a sharp drill by Sergt. Instr. Dunberley. Chief Thompson started this movement, and it would be well if some of the other chief constables in Ontario would take up a similar movement for their men.

Loyalty Club.

The first meeting of the "Loyalty Club" will be held this evening when it is hoped all members will be present and will [illegible] bring a new member [illegible]. The meetings of the Loyalty Club last year were exceptionally interesting. In every way the girls lived up to their club name and the officers [illegible] the same loyal spirit prevailing this year's work will mean much more to all.

The Loyalty Club.

The first meeting of the Loyalty Club, in connection with the Y.W.C.A., will be held this evening at 8.00 p.m. It is hoped that all our old members will be present and will each bring a new member. The meetings of the Loyalty Club last year were exceptionally interesting. In every way the girls lived up to their club name, and we feel with the same loyal spirit prevailing, this year's work will mean much more to all the members.

Harvest Festival.

The Harvest Thanksgiving service of All Saints' church will be held this evening, at 8 o'clock. The special preacher on this occasion will be the Rev. Jas. A. Elliott, M.A. Mr. Elliott is well known throughout Canada in connection with his articles in "The Spectator" with which he was associated for some time. His coming to Peterborough will be of interest to very many.

A Rise.

Local tobacconists found a somewhat unpleasant billet doux in their mail yesterday morning in the shape of a notification from the Imperial Tobacco Co., the largest manufacturers in Canada, that the wholesale price of the company's products would take an upward jump, commencing to-day. As far as the retail prices go there has been no increase made and the probabilities are they will remain the same.

What About It?

A resident of Gilchrist street would like the council to take some action in regard to having the roads in that vicinity seen to, as they are in a very dilapidated condition. The person in question says that the council is not fair in directing their attention to just one section of the city.

STREET PAVING.

The street paving is going ahead fast. The whole of Hunter street to George is now laid with concrete, and a start has been made on the remaining part of the street from George to Water streets.

After the concrete has been laid and sufficiently dried, the street will be opened for traffic, as it is not possible to get the asphaltic plant here before the contractors have finished their work in Lindsay.

A Visitor.

Last night, the city was honored with a notable visitor, in the person of Colonel Mitchell, conductor of the Salvation Army staff band in London, Eng. He arrived on the C. P. R. local, and was escorted to the S.A. Temple, where he conducted a service, after which a band concert was given—and later he was escorted to the C.P.R. station again, leaving on the midnight en route for England.

Women's Art Association.

A successful executive meeting of the Local Council of Women was held in the Studio of the Women's Art Association, on Tuesday, September 30th. Reports were presented by Mrs. Hamon Ritchie, on the custodial care of the feeble-minded, and by Dr. Jessie Birnie, on Public Health. These reports were most comprehensive, and augur well for the future usefulness of the Local Council in Peterborough.

Drowned in Trent Canal

While performing his regular duties on the Cameron & Maguire Trent Canal contract, an employe named John Gonyou was drowned in the Trent River at Trenton. The unfortunate man was struck by a truck and knocked into the water, and though every effort was made to save him, they were unavailing. An inquest was held, which was adjourned to a later date after the jurors had viewed the remains at Cunningham's undertaking rooms. Mr. Gonyou was a well known citizen. He leaves a wife and several children.

To Lay New Tracks.

Mr. W. H. Munro of the Peterborough street railway company, has said that they will commence to lay the new tracks on George street, as soon as the city notifies them that street paving operations will commence. The company is in receipt of a formal notice respecting the latter's intention to pave. The two operations can be done at once, so it is understood, so that the immediate laying will not seriously interfere with any plans that may have been made. The new rails for the street railway have arrived, so that operations are likely to commence.

Assessments.

As intimated in the report on the assessor's returns the township of North Monaghan has been largely benefitted by the growth of the city in the south end. Of late years Brownston has sprung into prominence as a suburb of no mean proportions, while other sections of North Monaghan have also fared well. This is borne out by the official statement that the assessment of North Monaghan for this year is $524,294, an increase of $90,[illegible] over last year.

Has Resigned.

Another member of the local Police force handed in his resignation to the Chief Constable yesterday morning. P. C. Tucker, who has so ably filled his position on the force is leaving, giving as his reason that he can see opportunities of greater value to him in another sphere of life. He has been on the local constabulary for a period of a little over two months, and during that time has become a popular figure on the streets, and was well liked by all those with whom he came in contact, either professionally or otherwise. The general public are sorry that he is leaving, but are glad to know that he will do better elsewhere.

Do You Know?

Chief Thompson is in receipt of a communication from a resident of Pomeroy, Ohio, asking him to locate a sister of the inquirer, who was supposed to have lived in Peterborough some ten years ago. The name of the missing person is Rebecca Hardy, who was supposed to have been [illegible] of the town of Peterborough at that time. The inquirer has not seen his sister for over 27 years. It is thought [illegible] that she was at one time living with a family named Hawley, farmers and cattle buyers. Anybody having information concerning the above mentioned person, would confer a favor by communicating with the proper authorities.

Number of Immigrants.

Mr. F. W. Miller, the local immigration officer, informed The Times this morning, that during the past season he has had considerably over three hundred people sent to him by the immigration officers in England. Of these a number of the men refused to go on the farms, but found employment in the city. According to reports, next season is likely to be particularly busy one. There is at present a campaign going on in the Old Country, which is proving of great interest in the immigration of people. The Australian Commonwealth is doing all in its power to get the immigrants to go to Australia, while the Canadian authorities say they are setting to [illegible] the people to come to this country.

A CHILD'S LAXATIVE IS "SYRUP OF FIGS"

They love to take it and it doesn't harm the tender little stomach, liver and bowels.

If your little one's tongue is coated, it is a sure sign the stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once. When your child is cross, peevish, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally; if breath is bad, stomach sour, system full of cold, throat sore, or if feverish, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the clogged-up, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

Sick children needn't be coaxed to take this harmless "fruit laxative." Millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure. They also know a little given to-day saves a sick child to-morrow.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Don't be fooled!

Classes of Instruction.

The classes of instruction which are conducted at the Armouries three nights a week, namely, Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, under proper military instructors, are arousing a great deal of interest both among the officers and men. There is at present an attendance of 22, but it is hoped that shortly this will be considerably increased. Sergeant Instructor Dunberly is at present conducting the classes, but it is expected that an officer will come to Peterborough during the week. The following is a short outline of the work that is being undertaken.

Monday—Lecture and practical Infantry training, taking in different sections.

Tuesday—Practical I. T. training. General instruction in arrest, investigation of charges, and minor punishments.

Wednesday—Practical I.T. training. Lecture. Conditions of service. Officers and sergeants' mess, etc.

Thursday—Care of rifles. Ride exercises. Lecture of duties, and lectures of duties of subalterns of the day.

Friday—Care of arms.

These classes have been formed for the object of giving an opportunity to the men who desire promotion, to qualify for the position which they would like and the officers are desirous of seeing many more men, officers, non-commissioned officers and men of the rank attend.

DEATHS AND FUNERALS

Mr. George McWhinnie.

One of Peterborough's former prominent business men, in the person of Mr. Robert McWhinnie, passed suddenly away yesterday morning at his residence, 543 Harvey street, at the age of 65 years. He got up in his usual health yesterday morning; while he was dressing, suddenly expired. Dr. Halliday was immediately summoned, but his medical aid was of no avail. The late Mr. McWhinnie leaves to mourn his loss three daughters, namely Miss Ethel, living at home; Mrs. W. G. Elliott, of Regina, Sask., and Mrs. Frank W. Bell, of Kerrobert, Sask. Mrs. Elliott arrived home a little over three weeks ago to spend a short time with her parents.

There is also one brother in Detroit, one sister in Toronto, and another at the homestead at Ormstown, Que. The late Mr. McWhinnie was born in Ormstown, but came to Peterborough 40 years ago. He was a shoe and boot maker by trade and learned his trade with Sam. White, of this city, whose place of business was then on Simcoe street. Later he was in business jointly with a man named Foote, and latterly for himself. He sold his business three years ago to Mr. C. E. Smith. The deceased was a member of the Masons, Oddfellows, and one of the Order of Foresters.

He was also a member of the George Street Methodist Church. He was extremely well known in the city, and while a man of quiet disposition, he was a man whose qualities were of sterling worth.

The funeral will take place Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock to the Little [illegible] house at 2.30 o'clock.

MATRIMONIAL

Naughn—Mason.

A quiet, but pretty wedding took place on Saturday morning at St. Paul's church, Toronto, when Miss Helen Mason, of this city, was united in marriage to Mr. Frederick Naughn, of Toronto. The Rev. Canon Cody of St. Paul's church, officiated. The young couple were unattended and only their immediate friends and relatives were present.

After a short wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Naughn, will reside in Toronto.

Miller—Moffatt.

At Keene on Wednesday evening, September 24, the marriage took place of Mary Katherine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. S. Moffatt, to Mr. Geo. M. Miller. The ceremony at which a large number of relatives and friends were present, was performed by the Rev. Mr. Goodwill. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a beautiful gown of white duchess satin, her tulle veil fell from a Juliet cap surrounded by orange blossoms, and she carried a large bouquet of lilies of the valley. Miss Vera McNeil, sister of the bride played the wedding music. The bride's going away costume was of blue whipcord with chic hat to match. Mr. and Mrs. Miller will reside in Otonabee.

SCOTT—TREBILCOCK.

Last evening at 7 o'clock at the home of the bride's father, a quiet wedding was solemnized by the Rev. Robt. Pogue, of St. Paul's church, when Miss Florence Stewart Scott, youngest daughter of Mr. William Scott of Hunter street East was united in the bonds of holy matrimony to Mr. Paul Ernest Trebilcock.

The bride was attired in a dress of white brocaded satin with orange blossoms, and she carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley. She was supported by Miss Francis Scott, of Barry, who was becomingly attired in a dress of pink satin with an over-dress of cream lace and pleated chiffon, carrying a bouquet of pink roses. Dr. Garnet Green of Toronto, acted in the capacity of groomsman. The wedding march was played by Miss Minnie Trebilcock, of Bowmanville, sister of the groom, while Mr. H. Hutchinson, brother-in-law of the groom, delighted those present by singing, "Oh Fair, Oh Sweet, Oh Holy," in beautiful tone during the signing of the register. The bride and bridegroom left last evening for New York City, where the honeymoon will be spent.

Only the immediate friends of the couple were present at the ceremony.

Another Peterborough young lady will add her name to the list of students attending Queen's University, Kingston. This is Miss Margaret Girven, Sherbrooke street, who left town for the Limestone City.

Toronto Globe: Mr. and Mrs. G. J. Lee announce the engagement of their eldest daughter, Edith Grace, to Mr. R. Hamilton Hall, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hall of Peterborough, the marriage to take place the end of October.

Mrs. Swarts of the Elite Millinery Parlours, George street, returned from Toronto where she has been visiting wholesale millinery houses. She brought with her many new samples of fashionable millinery, feathers and plumes.

Mr. Jas. Coyle Brown, of Cobourg, formerly Public School Inspector for the County of Peterborough, was in the city on Monday and Tuesday. Mr. Brown has disposed of his residence on Smith street, to Mr. Prolet, who has been occupying the house as tenant for some time. Mr. Brown, for a man who has passed four score years, looks quite hale and hearty.

MAN FOUND DEAD.

Chief Thompson received a night lettergram from the Chief Constable at Fort William yesterday morning, stating that a man had been found dead in that city, and was known to have had relatives in Peterborough. The case was given attention, but no information concerning the man's identity has been received at the police department yet.

THE ENORMOUS DEVELOPMENT OF THE CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY

Cheerful Tenor of Sir Thomas Shaughnessy's Address to C. P. R. Shareholders

Great Development Yet to Come—More Mileage and More Steamships

Montreal, Oct. 2.—At the annual meeting of shareholders of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company the report of the directors was unanimously adopted. David McNicoll, Charles R. Hosmer, Hon. Robert Mackay and Hon. James Dunsmuir were re-elected directors.

A resolution was passed authorizing an issue of four per cent. debenture stock on account of branch lines and of steamships mentioned in annual report.

The President's Address

In moving the adoption of the report the president, Sir Thomas Shaughnessy said:

"With the active conditions that prevailed throughout the year your gross earnings reached the high water mark of nearly $140,000,000 but since the turn of the year there has been a decrease due to the falling off in the movement of westbound traffic as well as in the building and other trades throughout Canada. However, thus far in the year your gross revenue is larger than it was in 1912 and with the renewed confidence and courage that will develop every where as the result of the bountiful crops with which the country has been blessed, and the general improvement in the money market that begins to make itself manifest, there is every reason to anticipate another satisfactory year.

Big Capital [illegible]

"Your issue of additional capital stock early in the year, while it bore rather heavily on the shareholders who had to find money to meet their call during the period of stringency that prevailed in Europe and elsewhere was of great advantage to you, because it enabled you to proceed with important works essential to the future welfare of your property, and it was a distinct boon to the country providing as it did wages for thousands who would otherwise have been unemployed and furnishing circulation in a large way when it was most needed. The constant demand for additional railway mileage, the mounting necessity for providing second tracks, larger stations, shops, yards and more cars and locomotives, to cope with your enormous traffic, involve expenditures that are almost startling, but we cannot afford to stand still.

Growth in Income

"In ten years the annual gross income has grown from $43,000,000 to $139,000,000, and if Canada is to meet our expectations in point of population and prosperity, as beyond doubt it will, there should be a proportionate increase during the next ten years provided that we have the [illegible] equipment, and facilities to handle the traffic as against all comers. This does not mean that the expenditures for these purposes during the next few years need be anything approaching those of the past, because when the lines now being built are completed our construction program may be substantially modified, and, with the exception of improvements at one or two points in Eastern Canada, where congestion during the busy season is annoying as well as expensive, and the completion of a second track on portions of the main line, will by the end of this season be well ahead of our requirements. This year the company's bond debenture, and share capital, including the recent issue of $60,000,000, is $[illegible] more than it was in 1908.

How Money Was Spent.

"Of this amount, $124,000,000 was expended in the construction and acquisition of additional mileage and the purchase of ocean, lake, and river steamers, and the additions to your car and locomotive plant absorbed $101,000,000. The balance of $88,000,000 was used for the general improvement of your property, but this amount was supplemented by premiums on stock issued and appropriations from surplus earnings to the amount of [illegible] nearly all of which will have been expended by the end of the [illegible] year, so that you will have invested in your property in these ten or eleven years this large

NEVER SUBMIT TO HOME RULE

Winnipeg, Oct. 2.—Sir George Armstrong in Winnipeg looked after financial interest, says Ulster will fight. He continued:

"Of one thing you may be quite certain and that is that Ulster will never submit to Home Rule. This is not a political question, it is a national question and if the measure is forced on the people, there will be the most bloody civil war in the history of the world, in Ireland."

"It is no use talking of compromise. That is impossible so far as Ulster is concerned and as that is the only revenue producing and prosperous part of Ireland, Home Rule, without Ulster, would be utterly impossible."

BORDEN'S GOVERNMENT'S RECORD OF TWO FULL YEARS IN OFFICE

Below Are Some of the Measures That Have Been Passed Into Law

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Oct. . — It is now only two years since the Borden Government was returned to power. The administration has a record of achievement for its two years of office of which it can well be proud and which is unparalleled in Canadian history.

The extension of the boundaries of Ontario, Quebec and Manitoba.

The Aid to Agriculture Bill appropriating ten million dollars over a period of ten years for agriculture instruction throughout Canada.

The West Indies Agreement with improved steamship service.

The reduction of cable rates to the West Indies and the British Isles.

The inauguration of a greatly improved tri-weekly mail service between Canada and Great Britain.

The new arrangements in regard to marine insurance on the St. Lawrence and reduction of rates to Halifax.

The magnificent dry dock under construction at Quebec, with similar dry docks proposed at Halifax and Esquimalt.

The bill to provide for pensions to the Fenian Raid veterans.

The Naval Aid Bill (defeated by the Senate.)

The Highways Bill appropriating $2,000,000 for road construction in two years. (Defeated by the Senate).

The Branch Railway Bill, providing for the acquisition of branch lines in Quebec and the Maritime Provinces to build up the Intercolonial Railway. (Also defeated by the Senate).

The bill to establish parcels post system, which will be inaugurated shortly.

The development of national harbors at Halifax, St. John, Quebec, Montreal, Toronto, Hamilton, Port Victoria. Arthur, Fort William, Vancouver and

The completion, in such a short space of time of the National Transcontinental Railway.

The construction of the Hudson Bay Railway so far advanced that 150 miles have been graded and one-half of the work finished in 1914.

The contracts awarded for two out of three sections of the Welland Canal, with two more sections to be called for shortly.

The construction of a government-owned terminal elevator at Port Arthur to handle 2,500,000 bushels of wheat.

The establishment of a policy of interior terminal elevators owned by the government for which two contracts have already been let at Saskatoon and Moose Jaw.

A Hard Task

On a farm in South Africa there was a [illegible] whom the men used to call Coalscuttle. He milked the cows morning and evening, but one day the "boss" came to his hut bringing a three-legged stool.

"Here, Coalscuttle, is a stool from home," said he. "You can sit on it when you are milking."

"Yes, boss," said the darkey.

That evening he went a-milking as usual, holding the stool at arm's length, and [illegible] a little [illegible].

A full hour elapsed and the old boy came home at length. He arrived, bruised and battered, the pails [illegible], and not a drop of milk in them.

"Why, Coalscuttle, what's wrong?" said the boss, appearing.

"Ah!" came the answer, "[illegible] good stool, master, but de cow won't sit on it."

NAPOLEON OF DUBLIN LABOUR

Men Obey Larkin as Kindly as Soldiers Did Their Emperor—Reign of Terror.

New York, Oct. 2.—A cable to the Tribune from London says: Timothy Healy, member of Parliament, made a vigorous attack yesterday on the methods of James Larkin in stating a case for the masters at St. George Askwith's court of inquiry into the Dublin Labor war. In the last five years he said, Dublin has been subjected to more strikes than during its entire existence as a capital. The strikes have been brought about by methods which should make trade unionists ashamed, and the masters have been driven to combine to preserve what little was left of the wreck of trade and commerce in Dublin.

Larkin, added Mr. Healy, acted the part of Napoleon. His men obeyed him as implicitly as the French soldiers obeyed their Emperor, and it was that that had brought about these strikes. All employers had been the object of Larkin's attacks, the humble masters had worn out their marrowbones kneeling at the shrine.

The present condition of affairs, he said in conclusion, was as finished a system of tyranny as had ever been started in any country, except, perhaps, the Reign of Terror in Paris. In fact, he did not know of any reign of terror so complete as was this present one.

PUBLIC LIBRARY BOARD IN REGULAR SESSION

A meeting of the Public Library Board was held last night at 8 o'clock. There were present Messrs. J. Corkery, E. H. D. Hall, F. Sollitt, H. Ritchie, H. R. H. Kenner, A. Mowatt. In the absence of Mr. Morrow, Mr. Ritchie acted as chairman.

A communication from Miss A. Weir, local branch of the National Council of Women, was received, asking for the use of a room in which to hold a meeting on Oct. 22. The request was granted.

A letter from Miss [illegible] of the Public Library Department, was read, advising the Board that during October she would be able to come to Peterborough to conduct the first meeting of the Children's Hour, which is about to be established in connection with the Library.

Mr. Kenner, chairman of the Property Committee, reported on some matters referred to the Property Committee from last meeting and it was decided that the repairs referred to be left in the hands of the Property Committee with power to act.

Mr. Ritchie, chairman of the Library Committee, reported the purchase of books since last meeting, to the value of $100.00.

It was decided to close the stock room of the Library each evening at 8.30 p.m., except on Friday and Saturday, when it will close at 9.

The Property Committee was requested to look into the matter of ventilation and report at next meeting.

The Finance Committee presented a report recommending the payment of a number of accounts.

WILL THE KING DISSOLVE THE PARLIAMENT IN THE OLD COUNTRY?

Possibility of Such an Action Being Widely Discussed in England

Suggests The Question of a Governor General in Canada

The possibility of the King's dissolving Parliament of his own mere motion is being seriously canvassed in Great Britain. It has been discussed as quite feasible by Sir William Anson—Unionist member for Oxford University—who is, perhaps, the greatest constitutional authority in the land. Of course, the Liberals scout the idea, but that the suggestion should have been seriously made at all shows how great is the difference in practice (whatever may be the constitutional theory) between the office of the Sovereign in Great Britain and that of the Governor-General in one of the Overseas Dominions.

In discussing the notion of the King acting as suggested even the Liberal newspapers rate the influence of his office very highly. The Westminster Gazette, says that the Sovereign exercises immense influence behind the scenes, that his counsel is sought and carefully weighed by Ministers. The same thing could scarcely be said of a Governor-General in an Overseas Dominion. Indeed Lord Dufferin, one of the most sagacious of men, regarded the post as one for the occupation of an amiable figure clothed in a gorgeous uniform. It is true that, in practice, he was scarcely content with this modest role, for, in 1876, he insisted firmly that, in virtue of his office, he had the right to express his opinion and urge his views with absolute freedom within the walls of the Privy Council on any measure that came forward. Against this contention Edward Blake protested stoutly on the ground that Canada was no Crown colony—"but, neither," said Lord Dufferin, "is it a republic."

Only Routine Duties.

Nominally, a Governor-General of an Overseas Dominion stands in the King's shoes. Actually, he does so only so far as the performance of routine and ceremonial duties of Royalty are concerned. Indeed, the reasons why the influence of a Governor-General in the country over whose Government he presides are, and must be, less than that of the King in the United Kingdom, are obvious.

First, he had had no lifelong experience of the country's conditions, such as the Sovereign has had of conditions in the Motherland. Secondly, there cannot be, either on his own part, or on that of the people whose Governor-General he is, the same feeling that he has no interests paramount to those of the country of which he is the titular head. [illegible] as his term of office is only of a few years' duration, he can never become qualified to act as mentor to his advisers, as British sovereigns are able to be to British Ministers.

Nor does the office of Lieutenant-Governor bring with it the opportunity of constantly offering sage and acceptable advice to Provincial Premiers. One would be surprised to learn, for instance, that the Premier of Ontario is accustomed to post the Lieutenant-Governor on almost every detail of every measure, and to consult him at almost every turn, as the British Premier does the British monarch.

POLICE CHIEF TO FACE TWO CHARGES

Port Hope Times: Police Chief [illegible] will be the defendant in Police Court to-day, when he will be charged with trespassing and assault.

This case arises out of the Chief's attempt to secure possession of a Barnardo Home girl, Ruth [illegible], who was at Charles Floody's residence. When the Chief visited the Floody house he was refused admission by Charles Floody, whereupon he threw Floody into the street, at least, this is the story of the plaintiff. The Chief claims to have been acting upon instructions from the home authorities.

Rev. J. S. LaFlair became interested in the little girl's misfortune and phoned to the Home. The authorities there requested Rev. LaFlair to leave the girl at the Floody home until the arrival of the superintendent.

ROYAL ROMANCE IS A TRAGEDY

London, Oct. 2.—Princess Augusta, wife of ex-King Manuel, is mysteriously ill in a Munich hospital and the London Mail's Berlin correspondent asserts that the Princess deserted Manuel within three days of their marriage, "as irreconcilable incompatibility of temperament having revealed itself." The London Express correspondent at Vienna, however, asserts that the Princess caught cold, and that her husband has insisted on staying near her in the hospital, and is at the bedside as often as the doctors will allow. The despatch adds that the "wild rumors flying around are malicious inventions by secret agents of the Portuguese republic."

EASTWOOD BUILDING ON HUNTER ST. WILL BE ALLOWED TO STAND

Recommended as a Safe Structure—Applications For City Inspector Offices Considered by Council Committee Last Night—No Choice Yet

The City's Fire, Water and Light Committee got in business session last night, chairman Ald. Gillespie presiding. There were also present Mayor Bradburn, Aldermen Anderson, Langford, Gregs, Duncan and Buller.

Mr. Isaac Eastwood waited upon the committee, together with his solicitor, E. A. Peck, and Thos. Rutherford and Wm. Langford Sr. Mr. Peck asked that under the circumstances, the Eastwood building on Hunter street be allowed to remain as it is, it having been pronounced by experts to be perfectly safe and solid in every respect. Mr. Langford, Sr., contended that the building's superstructure is better than if carried up with brick. He thought there should be some special way for building over the creek allowed, as on Charlotte street.

This is the building concerning which so much controversy has taken place, theretofore published in full—terminating in Council insisting that the building be demolished and rebuilt on the ground that the city's by-law had been evaded, and Council deliberately defied.

Mr. Thos. Rutherford explained that there had been no intention to evade the law; the structure had been erected on approved mechanical plans to assure the maximum degree of security and strength; and the better job resulted.

Ald. Buller remarked that the City Engineer reported that, while the building has not been erected in compliance with the fire limits by-law, it is a stronger and better job than had been done so.

The Mayor was satisfied to accept Mr. Langford's recommendation that in this particular case, the building is stronger and safer than had it been erected as demanded by Council.

On motion of Ald. Buller and Duncan, the explanation of the deputation was accepted as satisfactory, and the building will be allowed to remain. Mr. Eastwood to clear the creek out.

Inspector.

Applications for the position of civic inspectors were here considered. Before reading them, however, Mayor Bradburn explained to the Committee, that as there will be no electric power competition in Peterborough, Hon. Adam Beck had advised him that there would be no objection to the city appointing one of its own permanent Hydro-Electric men as wiring inspector.

The following applications were to hand:

From W. H. Summers, Petrolea, for Wiring and Building Inspector—No salary stated.

WILD ANIMALS ARE CURIOUS

In Order to Get Acquainted With Them One Only Has to Keep Still.

There are three things to know, and another to do, if you are ever to get more than a fleeting glimpse of wild animals, William J. Long writes in the New York Independent. The first is that all wild animals are not governed by fear. The second is that a wild animal hates to be watched and becomes [illegible] the moment he finds [illegible] [illegible] him. The third is that all wild animals are [illegible] curious [illegible] that [illegible] [illegible] they are not feeding or sleeping they get most of their fun out of life by indulging their curiosity.

Their first attitude toward every new object, unless it be moving toward them with evident hostility, is invariably one of curiosity rather than of fear.

The one thing to do in view of this knowledge is to keep still, physically and mentally still, and so take advantage of the animal's curiosity. Better than roaming the woods is to sit quiet in a good place and let the animal come to you. Then observe him casually, veiling your keen interest and never looking at him intently. You are to keep physically quiet lest the animal take alarm, and mentally quiet, because excitement of any kind is as contagious as fear or any other disease of mind or body.

When I am alone in the woods the wild animals rarely show alarm. A thousand times I have had them near me, large and small, and watched them indulge their curiosity and then move slowly off, turning their heads for a last look; but let me take another man with me, who grows mentally excited at the sight of game, and almost invariably the same animals are nervous and fidgety and end by running away.

Once a crow lit just over my head, so near that I hardly dared wink. He hopped first to another branch, and from there to the crotch of a great pine tree, where he began to uncover objects that were hidden under a mat of pine needles. Presently he took out something bright. It was a piece of glass that flashed and showed rainbow colors in a stray glint of sunshine. Then came a bit of quartz, a shell, a silver buckle and several other objects, all bright, that I could not make out. He turned his treasures over and over, mumbling in his throat in a pleased way over each one. Then he put them all back, covered them again with pine needles, and slipped away like a shadow.

Give Nature a Chance

Man spends about one-third of his time in bed! Nature uses the sleep hours to effect her best recuperative work. Like man, Nature works very inefficiently in foul air. How necessary it is, then, to have pure air in the sleeping room. Give Nature a chance to do its best work!

To Bleach Faded Frocks

The colored frock or blouse that has become faded with frequent launderings or from wear in the sun may be bleached to a clear white by boiling in cream of tartar water. The correct quantity to be used to make the garment a pure white is a teaspoonful of the powder to a quart of water.

Cleansing Gas Range

A gas range may be kept black by wringing out a sponge (kept solely for the purpose) in warm water and rubbing well with soap, washing the stove while it is warm. If this is done just after the cooking is over the stove may be kept black and free from grease spots.

ABOUT JOCKEYS

In the older days of horse racing it was the horse that raced. Little was heard of the jockey, says an English sporting writer. His services were considered rewarded with quite a modest sum, at which the modern fashionable jockey would not deign to look. His name was not published, even in the "Racing Calendar." Moreover, he was usually an old hand. To-day this is different. The modern jockey is generally a mere boy.

A little reflection will demonstrate how unhealthy is this tendency. A horse may be bred and trained to any pitch of specialization, and no harm may be done. But over-specialize the jockey, force his growth, stunt him in this direction that he may be more effective in that, and, above all, dangle huge rewards in front of him for such specialized capacity, and a train of possibilities of evil is laid.

The question has a wider bearing than its relation even to the jockey. The "crack" jockeys are few in number. They are highly specialized men or lads, both in muscle and wit. They are those who have come out on top in a strange evolution. And it is a commonplace that there can be no such specialized products without a great sacrifice of rejected material.

Of the many hundreds of boys who exercise the horses daily at Newmarket and other training grounds, not five per cent. grow to be professional jockeys.

Then what becomes of the jockey? Some of the present-day jockeys have kept their feet in the stirrups for many years, but a detailed comparison of the jockey list suggests certain reflections. What would be said of any other calling which lost two-thirds of its licensed followers within the short space of half a decade

WATCH IN A PEARL

France can boast of some of the most artistic watchmakers in the world, and one of them has accomplished a wonderful feat by making a watch whose case is a single pearl.

This timepiece has just been finished by a Paris jeweller, after fifteen months of the most exacting labor. Cutting the pearl was not the least difficult thing about the novel watch.

The pearl was three-fifths of an inch in diameter. The works of the watch are considerably less than half an inch in diameter, and thin in proportion; yet they were made with as much precision as a full-grown watch, and have all the up-to-date improvements.

There is no danger of these pearl watches becoming common. The cost, which included the price of the pearl, was $6,000.

Keep an eye on the way you stand and sit. Remember the muscles which keep man in an upright position are on the back of the calf of the leg, the back of the trunk and the back of the neck. The more they are trained to hold up the body the easier it will be.

Remember "all work and no play made Jack a dull boy." Plan your resting time so that it will be a real means of rebuilding your health and enlivening your mind.

THIS RICH YOUTH REFORMS BAD BOYS

Norris Attends the Milwaukee Juvenile Court and Nods if He Wants the Accused

Neil Wells Norris, Milwaukee, Wisconsin, with $4,000,000 has for some years been serving without pay, for the love of boys and humanity, as a volunteer probation and truancy officer, and he always attends Juvenile court to hear the stories told by the youthful culprits, having a tacit arrangement with the judge by which the judge, when Norris nods his head, paroles the boys under examination to the care of the young millionaire. One of the probation officers thus describes the millionaire's work:

"Young Mr. Norris is not only spending his time and money on boys who are paroled to him, but he is sending other boys to school. You see, there are many boys who want to go to school, but whose parents are so situated financially that they cannot be allowed to attend. Many of these boys are sent to school by Mr. Norris, who is paying their family the wages that the boy would earn." In a garage, which is probably the finest of its kind in Wisconsin, Mr. Norris has fitted up his 'bad boy office.' Here, on the second floor, is a room in which the lads report each week to the "volunteer officer." When the reports have been heard the boys are sent downstairs, where a gymnasium has been fitted up for their use. As he sat in his office above the garage Mr. Norris was led to speak of the work he has been doing:

"How did I get into this work?" he asked. "Well, really, I don't know. I just sort of drifted into it. I am fond of boys and used to attend the sessions of the court, and have heard their troubles. I got the idea that maybe I could be of use, and so I just started out. The work is interesting and keeps my mind busy, and there is great possibility for good. I have learned many things. One is that the hardest thing a man who wants to help a boy has to deal with is the boy's parents. I suppose that if the home training was of the best the boy would never get into court, but it is surprising the amount of parental opposition the probation officers are forced to combat. If we could only get the coöperation of the parents the work would be comparatively easy. Another thing I have found out is this: We need some form of corporal punishment which can be administered to boys by officials of the city and state. The average boy who comes before the Juvenile court does not mind reprimand. He thinks that it is sort of a joke to come to court and hear himself 'raked over the coals,' and then be allowed to go. If, however, we had some means of administering some sort of physical punishment I think that the boys might not come to court so often."

CHARMED BY BLACK MAGIC

Englishman Said a Neighbor Cast Spell Over Him

A man applied to the magistrates at Union Hall, England, for redress of various injuries inflicted upon him by a person who, he said, had long held him in subjection by the power of witchcraft. The person complained of had for some time been his opposite neighbor, and although it had been his constant study not to offend him, being well aware of the influence he possessed with the powers of darkness, yet he had, in some way or other, been so unfortunate as to incur his displeasure, and severely he had suffered for it both in person and property, as the wizard had at different times destroyed his clothes, tainted his provisions, prevented the smoke from ascending the chimneys, soured the liquor in his cellar, and on various occasions, when the complainant had been under the necessity of going out to business, had so fascinated his powers of vision that on his return home all his efforts to discover his own door had proved ineffectual, and he had frequently been under the necessity of applying to his neighbors to conduct him home.

Our Point of View

Among other things, it is well to mention that the season is near when quite a costly sight will be the anthracite.

Romanism in Austria

The Los von Rom is making striking headway in Austria. Last year eight separate new Protestant schools were established in that country, and fourteen evangelistic missions, and nine new churches were inaugurated where evangelistic Christianity is preached. Between 1891 and 1900 there were 49,696 conversions to Protestantism, and between 1901 there were 78,753 conversions to Protestantism. In addition to this 14,640 persons left Romanism without attaching themselves to any church, and about 14,000 joined themselves to the Old Catholic Church.

The Opium War

Twenty-four thousand chests of opium stored in Shanghai make an international problem. China says it shall not be sold, and England says it shall. It may be hard on Indian merchants if the opium is destroyed or sent back, but the civilised world is behind China in its fight to kill the sale of the deadly drug. England protests that China is not sincere, but permits her own merchants to peddle it, while preventing the sale of the stock of British opium which accumulated through agreement between the two nations for the gradual reduction of the quantity imported.

The London Saturday Evening Review says: "No one denies that it is harmful in excess, but plenty of opinions can be quoted to the effect that it is innocent in moderation," and since the Asiatics have chosen opium as a stimulant, The Review would let them have it.

In this controversy the sympathies of the world are with China. If the Chinese have read history they will dump the twenty-four thousand chests of opium into Shanghai harbor. The Boston tea party furnishes an excellent precedent, and then China can compensate the injured owners. At any rate, the opium will be where it can do no harm.

A Sportsman's Paradise

Thirteen hundred miles in a canoe on the swift northern rivers and 300 miles overland through a wilderness in nine weeks, is a trip just completed by C. D. Melville, a member of the Dominion Fisheries Board, and John McKenna, both of Edmonton. The trip afforded the former an opportunity to investigate the possibilities of the northern waters, which, he reports, teem with white and other fish.

Melville killed two bull moose and two big bears, shooting from a canoe while spinning along the Peace and the Wabasca rivers, which drop more than 900 feet in a distance of 320 miles. The banks are from 50 to 100 feet above the water level. He reports seeing large numbers of moose, bear, and other big game and wild geese, ducks and pheasants. He and McKenna also found indications of asphalt, sulphur, iron and other metals on the way from Athabasca to Fort Vermilion.

The voyagers visited the provincial government's experimental farm, six miles from Fort Vermilion, midway between the 58th and 59th parallels of latitude, near which the Lawrence family, residents in the district since 1896, this season cut 300 acres of wheat, which averaged more than 18 bushels the acre. The experimental farm, it is reported, is making satisfactory progress.

"The north country is being settled and developed rapidly," Melville said on returning to Edmonton, "and the pioneers predict big things with the coming of the railroads."

PUBLIC OPINION.

The Times does not hold itself responsible for the opinions of its correspondents.

PREMIER'S SALARIES

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Will the Times kindly give the salaries paid the premiers of the Canadian provinces; also the U. S. president and governor of New York state. This information is required to settle an argument. A.R.W.

Reply.—The Premier of Canada receives a salary of $12,000 and sessional indemnity of $2,500. The Premier of Ontario gets $9,000; of British Columbia, $9,000; of Manitoba, $8,000; of Quebec, $6,000; of Nova Scotia, $6,000; of New Brunswick, $2,100; of Alberta, $6,000; Saskatchewan, $6,000; of Prince Edward Island, $2,700. The President of the United States gets a salary of $75,000. The Governor of New York State gets $10,000.

SPORTS

Assuming that the New York team will win the National League pennant, the members of the National Baseball Commission decided to-day that the first game between that club and the Philadelphia Americans for the world's championship shall be played in New York on October 7. The umpires agreed on for the series are T. H. Connolly, John J. Egan, Wm. Klem and Charles J. Rigler.

The second game will be played in Philadelphia, October 8, after which the clubs will alternate between the two cities. In case a game is postponed because of rain or for some other cause, or a legal game is not played, the teams will remain in the city, where the postponement occurred until a legal game shall have been played. In the event of a legal game resulting in a tie, the two clubs will not play it off in the city where it occurred, but will move on to the next city the same as though the contest resulted in one of the teams winning.

There is every reason to expect a big crowd at Nicholls Oval to-morrow afternoon, when the Capitals of Toronto will clash with the local junior team in the first O.R.F.U. game staged in Peterborough in several years. The game will be called at 3 o'clock sharp. The Peterborough team had a good workout last night at Central Park, and the line-up for Saturday's game was selected. There is keen competition for places on the team and a strong fourteen will represent the city on Saturday. They will need to be strong, too, in view of the reports from Toronto, which credit the capitals as being one of the best junior teams in the province.

"BREAKDOWN OF UNIONISM" CAUSE INDUSTRIAL WAR

London, Oct. 2.—Events seem to be moving rapidly toward a grave industrial crisis.

"It may," says the Times, "be postponed for a time, but recent indications forbid the hope that it can be altogether averted, and signs pointing to a speedy development are multiplying. One of the most ominous is the fact that yesterday the Master Cotton Spinners' Federation decided to close all their spinning mills from Oct. 25 until the dispute now in progress at a single mill in Bolton is settled. This dispute has nothing to do with wages or other standing conditions. It is the result of a demand on the part of the spinners that an overlooker to whom they object should be discharged.

"The circumstances differ in detail from those prevailing in Dublin, but in practice the main point is essentially the same. In both cases employers are compelled to make a deliberate stand against practices which render the conduct of their business impossible. The situation is not caused by trades unionism but by the breakdown of trade unionism, and its occurrence in the cotton trade particularly is of very grave import."

THE ENORMOUS DEVELOPMENT

sion of $100,000,000 that will represent no capital liability, and will consequently make no draft upon your revenues.

The Steamship End

"Only a very small portion of the earnings of the Atlantic and Pacific steamship lines were, during the past few years, included in the net return, having been transferred instead to the steamship replacement fund. As this fund now approximates the entire cost of the original Atlantic fleet, it is neither necessary nor desirable to increase it by liberal appropriations hereafter." Sir Thomas said he thought they might with safety anticipate an annual net revenue of $2,000,000 from the trans-Atlantic and trans-Pacific steamship lines after making due provision for interest on their cost and for depreciation. The formation of a steamship company to acquire the vessels whose cost has not been capitalized, to charter or lease those purchased with the proceeds of securities, and to provide means for the construction or purchase from time to time of additional vessels of a suitable type to maintain the character of the fleet and to strengthen its earning power, was receiving some consideration.

Sir Thomas said that in the next annual report the revenue from the hotels, commercial telegraph system, and the Pacific coast steamships would be treated as special income, and, of course, there would be a corresponding reduction in the gross and net earnings of the railway.

Hopeful Outlook

The president further said:

"With the active business conditions that prevailed throughout the year the gross earnings reached the highwater mark of nearly $140,000,000, but since the turn of the year there has been a decrease, due to the falling off in the movement of westbound traffic as well as in the building and other trades throughout Canada. However, thus far this year, business is larger than it was in 1911, and with the renewed confidence and increase that will develop everywhere as the result of the bountiful crops with which the country had been blessed and the general improvement in the money market that begins to make itself manifest, there is good reason to anticipate another satisfactory year."

EARTH TO MOON

A Frenchman Thinks He Can Make the Trip in Two Days

A stir was caused by a paper read before the members of the French Physical Society, Paris, by Robert Esnault Pelterie, the brilliant young engineer, on how to get from the earth to the moon in forty-eight hours. M. Pelterie insists that his idea is practicable, based on scientific calculations, and not reminiscent of Jules Verne's romances. The vehicle for first travellers to the moon will, he says, be a closed vessel of extreme lightness, provided with a motor of great power, a combination which the astonishing advances of locomotion during the past one hundred years brings well into sight.

Since there is no atmosphere in the space between our planet and the moon no system of propellers would be of any use, and the only possible means of driving the vehicle forward would be an adaptation of the rocket principle, which, he says, works as well in a vacuum as in air.

The motor then would work a kind of continuous rocket, and M. Pelterie has made calculations of just how much power the engine must have to carry the vehicle along at the 240,000 odd miles between the earth and its satellite.

For a vehicle weighing one ton the motor would have to be of 424,000 horse-power. For added weight the horsepower must be proportionately increased. When this combination was realized the journey would be divided into three parts. The first would be to drive the vehicle with increasing speed until the sphere of the earth's attraction was passed. During the second the vehicle would continue its journey by inertia until it reached the point where the moon's attraction began, while the third would be the simple matter of dropping on the latter's surface, no motive force being necessary.

The first of these phases, according to the lecturer, would last 24 minutes and 9 seconds; the second phase, 48 hours and 5 minutes; the third, 2 minutes and 46 seconds, giving a total of 48 hours, 17 minutes 55 seconds.

During the first 4,000 miles, he says, the passengers would have the sensation of weighing enormously more than usual, but afterward they would cease to weigh at all and have the sensation of falling indefinitely into space.

To nullify the bad physical effects which might result from these phenomena, special appliances, says M. Pelterie, have to be installed.

Could Not Face Operation

At an inquest on Gunner Sidney Anderson, aged twenty-six, who shot himself in Preston Barracks, Brighton, it was stated that he had written that he could not face another operation for appendicitis. He left a letter apologizing to the officers and adding, "I have done my duty."

Doctor's Wife Takes Poison

"I am at the beautiful sea and I may walk into it. I am a mental and physical wreck," ran a letter stated at the inquest to have been received by Dr. James Anderson, Leicestershire, from his wife, who was found dead at Southchurch, Essex, with a bottle of poison by her side.

Catarrh or Colds Never Quickly Cured By Swallowing Drugs

Cough Syrup, Tablets, etc., go to the Stomach, Perhaps Sicken It, But Don't Kill the Germs of Catarrh.

The Direct Breathing Cure is Best.

To cure an ailment in the throat or chest, to root out Catarrh or Asthma it is essential that the medicine be conveyed direct to the affected parts. This is why no other remedy has achieved such world-wide success as Catarrhozone, which alone can be breathed in one second to every air cell in the breathing organs. The healing vapors of Catarrhozone mix with the breath and descend through the throat, down the bronchial tubes, to the deepest air cells in the lungs—all parts are saturated with the healing essences that cure, heal and soothe.

"No one ever contracted a more obstinate attack of nasal catarrh than I suffered a month ago," writes Mr. G. E. Best, a well known resident of Bridgetown, W. I. "My head ached terrifically, I sneezed about every three minutes, but still my nostrils were entirely closed and I couldn't breathe through them. Ten minutes inhaling Catarrhozone gave me a little relief so I continued to use Catarrhozone every hour, and before the day was out I had improved. Catarrhozone quickly cures me I am well ever since."

There is no remedy so certain and safe as Catarrhozone, but being a good remedy it is imitated. Beware of the substitutor. Large Catarrhozone lasts two months, price $1.00; smaller sizes 25c and 50c. At all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

HIS START IN LIFE

Came in Unexpected Way, and He Married the Girl of His Choice.

By ALVAH JORDAN GARTH.

Fifty dollars is not a great deal of money, but it appeared a fortune to Alvin Morrison. He was young, he had always had to earn his own living. He had to endure the misfortune of working in a store owned by a relative, who promised a great deal and never redeemed his promise. A sense of family duty and the uncertainty of finding employment kept Alvin jogging along in the same old rut.

But finally a new element stepped in, lifted the veil from the present, and showed a rare golden pathway in the future. That element was love.

In the spring, Nettie Bridges, who lived one hundred miles away from Wayne, came to visit a friend. Alvin met her. They mutually fell in love. Nettie was only seventeen, and a girl of good sense. Alvin was practical. They very well knew that marriage was a long ways ahead. They did not even become engaged. When they parted, however, Nettie was willing to wait, and Alvin to work, and they talked of meeting again next year instead of next week, as most impatient modern lovers do.

Then Alvin set to work to save. He got some extra night work. He saved up fifty dollars. Right on top of it came a glad, hopeful letter from Nettie. The father of a girl friend wanted a clerk. His business was good, he would pay liberal wages. Nettie had spoken a word for her lover friend. Alvin wrote to the merchant at Hopedale. A reply accepted his application, and he was to report in a week.

"No good will come of roving," grumbled selfish Uncle Uriah. "I'll give you a raise of a dollar a week."

"No," replied Alvin resolutely. "I'm not learning anything here," and to himself, "I shall be near Nettie!"

He had great plans in mind. He would take in the city on his way. There he would buy a neat suit of clothes. Then there must be a present for Nettie. This would leave him enough to establish himself in a boarding house, and a little surplus to take Nettie around once in a while.

Reached His Destination at Last—A Vacant Lot.

"It's a wonderful place," declared Alvin, after his first day in the big city. "I could spend a month here and not see half the sights."

The second day he sat on a bench in a public park, watching the pleasure boats on the little lake near by. A man came limping up to him, sat down, and moved about so helplessly and in such apparent pain, that Alvin noticed him sympathetically.

"Are you ill?" finally inquired Alvin, feeling pity for anybody in trouble.

"Worse than that," said the man with a groan. "I'm going to a hospital this afternoon. That is, if I get a letter I'm expecting from a friend to pay my way. It may not come. If it doesn't, I suppose I'll die on the streets."

"That is really too bad," commented honest Alvin. "I do hope you will get your letter."

The man shook his head in dismal hopelessness. Then he edged closer to Alvin, looked all around them and said in a low, confidential tone:

"If you had a little money, young man, I could easily help myself and double what you had. If I was only spry at getting around, I wouldn't have to wait long for cash."

"Why, how is that?" inquired Alvin, his curiosity fully aroused.

"Well, I'll tell you. Read that."

The man drew a morning newspaper from his pocket. He opened it on the advertising page. Then he handed it to Alvin, his finger indicating an advertisement reading:

"Lost: An old signet ring bearing a seal with the initial 'R.' Inside is the inscription: 'L. to R., 1894.' An old family relic. Will pay two hundred dollars for its return to 11412 Ninety-first avenue."

"I found that ring. Picked it up among some sweepings outside of a restaurant," declared the man—"and here it is."

He took from his pocket a big circlet as he spoke. Alvin looked it over.

"Why, it's the very ring, isn't it?" he exclaimed.

"Of course it is," assented the man. "The gold in the old ring isn't worth thinking about, but somebody values it as a relic."

"Why, I should think you would return it right away," suggested Alvin.

"Humph—I'm in nice trim to do that; I can hardly walk," retorted the man. "I must get some money right away. You notice there is a reward of two hundred dollars offered. Say, you can help me."

"Why, how is that?" asked the inexperienced Alvin.

"Well, you find somebody who will give me forty dollars cash for the ring, and I'll give you ten dollars for your trouble. I'll wager you don't know of an easier way to pick up ten dollars in half an hour."

Alvin reflected. He reread the advertisement, he inspected the ring. They tallied, everything looking straight and regular.

"See here," he said finally, "I have a little money. I could take up your offer, but it doesn't look right to get all that profit out of a man in your unfortunate position."

"Don't you speak of that," promptly rejoined the other. "I'm glad to put a little speculation in the way of a fellow who takes the interest you do in a poor down-and-outer like me."

So the deal was made. Alvin had just six dollars left out of his fifty after the transaction. He was elated as he took a street car. He had to make several transfers before he reached Ninety-first avenue, 'way at the other end of the city. Then he looked for No. 11412. He reached his destination at last—a vacant lot!

Slowly it dawned upon Alvin that he had been swindled. His heart sank. Where was his new suit, the present for Nettie, his respectable establishment in new society! Then he walked on, downcast.

Alvin paused as he came to a building bearing the sign "Police Station." He entered it quite hopelessly, but recited his story to the sergeant.

"Why, say," observed the latter, after smiling at his visitor's gullibility, "that ring description sounds sort of familiar to me," and he scanned a complaint book. "Here we are," he continued. "That ring was among a lot of valuable jewelry stolen a month ago. You wait here."

The official telephoned. In about an hour a portly well-dressed gentleman appeared in his automobile. The sergeant explained to him. He was the person whose house had been robbed.

He was greatly pleased to recover the ring, valuing it greatly as an old family heirloom. The sergeant secured a perfect description of the swindler from Alvin.

Mr. Seward, the man who had been robbed, insisted on taking Alvin home with him. The next day the swindler was arrested, and the remainder of the plunder was recovered at pawn shops.

When Alvin left the city, he carried a present of one hundred dollars from Mr. Seward. The latter was much interested in his story. He told Alvin that whenever a good business chance came up he would finance him.

Alvin never needed that co-operation. With his doubled nest egg and his eye teeth cut, he soon became a partner with his new employer. Then he married the girl of his choice, who, of course, was the girl who had waited for him.

"MAK' IT PILLS"

How a Shrewd Doctor Knew His Patient Was a Miser

Curious habits of the Aberdeen miser, George Anderson, were described in the Court of Session, Edinburgh, during the hearing of the action by his brother to have the old man's will reduced. A witness said the room in which Anderson lived was very dirty, and she would not have put a dog in the bed. He had a pair of blankets, but they were like coal bags. When he left his belongings were put in half a dozen sacks, which appeared to contain rubbish, and the room had to be disinfected. According to a neighbor Anderson said he had not much money and he did not know how long he would live. He used to collect cigarette and cigar ends and all sorts of rubbish. He would bring home skins, bones, and potato parings from ash buckets, and when asked what he was going to do with them he said they made grand "tattie soup." With crusts of bread gathered in the same way he made "breadberry," but used buttermilk instead of sweet milk. A cat or dog would not have looked at the crusts he ate. For the defence evidence was given that Anderson had nothing mentally abnormal about him, and that he was shrewd and intelligent in regard to business affairs and investments. His doctor thought Anderson was a sane man. He had an eccentricity; he had a great deal to say about himself; but there were "plenty of other men like that." Anderson, it was stated, had the air of a country-bred man who had been a servant in a good family. But he was a miser of a man! The doctor knew that because when he said to him, "Well, Mr. Anderson, I'll give you a mixture," Anderson would reply, "You couldna mak' it pills?" The reason for the question was that the pills might cost a penny and the mixture would cost a shilling.

In the Interests of Suffering Humanity

February 28, 1912.
265 Spence St., Winnipeg.
The Sanol Manufacturing Co. Ltd.,
Winnipeg, Man.

Gentlemen:

I beg to draw your attention to the fact that I have suffered from rheumatism for the last nine years, and particularly for the last five. I have been unable to stand, walk, or in fact, help myself in any way, my knees and elbows swollen, drawn and stiff, could not bend them in any way. I tried everything, went to the Hot Springs three months in 1906, twice to Hot Springs, Arkansas, two months in 1907, four months in 1908 [illegible] no good. I heard of SANOL last September and have been taking it ever since, and I am glad to say the swelling is about all gone. I am going around the house on crutches, also my joints are becoming [illegible] and straightening, and I fully expect that SANOL will cure me.

I believe SANOL will cure rheumatism, for my case is a bad one, and in fact has been pronounced incurable and if I improve for the next three months as I have for the last three I will be walking in good shape.

I remain,

Yours truly,
John J. Lane.

P.S.—You can show this letter to anyone you feel like, and send them to me so I can tell them better than I can write it.

BIG WATERWHEELS

Hama, in Northern Syria, is justly famous for its huge waterwheels. The city lies some 110 miles northeast of Damascus on the banks of the river Orontes. It is undoubtedly a very ancient town, and is referred to in the Bible as Hamath the Great. The river flows through the city in the form of an S, and upon its banks are four huge waterwheels, each bearing a name of its own. They are used for pumping up the water of the Orontes for irrigation purposes, and some for supplying the town. The wheels are driven by the flow of the river on what is known as the undershot principle; that is to say, the wheel is turned by water passing beneath it. The largest wheel has a diameter of about 70 feet, and the Syrians declare it is the largest in existence. Like the others, it is built of wood, a dark mahogany. The axle is of iron. The creaking of the wheels is incessant day and night. They never stop. In winter and during early spring the flow of the stream is [illegible]

Ping-Pong With Soap Bubbles

At a popular science exhibition in London one of the marvels shown were soap bubbles invested with extraordinary properties. Bubbles were blown within other bubbles. Bubbles were sent rolling along suspended wire nails. Bubbles were blown with a gas that caused a loud explosion when they burst. Finally, bubbles were made with a specially tough and elastic soap, which were batted back and forth in a real game of ping-pong.

Clymer Turned Tables Nicely on Practical Jokers

Manager Bill Clymer of the Buffalo International League team has somewhat of a reputation as a comedian on the coaching lines. Regardless of the fact that he is permitted to do things that others are not he is considerable of a favorite in Toronto, having formerly been a member of the Leaf team.

Shortly after he left the Toronto team some Toronto friends put up a job on Clymer and through the umpire made a presentation to Bill along about the seventh innings, when the Leafs were leading by two runs. As Bill came to the plate the umpire handed him a large cardboard box which was carefully wrapped up and looked very promising. Closer inspection disclosed a pair of corsets. Nothing daunted, Clymer calmly put them on, stepped up to the plate, and hit the first pitched ball over the left field fence for a home run, scoring two runners ahead of him and putting Buffalo in the lead.

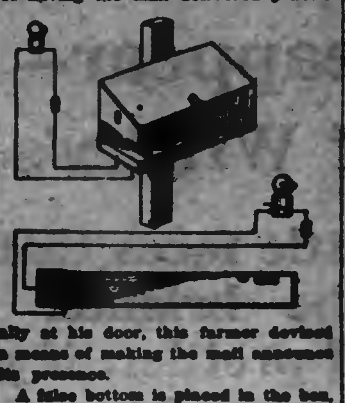
NO DELAY TO MAIL

Progressive Farmer Improves on Rural Mail Delivery

The way progress begets progress is shown in no better way than by the manner in which an Ontario farmer has arranged his rural mail delivery box so that whenever a letter is placed in it a bell rings at his house. And the bell continues to ring until the letter or paper is removed from the box. Not content with the convenience of having the mail delivered practically at his door, this farmer devised a means of making the mail announce its presence.



A false bottom is placed in the box, which is hinged at one end. In the center is placed a very delicate spring and at the other end an electric contact to form connection with another contact placed on the actual bottom of the box. The spring is so arranged that even the weight of a postal card will force the false bottom down and make the contact. Wires are run to the house and a bell and battery attached. Then when anything drops into the box the bell rings until it has been removed.

SHOT A MOOSE

Thrilling Experience of an Edmonton Young Woman

Faira Plymate, an athletic young woman living with her parents surprised a party of seasoned big game hunters by dropping in its tracks a big bull moose the third day out on a trip in the back country, about three miles from Twatinaw, on the Athabasca line, north of Edmonton. One shot from her 38-55 rifle did the trick. Miss Plymate was tramping through the brush four miles from camp when she heard the crackle of the underbrush as the moose came bounding through. The party had spread out to cover a wider area and there was no one within a considerable distance of her. Miss Plymate raised her rifle and took aim, hitting the moose square in the neck. The animal stumbled a few yards and fell.

Leopard Fish Impaled

A passenger on the Elder-Dempster liner Tarquah describes a strange incident which happened when the vessel was near Seccondee, on the Gold Coast. A big fish, which the sailors described as a "sea leopard," was caught on the bows of the ship right in the middle, the head being on one side and the tail on the other.

The bows of the vessel cut through the flesh to the bone, holding the creature there so firmly that it could not get free. The speed of the Tarquah was checked, and it had to go astern before the fish was released. The fish then came to the surface and sank. It was 40 feet in length and 20 feet in width.

Starving in Big City

Starving to death, Napoleon Lemay a 19-year-old lad, was discovered in a box car in the Montreal railway yard. He was in a pitiable state of wretchedness and almost dead. An officer saw him enter the car, where the boy said he expected to die. His parents live in the United States.

In the police court he told a terrible tale of suffering to Judge Lanctot. He said he could find no work and had been living on bread crusts. But for two days he had been unable to find a single scrap of food. "Do what you will with me," he cried, "only give me a bite to eat."

The old judge was much affected by the sight. There was only one thing he could do and he fined the lad one dollar or two days in jail.

Snails for Food in Favor

Snails are not as a rule looked upon as luxuries outside of France. The average Englishman regards garden snails with repugnance. Yet in Bristol there is a large and growing trade done in edible snails, and shellfish dealers are clamoring for more than they can possibly obtain. There are between thirty and forty shops in Bristol where cooked snails may be bought, but such is the demand that in the near future snails may become the luxury of the rich. Of course, the eating of snails is an acquired taste, but the habit of eating them, according to Bristol folk, seems to grow rapidly once the repugnance to making a beginning is overcome.

KEEN FOR POETRY

Minstrels Wander About the Country Singing to the Peasants

"One of the most interesting characteristics of the Serb race," declared Professor Pupin of Columbia university, "is its imagination and poetic temperament. It is remarkable that a people deprived of education during 500 years of Moslem oppression and robbed of any knowledge of their ancient written language should preserve in the form of extraordinarily beautiful verse and folk lore the details of every important incident in their history.

"Goethe, the famous German poet, mastered the Servian language for the sole purpose of studying the wealth of Serb poetry, which is handed down from generation to generation. The University of Vienna has translated several hundred thousand lines of this poetry, and it is studied to-day with astonishment by scholars and litterateurs.

"In Servia and Montenegro alike many blind, lame or crippled minstrels eke out a comfortable existence in traveling from town to town with the ancient one-stringed lute and singing to the peasants the deeds of their fathers and the ancient glory of Servia. From the fourteenth century to the present day every national hero has been immortalized in verse by humble epic anonymous bards. The authorship of this wealth of epic poetry must forever remain unknown, but the verses themselves have been preserved, not in the books or upon paper, but in the memories of the people."

WILL HELP BASEBALL

Players' Fraternity Looks to Elevate Game and Secure Justice

It is but a matter of a very short time until the Baseball Players' Fraternity branches out to include the minor leagues. And, as power lies in force of numbers, it becomes evident that this fraternity will very shortly be in a position to force recognition. There is absolutely no idea of unionism in the fraternity, its advocates declare. Rather the association stands for a strictly interpretation of the laws governing organized baseball. But the organization proposes to see that laws and regulations shall be fairly applied; that the magnates shall not be favored one whit over the rank and file of players who have built up and made the great game the popular sport which it is.

Ultimately, no doubt, players will have some sort of representation on the national commission, the supreme court of the laws governing the game. At present the triumvirate is made up of a national league club owner and the two presidents of the major leagues. In their favor it must be said that on the whole the work of this national commission has been above reproach.

RUBE FOSTER

Connie Mack calls this ebony skinned pitcher the "Black Mathewson of baseball." He weighs 267 pounds and has the general outline of a barrel but he would be in one of the big leagues but for his color. He plays with the Philadelphia Royal Giants, a fast colored team and Connie Mack watches him pitch whenever he gets a chance. Foster winters in Cuba, where he is popular. He is a great gambler, and next to base ball poker is his favorite fruit.

CAPTURED A LION

Feat of a Daring Hunter in Colorado State

An immense mountain lion, the largest ever captured in Colorado, was caught in a most sensational manner by Uri Hotchkiss, the famous hunter and trapper of Colona, six miles east of that place. Hotchkiss climbed a tree, in which the lion was crouching, unarmed except for a rope. The lion chased him down the tree several times, but finally Hotchkiss got within about three feet from him and threw a rope around his neck. The men on the other end of the rope attempted to pull the lion out of the tree, but were unable to do so. Hotchkiss worked around behind the lion and twisted his tail until they jarred him loose. After getting the lion down they threw another rope around his leg. Hotchkiss then placed him on the saddle, fastening his feet and head to the horn, climbed on behind, and brought him into Colona.

Bridge of Suicides

A plan has been agreed upon for raising to a uniform height the parapet of Dean Bridge, Edinburgh, so as to make it difficult to commit suicide by throwing themselves into the [illegible] below. Many models were made with the view of fixing upon one which would be unclimbable, which would excite no suicidal suggestion in men and women suffering from incipient mental illness, and which would preserve the view of the valley to the ordinary passenger. One morning a factory girl had a narrow escape while promenading along [illegible], underneath the Dean Bridge, as the body of a man fell from above in front of her.

THE FIGHTING BULL IS AN ARISTOCRAT

An Interesting Glimpse Into the Development and History of the Spanish Sport

The fighting bull of Spain is a race apart, as distinct from the breeds reared upon the farm as is the thoroughbred from the heavy Shire horse that draws the plow. He is an aristocrat among bulls, and resembles the former in the two supreme qualities of courage and speed. Bred for centuries with a care and skill which no other strain of animals received from so early a date, he stands to-day as an example of the wonderful effect which consistent selection can produce when applied steadfastly for centuries of time. For ever since the reconquest of Seville, in the thirteenth century, the breeding of bulls for the ring has received in Spain the enthusiastic attention of some of the richest and most experienced land owners in the country.

The Beginning

To trace the rise of bull-fighting in the Peninsula we must go back to the eighth century, when the Christian knights adopted the custom from their Moorish conquerors. It was the habit of these latter to maintain their skill at arms and to train their sons to war in baiting the wild bulls which then roamed free on the vast and uncultivated plains of Iberia. The knights would ride out singly, attended only by a couple of retainers on foot, to seek the beasts on their pastures. The contest was a straightforward one between the horseman and the bull; and it needed a well trained charger and a firm seat in the saddle to receive and frustrate the attack of the bull without being hurled to the ground.

Saving the Master

The servants were provided with cloaks to distract the attention of the foe should the master be unseated or wounded. It was from these beginnings that the modern sport of the "toros" took its rise. Later on when the Moors had been expelled from the country the bull-fight acquired great popularity from the favor extended to it by the Spanish kings and the nobility of all classes. Indeed, so firm a hold did it take upon the affections of the people, that even though Isabel the Catholic, disapproved of the sport, she was unable to suppress it. It was, however, until quite recently, essentially a contest in the nature of a joust between rider and bull. The later development, and especially the commercial aspect of the "toros," has effected a radical change in the old traditional sport. To-day it is no more than a highly organized show, but in past times it was different, when even kings did not disdain occasionally to break a lance or risk a fall with the fiery "toros" of Andalusia and Leon. Then vast sums were expended in perfecting the magnificent breed, which has been handed down to the present day through eight centuries of patience and skill.

WHY BURNS FOUGHT

Canadian Boxer Took a Beating to Satisfy Newspapers

Tommy Burns feared Jack Johnson and gave the big negro fighter his chance at the title only because the newspapers forced him to do so.

Tommy admits this freely in a letter to a friend in Chicago. Burns says he believed every boxer in the world has some man he is side-stepping and doesn't want to fight. He then goes on to say that Johnson always "had his goat," and that he never had any idea of fighting him.

Indeed, Tommy made the price for meeting Johnson so high, as he thought at the time, that no promoter in the world would have the courage to make a bid for the match.

Further, Tommy freely admits that he is sorry now that he ever did such a thing, and it will be a life-long regret to him. Still, as an afterthought, Burns expresses the opinion that he would have won from Johnson had the battle been permitted to go along to the finish, and not been stopped by the Sydney police.

"The press is to blame for the match," says Tommy, "as I was practically forced into it."

PUFF OF WIND, BANK WRECKED

Playful Breeze Played Hide and Seek With a Stocking Safe Deposit Vault.

A strong wind, not content with carrying hats aloft, turning umbrellas inside out and swirling women's skirts about in cyclonic and embarrassing fashion, has become a bank wrecker. The bank conducted by Mrs. Robert Stadie of the Latham hotel has been ruined by the wind. Its lone depositor, Mrs. Stadie, has lost $100 in cash and a fine silk stocking as a result.

As the new custom of women having pockets in their coats and skirts has not yet been placed in operation by the dressmakers and cloakmakers, Mrs. Stadie utilized the banking facilities so well known to her sex, but never until Boreas came did she lose a penny from the trusty repository. It was as secure in the silken safe, apparently, as it would be in the steel and concrete vaults of a Wall street banking house.

When Mrs. Stadie entered the bathroom of her suite she placed the always faithful bank containing $100 on the window sill. The window was up just a little bit. The wind gave a little puff. Out went the Stadie bank into Twenty-eighth street. Mrs. Stadie could not afford the time at the moment to look out to discover the trail the wind would follow with it. When she did, however, it could not be seen. She is willing to relinquish her claim on the bank, but would be thankful for the return of its assets.—New York Telegram.

NAKED IN SNOW

Canadian Doctor Saw Strange Method of Curing Tuberculosis in Europe

"Ninety-six out of every 100 school children are infected with tuberculosis between the ages of five and eighteen," says Dr. A. G. Richer of Montreal, who spent seven months in Europe investigating the cure of tuberculosis for the Dominion Government.

"This was proved by M. Calmette, director of the Lille Pasteur Institute, at the International Tuberculosis Congress in Rome," continued Dr. Richer. "This infection constitutes a sort of protection to them as does vaccination in the case of smallpox, but it sometimes wears itself out as they progress to the adult stage, because of starvation, unsanitary conditions, or hard work."

During Dr. Richer's stay in Switzerland, he saw little children playing naked in the snow in order that the sunlight might beat directly upon their bodies for the cure of tuberculosis. With only their feet and their heads covered, they play about in the snow as happily as other children warmly wrapped. This method undoubtedly cures, taking a year in the process.

Dr. Richer urges that the Provincial and the Federal Governments and the other forces fighting tuberculosis to join in a new kind of campaign. Canada, he thinks, will be able to accomplish more than some of the older countries have done and at less expense. "I believe I am not exaggerating when I say that we have a perfectly systematized plan by which the entire problem can be dealt with at little or no expense."

Both the English and German schools now lay much less emphasis or none at all, upon the plan of over feeding. The danger of human beings contracting tuberculosis from cattle is, also, now considered negligible.

That Terrible Fatigue Can be Overcome

A Simple Home Remedy Now Cures Lack of Energy, Loss of Ambition, and a Feeling of "Don't Care."

Successful in Nearly Every Case.

That miserable nervousness and half-sick tired-all-the-time condition is due nine cases in ten to a clogged-up system. You grow irritable and despondent, you lack ambition, energy seems all gone. Surest road to health is by the frequent use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they will make you feel like new all over in a short time.

Writing from his home in Barrelton, Mr. Frederick G. Mayer states: "I think no one ever suffered as seriously as I did for nearly six months. So many curious symptoms were developing as a consequence of this evil condition of my system that I realized I must find a remedy. The cheaper pills of various kinds I tried [illegible] after their first effects were over to make me far worse and I did not know which way to turn for relief. I saw Dr. Hamilton's Pills advertised, and the first box used satisfied me. I found a true remedy. Instead of griping with undue activity, Dr. Hamilton's Pills acted as naturally as if physic had not been taken. I never had to increase the dose, and, indeed, within a month I reduced it, and when the system finally acted of its own accord [illegible] of Dr. Hamilton's Pills, I took a dose twice a week only, just to make sure the old condition would not come back."

No other remedy cures constipation and biliousness so easily or safely as Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they are an ideal family remedy for all diseases of the stomach, liver and bowels. Sold in 25c. boxes, five for $1.00, all druggists and storekeepers or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Turkeys Scarce

The Thanksgiving Day turkey will be dear this year. Throughout the turkey district there is a great scarcity of birds, owing to the cold, wet spring. In one instance a farmer had seventy-two eggs and his flock of turkey chicks numbered five for the season. This condition is found to prevail generally so far as turkeys are concerned. There are more ducks geese and chickens than for some years past.

Apples Are Short

The small receipts of apples, seems to confirm repeated reports of a short crop. The supply of fall fruit is away below the requirements of the trade. The market at the moment is quite excited, and high prices are ruling. These prices, however, cannot, it is thought, last long, as heavier shipments are expected next week. Peaches and other fruits are more plentiful and cheaper in proportion and consequently the present price of apples will have to recede from their high level. The crops in England and on the continent are reported short.

Hebrew Holidays

The Hebrew citizens of Peterborough observed yesterday and also to-day as a holiday, although only yesterday were their places of business shut. These people are this time celebrating the Jewish New Year of 5674. Ten days after the new year, on October 12th, "Yom Kippur," the day of atonement will be observed by them, and on that day they will make a fast of 24 hours. On the 17th inst., the Feast of the Tabernacle, commences, and lasts for eight days, although in this case, it will not be observed to the extent of holding a holiday.

Harvest Festival.

The Harvest Festival at All Saints Anglican church was duly observed last night. The picturesque church was most tastefully decorated with harvest offerings, fruit, flowers, vegetables, etc., and the service as a whole was one of marked brilliance. The Rev. J. M. Elliott, of Port Hope preached a most excellent discourse, taking as his text Ezekiel 47-9. The music by the choir was effective and greatly appreciated, while the anthem, "Ye shall dwell in the land," was beautifully rendered. A number of the congregation of the sister churches were present at the service.

MATRIMONIAL

Archer—Humphries.

On Tuesday afternoon at 1.30, a very pretty wedding was solemnized at the Mark street parsonage, when Miss Bernice Archer was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Walter D. Humphries, by the Rev. C. E. Cragg. The couple were unattended. Lunch was served at the parsonage after which the couple left on a wedding tour to Toronto. On their return they will reside at the groom's farm near Hastings.

Robertson—Sweet.

A very quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at the residence of the groom's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. James Jackson, 265 Maitland avenue on Saturday afternoon, Sept. 27th, at 2.30 o'clock, when Miss Helen Campbell Robertson of Glasgow, Scotland, was united in the bonds of holy matrimony, to Billy Sweet, of Toronto, by Rev. Mansell.

The bride looked charming in a gown of pale blue satin, with a yoke of real lace. She entered the parlor leaning on the arm of Mr. Jackson, who gave her away. The only other attendant was Mr. Clarence Jackson, who acted as ring bearer. The young couple stood before a bank of ferns and cut flowers. Contrasting with this was the bride's bouquet of white carnations and maiden hair ferns.

A dainty wedding breakfast was served after the ceremony at which all present drank to the health of the bride and groom.

Mr. and Mrs. Sweet left on the 4.18 train for points west, where the wedding trip will be spent, and after their return they will reside in Toronto.

The bride's travelling dress was of ocean blue cloth, and beaver hat trimmed with red mink and white.

After the signing of the register, a very interesting event took place, when the infant daughter, Agnes Grace, of Mr. and Mrs. Jackson, was baptized

HEADACHY, COSTIVE, BILIOUS—"CASCARETS"

Sick Headache, Bad Breath, Sour Stomach, Mean Liver and Bowels are Clogged—Cheer Up!

Get a 10-cent box.

Sick headache, biliousness, dizziness, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath—always trace them to torpid liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or sour, gassy stomach.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months.

Another member of the small party was J. H. Burnham, M.P. The Minister promised consideration.

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Beautify your Hair! Make it soft, fluffy and luxuriant—Try the Moist Cloth.

Try as you will, after an application of Danderine, you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most, will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is immediate and amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance, the beauty and shimmer of true hair health.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all.

Do You Realize What This Means to You, Mr. Business Man?

GRAIN RECORDS ARE BROKEN

All records in connection with Canada's grain yield are being broken this year. In addition to the wheat crop being the largest ever raised, the quality of the highest and the harvest three weeks earlier, the wealth of golden grain is pouring into the markets in record-breaking quantities. The hauling record of the Canadian Pacific railway into Fort William was broken yesterday, and the record of car inspection of grain at Winnipeg passed the high total attained in 1912. Not content with excelling previous records, Canada's grain growers appear determined to do even better next year, for statistics compiled by the C.P.R.'s general grain agent at Winnipeg, Mr. Thomas Atchison, indicate that the fall plowing planned for this year will be sufficient to add twenty million bushels to the 1914 crop.

The hauling record, as given at Fort William, shows that 900 cars, nearly 1,000,000 bushels of grain, arrived at the head of the Great Lakes between 7 o'clock Tuesday night and 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The total number of cars reaching that port over three roads during that period was 1439 cars. Another report giving indication of the speed with which the crop estimated last night by C.P.R. officials at 190,918,000 bushels of wheat, and 233,000,000 bushels of oats, is being moved was given at Moose Jaw, where the statement was issued that more than 2,400,000 bushels of grain have been shipped so far from the Saskatchewan division. Shipments along the Soo line to Weyburn are reported as unusually heavy and it is said there appears to be no prospect of any car shortage.

CARLISLE AGHAST

Carlisle, Pa., Oct. 2.—A gown of flimsy material, which evidently had been treated to a phosphorous wash, worn by Miss [illegible], caused much excitement last night on Main street.

The gown was diaphanous and had a glow that gave an ethereal appearance to the young woman as she tripped boldly around the principal streets, accompanied by a stalwart escort.

A mob followed her. Church goers passed on their way to evening services, and many of these joined the throng.

[illegible] Two policemen tried to turn back the spectators, but were brushed aside.

PRISON REFORM IS TO BE THOROUGH, PROBERS STATE

Kingston, Oct. Oct.2.—That radical changes in the system which has prevailed for the last twenty years or more in Kingston Penitentiary will follow the investigation by the Government Commission is the opinion to-day of those who claim to be in touch with the situation here.

Ex-Warden Platt, who contributed valuable evidence yesterday drawn from his long experience in connection with this institution, expressed the opinion at the conclusion of his testimony that the existing order of things was forty years behind the [illegible] entirely out of touch with modern reformative methods.

He made a strong point of the necessity of freeing the Warden from political interference in the conduct of the prison. He cited one case where he had made all arrangements for stocking the prison farm with horses and cattle, and had made a good bargain when the Department stepped in and refused to sanction the purchases unless they were made from farmers friendly to the existing Government.

A secret investigation was conducted by the previous Administration some years ago, but apparently little was accomplished. The present Commission apparently intend to make the investigation thorough, and will not allow the scope of the inquiry.

Sensational evidence is promised when the proposal charges affecting the officials of the institution are reached. Conservatives assert there will be a long delayed house cleaning. Liberals on the other hand, claim that such irregularities as may be discovered are the fault of the system and when sifted will not prove serious.

JURY RETURN AN OPEN VERDICT IN AUTO ACCIDENT

The inquest into the death of the man who was killed in the Lakefield auto accident a little over a week ago was resumed yesterday afternoon, at Lakefield, before Coroner Dr. Greer, and the following jury: Messrs. R. Graham, foreman, [illegible] Hunter, W. Charleston, J. H. [illegible], J. Edwards, J. Hendon, W. Graham, P. Spence, E. Clemen and C. Tanner. Mr. R. E. Wood acted for the Crown, and Mr. G. N. Gordon was present watching the case for parties interested.

No fresh developments were brought to light excepting that Mr. Bell [illegible] formerly identified the dead man [illegible]. After a short retirement the jury returned an open verdict, that the man came to his death by accident, and no blame attached to anyone.

Space will not permit of a [illegible] of the facts of the accident, the [illegible] stories that have surrounded it, and all subsequent stories, as this is entirely unnecessary, as [illegible] have appeared in the Times before. A despatch, however, in another part of this paper, throws a little light on former life of the unfortunate victim of the smash.
